The answer is, of course, that Satan, as an angel of light, subtly gives forth a spurious plan of salvation based upon humanism, good works, the Golden Rule, keeping (somewhat) the Ten Commandments, etc. Thus we see this declaration is basic; any other message, even though brought by an angel from heaven, is accursed. Christ died for our sins and rose again in a glorified body for our justification. My, what a far-reaching declaration of independence this is! It reaches all the way from earth to heaven—from man to God.

A believer is not left to shift for himself in an aimless life. So then the second clause of this declaration of independence should be to dissolve the "bands" that bind to a worldly philosophy of life. There are quite a few divine demands for our lives after we are Christ's. These positive items mentioned in the imperative mode are not accompanied by two little square boxes as a ballot might be. There is no place for the child of God to make his choice. When He says to place your affections on things above, He means do it, not if you would be so minded, please place your affections on things above.

Each divine command could have the same said about it. We should to our saving faith, by our own means, supply manliness, knowledge of right and wrong, self-control, perseverance, reverence, proper consideration of others, that concern for others that God sheds abroad in our hearts. The world's philosophy speaks of gain, achievement, progress, learning, keeping up with the Joneses, etc. All is vanity and vexation out there hobnobbing with those who set the pace in civilization. Lot tried it years ago and found that his soul was vexed by the very ones who seemed to be his friends.

The standards out there on the clean side of the road to hell are pleasing only to the flesh and its dubious appetites. The Christian should declare his independence from such philosophy and adopt God's proven one. Yes; a declaration of independence from a degrading life that leaves God and His program out, is insurance for a happy, successful life while here on earth.

The last clause for this declaration cares for our view of the future. The first settled the past, the second blesses the present, and now we separate ourselves from the "bands" about the future. We believers are a peculiar lot in this respect. The most precious thing in all the world we own ourselves. Should your soul be placed in one balance pan and the whole world in the other, the world would kick the beam as the pan with the soul in it would go down.

Traveling from California to our national conference over mile after mile, day after day through seven States, reveals a lot of country. But there are 41 more States and four more continents. That's a lot of land. Yet there is more water on the surface of the earth than there is land—ocean after ocean, sea after sea, lake after lake, river after river. Still the soul would pull down the beam and the pan holding all this word with its land and water would go up.

This valuable soul, prepared for eternity, is entrusted implicitly to the Lord and no concern arises day after day. But along comes a condition, a sickness, a problem, and do we trust this to Him who cares for the valuable soul? No! This time we have to help God. Oh, is He slow! Does He not know that next week is the deadline? Of course He knows it, and next week is when He will act. A lady who professed Christ said she was fearful and uncertain. God had never supplied her with dying grace. The reply came: "And He will not until you are ready to die. Why should He give to you today that which is not needed until next week?

To recall that nothing is impossible with God, that His ways are past finding out, that His grace is always sufficient, that when the testing comes, He knows our limit and says, "So far; no farther!"; to recall these promises is to rout the black clouds of Satan's despair. Why, when we come right down to it a Christian's declaration of independence is nothing more than a declaration of DEpendence upon God. Every believer should make this declaration so that in his experience with Christ he may have a "DEpendence Day" to celebrate.

God's "D-DAY"

By Earle E. Peer
Pastor, Rosemont Brethren Church
Martinsburg, W. Va.

I suppose we Americans are the most patriotic people of all the peoples of the world. Our national holidays, which commemorate the great crises our country has faced in its struggle for freedom, play an important role in the life of every American citizen in the observance of these days. In particular, we go back in our thinking to July 4, 1776, and the signing of the Declaration of Independence, when the "fathers" of our country declared America to be a free nation under God.

Today we honor our own countrymen who have laid down their lives to protect the freedoms which we have long since enjoyed and cherished. In a very special way we pay tribute to our Christian soldiers who have laid down their lives on a battlefield to depart and be with Christ. The words of the Apostle Paul bring comfort to our hearts: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words" (I Thess. 4:16-18).

On June 6, 1944, our American soldiers landed on the coasts of France. That was called "D-Day." The peoples of Europe heralded that day as a day of deliverance. The nation of France and the allied countries of Europe who were then in bondage to Germany rejoiced that someone had come to set them free.

On May 8, 1945, we celebrated V-E Day, Victory in Europe! Later on, August 14, 1945, we were made to rejoice again over V-J Day, when our American armies were victorious over the empire of Japan. While not actually engaged in carnal warfare today, we find America again in a struggle against "communism and cults" to remain the free nation we have known and loved.

However, there is another struggle going on which on the surface is not so apparent to the average American citizen. Our foe is infinitely worse than any nation on earth ever could be. Satan, our arch-enemy, has the youth of America and the whole world in the throes of his satanic grip. But, thank God, there was a D-day! The greatest D-day this world has ever known. God's D-day was not a day heralded by men. It was not a day of rejoicing; rather it was a day of darkness, a day when Christ, the Son of God, was forsaken of men and forsaken of the Father in heaven. From Calvary's hill came the shout of deliverance, "Tetelestai" (It is finished). Now sinful men can be set free.

But there was also a "V-day." It came just three days later, when early in the morning as it began to dawn, toward the first day of the week, the disciples came to the sepulcher only to find that Jesus had risen from the dead. Jesus Christ had won the victory over sin, death, and hell. He became the victorious conqueror; He can set men free!

Let me simply point out a few Scriptures without comment which constitute the "Declaration of Independence" for the child of God, and which show the liberties we possess in Christ.

First, We are liberated by the "truth." Through the centuries men have tried to suppress the truth in order to hold others in slavery and bondage. This was never true of our Lord. In John, chapter 8, speaking to the scribes and Pharisees, Jesus said: "And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Later He said: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Thus, freedom from sin and Satan comes from a knowledge of the truth. But that truth is a person, even Jesus. "I am the way, the truth, and the life"

Secondly, We are liberated from the law of sin and death. Romans 8:2: "For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death." Romans 6:22-23: "But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. For the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Thirdly, As those liberated by Christ, we should take our stand for our Lord. Galatians 5:1: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Ephesians 6:10-14: "Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might. Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities . . . Wherefore, take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand . . . and having done all to stand. Stand therefore"

The torch has been tossed to us by our fellow Christians who have fought a good fight and who have gone on before us. It is our God-given responsibility to bear the torch of spiritual freedom aloft; to raise high the blood-stained banner of Jesus Christ. We, as God's children, liberated by the truth, and set free from the law of sin and death, should stand firmly upon the Word of God. Let us preach Jesus Christ to a world reeling in sin and thus proclaim to the ends of the earth God's spiritual declaration of independence.

Bible Being Used by Archaeologists as Guide to Ancient Civilizations

JERUSALEM, ISRAELI (E/P). Newspaper and magazine articles are increasingly being filled with startling announcements concerning important discoveries of ancient records of even more ancient civilizations. What does not seem to be making headlines is the fact that archaeologists are making use of an authoritative guidebook, the Bible, in their search for evidence of past civilizations in the Near East. More than one digger has been led to put his shovel down at the right spot because he first made a thorough study of the Bible narrative.

Throughout Israel there is a new interest in looking for relics of ancient times. Practically anyone who has been to school regards himself as an expert in archaeology possibly because there is so much emphasis on Biblical studies in Israeli schools.

Many families have their private archaeological museums. These are collections of statuettes, arrow and lance heads, pieces of pottery, old coins, and pieces of mosaic which members of the family have found from time to time.

Excavations now going on at Ramat Rachel on Israeli Jerusalem's southern border have brought to light a fortress covering an acre and a quarter of land. The fortress dates back to the ninth or tenth century B. C.

Seal impressions found on jar handles dug up at this site corroborate descriptions found in the Old Testament. The seals show winged scrolls such as those which served as the personal symbol of the old kings of Judah.

Scholars also are learning more about the early spread of Christianity in the Holy Land. When some settlers moved into a house on the Lebanese border and started clearing a pile of filth off the floor, they uncovered a colored mosaic design. It turned out they had stumbled on the remains of a fifth-century church.

The Bible's reference to copper mines in the region between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Akaba led to the discovery of King Solomon's copper mines. They have been reopened and are being worked again for ore.

Archaeologists have unearthed 225 sites of ancient habitation in the desert country called the Negev. They were led to search there by chapters 12 and 13 of the Book of Genesis, which told them the area was not always a wilderness but was thriving with people in the time of Abraham.

Prof. Nelson Glueck, an American archaeologist, believes he has proved the correctness of the story in Genesis 14 about a rebellion of a number of kings against the ruler Chedorlaomer.

By tracing a chain of destroyed cities from southern Syria to the central Negev, Glueck showed them to be the remains of the civilization wiped out in Abraham's day.

Whittier, Calif.

The Community Brethren Church of Whittier is now sponsoring the first Mexican Sunday school and morning church service ever supported by an individual Brethren church. The Lord led our deacon board and pastor to help financially a needy Mexican mother and her children in a new subdivision of homes in a Mexican community. Then mother and children came to Christ as Saviour. Through them, we met high-class Mexican Christians who had been calling in the area, and who were members of a gospel team from an independent Mexican church in Los Angeles.

We have leased two classrooms from Santa Gertrude's Elementary School and are financially helping to support the work, and our Mexican Christians are conducting the services.

The goal is a Mexican Brethren church, to reach Mexicans for Christ and to train them for service in the Brethren mission field of Mexico. Pray for the new work. Glenn E. Miller is chairman of the committee on Mexican work.

Uniontown, Pa.

The First Brethren Church received real blessing from the two-week ministry of Dean Fetterhoff. The Holy Spirit used his Bible messages to bring people back night after night, as attested by the average evening attendance of 145. We had wondered about the advisability of having our meeting so near to the Easter season, but the results demonstrated that the timing was right. There were six who came to accept Christ as Saviour, and 25 came for other needs.

There were decisions also in the homes as result of Brother Fetterhoff's faithful and effective visitation work with the pastor. Much stress was placed on the Lordship of Christ. This ministry bore fruit in the spiritual ties in many homes.

Also appreciated was the song-leading of Brother Fetterhoff and his fine vocal solos and special numbers on his saxophone. Children's meetings were held four days the last week of the meeting and the results were very good. Praise the Lord for this good diversified revival-evangelism meeting. — Clyde K. Landrum, pastor.

Martinsburg, W. Va.

We at Rosemont Brethren Church have just experienced a heaven-sent revival with Dr. L. L. Grubb as evangelist. God prepared our hearts for the many spiritual blessings He showered upon us through cottage prayer meetings held in homes each Friday night for seven weeks prior to the revival. If I were to characterize this meeting in only one word it would be "prayer." Truly this was a revival "prayed down." From the opening service, when two souls were saved and 41 persons rededicated their lives to Christ, the power of God was felt. There were decisions for Christ in every service of the two-week meeting, with a total of 24 first-time confessions and 82 reaffirmations of faith.

The clear Bible-preaching ministry of Dr. Grubb was used of God in a mighty way to bring to pass many spiritual victories for Christ. Max Williams, of Hagerstown, Md., added much to the meeting with his trombone and his ability as songleader.— Earle Peer, pastor.

MISSIONARY HERALD APPRECIATED

The letter below was received from the Bible Institute of Los Angeles.

November 30, 1954.

The Brethren Missionary Herald,
Winona Lake, Indiana.

Dear Friends:

Some time ago I received a notice that the Herald would be coming to me periodically, and an invoice was sent me for the subscription. As I had not ordered it, I wrote to you enquiring about the invoice. I received word from the First Brethren Church of Long Beach that it had been provided by one of their organizations for our library.

I have already written to Dr. Mayes, pastor of the Long Beach church and thanked him for his thoughtfulness in providing this magazine for us. As it was intended for our library, I think you should remove my name from the address label and direct it to the Librarian, Dr. Ione Lowman. This I am suggesting as a matter of honesty rather than of rejecting the periodical.

If this publication had been given to me, I would have welcomed it because I have found much worthwhile material between its covers. It is well written, and very well edited. I like its format. It has good articles of lasting interest to every Christian worker. For these reasons, and many more, you are to be congratulated for putting out such a good piece of literature.

Cordially yours in His grace,

(Signed) Kenneth B. Daniels, Director
Christian Service Department.

WALKING IN THE SPIRIT

By MRS. BERNARD N. SCHNEIDER

The Holy Spirit enters our hearts and our lives when we receive the Lord Jesus Christ as our personal Saviour. Even as Christ lives in us, so lives the Holy Spirit within us. He is as actual, as real as the One who died on Calvary's cross but not nearly so well known nor understood. Perhaps this is because the Holy Spirit had no human form and never lived among men as did our Lord. Someone has said that to most Christians the Holy Spirit is so unknown that we do not in reality worship a Triune God. But Jesus told His disciples: "And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever; even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you" (John 14:16-17).

Certainly it is God's will that every believer should live in all the fullness provided us in Christ—redeemed, righteous, wise, and set apart for His service. Paul writes bluntly: "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh" (Gal. 5:16). He might have said it this way: "Ye fulfill the lust of the flesh because you are not walking in the Spirit." Then Paul presents a dark and dreadful list of sins which are certainly not approved by the Holy Spirit—adultery, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance (disputes), emulations (rivalries), wrath, strife, seditions, revellings, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, and such. To others we may appear to be as one who lives a Spirit-filled and consistent Christian life, but let us remember that it is God who searches the heart and that He sees these sins within us; also that "The Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart" (I Sam. 16:7). If we read these verses and feel entirely comfortable, have we ever invited God through His Holy Spirit to "search me, O Lord, and show me"?

Our hearts are deceitful and desperately wicked, just as God says they are. Our only righteousness is in God's Son, who died on Calvary and there became sin for us. He must have loved us a great deal to accept us just as we are. When I think of Calvary with its awful suffering, I am ashamed of my deceitful, wicked heart. It is my desire to reflect in my life the Lord Jesus Christ. I want to please Him—every part of me. I long to be complete in my Lord—to have all my spiritual hunger and thirst fully satisfied. Yes; such is my desire, but my old self is always with me. I fail my Lord in so many ways; I grieve the Holy Spirit; some days I think I must be ready for the dump—and without the loving Saviour who came to dwell in my heart and the blessed Holy Spirit who makes a temple of my body, I would flounder helplessly about and come to an unholy, unrighteous end.

Often it is in the first steps of our Christian lives that we possess the absolute dependency upon the Holy Spirit which is necessary to a Spirit-filled, "Christ-in-me" daily walk. One of the greatest blessings is to be aware of our limitations so that we lean upon the One who can do anything. Do we really believe God's Word when it declares us to be utterly without power in our own strength? And do we believe (no reservations) that "with God nothing is impossible"? We must place every detail of life into the hands of the Holy Spirit and trust Him to be our leader and guide. It is a tragedy when we commit our souls into the hands of the Saviour and fail to commit our daily walk into the hands of the Holy Spirit. Even as our Lord Jesus is a personal Saviour, just so is the Holy Spirit a personal guide. Are we grieving the Spirit by trusting God for salvation and at the same time refusing to turn the daily burden over to Him?

A certain man had experienced shipwreck in the sea of life. He sought spiritual help from a willing pastor who asked him this question: "If you were going down a mountain in your automobile and you suddenly realized that it was completely out of control, what would you think?"

"I would think I was in a bad fix, pastor," the man replied.

"And if you knew that sitting beside you was a driver who was able to bring your car under control and cause it to carry you safely to your destination, what would you do?"

"Why, I would beg him to take the wheel." The man's face expressed a sudden gleam of hope.

"And that's exactly what the Lord Jesus Christ can do—if you turn your life with its problems over to Him," the pastor explained.

So many of us are trying to run God's affairs and we are suffering because we do. Although it is head knowledge that "we are not our own," we have never trusted the One who bought us to care for His possessions.

Betty Stam, one of China's Christian martyrs, wrote these words: "Lord, I give up all my own plans and purposes, all my own desires and hopes, and accept Thy Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. will for my life. I give myself, my life, my all, utterly to Thee to be Thine forever. Fill me with Thy Holy Spirit. Use me as Thou wilt; work out Thy whole will in my life at any cost, now and forever."

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 28

It was Betty's desire to live Christ's prayer: "Not my will, but thy will be done." Some may think that she paid a price for her yielded, Spirit-filled life—meaning that she lost her life. But we cannot pay with that which we do not have, and Betty had long before her death given her life to Christ. The "price-paying" Christians are those who are keeping that which should have been entrusted into His care when they accepted His salvation. Jesus said: "For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it" (Matt. 16:25).

In a Spirit-filled life there is a continual "going forward" without "stops" and "stands." As progressively as day follows day and hour follows hour, so must we be found walking in faith—held by the Rock and guided by the Holy Spirit. As the Spirit leads the submissive heart, changes appear which we call our "growth in grace." Paul tells us that precious fruit is produced by the Holy Spirit which dwells within—love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance. These Christian fruits present a little picture of our blessed Saviour, who is "the fairest of ten thousand."

Ask yourself: "Am I walking in the Spirit?

Do you—

1. Having received Jesus Christ as Saviour, read the Bible daily?
2. Open your heart to Him in prayer every day?
3. Recognize the Holy Spirit as your personal Guide?
4. Lean upon the Holy Spirit and follow His leading?
5. Ask the Holy Spirit to show you any sin in your life which grieves Him?
6. Have a willingness to put known sin away?
7. Show forth the fruit of a Spirit-filled life: love (), joy (), peace (), longsuffering (), gentleness (), goodness (), faith (), meekness (), temperance () (Gal. 5:22-23)?
8. Put away: all bitterness (), wrath (), anger (), clamour (), evil speaking (), malice () (Eph. 4:31)?
9. Practice the admonition of Ephesians 4:32: "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you"?
10. Ask the Holy Spirit to come into your heart and fill it with blessings?

NOTICE TO ALL PRESIDENTS

Within a few weeks you will be receiving your first packet of programs for the new year upon the theme, "As Unto the Lord." If any of you fail to get your packets within a reasonable time, please contact the literature secretary, Mrs. Olive Deloe, Box 251 Winona Lake, Ind. Do not send any requests for literature supplies of any kind to the national president or to any other national officer. All literature supplies are in the hands of the literature secretary and orders sent to anyone else means undue delay in getting your materials to you.

IT'S A GIRL

She's pink and she's pretty,
She's dimpled and dear . . .
And she'll win all the votes
For the "girl of the year"!

Her name is Cynthia Joan.
She arrived on June 2, 1955.
She weighs 7-15½—19¾ in. long.

Her parents, Kenneth and Harriet Ashman.

The above announcement came to the editor's desk a few days ago and we wish to share it with the many hundreds of WMC women throughout our churches. We are so happy that this little miss has arrived safely. It's been reported—and not by the proud parents, either—that she is a dainty, plump, roly-poly, beautiful baby with lots of long brown hair and dark eyes.

As WMC members we wish to rejoice with the parents, offer them our congratulations, and especially praise our Lord for His care over our national president. This little miss put her mother through some difficult months and at the end, only drastic surgery saved both mother and child. And how thankful we are to the Lord for sparing to us our efficient president. We believe that an especial note of appreciation should be given to our Harriet for the brave way she has carried on the heavy duties of her office these past months, even though often confined to her bed. Her duties have been many, her strength extremely limited, but only a very few knew the strain because her WMC work went smoothly on. But now all our concern of the past few months gives way to rejoicing with her over this new babe that has been entrusted to her. Let us all pray that she may quickly regain complete health and strength.

General and Publication Fund

JUNE - JULY - AUGUST

We are now midway into the final quarter of our WMC year. Our offerings this year have been excellent. We gave more than $2,500 to both Home Missions and Christian Education offerings. Reports have not yet been received for the Thank Offering (penny a day), Foreign Missions, or Birthday Offering, but those should all be in the hands of the financial secretary by this time. If your council is a bit slow, get them in quickly. I'm sure we have done creditably in all these offerings.

That leaves us with only one more offering goal to meet in order to finish the year with "flying colors." Out of this last offering for the General and Publication Fund all activities that contribute to the well-integrated national program of our WMC must be met. It costs money to have a part of one Herald each month. It costs money to mimeograph and mail program packets to all councils. Your national officers are looking to the local councils to show enough interest and concern for the continuance, growth, and expansion of WMC to see that this offering goes "over the top." If every council would determine to send in an offering during this lean summer quarter of no less than the average of the other three quarterly offerings, we would make our $2,500 goal. We are counting on YOU.

Who's Who for July

JESSE D. HUMBERD

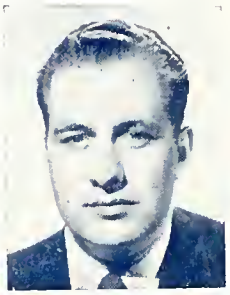
Jesse David Humberd, assistant professor of science and mathematics in Grace College and Seminary, was born December 21, 1921, in Roann, Ind., the third of the seven children of Rev. and Mrs. R. I. Humberd. His earliest recollections include traveling with his father to special meetings to sing soprano solos.

Recognizing that God has called some to preach and some to teach, he has been directed in the field of education. From the first few months in a one-room school in Michigan through that time in the future when he expects to meet the conditions necessary for a Ph. D., the hand of the Lord has been evident throughout.

Between schools, or in part-time employment in order to continue in school, he has worked in the printing and publishing business, going from the small press in the garage at home to the position of student foreman of the Bryan University printshop, to the eight-color presses of the Crowell-Collier Company, and more recently to the Free Methodist Publishing House in Winona Lake.

Following graduation from high school in Martinsburg, Pa., he went to Bryan University for three years. These were busy and profitable years, as experience was gained in mountain-mission work, the student pastorate, and musical groups. This experience has proved valuable in later years in Sunday school, vacation Bible school, and other church activities. It was at Bryan that he met Laura B. Eastep, of Springfield, Ohio, and they were married after they had completed three years at Bryan, and had made plans to enter Grace Seminary in September 1942. However, plans were abruptly changed, and Jesse went into the Navy the first of September for what was to be 39 months of service in uniform.

After a year of enlisted service in the Atlantic, he was commissioned as a naval officer in December 1943 at Northwestern University in Chicago. During a tour of duty in San Diego he enjoyed working with Rev. Albert Flory and the Brethren Church in work with servicemen. Throughout the following 17 months on a destroyer in the Pacific he served in the absence of a chaplain on several occasions. One of these occasions was a memorial service off Iwo Jima for President Roosevelt on the day he was buried.



More education followed release from active duty, and added to the B. S. from Bryan in mathematics, was the B. A. in Education from Wittenberg, and an M. A. from Ohio State University in 1950.

Nine years after plans had first been made, the family came to Grace Seminary, where Dr. McClain's first words were: "We've been saving a seat for you for a long time." These years were concluded with a double commencement in 1954, with Jesse receiving the B. D. degree from the seminary, and Laura receiving the B. A. from Grace College with the first graduating class.

Jesse has spent four years teaching in Ohio public schools, one year in Wittenberg College, and one year in his present position at Grace College and Seminary, where he taught courses in mathematics, science, education, and Christian education this year.

The family has been blessed with two daughters, Lenora Ann, 11, and Margaret Alice, 9. Truly the Lord has been good, and through the years has manifested His blessings in many ways, and has proved that Jeremiah 33:3 is still in effect today.

CHARLES ASHMAN, JR.

Charles Ashman, Jr., was born in Johnstown, Pa., June 1, 1924. He had the privilege of being raised in a preacher's family. The lasting impression of the unerring examples of his preacher father and godly mother prepared him to accept the call of the Lord to the Christian ministry. He dedicated his life to full-time service at Tahquitz Pines Brethren Camp in southern California when but a high-school lad. This dedication of life was followed up with a determination for further preparation. He attended Biola for one semester, Westmont College for four years, and Grace Seminary for three years..

Charles graduated from Westmont with an A. B. degree, cum laude, in 1947. He graduated from Grace Seminary in 1950 with a B. D. degree, magna cum laude. From January to June 1950 Brother Ashman did triple duty—attending seminary, teaching beginning Greek, and taking care of the pastoral duties in Rittman, Ohio. on week-ends. He has been pastor of the First Brethren Church in Rittman since his graduation. Charles has always been active in youth and athletic activities, as well as gospel-team work. He has served for over 10 years on camp staffs of southern California and Ohio Buckeye. He was a member of the Grace Seminary male quartet for two years, during which time he made the contact with the Rittman church. Having been trained in choral conducting and voice at Westmont College, he was student director of the Westmont College choir for one year. Since that time he has remained active as a songleader and choir director.

The Rittman church has grown steadily under his ministry. A new basement was built by volunteer labor under his direction two summers ago to care for increased Sunday-school attendance.

Mrs. Ashman, formerly Miss Frances Bradley, and Brother Ashman met at youth camp in southern California. They were married July 12, 1946. They have three children: Kenny, 4; Judy Kay, 2½; and Karl, 6 months. Mrs. Ashman is very well loved by all who know her and is known as an "ideal preacher's wife." She is the daughter of Mrs. Isabel Bradley, of Long Beach, Calif., who has two other daughters who are minister's wives.

Brother Charles is the son of Dr. C. H. Ashman, a preacher's father. He has three sons and one-son-in-law who are ministers.

Why Should the WMC Women Go to Portland?

By MRS. LENORA (ROBERT) BOONE
Indiana District WMC President

The long-awaited time for our National Fellowship at Portland is swiftly drawing near. People all over America are planning vacations and I take it for granted that many of our Brethren women are also planning vacations because recently it seems that wherever you meet with a group of the WMC ladies the question arises, "Are you going to Portland?" Some answer, "Yes," and others, "I'd love to, if I can save up enough money." Then there are those who may have the question, "Why should we go?" The ones whose answer is "Yes," have attended the conferences some time in the past and know that a real joy and thrilling experience awaits them again this year.

I know money will be a large item for all, but where could we go for a greater time of Christian fellowship for one whole week and where your money would be used for a better cause—and vacation! One person told me that she and her husband were going, even if they had to borrow the money. Without a doubt many of our Brethren folk have borrowed money some time in the past for automobiles, washers, refrigerators, etc., and now having these paid for, the purchases belong to you. Would you be willing to borrow just a few dollars for a trip to the great Northwest, which may be your only chance in your lifetime to get there? Could your investment be used for a greater cause, come August?

Now to those who might wonder, "Why should we go?" the answers are so many that space will not permit all of them to be given, but allow me to give you a few reasons.

Our wonderful Lord has created all the beautiful scenic wonders that your eyes will behold while traveling to and from Portland, and these scenic wonders and impressions that you will be seeing on the way will alone make your four or five days of travel worthwhile.

Now don't forget to take your fishing tackle, ladies—that is, if you like to fish—because you can go deep-sea fishing, just as the men will do. Oh, you might get a little seasick, but it won't last long; that is, when you get back to land! Oh yes; the Brethren at Portland are planning a great time for each afternoon of the week, such as fishing, sightseeing, etc., or you may do as you choose, since services are not scheduled for the afternoons.

We all need rest and relaxation from our daily work that each is laden with, and I believe that the Lord expects us to lay aside our work for a little while for a vacation. We are all aware of the fact that we have much more work to be done around our homes, especially in the summer months when there is the extra work of canning and storing away food for our physical bodies. Even so, our spiritual bodies need spiritual food, and where else, while on vacation, could you find better spiritual food than at conference? Without a doubt, a vacation of this kind will be spiritual food for each and we will have a greater desire and burden to serve the Lord in our WMC work and in the church as a whole.

We should attend the conference because we need the fellowship one with another. This will give each of us a grand opportunity to meet many of our WMC sisters of the Northwest. Did you ever realize that many of these ladies have never been privileged to attend conferences like many of us have had all these years? It is so wonderful to have fellowship with Christian women of like faith, and a unity of this kind will really pay spiritual dividends that shall never be forgotten. In Hebrews 10:25 we read: "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together," and certainly this can be applied to our WMC fellowship.

Another reason for "going to Portland" is because we get firsthand information. The Lord has given us our ears to hear, eyes to see, and voices to speak. Yes; we can get firsthand information of all the national WMC activities, and this will definitely help us to remember the needs of our organization much better when we hear

THANKS TO THE WMC

A sincere expression of thanks is due the members of the Women's Missionary Council for again meeting a real need in the seminary. We understand that the council has voted to supply pews for that part of the chapel beyond the folding doors. This will not only add attractiveness to the chapel which has pews presently only in front of the folding doors, but it will also release the chairs now being used to fill the rear of the chapel for other needed purposes about the building. Then, too, it will save a lot of work in moving chairs from time to time as they are needed for various purposes on special occasions.

With the expected increase of the student body this fall, we are confident that the women of the council have truly met a real need. We are indebted to them and are reminded of many other splendid gifts which they have already made in the way of equipment for the seminary. Indeed we would be seriously handicapped if we were suddenly deprived of these gifts which are being constantly used by students in both the seminary and the college. Thus we trust that you women of the council will feel that you are having a definite part in the ministry of training a host of splendid young people for a fuller Christian service. On behalf of the faculty, staff, and students of the school, I wish to express our heartfelt appreciation, and trust that the Lord's added blessing will be yours because of your generous consideration.—Homer A. Kent, Sr.

(Editor's note: Our offering for Grace Seminary, toward the above-mentioned pews, amounted to $1,764.19. We did not this year meet our goal on this offering. We had hoped to raise $2,000 for the seminary and $1,000 for the Sunday School Board, but we missed our $3,000 by about $350. Did you remember to send in your offering?)

WMC QUIZ

Some weeks ago our national president included this quiz in a letter to the local presidents for use in a council meeting. We thought it such a good coverage of our year's work that we wanted each of you to have it to check your own WMC knowledge.—Ed.

1. How many of the memory verses of the year can you quote? (Col. 2:6; Rom. 4:12; Phil. 4:6-7; Eph. 5:2; Eph. 4:1; Luke 12:37; Eph. 5:15; Micah 6:8; Rom. 6:4.)
2. Name five writers of articles this year in "Our Daily Walk" mission and devotional studies. State a few highlights about each.
3. Name our theme, our theme verse, and one theme song for the year.
4. Who are your district WMC officers? Local WMC officers?
5. When was WMC organized and where? Who was the first national president?
6. Approximately how many councils do we have?
7. Name five themes used for the national WMC in past years.
8. Name our four major offerings and projects for this year. For what are the Thank Offering and Birthday Offering used?
9. Name three ways that WMC has been a special blessing to each member and the women of the church.
10. Name five subjects used for "Our Daily Walk" devotional studies this year.

If you cannot answer some questions, check with your local president, who received the answers on the quiz sent to her by Mrs. Ashman.

OUT OF THE EDITOR'S MAILBOX

The ladies of the Philadelphia, Pa., First Brethren Church entertained the ladies of the Third Brethren Church at a joint meeting in April. This was the second such meeting and they are proving a blessing as the ladies worship and pray together.

In the group at Temple City, Calif., each member has a WMC bag made of printed cotton material with drawstring top in which she keeps her "Thank Offering" box, songbook, WMC Herald, contributions for the hope chest, bandage material, silverware coupons, or anything else she wants to be sure to bring to the next meeting. They also report making more than 30 batches of soap for use at Taos and the Navaho school. We will print their recipe for soap-making in a later number of the Herald.

The Indiana spring rally was held at South Bend, with Osceola as cohostess. There were 115 ladies present. An interesting program of skits, duets, solos, and a monolog was presented. Special guests were Mrs. Kliever, Mrs. Sickel, and Mrs. W. A. Ogden.

The North Long Beach, Calif., correspondent reports that enthusiasm is mounting as the time approaches when they will open their birthday banks and decide who will be the honored guests with the largest birthday offering. We reported their method of taking the birthday offering in detail last year. She also reports that there is much enthusiasm about the Portland conference and that many of their ladies are planning to attend.

IN SYMPATHY

Although the notice has already been in the "News Briefs" of the death of Mr. Albert Emmert, we wish to mention it once again because he was the father of Mary Emmert, our own national prayer chairman. Mr. Emmert lacked only a few days of reaching his 93d birthday. Some days before his death he fell and broke his hip and at his age the shock was greater than he could overcome. As WMC sisters we express our deep sympathy to Mary, for we know she will miss him greatly, although for him it is "far better."

Some years ago Mary returned from the African mission field to make a home for her father. We understand that her thoughts are already turning back to that land to which she has given so many years of her life and that she hopes to be able to return. Let us hold her up before the Lord as she seeks His guidance for the future.

HITCH YOUR WAGON TO A STAR (Col. 3:1)

By Ava Schnittjer

(Scripture: Colossians 2:16-3:14).

JANE: Station SMM brings the concluding program of the summer in our series, "Walking in His Footprints." If a Christian girl wants to keep pressing on the upward way, she'll have to "hitch her wagon to a star," and though her feet are on the ground, her heart will be in the heavenlies.

LOUISE: What do you mean by "hitch your wagon to a star"?

JANE: This means to "set your affections on things above." In Colossians 3:1 we read: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God."

ESTHER: But what do you mean by being "risen with Christ"? Even though I am a Christian, I haven't gone to heaven yet; I'm still on the earth.

ALICE: That is certainly true. And it is a great mystery how we are in the world but not of the world. In Ephesians 2:4-6 we read: "But God . . . hath quickened us together with Christ . . . and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Anyone who has received Christ as Saviour is considered by God as a citizen of heaven, because our Head, the Lord Jesus, is in heaven.

MARY: The Colossians had believed in Christ and trusted Him for their salvation, but now they seem to have become entangled with all sorts of things on earth. He warns them against "philosophy and vain deceit" which are after the traditions of men and not after Christ. He warns them against depending on the observance of holy days, or eating or drinking, or not eating or drinking. And all this is in order that every one might be "perfect in Christ Jesus" (Col. 1:28).

JANE: Our Lord, who was perfect, sinless, altogether lovely, died for our sins. When we received Him, we identified ourselves with Him on that cross. We were "crucified with Christ" (Gal. 2:20). We have His promise then in Colossians 2:12—"buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

MARY: So by faith we are already registered in heaven. And that is why we are to seek those things which are above.

LOUISE: But there are lots of things I want. I'd like to have pretty clothes. And I'd like to be popular with the girls—and with the boys. There are so many things I want. Are these things wrong?

ALICE: They aren't wrong in themselves. I want them, too. But the important thing is what you put first. If you put those things first, you probably won't get them at all, or if you do, they'll make you unhappy instead of happy as you had hoped. You won't be satisfied ever, because you can never have enough things to satisfy you. You'll always be wanting more. But if you always put the Lord first, you'll be happy whether you get "things" or not.

MARY: The Lord gave us the same commandment in Matthew 6:33: "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

JANE: He knows what we have need of and wants to supply it, but he wants us to put Him first; then he'll add all we have need of. The psalmist said: "Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart" (Ps. 37:4).

LOUISE: I'm willing to try. But I don't know what to seek. What are the things that are above?

JANE: Everything we have in Christ Jesus. Let's see what some of these things are. He says to seek His righteousness. If we have received Him, we have His righteousness—in God's sight, that is. So we should strive to make our actual life live up to the place we have in heaven.

MARY: Then if we are hungry, Jesus is the bread of life.

ESTHER: If we are thirsty, He says, "Come unto me and drink."

ALICE: If we need protection and care, with the psalmist we can say, "The Lord is my shepherd."

JANE: If we are weary and tired, He says: "Come unto me . . . and I will give you rest."

MARY: If we stumble in darkness, He assures us, "I am the light of the world."

ESTHER: He claims that He is our hope, He is our joy, He is our peace. And if we would enter into these blessings, He says, "I am the door."

JANE: Wo do have this place in heaven, but Paul suggests that we shouldn't just sit down and do nothing, but strive and labor, seek those things. In his letter to the Philippians, Paul said that "forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark . . . whereto we have already attained [he means that already God counts us as perfect because we are in Christ], let us walk by the same rule . . ." (Phil. 3:13-14, 16). Let us be as much like Christ as we can be. Christ came and gave himself in order that we might be pure, holy, separated from sin. We know that one way to accomplish this is to keep our minds and hearts on Christ. We know that as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

MARY: Paul has even given us a list of things to think on: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4:8).

ESTHER: Then our treasure won't be in earthen vessels, but we will have laid up treasure in heaven.

JANE: Station SMM has brought you the last of the "Tips to the Christian Traveler." And if you do all these things, we know "the God of peace shall be with you."

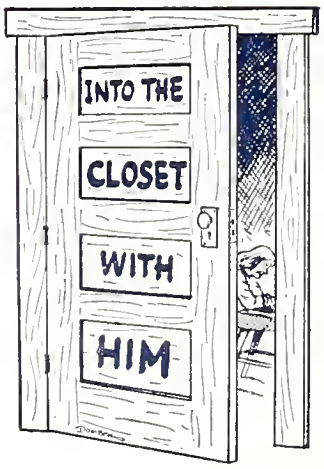
SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR AUGUST

THEME SONG—Sing the first stanza of "Footprints of Jesus," followed by a short word of prayer.

THE CHRISTIAN'S ROADMAP—For the Scripture, read Colossians 3:1-17.

PRAYER CIRCLE—Having all of the girls taking part, pray for the requests found in the Herald, as well as your own requests.

HEAVENLY SUNSHINE—Have a good time by singing together. A special number by girls in your own group would be fine.



SPIRITUAL FOOD—Seniors consider "Hitch Your Wagon to a Star"; middlers study "Worthy of Him in All You Do."

LEARNING THE PAST—The last one, and it's a good one, for it has something in it for the Sisterhood girls. Don't miss it!

SMM BENEDICTION—Sing another stanza of "Footprints of Jesus," and repeat the SMM Benediction.

BUSINESS MEETING.

PRAYER REQUESTS

Pray especially for the conference sessions of Sisterhood, that the Lord will be honored in all that is decided.

Pray for the writers of the new year's theme, and also for the projects.

Pray for our missionaries on the foreign field; don't fail to remember Miss Gail Jones, whom we have been helping in our National Project this year.

Pray for the national work. You remember that last year we were short in the general funds. Pray that in all of our offerings we will exceed last year by far!

1. Did you send in your statistical blanks? These are necessary for us to have if you want any new material. Even if you are just newly organized, please send us a statistical blank.
2. All national SMM board members—don't forget the board meetings in Portland, Oreg., on August 9 and 10. This includes the district patronesses also.
3. Each district is responsible for an unusual presentation at conference. If you can't bring it, then please send it.

Worthy of Him in All You Do

By Mrs. James Dixon

We have been studying how to walk worthy of the Lord. We must put all sin out of our lives. We must be like the Lord Jesus Christ in tenderheartedness, kindness, humility, and meekness. We must be longsuffering and forbearing. We must forgive as He has forgiven us. We must be filled with love because God is love.

When things go wrong, we must "let the peace of God rule in our hearts." "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly." To be pleasing to the Lord we must read His Word. We must study His Word. We must learn His Word. We must meditate upon His Word. We must order our lives according to His Word. We must be doers of the Word and not hearers only. We must fill our hearts and lives full of the Word of God. We should know the Word of God so well that we can be teachers, not only in classes, but in our daily lives. We cannot please the Lord and neglect His Word.

The final test of making our lives worthy of the Lord is found in Colossians 3:23: "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men." A Christian should have a singleness of purpose to glorify God in all he does. We should judge all our actions with "will this be pleasing to the Lord?" A Christian should be a wholehearted, zealous person. Nothing should be done carelessly or indifferently, but enthusiastically for the Lord.

A Christian teacher used to say repeatedly: "Always do your best, then better your best for His glory." This applies to your schoolwork, your housework, your music lessons, your athletics. Whatsoever you do, if you can do it to the glory of the Lord, do it with your whole heart. Then you will be walking worthy of the Lord and pleasing Him in everything.

The following are questions for the leader to think through:

1. How can the Word of Christ dwell in you?
2. What is to be the test of our every word and every action?
3. Can a consecrated Christian ever be justified in a careless way of living?

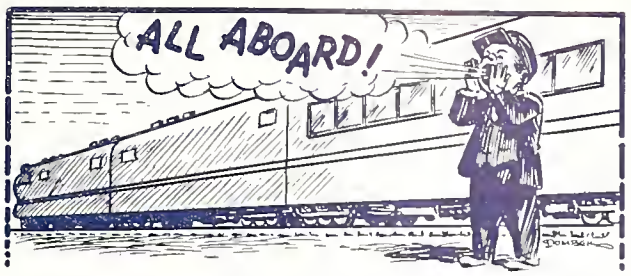
History of the Brethren Church—XII

By Rev. Gerald Polman

What has happened in our denomination during the last 15 years? This is the question which should be of interest to each member of the Brethren Church. When the division of 1939 took place there were approximately 77 churches in the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. Since that time more than 60 new churches have been organized, making a total of 137 at the end of 1953. Several more have been organized since that date. The statistician reported a membership of 20,819 for the year closing December 31, 1953. Our church is growing.

Our list of home-mission churches has grown from 18 in 1940 to over 50 at the present time. The list of foreign missionaries which we are supporting has increased from 33 to over 90 in the same period of time. The Foreign Missionary Society has adopted a goal of "One for One" —a foreign missionary for every pastor at home. Of course this cannot be fully accomplished by only the members of the Foreign Missionary Board—it will only be accomplished when there are young people who will volunteer as missionaries, and if money is given to send them out to the mission field. Our missionary program, both home and foreign, has grown, but the continued growth depends on us.

The Brethren Missionary Herald Company is expanding each year. This company is responsible for printing this fine magazine, The Brethren Missionary Herald, each week, as well as publishing our Brethren Sunday-school literature and other Brethren tracts, pamphlets, and books.



Of course, Grace Theological Seminary is growing. Beginning with about 30 students in 1939 at Akron, Ohio, the enrollment this past year was 147. There were also 104 more students enrolled in the new Grace College at Winona Lake, Ind.

There are several other active boards in our denomination today doing an important work for the Lord: the Board of Evangelism, the National Sunday School Board, and the Board on Ministerial Relief.

We all should also be acquainted with the other organizations within our denomination: the National Fellowship of Brethren Ministers, the Brethren Women's Missionary Council, the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, the Brethren Youth Fellowship, the National Fellowship of Brethren Laymen, Brethren Boys Clubs, and the Brethren Youth Council (composed of SMM, BYF, and BBC).

We can be justly proud of our denomination and its growth. Especially should we be thankful that every member church and organization in the denomination is true to the Word of God. How we should guard ourselves from the inroads of modernism.

The history of the past is written and done, and we can learn from it. Do you know who is writing the history of the future? We are—Sisterhood girls included! Let us covenant together to do all that the Lord would have us do for Him.

"Well, well, well! Back again! Now that you girls are all out of school you have some extra time on your hands, don't you? You ought to be working on your projects, for it isn't long now. Soon all will be packing up for either Portland, Oreg., or Winona Lake, Ind. We hope many of you girls will attend the SMM sessions at conference. Let's get on our "train" and visit some groups who have done interesting things in the past few months. Here we go—to North English, Iowa, to visit the girls in the Pleasant Grove SMM. ALL A-B-O-A-R-D!"

On May 27 the Pleasant Grove SMM held a banquet in honor of Kathleen Cheny, who graduated from high school. As a theme, Genesis 9:13 was used, showing that as God promised by setting a bow in the clouds so He promises us as Christians that He will be with us always. Decorations majored around the rainbow which signified looking toward the future. Also on June 10 clothes were sent to Miss Mary Cripe "for her dark babies."

"That was something different, wasn't it? We're going over to Des Moines, Iowa, and see what the girls there have been doing."

The combined junior and senior SMM had their own officers, but each senior girl had at least two juniors to supervise. The seniors also supervised the projects, which consisted of making toys, linens, and clothes for missionaries.

"There's an idea if you have a large number of junior girls in your church. Now we're going to head east a little and stop in at Lake Odessa, Mich. Here we are already, so let's go!"

A play was presented called "Soup, Sand, and Sagebrush" in December, at which time a freewill offering for the national project was taken. They are rolling bandages, and have made wash-cloth animals which were sent to the Navaho Indians. All of the girls took part in the Mothers' Tea, at which time a skit about rolling bandages was given.

"I'm very, very sorry, but we'll just have to go back to Iowa for a brief time in Waterloo. I know you girls won't mind at all—who knows, we may even see some of that 'corn' which they're always bragging about, eh? Get ready, girls, for we're just about there. Hope you enjoy yourselves!"

A girls' trio has been organized from the junior group along with a pianist. These girls have sung at several services. In May the girls enjoyed a potluck, which was also visitors' night. There were 33 girls in all. A July picnic is planned. Just something on the sidelines, they have already rolled 500 bandages!

"They put some of us to shame with 33 at one meeting, don't they? Well, we must be getting east pretty quick or we'll never make it around to all the groups we want to. So here we are in Berne, Ind., for a bit of news."

On March 23 the girls gave a program for their parents. A typical monthly program was given, after which they demonstrated bandage rolling. All were then invited to a time of refreshments. They've already rolled about 350 bandages.

"Sounds like a new idea, to interest our parents in SMM also. So many times they don't know anything about Sisterhood. Let them in on it some time! Our next stop is going to be the Bethel Brethren Church in Osceola, Ind."

The most recent highlight for the senior girls has been the Mothers' Tea, at which time all the girls of SMM and their patroness wore formals. The tables were decorated with Maypoles, having as a centerpiece a small Maypole with dolls dressed in formals. One speaker spoke on "The Ideal Mother," while another spoke on "The Ideal Daughter." In the past they have enjoyed a slumber party, but they tell me they didn't do much sleeping! The girls sent some "practical packs" to several missionary points. All of them feel as though they really had a successful year in the Lord.

"We like to hear about groups like that, and we trust that all of you girls can say the same thing—that the Lord has abundantly blessed you this past year. Now let's get over to the senior SMM of Covington, Ohio, shall we?"

The group is made up of 17 active members. During this year they have visited homes for the aged and have recently completed their home project, that of a carpet for the church nursery. They have been spending much time on rolling bandages, and even had the WMC help them! They are hoping to be an honor SMM again this year.

"I certainly hope they are an honor group, don't you? All of you ought to have that desire. I think we have time for a few more stops, so we'll make the next one in the Keystone State, Allentown, Pa."

In the past, this group has been small, but have been gaining some new members, in addition to working hard on their projects. Each girl is requested to bring an item for the missionary box to every meeting, thus they have built up their box. Their local project has been to redecorate the church nursery and make sock dolls for the children. Quite a few of the girls are striving for the ruby, diamond, and emerald awards, and at each meeting they learn a verse from Colossians.

"Looks like we'll have to take you out to the Northwest again. I completely forgot about this item when we were out in the West, so we'll have to backtrack a little. But enjoy the scenery as we journey west for we're going to Sunnyside, Wash., to peek in on the district group."

In April the district rally was held, at which time the four SMM's of the district were all represented. A loving cup was presented to Albany for their outstanding project. New officers were elected, and Mrs. Harris, from Portland, extended an invitation to all to attend conference.

"And we do, too! Hope many of you girls will make your way out to conference, for we know you'll never regret it. This looks like the last trip in the 'old year,' but we trust you'll remember to send your newsletters to the national general secretary—she's waiting to hear from you! So long, girls!"

WHY SHOULD THE WMC WOMEN GO TO PORTLAND?

We will not only hear many ideas and suggestions, but with our own eyes we will have the privilege of personally meeting all the national officers and no doubt see many of these missionaries, all perhaps for the first time, but by being there in person it will also give you the over-all picture of the entire WMC and its progress. Then, too, by seeing and meeting many of these people, perhaps for the first time, the articles which you read and enjoy in our Missionary Herald, will take on new and deeper meaning.

With our voices, each will be given the opportunity to voice their own opinion, throughout all the business sessions. We can also lift our voices in prayer and praise at the morning prayer and praise sessions each day of the week.

How our hearts will be thrilled when each of us attend all the Spirit-filled WMC sessions! I know each of us will have a greater burden and vision for all the national WMC work. Just as a new babe in Christ grows in the grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, so can all of those who attend grow in grace and knowledge in the work of the national WMC.

Might I relate a testimony of my own personal experience of just how national conference has helped me to grow in the work. Several years ago I was elected president of my own local council, and I must confess I had not the slightest idea of what the Women's Missionary Council was all about. To me it was just a place of meeting with Christian women and having a Spirit-filled service for the evening, for which I praise the Lord. Yes; the office of president was upon my shoulders, and what was I to do, and where could I go but to the Lord? This I did, praying continually about the work. Then I shall never forget that one dear sister in the council who had attended all the conferences. She came to me and said: "If you will just attend district and national conferences, you can get firsthand information of all the national work, and it will help you so much to carry on the work in our own group." I accepted the advice given, and it has been a blessing to me ever since to attend conferences. Perhaps my experience could be the experience of many WMC ladies. For growth in our WMC, may I exhort you to "go to Portland."

Then last, but by no means least, the reason why we should go to conference is because much time and effort has been spent in planning all of the WMC sessions by our faithful WMC president and her committees. It would be quite hard for her to speak to empty seats, from which she would get no response. So, come on women, let's "go to Portland" and endeavor to make this one of the largest attended WMC conferences we have ever known. This can be done if each local council will have their amount of delegates present. Did you ever hear the expression, "It's just like heaven on earth"? That is my version of a national conference. Go to Portland, and see if you won't agree with me!

SPECIAL. Miss Ruth Kent and Miss Marie Mishler arrived in the States on June 21 from Africa. Both have completed their second term of service in that land. While on furlough Miss Kent will make her home at Wakarusa, Ind., and Miss Mishler will make her home at 58 Carlton Dr., Akron, Ohio.

GARWIN, IOWA. Raymond Kettell has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Carlton Brethren Church and is now on the field. His address is now Garwin, Iowa. Please change Annual.

LEAMERSVILLE, PA. J. L. Gingrich has now assumed the pastorate of the Leamersville Brethren Church and his address is R. R. 2, Duncansville, Pa. Please change Annual.

SPECIAL. Rev. and Mrs. William Samarin and daughters, now in the States on their first furlough from Africa, will receive mail at the following address: c/o F. V. Custer, 825 Oakgrove Rd., Concord, Calif.

KITTANNING, PA. Homecoming Sunday, a day of fellowship and worship, is the plan of the North Buffalo Brethren Church to celebrate the rededication of the remodeling of their church, July 17. The offerings of the day will be used to finish the payment of remodeling. Donald W. Rossman is pastor.

CORRECTION. July 24, instead of June 24, as recently stated, is the date set for the parsonage mortgage-burning of First Brethren Church, William Schaffer pastor. Dr. Paul R. Bauman will be the special speaker and will hold meetings from July 22 through 24.

SPECIAL. Mr. and Mrs. Sibley M. Edmiston and family have moved recently to a new location in Laredo, Tex. Their street address is 2111 Piedra China, but mail must be addressed to them at General Delivery, since they are just outside the mail route.

KITTANNING, PA. Donald W. Rossman has resigned as pastor of the North Buffalo Brethren Church, effective in mid-August or before. Brother Rossman plans to enter Grace Seminary for further study. Any person interested in this pastorate is requested to write the church secretary, Mrs. Odell Bowser, R. R. 4, Kittanning, Pa.

FREMONT, OHIO. Mrs. Emma Catherine Linthicum, of the Grace Brethren Church, passed away June 14. She was buried in Kansas, Ohio, with Rev. Gordon Bracker conducting the funeral services.

CHICAGO, ILL. Moody Bible Institute announces a new Moody Institute of Science film, "Time and Eternity," will be released this fall. It is a sermon based upon the theory of relativity, showing how time is related to space and motion.

FLORA, IND. The Indiana Fellowship of Brethren Churches will convene at the Grace Brethren Church, Charles Turner pastor, July 11-14.

CLAYHOLE, KY. Dr. Elmer Wilder, author of several object-lesson books, is conducting meetings at the Clayhole Brethren Church, Sewell S. Landrum pastor, July 8-10. He was the speaker for the first session of their DVBS June 20.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Abigail Elizabeth came to join her two sisters at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Norman Uphouse on June 21. She weighed 6 lbs. 6½ oz. on arrival.

"A Vacation With a Purpose"

I'm headed for a "vacation with a purpose." Yes; I'm going to spend a week at Brethren Camp Bethany. And I have my choice of two camps: Portland, Oreg., Aug. 10 to 17 ($18), or Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 22-29 ($20). Advance information indicates that an action-packed daily program of instruction, inspiration, and recreation will be enjoyed. And a number of other Brethren young people from across the nation will be in attendance. Yes; I'm sending in my registration today. I'm headed for a "vacation with a purpose."

MEYERSDALE, PA. Arthur T. Collins, of South Bend, Ind., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Summit Mills Brethren Church and will assume his duties about the first of August.

SHARPSVILLE, IND. The address of Edward Clark, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, has been changed to Box 185, Sharpsville, Ind. Please change Annual. Don Bartlett, former pastor, a teacher at Kokomo Bible Institute, is recovering slowly from a serious operation.

BARBEE LAKE, IND. The new Barbee Brethren (Illustrated) Sunday School, recently started by Foye Miller at the request of the Leesburg Brethren Church, is progressing nicely. The first three Sundays saw an attendance of 50, 51, 63, and two first-time decisions for Christ. Pastor Nathan Meyer of the Leesburg church, and Dr. Paul R. Bauman, of Grace Seminary and College, have been the speakers.

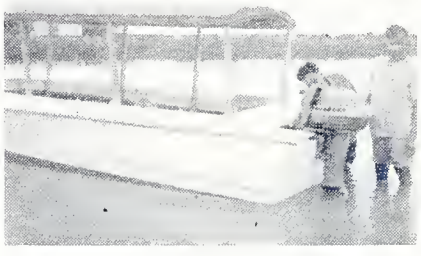
NEW TROY, MICH. Christian sympathy is extended to Dr. Charles Ashman and family in the death of his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Ashman, the last week in May. She had made her home with her son, Lewis, in Deerfield, Ill. Rev. Richard Jackson, Jr., pastor of the New Troy Brethren Church, officiated at the interment services at the New Troy cemetery.

This issue of the Herald will be going into 8,299 homes and mission points and will be read by more than twice that number of people.

Bethany "Feud" Pays Dividends In Brazil

Remember that friendly feud between the "Odds" and the "Evens" at last year's Bethany? Who could forget it! Well, it's paying dividends not only at Fort Lauderdale, as we reported before, but in Brazil. The "Odds" won, with about $325 in their offering, and Missionary Eddie Miller returned to Brazil with a brand-new 15-horsepower outboard motor.

The laymen of Ashland, Ohio, provided money for a new and larger boat to be built in Brazil, and the young people of Bethany provided the power to push it up and down the river, and Eddie Miller reports that it is a tremendous help in the work there. The old boat and motor are still in use, by the Zielaskos and Burks, across the river.



The accompanying picture and story, just received from Eddie Miller, will give you some appreciation of its usefulness on the field.

Now what shall we do for the Lord and His work at Bethany this year?

Mazagao Velho is a little town back up one of the small tributaries of the Amazon River. There is no gospel testimony in this out-of-the-way place, although it is almost 200 years old. Most of the old folks who now live there are direct descendants of slaves. Their parents were brought over from Africa by the Portuguese.

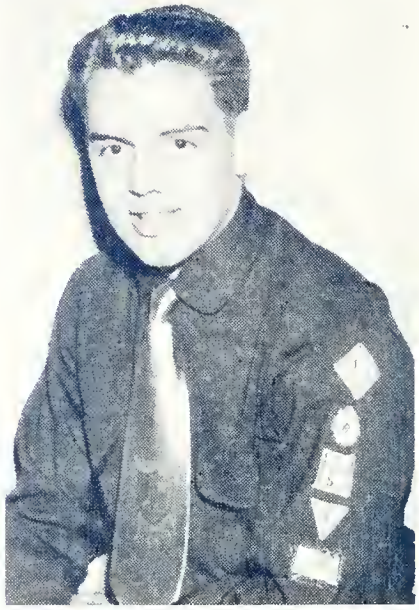
There is, of course, no road back to this village and so the only way to get there is by canoa, or motor-boat. We have made the trip several times by motorboat, thanks to the efforts of those who helped contribute to the "boat fund" last year at Bethany Camp. We used to make the trip back into the interior in our small Evinrude outboard. Needless to say, this took almost twice as long as it does now in our new 15-horsepower Evinrude.

We are indeed grateful to those who helped make it possible to make these trips. We are now able to take the Gospel to those who might otherwise never be able to hear it.—Eddie Miller, Macapa, Brazil.

Two of the believers putting the larger outboard on the new boat, readying it for its maiden voyage in April.

Brethren YOUTH By Ralph Colburn

BRETHREN YOUTH TO ASSIST IN HOME-MISSION WORK



Again this summer the Brethren Youth Council is sending a number of young people to our home-mission fields in Kentucky and New Mexico to assist in daily vacation Bible schools and other work around the mission. At least four girls will be going to the Taos area, serving there for eight weeks or more. At least 10 DVBS's will be conducted, and some of the girls may assist in summer camp there as well.

Four more will be going to Clayhole for two weeks, and possibly to Dryhill as well. All these are Brethren young people, and most of them are students in Christian colleges or Bible institutes, preparing for the Lord's work.

The Youth Council, aided often by the workers' home churches, guarantees the transportation and board expenses for these workers, and hopes to give them each an honorarium at the close of the summer's work to assist them in their further education. A minimum of $1,100 is needed for this purpose, and about $700 is on hand. If any individuals or groups across the brotherhood feel led to help these young people, and our home-mission fields as well, send your gift at once to the Brethren Youth Council, Box 617, Winona Lake, Ind., marked "Summer Workers."

ANOTHER BOY MAKES TOP RANK IN BRETHREN BOYS CLUB

Five years ago the Melrose Garden's Brethren Church, Harrisburg, Pa., organized a Boys Club. The Lord has been very good to us during that time. Just before we closed shop for the summer months, Robert Larson, a faithful member of the club since its beginning, received the rank of Swordsman, which is the highest rank a club member can receive. Bob served as junior counselor this year, helping in metal work.—Allen Zook, club chief.

How Best Can We Strengthen Our Forces?

By Earle R. Cole, Laymen's Page Editor

It is no secret that men—off the payroll—in our denomination are few and far between. There are a few men here and there that give a few evenings a week or a Saturday in addition to Sunday or part of Sunday each week in the Lord's work. Most of these men are new converts or active teachers or administrators, or boys' activities workers. They are busy men concerned about our blessed Lord and HIS will.

Some even in this group, especially among the new converts, are active for a while and then cool off and fall away discouraged.

WHY? WHY? WHY? WHY?

I have asked myself that question a thousand times through the years as the Lord has opened doors for service in my local church, in the district conference and men's fellowship, and in the National Fellowship of Brethren Laymen.

There is a reason or cause for every effect. There is no exception here.

In many perusals of this problem —for it is a real problem not only to those who feel the Lord's will is to exhort Christian men to be active in their Christian lives but also to every discouraged man among us— the lack of incentive for activity within the fellowship, more times than not, is the center most finding. Men in general do not feel that they are a part of the local section of the body of Christ, the local church, nor the district section, nor the National Fellowship.

Parallel situations among other groups have been studied. A study in human relations as carried out as a basis for a master's degree thesis presents some interesting findings and a possible solution.

Ninety boys—selected at random from one large American city section — were separated into three groups, A, B, and C by the "count-off system." Groups A, B, and C were taken into separate areas which had identical facilities but their own problems. Each had a lounge room, a woodworking shop, a library, recreation facilities, sleeping accommodations, and a section of town with normal city-life problems.

Group A was shown the facilities and the situation and told to do what they thought best for them individually and for the community. No leader was chosen and everyone did just what he wanted to do. Everyone went his own way. They did not get together as a group again after the first meeting. They did not meet in committees or smaller groups. They didn't accomplish anything of importance to the group or community. The laisser faire method failed.

Group B were shown their facilities and their community situation. The leader that called them together told them specifically what was to be accomplished and how it was to be done. Each boy was given his specific assignment and partners to play and work with. The times for recreation and rest were also spelled out. Times for reassembly for report and further assignment were made clear by the leader. For a while it worked out well, but when several of the boys saw what they thought were improvements in the plans and tried to get the leader to listen to their ideas without success, they soon lost interest and dropped out of the group activity. The autocratic method is weak.

Group C was also shown the facilities and the community problems. Then the group leader suggested that they choose a leader from among their own number. They did just that. Then they discussed the situation among themselves. The scribe they selected put the points on a blackboard as they were made by the individual members. They defined the specific community problems and their own group needs in this way. They set their own time schedules for work, recreation, etc.

In their second discussion session each member had opportunity to help get the facts of each problem on the board. Possible solutions and the best solutions came up from the group in these sessions. Then possible methods for executing these best solutions were discussed and the best method agreed upon. There was no need to sell the plan to those who had to carry it out, for IT WAS THEIR PLAN. Division of the work was collectively agreed upon and rapidly executed. As the group subsequently met, improvements were discussed, and the plans were modified as the group felt it necessary. Every one of the 30 boys was active throughout the whole experiment and keenly interested in their community and their accomplishments. Democratic methods really worked with these boys.

All of the three principles were tried in turn on each of the groups eventually. The interest and the results were the same for Group C principles when applied to the boys from the other two groups.

The democratic method applied to my work area where I work has greatly improved our efficiency, morale, team spirit. It has reduced our waste and increased our profits.

If these principles of human behavior were nurtured in our Christian endeavor I believe we would grow into strong Christians, pleasing to our blessed Lord. May we be banded together as strong local churches, as strong district conferences, and as a strong national conference, IN HIS WILL.

WORTH WAITING FOR

"So I told her my mother is worth waiting for and I'm glad you went away to speak for the Lord. But I'm real glad you're back, Mama."

"Huh? What did you say, Sharon? Oh, yes; I guess I heard you with one ear, anyway. I must have been doing some pretty hard thinking as I sprinkled the clothes. I'm glad to be back, Honey. I missed you and all the children."

"Did you miss Daddy, too?"

"I surely did, although I should not tell him so because of the way he teased me about going on my 'annual spring tour.' What did you mean by saying, 'Mother is worth waiting for'?"

"At school Michele asked me if I liked to have you go away, and didn't I get tired waiting for you to come home. So I told her we miss you lots, but you need to be able to get away from all our noise and the hard work you do for us kids."

A mist covered Mother's eyes as she hugged her dark-haired girl and whispered, "Thank you, dear." A warmth pervaded her heart as she remembered anew how all hands united to take up the slack while she was gone for six days. It was so wonderful to spend a few days with her mother in Philadelphia talking and enjoying the sweet intimacies which only a mother-daughter fellowship can give.

While walking down Chestnut Street in old Philadelphia we suddenly became aware of a parade headed toward Independence Hall. No one likes a parade better than a Philadelphian. Mother and daughter stopped and leaned against a barricade at the curb and watched. An old gentleman removed his hat and placed it over his heart each time Old Glory waved by our vantage point. The theme of the parade seemed to be "Civil Defense" as it related in strength and alertness to the "City of Brotherly Love."

We saw all nationalities—the red and yellow, black and white—pass in review while all nationalities cheered from the sidewalks. From Cub Scout age to veterans of World War I they marched with pardonable pride to show their potential might in time of emergency.

Disabled veterans being transported by some conveyance gave grim reminder of war's awful ravages. Many of those men were once filled with the thrill of bright hope for an abundant life. A bullet or grenade quickly blasted that hope.

"How much we are forced to spend on war and preparation for war," Grandma Schwartz whispered to her daughter.

"Yes; and that's only a very small part of the over-all cost. Think of how different the picture would be if just a small part, perhaps 10 percent of war's costs had been devoted to giving the Gospel to these veterans when they were lads at home, and to these Cub Scouts who will be tomorrow's warriors. Many a mother who would not give her son to the Lord to be a missionary or minister was forced to give him up to the god of war."

"You have five sons whom you have given to the Lord to be soldiers of His cross. If the Lord allows me to see them out on the firing line for Him, I'll be the happiest grandmother this side of glory. It's a goal worth waiting and working for."

"Worth waiting for"—a little girl's love for her mother coupled with a willingness to give her up for a little while. Her waiting was rewarded when Mother returned home refreshed and with a few less wrinkles on her face. "Worth waiting for"—a precious grandmother's yearning to see her five grandsons being "good soldiers of Jesus Christ." "Worth waiting for"—the blessed Son of God who promised: "If I go . . . I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3).

Life is made up of periods of waiting, some with glad anticipation, some dread. But in the life of the child of God all waiting has a purpose and will ultimately redound to His honor and glory if we endure to the end.

"And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal. 6:9).

Paramount, Calif.

We praise the Lord for His goodness during our blessed revival campaign May 15-29.

This was the first two-week meeting the church had ever conducted and God answered prayers for this group when they trusted Him in this demonstration of faith.

Bro. John Mayes, pastor, is a hard worker and is capable of the tremendous responsibilities which he constantly carries.

This congregation will soon be meeting in their new building, a picture of which appeared recently in the Missionary Herald, so it was a thrill to cooperate one night with the Brethren High School and see about 700 fill the auditorium.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

Buena Vista, Va.

Gerald W. Teeter, of Martinsburg, Pa., was our evangelist at Buena Vista, Va., May 17-29. He proved to be not only a fine speaker, but a tireless worker. We are still seeing results from the meetings held then. We recently baptized 19 and took 23 into our church membership, most of whom were as a direct result of these meetings.—Edward Lewis, pastor, First Brethren Church.

A united effort to win souls is the best phrase to characterize pastor and people of the First Brethren Church of Buena Vista, Va., during a recent revival, May 17-29.

Continual prayer and constant inviting were the seeds sown by the people which yielded forth an increase of 55 decisions, 17 of which were first-time decisions. It was a joy to see homes united in the Lord and decisions from youth through to one who had even passed threescore and ten.—Gerald W. Teeter, evangelist.

MISSIONARY HERALD—

1. Pray for wisdom from the Lord as the Missionary Herald building program gets under way.

2. Pray for the offering during July to the publication interests of our denomination. The Missionary Herald faces the greatest need in its history.

3. Pray for the board of trustees as they meet in Portland and make many decisions relative to the future program.

4. Pray for the safety of travel of all the delegates going to Portland for our National Fellowship Aug. 10-17.

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray that the new Grace Brethren Church of Goshen, Ind., may be finished soon and the financing completed.

2. Praise God for new families attending, victories in lives of new Christians, and for salvation of precious souls at Yakima, Wash. Pray that the power of the Holy Spirit might rest upon the pastor, Henry Dalke, and his family as they serve Him at Yakima.

3. Pray for the effective and proper use of a bus in bringing folk to the Sunday school and church services of the Grace Brethren Church, York, Pa.

4. Pray that the contractor for the Riverside Brethren Church of Johnstown will do a good job in the construction of the building, and that it may be finished as soon as possible.

5. Pray that one of the contacts for financing the Seattle church might be led to grant the loan so the much-needed building can be gotten under way.

6. Pray for the annual meeting of the board of directors for the Brethren Home Missions Council as they meet in Portland, beginning August 3, to lay plans for the 1956 home-mission program.

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Pray for Brethren young people who are now making decisions where to go to college and seminary, that they may make the right decisions.

2. Pray for the Grace Ambassadors, composed of Richard and Robert Messner and Prof. Donald Ogden, as they visit many of our churches this summer.

3. Pray that the monthly plan of supporting Grace Seminary and College may not lag during the summer months when there is special need.

4. Pray for the plans to erect a new multiple-purpose building at Grace Seminary to meet the need of the growing school.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Pray for protection for our missionaries and national workers in Argentina in this time of crisis. Pray that God may receive the glory in the over-all picture in Argentina.

2. Pray for a time of rest and blessing as furlough begins for Miss Marie Mishler, Miss Ruth Kent, and the Harold Dunning, William Samarin, James Marshall, and Fred Fogle families.

3. Praise the Lord for the marked improvement in the health of Mrs. Rose Foster, and the reported improvement in the health of Mrs. William Samarin.

4. Pray for the annual board meeting of the Foreign Missionary Society at Portland, August 3-17, and for journeying mercies for the missionaries and personnel.

5. Praise the Lord for His manifest blessings in our work in Hawaii and for the $300 foreign-missionary offering we have just received from them. Pray that Christians may stand true to the Lord.

6. Pray for the Howards and the Haags as they make trips this summer down into Mexico, and for Miss Robinson and the Edmistons as they continue in the border testimonies.

7. Continue to pray for George Cone, Jr., as he assumes leadership of our work in France during the furlough of the Fogles.

8. Remember the Don Millers, the Hills, and the Zielaskos, who plan to be traveling home in August for furloughs.

9. Pray for passage and visas for the Marvin Goodman family as they look forward to another term of service in Africa.

10. Pray for the blessing of the Lord upon Miss Mary Emmert, our prayer chairman, in the loss of her father, Bro. Albert Emmert.

11. Many decisions for Christ are being reported in our work in Brazil. Pray for establishment in the faith of these new believers and for all other national and native believers.

EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE—

1. Pray for Evangelist Dean Fetterhoff in a meeting in the Washington Heights Brethren Church, Roanoke, Va., July 17-31.

2. Pray for our national laymen's organization as they sponsor the Crusade work. Praise the Lord for their faithfulness.

3. Praise the Lord for good meetings recently in Ozark, Lansing, and Dryhill.

WMC—

(Supplied by the Midwest District.)

1. Pray that our women will have more interest in the 15th day of prayer.

2. Pray that we may live a more separated life unto the Lord.

3. Pray as we come to the close of the year that all our goals may be met.

SMM—

1. Pray for the national board as they plan next year's program.

2. Pray that the girls of SMM might be "living testimonies" for their Lord and Master.

3. Pray for district organizations as they serve their Lord.

BYF—

1. Pray that the Lord will bless the district work of Bro. Richard Holmes in northern Ohio, and will raise up other district men to meet the needs of the youth program.

2. Continue to ask the Lord to provide a national Brethren youth director to head up and lead the work.

3. Ask the Lord to use effectively the "Camp Bethany Folders" that are being mailed to the churches. Pray that God will give us two fine camps—at Portland and at Winona Lake.

4. Pray that the Lord will direct the two camp directors, Harold Etling and Kenneth Ashman, as they select the staffs and plan the programs.

5. Pray the Lord's blessing upon the district camps that are now in progress or about to meet.

6. Praise the Lord for a successful year for hundreds of Brethren young people in a number of educational institutions. Pray that He will lead each one into some summer activity pleasing unto Christ.

The Brethren Investment Foundation Is a Reality!

Nehemiah, God's great Old Testament builder, said: "The God of heaven, he will prosper us; therefore we his servants will arise and build . . ." (2:20).

Nehemiah knew the will of God concerning the rebuilding of Jerusalem. He prayed, trusted God, and went to work. The promised blessing of the Lord was upon him and the task was completed. God was glorified and his enemies became a reproach.

The Brethren Home Missions Council has been building churches for more than a decade. The members of the board have prayed, trusted God, and gone on with the work. God has worked and blessed, as any can see who visit home-mission and former home-mission churches which dot the towns and cities of America.

The Brethren Investment Foundation, Inc., has been organized by the Brethren Home Missions Council to speed up and make more efficient the work of constructing new Brethren church houses in America. It is to be a tool in the hands of God to do His will more readily and easily through His people.

A nonprofit corporation, the Brethren Investment Foundation will have the same board of directors and the same corporation members annually as the Brethren Home Missions Council. Thus it will be inseparably tied in to the Biblical testimony of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches and it will be controlled by Brethren people. Its doctrinal statement is that of the Brethren Home Missions Council. Therefore, its resources will always be used to extend this truth.

We already know how many Brethren people feel about such a project, for they have invested over a half-million dollars total through the Brethren Home Missions Council in the building of new Brethren churches. These amounts which make this grand total have come in sums from a few hundred dollars to as much as $30,000. A large percentage of the new Brethren church buildings now completed in America and admired by members of other denominations, as well as our own, have been made possible by faithful Brethren who have loaned money for this construction. Some have sold bonds, liquidated other securities, removed money from savings accounts in banks, sold building-and-loan stock, etc., and in turn put their money to work for the Lord. Thus they have earned not only a high rate of interest at 5 percent here but will receive a blessing from God because they loaned their money back to the One who gave it. This spirit of complete yieldedness to God in material matters, as well as spiritual considerations, is largely responsible for the growth we have seen in all departments of our denominational work. More churches and people to do the job means an expanding program across the denominational scene.

All of this money will be transferred into the Brethren Investment Foundation immediately with even better security as a result. Now those who loan money for Brethren church construction will loan to the Brethren Investment Foundation through our office and the money will be loaned to the Brethren Home Missions Council by the Brethren Investment Foundation for the church construction. If God's people respond fully to this challenge, the time should soon come when it will not be necessary for any Brethren church, home-mission or established, to go outside our own denominational circle to secure funds for construction.

New Savings Plan

An attractive aspect of this new plan is a savings department where the smallest investor may begin a savings account. With one dollar or more you may become a part of the Brethren Investment Foundation and immediately begin to help build Brethren churches where Christ is preached. Boys and girls, older young people saving for school, and parents will find this plan a welcome addition to the family budget. Even before the advertising has been released some have started savings accounts through this plan.

The savings plan will be similar in most respects to a bank savings plan. A passbook will be issued for each account, and ledger cards will be kept with modern equipment. The whole plan will be operated on a high, safe and sound business level.

An unusually high rate of interest will be paid—3 percent. All savings will draw this rate of interest. When the account reaches $500, it may be transferred into the larger investment fund and draw 5 percent.

The usual reserve fund will be kept in each department so that upon proper notice withdrawals may be made.

Is It Safe?

Is it safe to invest in churches? Even though banks on the average, as well as other loan institutions, do not loan money to churches these days, still the average banker will tell you that often when his business loans did not pay out the church loans did. The fact is that the Brethren Home Missions Council has never defaulted on a loan or on an interest payment.

Today a church is not so much a one-purpose building on the average as it was years ago. Contemporary architecture has changed this picture. The market on church buildings today is good.

Loans through the Brethren Investment Foundation are backed by real estate, always an excellent investment; by the Brethren Home Missions Council; by the

Wheaton---

A TESTIMONY TO GOD'S GREAT PROMISE

By Kenneth L. Teague, Pastor

How often we have been guilty of reading God's Word without really appropriating its message. Every Christian is so familiar with the words of Philippians 4:19: "But my God shall suppy all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." How many of us have really believed them and proved them to be true? We here at Wheaton are rejoicing in the personal experience of having found God to be "abundantly able to do more than we could ask or think." We want to share with you a few ways in which God has fulfilled his promise.

I. God has met a real need for a Grace Brethren testimony in Wheaton.

There are several good churches in the city of Wheaton, churches that believe God's Word and stand for the truth of salvation, but they are all located in the center of town. In the last few years the city has been moving westward with a new housing development of several hundred new homes. Here was a real challenge for a new testimony for the Saviour. At this same time two fine Brethren families were being pushed out of their denomination because of their stand against modernism. God led these two families into contact with the "Grace" Brethren, and a burden was laid on their hearts to see a fundamental Brethren testimony in the city of Wheaton. Searching further, they found several "Grace" Brethren students at Wheaton College and soon a Bible class was meeting weekly. God prospered this effort, and after a few months it expanded into a Sunday school and morning worship service. A model home served as the first meeting place and the first service was held on a Sunday morning with four people present. From this very small and humble beginning, God raised up the new Grace Brethren Church which is now ready to meet the need of an entirely new section of the city of Wheaton.

II. God met the need for a pastor for this new flock.

The church in Wheaton operated its morning services with the help of students in the college, but prayer went up continually for God to lead someone to come and shepherd the flock. In August of 1953 God laid on the heart of Pastor Teague and his family, then at Alexandria, Va., a very definite desire to return to Wheaton, Ill., to pastor the flock and continue a few hours of work in the college. They moved to Wheaton in December 1953 and began to pastor the church January 1, 1954. Since their arrival, God has expanded the work into a full and growing testimony for our Lord.

III. God has met the need for a parsonage for this church.

After Pastor Teague arrived in Wheaton, the church faced a very critical test. There was no place to be found for the pastor and family to live. The house they had rented was sold, and they had a definite date to vacate. Much prayer was offered to God and he challenged this small church of only 10 members to purchase a home for sale right near our church lots. This was done at a cost of $12,450. God marvelously provided the down payment through the men of our church, and gave to us a loan for the balance. In the year that has followed every payment has been met, and through the blessing of God on some of our laymen in the sale of real estate property, God has provided enough to clear off the entire down payment of $4,000 and is enabling us to carry easily the payments on the parsonage.

IV. God has met the need for a sanctuary in which to worship.

One of our big problems at Wheaton was the fact that there was no place to meet and hold services in our new field. Our services had to be held in town at the Christian Grammar School, more than a mile from the field. We also had trouble getting people to attend services in a school building. It was decided early that we must have a building. A committee was selected, God led us to a wonderful architect, and soon plans were submitted to the Home Missions Council for our first unit, 38 x 60 feet. We were indeed surprised and well pleased when the plans were approved in just a short time and word came that in a few months we could have the Brethren Construction Company to build the church at Wheaton. This was even more than we had asked God for, and only shows again how wonderfully God has moved and provided for this new church.

We broke ground on July 17, 1954, and in August the Brethren Construction Company arrived in Wheaton. They began to get the building under way in September and in just six months we were ready to move into our main sanctuary and begin worship. God greatly blessed the church, as our construction team fellowshiped with us week after week. Our group did not grow much in numbers, but it grew spiritually through contact with these consecrated workmen. On June 5, 1955, we dedicated this beautiful building, which cost just about $40,000. This was $10,000-$12,000 cheaper than our lowest bid locally. It is a beautiful sanctuary that has won the approval of the pastors of our city, as well as the people of our community. It is a monument to the fine work that is being done by our Home Missions Council and its construction team.

V. God is now meeting the spiritual need of thirsty souls.

I have recounted a few of the blessings God has given and the needs He has met, but the greatest need of all is that one which He is now meeting in the lives of thirsty souls. We feel that your home-mission dollars are bearing real dividends for the Saviour. They are not only providing a place of worship and service for our students attending Wheaton College and keeping them in contact with the Brethren Church, but they are helping to reach unsaved souls. On Easter Sunday six precious souls entered the waters of baptism in our new church at Wheaton and were added to the fellowship of the church. During this past quarter the testimony of our church has been used of God to lead five more souls from death unto life. God has raised up our laymen to work in the Gospel Mission. Our church takes the service once each month, and God is using our men to reach souls.

We have just completed our first DVBS, with an attendance of nearly 60. On the closing night 125 people attended our service. There were 75 adults that attended this service and they spoke well of our church and what it is doing for their young people.

God has raised up an active Boys Club with 18 members. There are several unsaved boys attending, and some Catholics. Surely this work will bear fruit and produce souls in the future.

Our field is not an easy one. Every victory is won through much prayer, work, and tears. But how precious it is to see a church that has vision, that has compassion, and that is working together in real harmony to do something for the Saviour. If our Lord tarries, we believe that your home-mission dollars will produce a strong and thriving church in Wheaton in the next five years.

God has been so good in fulfilling His promises. God has met every need in the past, can we doubt that He will continue to do the same in the days that lie ahead? Our prayer is that God will challenge all of our churches and our Brethren people everywhere to lay hold of God's promise and see it fulfilled. The Word says: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." We have found once again God and His Word to be very true.

PRAYERS ANSWERED FOR WHEATON CHURCH

By D. A. Spangler, Building Committee Secretary

I never cease to marvel at the way our Lord answers prayer. We certainly had direct answers to a lot of prayers in the Wheaton work from the very beginning to the dedication of our church. The Lord has led us a long way, supplied our every need, and is blessing us far beyond what we expected. We thought we had reached the mountain peak when we dedicated our church, but He has led us even higher in our first vacation Bible school. We had the privilege of teaching God's Word each day to about 50 boys and girls. We read in Malachi 3:10: "Prove we now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." All I can say is, the Lord surely has done this for us at Wheaton.

GRACE BRETHREN PREACH THE WHOLE GOSPEL

By Mr. and Mrs. Clark Myers

Following are a few of the reasons for our two youngest sons and us coming into the Grace Brethren Church.

We wanted to hear the pure Gospel and not a message tainted with modernism. We were being fed neo-orthodoxy—a supposedly "new light" that the church is going to bring in the kingdom—that with the social gospel, etc. We were finally led by the Holy Spirit to get our eyes open and step out on faith. God opened the way for the beginning of the Grace Brethren Church in Wheaton which believes in the "faith once delivered unto the saints." The Holy Spirit rejoices to know that a remnant is left to preach the Word. One of the outstanding doctrines is the second coming of Christ. This is the incentive and motivating power that inspired many of our Brethren of old to preach powerful, soul-stirring sermons that moved both saint and sinner.

Many hearts have been caused to rejoice for the coming of the Grace Brethren Church to Wheaton. May God's power cause many more to step out all over this world to be saved from the apostate movement of today.

BUILDING COMMITTEE'S RESPONSIBILITY IS GREAT

By H. J. Brubaker, Chairman, Building Committee

The construction of a church building at a mission point which has only a small and new congregation is not a task to be undertaken lightly. It is just as well that the uninitiated do not know the whole of that or it might be very difficult to round up a building committee.

We did have one very important factor in our favor—a corps of men who could work together with a minimum of friction and lost motion, meaning a group that could exercise a goodly amount of Christian patience, consideration, and forbearance each for the other.

We have come up with a fine, substantial church structure (we could do a considerably better job of it now, but none of us are looking for such employment now) and with a closer Christian fellowship and regard for each other—all of us and our families who have had a part in this work.

We praise the Lord for this Christian fellowship and for His guidance in these affairs, all our affairs. We believe under His guidance we shall have a period of profitable harvest in this field.

WHEATON CHURCH MEETS NEED FOR STUDENTS

By Miss Lois Miller, Student, Wheaton College

It was a real thrill to me to walk into a Brethren church which I could regularly attend after spending three years in a place where there was no Brethren testimony. Like many other Wheaton College students, I was happy for this excellent opportunity for fellowship, which we all needed so much. I was also happy for a place to serve our wonderful Lord and a place to worship Him among other people of like beliefs. The first several months the YMCA provided our worship place. It wasn't the fanciest place, but we really met the Lord there. It is with much joy that we come to the dedication of the church building. It has been a real joy to see the Lord working among the people here and to be a part of the Wheaton Grace Brethren Church.

WHEATON LACKED A BRETHREN TESTIMONY

By Mrs. D. A. Spangler,
Superintendent, Children's Department

When we moved to Wheaton, we were challenged with the need for a Brethren church in this city. (Wheaton has the reputation of being a Christian center, but we were amazed at the large number of unchurched people.) We were strangers in a new community, without a church home, and all the downtown churches were filled to overflowing. With our daughter at the academy and son in the college, we immediately saw the need of a Brethren church, not only for our own family, but the other Brethren students needed a place for Brethren fellowship and teaching. Through the starting of the Wheaton work we learned to know and love many of these students and they were a real help to us.

It was a real blessing to become acquainted and work with families of the Brethren Construction Company. They are doing a real missionary service. They not only build the building but help in building the church of Jesus Christ through their testimony and witnessing.

We have appreciated the ministry of Brother Teague during this time of building, and we praise God He led us to Wheaton to share in the thrill of seeing our first unit dedicated to God for the winning of souls.

HAPPY SERVING CHRIST AT WHEATON

By W. A. Ringler, Sunday-School Superintendent

We have been happy in the service of the King at Wheaton. God has been so good to us and answered prayers beyond anything we dared to think. Each day we knew His blessing was upon us. We saw the answer come quickly and quietly in regard to the Wheaton Grace Brethren Church building program. He has placed us in a needy field. He has given us a beautiful place of worship. He has given us a Brethren group of like precious faith, and we are happy at the prospects of praying together, working together, and rejoicing together as precious souls come to know Christ through the testimony of the Wheaton church.

Pastor's Letter Tells Story of Cleveland Dedication

Dr. L. L. Grubb,
Brethren Home Missions Council, Inc.,
Winona Lake, Indiana.

Dear Dr. Grubb:

Greetings to all our home-mission friends in the precious name of our Lord and Saviour!

We are praising God for the wonderful day He gave us Sunday when we dedicated the completed First Brethren Church to Him. We only wish that all our home-mission friends across the nation could have been with us to enjoy the memorable occasion.

In the morning I preached on the subject: "The Four-fold Secret of a Better Life," using Philippians 3:10-13 as my text. For this service we had 128 present.

Our dedication service began at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. Bernard N. Schneider, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Mansfield, Ohio, was the dedication speaker. His message was entitled "The Church That Was the Talk of the World," and it was taken from I Thessalonians 1:8. He presented a real challenge, and by the grace of God we are going to do something about it.

Special music was furnished for the dedication service by Mr. Frank Catanzaro, pianist, and Mr. Fred Bonnie, violinist. Both of these men are accomplished musicians and are used of the Lord in the Cleveland Youth for Christ work.

The Lord blessed in the offerings of the day, and a total of $694.08 was given. The attendance at the dedication was 168. Another part of the service was the presentation of a wrist watch to Mr. Paul Ingold as a token of appreciation for overseeing the work during the time there was no pastor on the field. Brother Ingold has been a tremendous help in the work. We praise God for Him.

Bro. Lester E. Pifer, from the Brethren Home Missions Council, was the speaker at the evening service and brought us another challenging message. He also used Philippians, but based his message on chapter 4, verse 13. I am sure I can speak for the entire congregation that these men were a real benediction to our church.

Several pastors from the area were present, and some of them participated in the dedication program.

In His service for more souls,

Robert Cessna, Pastor,
First Brethren Church, Cleveland, Ohio.

SURPRISE!

Rev. Robert Cessna, pastor, presents a wrist watch to Mr. Paul Ingold in appreciation for his services during interim between pastors.

"THEY HAD SOMETHING WE WERE LOOKING FOR"

By Herbert Tanner

In 1951 we moved into this neighborhood and went to a church for over a year. We were not satisfied and started to look for another.

One weekend when I came home, my mother-in-law, Mrs. Peck, met me at the door all excited about a new church they had attended the week before. We decided we would try it, and I knew the moment I entered the First Brethren Church that they had something we were looking for.

I don't believe anyone except our precious Saviour will ever know just what it meant to us for Him to accept us as His and to be with such a friendly, humble group of people who really loved the Lord.

I want to especially thank the Lord for the help and guidance we all received from Rev. Russell Ward, who was our pastor at that time.

Now that Rev. Robert Cessna is on the field, we are looking for the Lord to do wonderful things for this church.

SAVED AT RITTMAN, SERVING IN CLEVELAND

By Paul Ingold

I want to testify for my Lord and Saviour. He has been my Lord for seven years. I am so happy for men of God who still have a passion for the lost.

I was a man who tried to find peace in drinking. After a few years I became a slave to drink. At that time we were living at Rittman, Ohio. Rev. Lyle Marvin was the pastor of the First Brethren Church. He talked to me and persuaded me to go to the Haven of Rest Mission in Akron. After I was sober, Rev. C. C. Thomas took the Word of God and showed me where I was a lost sinner and headed for a drunkard's hell. He also showed me how Christ had died for me and that I could be saved and delivered from the clutches of Satan. I praise God for that day and for those dear saints of God at Rittman and Cleveland who have been dear to us in our time of testing, for their fellowship and prayers.

I have a wife and four children all who know Jesus as their Saviour because someone cared for a lost soul.

That is the need of this day, Brethren. Let's talk about Jesus and how He went to the cross so that we could be saved from the penalty of sin.

PRAISE TO GOD AND THE FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH

By Charles E. Cole

I praise the Lord that He died on the cross to save me from sin, that He saves, keeps, and satisfies. He is always there when I need Him. I have so much to be thankful for: a wonderful Christian wife and two children, and for Christian parents.

I praise the Lord for the First Brethren Church here in Cleveland, Ohio. The church has really been a blessing to me. In the church I met and learned to love many Christian friends, but most of all through the Brethren ministry here I came to know the Lord Jesus as my Saviour.

I praise the Lord for the Christian fellowship we have had in the past and present and know that if the Lord tarries we will have much more in the future. A wonderful blessing was had by all who helped to complete the upper auditorium. What a wonderful feeling it was to hear the men and women singing, whistling, and humming as they worked. It was a blessing which I shall never forget.

I praise the Lord for Bro. Paul Ingold, who gave his all to the Lord and the work here in Cleveland. We can't thank the Lord enough for sending Brother Ingold to us.

Now that the church has been completed, there lies a great opportunity for us to spread the Gospel here. There are new homes going up all around the church, and it is a real challenge to us here in Cleveland. Pray for each and every one of us as we do the Lord's work.

ELYRIA, OHIO, SETS GROUNDBREAKING DATE

The Grace Brethren Church, Elyria, Ohio, has set Sunday, July 17, 1955, as the day for breaking ground. The hour will be 3:30 p. m., eastern daylight saving time. Plans for the building have been completed and the Lord has provided for the financing. The Brethren Construction Company will be moving into Elyria hoping to get this church well on the way before the winter season.

GOSHEN CHURCH NEARING COMPLETION

Turn back to the June 18 Home Mission Number and you will see the above church as the first laminated rafters were going into place. Since that time the brick work has been completed and the entire building enclosed. Occupancy of the building is expected in a short time, and the Brethren Construction Company will be finishing this church, moving on to Elyria, Ohio, where ground will be broken July 17. The ground was broken at Goshen on March 13, and the above picture was taken slightly over three months later.

HOME MISSION FIELD REPORTS

Seattle, Wash. (Thomas E. Hammers, pastor)—

Nineteen boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 13 made decisions for the Lord in our vacation Bible school this morning, for which we are rejoicing and praising the Lord. We have had as many as 55 in attendance, with 63 enrolled. There has been a fine spirit, and we had parents call whose children were in school last year, requesting the privilege of having them enrolled again this year.

Yakima, Wash. (Henry Dalke, pastor)—

Praise the Lord for a fine young couple that were led out of a modernistic church into our fellowship. Since they have come they said: "We don't see how we stood it so long in the other church." She is an excellent pianist and has had two years' training at Multnomah Bible School. He is a very good singer. They are a real addition to our church.

Goshen, Ind. (Herman H. Hein, pastor)—

On May 29 we had seven boys from the Boys Club make their public decision for Christ. The following Sunday a grandmother rededicated her life to God. While we were returning from the last youth rally, a young lady accepted Christ on the way home. In addition we have had three children make first-time decisions and a father and mother rededicate their lives.

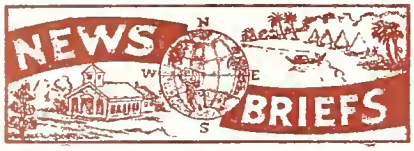
By Evan M. Edams

The second annual Navajo Bible Conference saw five Spirit-filled days of activity at the Brethren Navajo Mission in the month of May. Originally planned for a 10-day period, it was necessary to cut the meetings short due to other engagements of the Navajo evangelists. Three meetings were held each day, led by the two outstanding Navajo Christian men, Bruce Yazzie and Albert Tsosie, from the Navajo Gospel Mission, Oraibi, Ariz. Evening meetings featured campfires, a natural gathering place for the Navajo. The informality of the campfire brought forth much enthusiasm in singing, testimony, and heartsearching. Navajo people who had formerly sat all night around campfire singing chants to dispel evil spirits, sat wrapped in their blankets singing and testifying to the power of God to give new life and remove all fear of death and the unknown.



The meetings began on Saturday night, May 21, with a challenge to the Christian people and a time of prayer. The last meeting was held on Thursday afternoon with many of the Navajo believers voicing testimony of their assurance of salvation and joy in knowing the way through Christ. Older Christians spoke lengthy encouragements to their people to turn from their ways of darkness and to come into the light in Christ. Long-silent believers were encouraged to stand and voice their faith also, strengthened by the presence of fellow believers. Forty-seven recorded decisions for our Lord were made, five of these for the first time publicly professing faith in the Lord as their Saviour. Many had the opportunity to reaffirm their faith and confess their slackness in life for the things of the Christian faith. Three young people dedicated their lives to the work of the Lord, to be used in telling the Word of Life to their people, a milestone in the work of the mission among the Navajo people.

The Navajo Christians joined in helping to make the meetings possible by preparing food, serving meals, and driving vehicles to gather people. Attendance averaged 66 for the 15 meetings held, with a peak attendance of 112 at one meeting. Nearly 500 meals were served to the Navajo people during the meetings, prepared by the women of the staff and the Navajo Christian women.

Scripture memorization, reading of the Navajo Scripture portions, special numbers in song were some of the features that made it possible for many to take part in the meetings. The preaching of the Word centered around the living of the Christian life in separation from the things of the world.

1955 Corporation Meeting in Portland, Oregon

THE ANNUAL CORPORATION MEETING OF THE
BRETHREN HOME MISSIONS COUNCIL, INC.,
WINONA LAKE, IND., WILL BE HELD ON FRIDAY, AUGUST 12, 1955,
FROM 12:00 TO 12:30 P. M. AT
JENNINGS LODGE, PORTLAND, OREGON

WATERLOO, IOWA. The members of the Grace Brethren Church have voted to add another story to their Sunday-school annex. Richard DeArmey is the pastor.

LEON, IOWA. R. Ronald Robinson, pastor of the Leon Brethren Church, reports the Lord's blessing on the work. In the Bible school there is an enrollment of 106, compared to 55 in 1954. In recent services there were 90 in the morning worship, 75 in the evening, seven baptisms and three first-time decisions.

BERNE, IND. According to Ord Gehman, pastor of the Bethel Brethren Church, a farewell service for the R. Paul Miller family was held June 26. Rev. Miller brought the message, after which he, Mrs. Miller, and their youngest son, Wesley, were presented with New Testaments by the church. After the services they were honored with a fellowship dinner in the church basement. After residing on a farm near Berne for over a quarter of a century, they have sold the property and are residing in Winona Lake. Mail should be sent to Box 9, Winona Lake, Ind. Please change Annual.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. Robert D. Crees was installed as pastor of the Third Brethren Church Friday, July 8. He is president of the board of trustees of the Brethren Missionary Herald.

SOUTH GATE, CALIF. The First Brethren Church had a unique service on July 2 when two Hebrew Christians, Oscar Stern and Emmanuel Schwartz, defended the deity of Christ in a courtroom scene entitled, "Jesus on Trial." Alfred Dodds is the pastor.

PERU, IND. Everett Caes, former student at Grace Seminary, has been called to the pastorate of the Peru Brethren Church. A reception for Pastor Caes and his family was held June 27.

KITTANNING, PA. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, of the First Brethren Church, celebrated their golden-wedding anniversary with an open house on June 28.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Beautiful blue folders, giving all the information pertaining to Camp Bethany (Portland, Aug. 10-17, and Winona Lake, Aug. 22-29) have been mailed to the pastors of our churches. Get your folder from him and read all about the good times awaiting you at our national youth camps. A registration blank is included with each folder. Send the completed blank, with fee, to the National Brethren Youth Council, Box 617, Winona Lake, Ind. Pastor, if you didn't get any blanks, please request the same from the above office. Let's have YOUR young people enjoying the benefits of National Brethren Camp Bethany.

NEW CRUSADE TEAM

Dean Fetterhoff

Truymond Haddix

The Board of Evangelism is glad to announce that a new Crusade team will go into the revival-evangelism field this fall. Dean Fetterhoff will serve as evangelist and children's worker, and Truymond Haddix will be the pianist or song leader, as the situation may require.

Brother Fetterhoff, a member of our Grace Brethren Church of Flora, Ind., and a graduate of Bob Jones University and Grace Seminary, has had considerable experience in evangelism and is now holding meetings on a summer schedule. Mrs. Fetterhoff and their small son, Bobby, will travel with Brother Fetterhoff, living in their own trailer.

Mr. Haddix, a native of Kentucky, is a member of the Clayhole Brethren Church. He is a graduate of Southland Bible Institute, Pikeville, Ky., and Northwestern Schools, Minneapolis, Minn. He has had special training in music.

The team will present vocal and instrumental solos and duets and will conduct children's meetings and work with young people's groups as desired.

Several bookings are in for the fall and winter, but some dates are available. For information, write the Board of Evangelism, Box 15, Winona Lake, Ind.

HERALD COMPLIMENTED

Harrogate, Tenn.

"Even though I am a Baptist, I want you to know that my spiritual inspiration, next to God's Word and prayer, comes from the pages of your publication. My wife and I always look forward to its coming and read its contents from back to front and front to back. (This actually happens sometimes when we are attempting to read it together.) How we rejoice that the grand old truths are still being sent forth."

Anaheim, Calif.

"Dear Friends,

"I am sending $2 as I don't want to miss getting this wonderful paper. It has meant much to me in many ways. When we moved to this town about a year ago, we discovered that there was no Brethren church here. We decided it was too far to keep on driving to the nearest one, so have put my membership in another church here. But there are strong ties to the Brethren Church, mostly due to reading the Herald. I feel like I know personally each one of the missionaries and home-mission pastors. It just seems like one big family. So I am happy and thankful that I can still keep up with all the latest news and good reading in the Herald.

(MARK 16:15-18)

OUR FIRST MOTIVE FOR MISSIONS

There are many good and legitimate motives for missions, such as to make this a better world in which to live, to expand the testimony of our own fellowship, and to save souls from hell. Certainly there is no one who does not want better communities to live in, and which of us would deny that a Christian society is the best. Then, too, why should we not want to expand the influence and testimony of our church? Do we not believe and teach "the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible"? Again, to save a soul from hell is certainly to be commended as a motive for missions.

But when we rely solely on all or any of the above motives for any kind of Christian endeavor, there is a great danger of losing our true missionary zeal. For if our only purpose is to better the world, there is a danger of turning from man's spiritual need to his physical and material needs. This very thing has happened many times. If our supreme motive is to expand our own church, we are in danger of setting aside standards and turning our eyes to numbers. This is a great temptation. But you might ask: "What can possibly happen to a person or group whose highest motive is to save people from an eternal hell?" Just this: people often become hardened to the tragedy of people going to hell. This is proved by the indifference on the part of many Christians to the fact that the major part of the world is headed for a Christless eternity.

All this brings us to the fact that the only lasting motive for true Christian mission work is to be found in what our Lord has said about it. In Mark 16:15-18 we find at least three things about missions from the lips of our Lord Jesus himself.

Our Lord has commanded us to carry on a program of Christian missions. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

We see from this command that the program of Christian missions involves three things. (1) Those who are to go and proclaim a message. "Go ye." Who did the Lord mean when He said this? His immediate audience, of course, consisted of the 11 disciples who followed Him here on earth. They were told to be missionaries, and they obeyed, as history testifies. Then, too, He spoke to that larger group of Christian who would, down through the years, be called to take an active part in mission work. The missionaries on the fields of the world today make up part of this group. But it is quite clear that the Lord also meant this command to include all Christians, regardless of what place one might fill in the program of Christian missions—those who train, those who go, and those who send. Every Christian has a place in missions!

(2) The second thing that is included in the program of Christian mission is the message that is to be preached. "And preach the gospel." As we look at the world around us today we see many needs of the people. The simplest medical care is lacking in many places. And it is true that some people still use the old wooden plow. Yes; these and many other deplorable conditions need improvement. But let us remember one thing: no improvement campaign dare take the place of the greatest need of mankind—the need to hear the good news of salvation through Jesus Christ! Let the improvement of these other conditions be a means to an end, if need be, but never an end in themselves. Our job is to "preach the gospel."

(3) The third element that figures into the Christian missions program is the people to whom the Gospel is preached. We are to go "into all the world" and proclaim the Gospel "to every creature." So far as Christian missions are concerned, there are to be no national or racial barriers. Wherever man is found, there the Gospel is to be proclaimed.

By A. Harold Arrington
Pastor, Vernon Brethren Church
Limestone, Tenn.

Our Lord has placed the responsibility of results not with the messenger but with the recipients of the message. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." We often give our highest praise to the worker who has the most "decisions" in his work. The fact is, no worker can do more than proclaim the Good News. The rest is left to the hearer and the work of the Holy Spirit. So, regardless of how many souls we lead to the Lord, if we are faithful to our particular task, God's approval is with us. This brings us to the last of the three things told us about missions in this passage.

Our Lord has given evidence of God's approval upon the program of Christian missions. "These signs shall follow them that believe." Space permits only a general discussion of the matter.

When the early missionaries proceeded to obey Christ's command to preach the Gospel to all mankind, there was no written Word of God for evidence that they were His commissioned messengers. How were they to give proof to men that they were representatives of God? There was but one answer—miracles. Why do we have no need for miracles today? Simply because we now have the written Word of God, and Christianity is well established in the world. Yes; the Bible is its own evidence that it, and those who proclaim it, are from God. If people reject it, they will also reject miracles.

Today in many parts of the world, circumstances are very unfavorable to the great program of Christian missions. We do not know what tomorrow holds. But this one thing is certain: our program of Christian missions must go on! Remember: "And he said"

THE BIBLE Under the Microscope

BY THE LATE DR. J. C. BEAL

People today say that we need a new Bible, but it is not a new Bible that we need; it is a new faith in the old Bible.

In this article I hope to show some of the hidden beauties of the Bible that are not seen on the surface of the Book. Let us in our imagination take a pleasure trip in the springtime when all nature is bursting into beauty. We take a flower and examine its petals, stamens, stalk, and note the very beauty of the entire flower, and as far as the eye can see this flower is really perfect. It bears the marks of the omnipotent Creator and seems to be a message of love from God, telling of His wisdom and care for the least of His creatures. This little flower teaches us of His power as shown in the hidden details of nature, as well as the larger things—not only in the mighty ocean but also in the blade of grass. But under the microscope I see perfections that were hidden from the eye. The more I increase the strength of the microscope, the more hidden beauty I see.

The story is told of a Scotch botanist who one day was lying on the ground examining a bluebell under his mighty microscope. A shadow fell over his shoulder and he looked up into the face of an old shepherd, who was greatly mystified at what the botanist was doing. The botanist adjusted the microscope so that the shepherd could look through it and let him see the little flower through it. A few moments passed without a word being spoken, and on looking up, the botanist saw tears trickling down the shepherd's cheeks. "Do you not find it beautiful?" asked the botanist. "Beautiful? Beautiful? Yes; more than that. The thing that brings tears to my eyes is that I have trodden under foot so many of these beauties of God's creation."

The beauty was only revealed as the microscope was applied. This is always true and is an unfailing test to distinguish between the works of God and those of man. You may take the mainspring of a watch—the finest watch made—and yet under a microscope you will see its imperfections. Look at the point of a needle; to the natural eye it looks perfect, but under a microscope the end will look like a blunt spike. Look at the finest piece of polished stone ever made and it will seem perfect, but under the microscope it will look like a pitted slab. And so we see that all that is not directly from the hand of the Creator loses its beauty and fineness under the microscope.

We will now look at the Bible under the microscope and see if it bears evidence of coming from the hand of God or from the hand of man. Turn to Genesis 5 and you will find the list of Abraham's ancestors. We will put this record under the microscope. We find Methuselah, the man who lived the longest of any man who ever lived—969 years. The question comes: Were these years the same as our years today? Some folk would have us to believe that these were lunar years instead of solar years, but I want to remind you that if that is true it must be applied throughout the Scriptures. They doubt the idea of a man living 900 years and yet would have you believe that one king had children born to him at the age of five years. I would rather believe the Bible than to make myself believe that this is possible. (Compare book entitled, "Did Moses Know?") Of course they were years! The sun, moon, and stars mark off time.

Hebrew names always had meaning. For example: Abram, when called into definite relationship with God, was given a letter out of His name (Jehovah), making it Abraham and changing the meaning entirely. The outstanding illustration of this, however, was with Jacob (the deceiver), who later had his named changed to Israel (the prince ruled by God).

Now what is the meaning of Methuselah? Hebrew scholars say it means "when he is dead, it will be sent." Enoch, a prophet and a man who walked with God, was responsible for naming this man. Here we shall apply the microscope to find the purpose of this name. In Genesis 5:25 it says that Methuselah lived 187 years and begat Lamech. In verses 28-29 it says that Lamech lived 182 years and begat Noah. Now 187 plus 182 equals 369—therefore Methuselah must have been 369 years old when Noah was born. If Methuselah lived 969 years and he was 369 years old when Noah was born, he must have lived until the 600th year of Noah's life.

If we turn to Genesis 7:11-12, we will discover what took place in the 600th year of Noah's life and you will have in mind the purpose of Enoch's naming a name that meant "when he is dead, it will be sent." Methuselah died in the 600th year of Noah and the flood came that same year; therefore when he named Methuselah, Enoch the prophet had in mind the coming of the flood. When we dig down deep into the Word and use the microscope, we find absolute harmony in that which comes from the hand of God. This one thing then tells me very definitely who is the author of the Bible.

Why did Methuselah live so long? According to the promise of God, as given in the meaning of his name, the world was safe as long as he lived, no matter how sinful the world might become. Those who know the record know that such crime, sin, and corruption came that God had to wipe out of existence all men and animal life, with the exception of Noah and his family and the animals he was told to take with him into the ark. The people were so bad that they did not have God in their thought any more; yet as long as Methuselah lived the people were just as safe as the promises of God are sure. God, unwilling to execute judgment, lengthened his life. Finally God permitted judgment to come and the first dark chapter relative to the race of man ended. In Ezekiel 18:31 we find God saying: "Why will ye die, O house of Israel?" God was just as unwilling to execute judgment on the andediluvians as He was on the house of Israel.

THOUGH DEAD, HE SPEAKETH

In forthcoming issues of the Missionary Herald articles written by the late Dr. J. C. Beal will appear. Dr. Beal went to be with the Lord January 30, 1944, after having served the Lord in the Brethren Church for many years. He served pastorates at Sunnyside, Wash., Los Angeles, Calif., Spokane, Wash., Canton, Ohio, Fillmore, Calif., and Waterloo, Iowa, and was engaged in Bible conference work at the time the Lord called him home.—Ed.

In the sixth chapter of Genesis in the closing verses we read that God commanded Noah to take just a pair of each of the animals on the land (note that no mention is made of any of the water creatures, so those who would say that it would have been impossible to destroy fish, etc., with a flood have no such ground for criticism). You will read that Noah did exactly what God told him to do.

In the seventh chapter God told Noah to take seven pairs of certain animals and again it says that Noah did as God commanded him. This is usually considered a ground for criticism. On the surface this appears to be a discrepancy, but under the microscope we find one of the most beautiful things we have in connection with the story of the flood.

It is necessary for us to have in mind the meaning of the names of Deity in order to understand this record. There are seven names of Deity, four of which are found in the Book of Genesis. In the story of the flood we are concerned with only two of these names: Elohim, who is a God of love and places himself under covenant relationship to do certain things and swears with an oath to do this very thing; and Jehovah, the One who loves righteousness, hates iniquity, must punish the sinner. The basis for fellowship with Him is sacrifice.

In Isaiah 45:18 we learn that the earth was created for inhabitation, and so when God created the earth He placed himself under obligation to people the earth. Keeping in mind the meaning of these two names, you will find the beauty of the microscopic application. In the sixth chapter it is Elohim speaking. He is under obligation to people the earth. How many does it take to perpetuate the species? One pair. Life can be maintained by just one pair, and so when Elohim speaks, He tells Noah to take into the ark one pair of each animal.

In the seventh chapter it is the LORD (Jehovah) speaking—remember the meaning of His name. Now either one of three things: Noah had to remain out of fellowship with God, or the animal life must be obliterated in the use of some of the animals for sacrifice, or Jehovah must somehow provide the sacrifice. When He gave this order to Noah relative to the sacrifices, He told him to take seven pairs of each of certain animals. First, He was under obligation to perpetuate the species, but God must also provide the sacrifice for Noah after the flood or certain lines of animal life would have been extinguished. How beautiful are the hidden things of the Word of God!

Now notice that Noah built an altar immediately after the flood and offered sacrifices. If the LORD had not provided the sacrifice, Noah would have had to remain out of fellowship with God, or a certain line of animal life would have been extinct.

The sweet-smelling savor means that this sacrifice was acceptable in God's sight; it was so because God had provided the sacrifice himself. Here is another beautiful picture of hidden beauty. It is also a type of the sacrifice of the Lord Jesus Christ on the cross of Calvary. The man who takes Jesus Christ as his substitute has the right to expect that that will be satisfactory to God himself. When I accepted Christ, then God accepted me.

Some critics would tell us that the ark was not the type of vessel that would have been essential to go through such a flood, but one of the best shipbuilders in the world made a statement in a paper to the effect that "the ark was the masterpiece of all vessels ever built, for the purpose for which it was built. No engineer has ever made a better vessel." He also said that the ark was the best-proportioned vessel ever built for its purpose.

Some say that there could not have been a universal flood because there would not be enough water to cover the earth and destroy all things. But a learned scientist says that if the entire earth were leveled, the waters would cover the entire earth in a two-mile depth, and surely that is enough to drown all things.

Again they say that had there been a flood, there would be records everywhere regarding it, but that Asia Minor seems to be the only place where really vivid records seem to prevail. There are records found over the entire world, in all races and nations, as to some kind of a flood which happened at that time.

The ark rested on Mount Ararat (or Armenia) (Gen. 8:4) on the 17th day of the seventh month. At first sight this means nothing, but no man would have dared to guess the date because tradition was carried from mouth to mouth and history thus became established. Man would hardly have guessed correctly the very day and month that the Lord Jesus Christ was to be raised from the dead! As Noah began a new race of people physically after the Flood, so the Lord Jesus Christ began a new race spiritually after His resurrection. Do you think that man could have guessed that date and have it harmonize in type as we have it here?

How do I know it is the same day and month? In the first part of chapter 12 of Exodus it reads: "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months." From that time the Jewish calendar was changed and the seventh month of the old Jewish calendar became the first month of the new one. The first month of the Jewish calendar is Tishri and the seventh month Abib (April), but if you will compare Exodus 13:4, you will find it very definitely stated that the day they left Egyptian bondage was the month of Abib. Now if you remember, it was during the month Abib that the Lord Jesus was crucified. In Exodus on the 10th day of the month a lamb was to be taken and kept until the 14th day and then slain. That lamb is the type of the Lamb of God (John 1:29).

If you know anything about the crucifixion, you know that Jesus was crucified on the 14th day of the seventh month of the old Jewish calendar—the first month of the new—the same day as the lamb in Exodus; therefore a perfect fulfillment of the type. He stayed in the grave three days and three nights as He said He would (there is no foundation for the observance of Good Friday), and He arose the 17th day. Here we see something that is hidden under the surface, but it is a perfect picture of the resurrection. Did some man guess this thousands of years ago? No! I Peter 1:21 tells us that the Holy Spirit moved men in the writing of the Bible, and since He was the Author of the Book, there can be no mistakes in it.

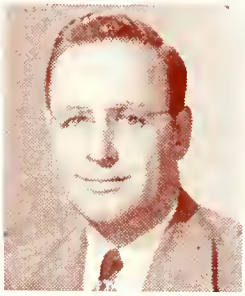
There were two thieves, one on either side of Christ. It was necessary for the Romans to furnish or provide a grave for these bodies. Many times the grave was at the foot of the cross. So we see that they did plan to make His grave with the wicked, but a secret disciple (up until this time) came forth and claimed the body of Jesus (Mark 15:43). This man was Joseph of Arimathaea, a rich man, and he had Jesus buried in his tomb. He did make His grave with the wicked and the rich. What a beautiful fulfillment of prophecy!

CHURCH ATTENDANCE---

COMPULSORY OR OPTIONAL?

Theoretically, one would suppose that such a question as to whether Christians were under obligation to attend the services of the church were entirely superfluous. To openly ask such a question of any Christian and to expect a negative reply seems almost ridiculous. However, men do not always answer such questions with words of the lip but rather by the actions and the doings of life. And here we find that the answer is in the negative a large portion of the time.

One of the greatest causes for defeat in our churches today is the lackadaisical attitude of too many people regarding their church attendance. The psalmist said: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord" (Ps. 122:1). Today it is a fact that many would, in order to be honest, have to say: "I was MAD when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." There are those who believe that their attendance in church is their own business and that it is a matter for their own choosing. Let us be reasonable and listen to the Word of God regarding the matter of our church attendance.



The Word of God Demands It

"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25).

One outstanding testimony to the born-again Christian's new relationship to God is obedience to His Word. How can anyone dare lay claim to membership in His family and flout any one of His revealed commands? The Word of God is filled with commands by example, of the children of God, the followers of Jesus Christ and even Christ himself, as they faithfully joined with the saints of their day in worship unto God. Their faithfulness to God's house was often manifested even in the face of persecution and death itself. But apart from these examples, the Holy Spirit deliberately states in Hebrews 10:25 that we are not to forsake our assembling together. To ignore or minimize our church attendance is to ignore and minimize the Word of God, and to do so is to tread on dangerous ground.

Our Spiritual Lives Require It!

Two things are essential to healthy living—food and fellowship. The recluse who feasts on the very best of food in his own one-room shack or palace and never sees nor makes contact with the outside world cannot be said to be a healthy, normal individual. Even if he should make seldom contact, or such contacts only when he "feels like it," he demonstrates that he is not well, either physically or mentally. That the Christian life has been likened to the natural life so very often in Scripture we are all aware; yet we have heard spoken, and more times seen demonstrated, the attitude: "I don't need to go to church in order to be a good Christian. I can pray and read my Bible here at home, and be just as good as those who attend church every time the doors are open."

By Forest F. Lance
Pastor, Findlay Brethren Church
Findlay, Ohio

Sounds foolish, doesn't it? Again turning to the passage in Hebrews 10:25, the Holy Spirit advises us that in assembling ourselves together we "exhort" one another, provoking unto "love and good works" (cf. vs. 24). Isn't it true that the Lord uses to the greatest advantage those who are regular in their church attendance? As I think back over my own years of Christian experience, those who have been the greatest help and encouragement to me were those who were faithful to God's house, not those who came to church when it was convenient or when they "felt like it." If you would be a blessing to others, an encouragement to those who are weak and young in the Christian life, make church attendance a faithful act in your own life.

Our Churches Thrive on It!

The greatest advertisement for any church is to have its parking lot full of cars and its pews full of people! Every one of our churches exists for the purpose of giving testimony to the saving power of Christ, that lost men might find eternal life. If your church would be most successful in its purpose to win others to Christ, it cannot afford to have any one of its members absent from any of its services. We have known of actual cases where church members have invited unsaved persons to the services of their church only to have the unsaved people come and find that those who had invited them were absent! Did they return? In some few cases they did, but in the majority of cases they had come for the first and only time!

Our Love for Christ Prompts It!

Some will say: "What you have written is true, but our pastor . . .; but our Sunday-school superintendent . . .; but the program of our church" Yes; these things and many others are often offered as excuses for not being regular in church attendance. And these things are important! But there is something greater, which can prompt us beyond things or temporary weaknesses in human leaders, and that is OUR LOVE FOR CHRIST! Jesus said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments" (John 14:15).

True loyalty to Christ and His church does not depend upon others, or upon things, but rather upon our true love for Him!

"FOR BETTER, NOT FOR WORSE"

First of a Series by Kenneth Ashman, Pastor, First Brethren Church, Wooster, Ohio

Introduction.

T. DeWitt Talmage describes the home as "a church within a church, a republic within a republic, a world within a world." If things go right in the home, they go right everywhere. If things go wrong there, they go wrong everywhere. The doorsill of the dwelling house is the foundation of the church and state. A man never gets higher than his own attic and never lower than his own cellar. Domestic life overarches and undergirds all other life.

Edwin Dummer wrote: "The home is the sanctuary of the family affection, happiness, and solidarity; the chapel of family worship, consolation, and sympathy; and the haven of peace, refuge, and rest." The home is the cradle of the nation's character, greatness, and influence; the nursery of faith, patriotism, and thrift; the school of sacrifice, self-denial, and tolerance.

The question oft heard these days is: "Is the American family about to fall apart completely?" It looks that way! There needs to be something done to stop the trend. The disintegration of the home spells ultimate disaster for the nation and the church. The CHRISTIAN FAMILY is the preservative salt of the people. One of the primary functions of the church is to plant, water, and cultivate the flowering beauty of Christian homes.

When young people stand before the pastor to exchange the sacred marriage vows they repeat: "For better or for worse." What God would have them plan and attain is "BETTER, NOT WORSE!" Every young couple wants to have a happy wedded life. Your desire in this respect is not nearly as great as God's desire on the same score. Can there be wedded happiness? YES! God has ordained marriage and has laid down certain laws and standards by which marriage may be made a "little heaven upon the earth." If God's plans are ignored, marriage instead becomes a "hell upon earth."

I. The Marriage Union Is God-Ordained.

Genesis 2:18—"And the Lord God said, It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him." Thus at the very outset of revelation we discover God's purpose in matrimony—the husband and wife shall serve as helpmeets for each other. This word literally means "those doing things together." In the marital relationship, a man and a woman complement each other's personalities in things emotional, physical, mental, social, and spiritual.

The union of man and woman as husband and wife is set forth in the Bible as being:

1. Divine — Christian marriages are formed first in the mind of the Father; then revealed to man.
2. Legal—Christian marriages are according to the laws of the state.
3. Holy—Christian marriages are pure and righteous altogether.
4. Intimate—Christian marriages bring those involved into the closest of all human relationships.
5. Fruitful—Christian marriages are for the purpose of bringing new life into the world.
6. Loving — Christian marriages are based upon the love of God in the heart, being shared with another.
7. Lifelong—Christian marriages are a lifetime covenant, not to be broken by the circumstances of life.

II. The Marriage Union in History.

1. Original — According to the record of Genesis 1 and 2, the first marriage was monogamous in nature. God intended that one man should be married to one wife. This same principle is set forth in all the New Testament passages dealing with the subject.

2. Hebrew—In the early Hebrew history divorce was a rare thing. Man and woman cohabited together as husband and wife, usually without any type of ceremony or record. The bride was usually secured through a transaction of the parents. The story of Jacob and his wives, Leah and Rachel, illustrates how brides were earned by the groom. Deterioration set in early in the marital story, with separations, bigamies, and divorces creeping in. Eventually Christ declared the reason for the trouble: "Moses because of the hardness of your hearts [Matt. 19:8] . . . suffered to write a bill of divorcement [Mark 10:4]."

3. Roman and Greek—Marriage during the Greek and Roman civilizations was degenerate indeed. Wives were taken and released at will. The home lost its sanctity. Immorality was rampant. Paul describes the condition in the minds and hearts of men in revealing terms recorded in Romans 1:26-32. (Read it.)

4. American—The American home has gone through a history all its own. From the well-regulated, pure, self-sufficient Puritan homes, and the unromantic courtships of the Quakers, we have fallen to the modern unrestricted, impure, uncontrolled, and nonspiritual homes of the present. America, while being called a Christian nation, certainly has no room for boasting on this vital score. Our homes, even the best of them, are a far cry from the ideal declared in the precious Word of God. And because they have departed so far from the norm, they have lost their influence on the lives of all involved. Much of this falling away from the ideal is a result of an improper view of the marital relationship. Thus the necessity for such a study as we are here inaugurating.

SAVED AS BY FIRE

We are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. When we receive Him as our Saviour, He becomes our life. In Colossians 3:3-4 we read that "ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." The Christian will never be judged for life, but he will face the judgment of his works. This will take place before the judgment seat of Christ. "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad" (II Cor. 5:10).

The Scriptures compare our lives to a building, Jesus Christ himself being the foundation of the structure (I Cor. 3:11). We build upon this foundation with one of two types of material, the combustible or the noncombustible; the temporary or the eternal. The combustible is wood, hay, stubble, and the noncombustible is gold, silver, precious stones. The difference in the materials is whether or not they will stand the test of fire. The one will vanish and the other endure. Yea; the gold, silver, and precious stones will even be purified by the fire.

By HENRY DALKE
Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
Yakima, Wash.

I Corinthians 3:13 tells us that "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." When we stand before God and all the works of our lives are brought before Him for judgment, they will be tried by fire. What kind of fire will it be? I believe the answer is given in Revelation, where the eyes of the Lord Jesus are referred to as being fire. "His head and his hairs were white like wool, as white as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire" (Rev. 1:14).

Our works will come before the scrutinizing gaze of our Saviour. His eyes will pierce every motive of our deeds. We are told that "God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ (Rom. 2:16). "Therefore judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts." "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart." He sees the motives of our every deed.

Are my activities of the day governed by my interest as to how much money it will make for me to consume upon my own desires? This is the motivating force of the natural man. In other words, it is a service for self. When we become Christians, the center of our affection is no longer to be self, but Christ. God reminds us that "Ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's" (I Cor. 6:20). Furthermore, we are told "that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again" (II Cor. 5:15). The question then is, "For whom am I living?" Who is the center of my activity—self or Christ? Who is to receive the benefit of what I do today?

The motive of our service will determine the type of materials we are putting into our building which is being built upon Christ, the foundation. The man who is laying up treasures upon earth for his own security and satisfaction is serving self. It makes no difference whether he be a preacher, evangelist, farmer, banker, doctor, businessman, or whatever he may be. It is even possible for preachers to preach so that people will "laud" them and talk about how wonderfully they can speak, and thus the preacher be more interested in pleasing the people than God. Even a gospel singer may be singing the hymns for the applause of men. "Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogue, and in the streets, that they may have the glory of men. Verily I say unto you, they have their reward" (Matt. 6:2). All of the different ways of serving self will be works that will be burned up when the eyes of our blessed Saviour behold them.

On the other hand, the man who has as his motive to serve God, whether it be with his talents or with his means, or both, or whatever he has, his service is being done with gold, silver, and precious stones, for which there will be a rich reward. This may be plowing a field as a farmer, or driving a nail as a carpenter, or any of life's enterprises.

"If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire" (I Cor. 3:15).

The person who has been a Christian and has lived for self, will in that day suffer loss. No; not the loss of his eternal life, but the loss of his reward. He himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire. There will be Christians in heaven who will smell as if they had been bought at a fire sale.

MEET THE EDITOR

The missionary aspect of the Missionary Herald will be presented by the editor in the following churches as indicated. You are invited to attend and see what God is doing through the printed page.

July 31—Spokane, Wash.
Aug. 2—Seattle, Wash.
Aug. 3—Yakima, Wash.
Aug. 4—Harrah, Wash.
Aug. 5—Sunnyside, Wash.
Aug. 7 (a. m.)—Albany, Oreg.
Aug. 7 (p. m.)—Portland, Oreg.

MODESTO, CALIF. If on your way to National Fellowship at Portland, Oreg., Aug. 10-17, you should go through northern California, an invitation is extended to you to visit the La Loma Grace Brethren Church of Modesto (shown above), J. Paul Miller, pastor.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. The misleading advertising attributing the two films, "The Mighty Fortress" and "The Lord in His Corner," to Billy Graham is being soundly refuted by Grady Wilson, of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association. He states that the two pictures "are not Mr. Graham's productions, nor does he have any control whatsoever over them." The Billy Graham films are released through the Billy Graham Films, Inc., 2627 Connecticut Ave. NW., Washington, D. C.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Under the direction of the national Sisterhood officers there will be special SMM sessions at both Portland Bethany and Winona Lake Bethany. These times of promotion and devotion are invaluable for the girls personally, and are very worthwhile when it comes to planning for the work of your local group. Be sure your SMM girls get to Camp Bethany, Portland, Aug. 10-17, and Winona Lake, Aug. 22-29.

DAYTON, TENN. Bryan University students have a new slogan—"Let's See a Million." The new cry is a part of a student council plan to collect a million pennies by September 1955. If successful—and no student will admit that failure is possible—the $10,000 will be used to complete the library needed for university accreditation.

NORWALK, CALIF. Construction work has begun on the second unit of the Christian day school of the Norwalk Brethren Church, Henry G. Rempel, pastor. This will give them four more schoolrooms, which are needed for their expanding program.

CONEMAUGH, PA. Kenneth Wilt, pastor of the Singer Hill Brethren Church, was ordained to the Christian ministry Sunday, June 19.

KITTANNING, PA. W. H. Schaffer, pastor of the First Brethren Church, has been invited to be the guest preacher August 7 at the First Brethren Church, Spokane, Wash., Jesse Hall, pastor. At that time he will dedicate to the Lord a granddaughter whom he has never seen.

BUENA VISTA, VA. Edward Lewis, pastor of the First Brethren Church, was elected moderator of the Southeast Fellowship of Brethren Churches for 1955-56 at the recent conference.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Rev. and Mrs. Fred Fogle and three children arrived in the States on July 5 on their first furlough from France. They are making their home at 2226 Randolph St. NE.

SAN DIEGO, CALIF. Deborah Ann was welcomed into the family circle of Pastor and Mrs. Archer Baum, of the First Brethren Church, June 28. She weighed 8 lbs., 6 oz. on arrival.

PARKER, WASH. The address of Rev. Fred V. Kinzie has been changed to Box 135, Parker, Wash. Please change Annual.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Rev. and Mrs. Harold Dunning and three daughters arrived in the States July 5 on furlough from French Equatorial Africa. At the present time they are visiting relatives in New Jersey, but will make their headquarters, after National Conference, in Long Beach, Calif., where the girls will be able to attend the Brethren day schools.

GRANDVIEW, WASH. Robert Griffith has accepted the call to pastor the congregation of the Grandview Brethren Church and will assume his duties about August 1.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF. The junior quartet of the First Brethren Church, Glenn O'Neal pastor, won the state championship at the state C. E. convention held the last week in June.

COVINA, CALIF. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin L. Goodman, Jr., and four children, after visiting a short while in Winona Lake, Ind., expect to sail from New York July 29 on the S. S. Ile de France for France, where they will spend about three months for a refresher course in the French language before returning to their field of service in French Equatorial Africa.

PITTSBURGH, PA. According to a release from the Christian Amendment Movement, Congressman Eugene Siler, of Kentucky; Robert Ashmore, of South Carolina; and James Utt, of California, have proposed an amendment to our Constitution which would declare in the first section that "this nation devoutly recognizes the authority and law of Jesus Christ, Saviour and Ruler of Nations."

"O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science false so called: which some professing have erred concerning the faith" (I Tim. 6:20-21).

Whether one accepts the Authorized Version rendering, or the more literal rendering of Alford, who translates the expression "science falsely so called" as "of that which is falsely named knowledge," these verses seem to be an inspired indictment of that presenty-day cult with the label of "Christian Science."

Our brief review of this "cult" will be concerned with three general fields of investigation.

A Historical Explanation.

"Christian Science" was founded by Mary Baker . . . Eddy. She was born at Bow, near Concord, N. H., on July 16, 1821. According to J. K. VanBaalen, in his book, "The Chaos of Cults" (p. 58, 3d ed.), Mary Baker as a child was a "headstrong New Englander." During her childhood and early married life she was abnormally nervous and subject to "fits." Even when fully grown she was rocked to sleep in a specially built cradle which her father had made for her.

Mary Baker had a succession of husbands, beginning with G. W. Glover in 1843. After his death in 1844, she married Dr. Daniel Patterson, a dentist, in 1853. Dr. Patterson couldn't stand her tantrums and consequently left her. She later married Dr. A. G. Eddy in 1877. This latter marriage proved to be a great financial success. Dr. Eddy promoted the sale of her book, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," which she published in 1875, so that she sold more than 400,000 copies, realizing more than $1,000,000.

The turning point in Mary Baker . . . Eddy's career began in 1862 through a visit with a P. P. Quimby, a mesmerist and author of books on clairvoyance, curing the sick, and kindred subjects. From him she seems to have gotten the idea of the control of mind over body which she exploited to its fullest extent.

She died on December 3, 1910, disproving by virtue thereof the basic principles of her system in her own death. In tribute to the effectiveness of her influence it is said that her followers numbered 202,000 in 1935, 75 percent of whom are reported to be women, so that it has been called "the cult of American ladies." This number has increased to more than 2,000,000 by 1955.

A Doctrinal Exposition.

Only a mere outline of the more pronounced doctrinal tenets of Christian Science, together with their exposure by Scripture, may be given in this study. We pay special testimony to John Ritchie, of Scotland; J. K. VanBaalen, Charles W. Ferguson, and I. M. Haldeman, of the United States, whose writings have aided us in this brief survey of one of America's religious oddities.

1. Christian Science denies the inspiration of the Scriptures.

Christian Science declares: "The material record of the Bible is no more important to our well-being than the history of Europe and America" (Miscellanies, p. 170, quoted by I. M. Haldeman).

The Bible declares: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (II Tim. 3: 16-17).

The statement of Christian Science has never been authenticated; that of the Scriptures has been confirmed by unimpeachable evidence.

2. Christian Science denies the personality of God.

Mrs. Eddy declares: "God is Incorporeal, Divine, Supreme, Infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul Principle, Life, Truth, Love" (Science and Health, ed. 1910, p. 256). To read the context of this and similar statements in the writings of Christian Science, one is soon aware that the connotation reveals a pantheistic conception of God, not a personal God such as the Bible presents throughout its writings. For illustration further, Mrs. Eddy declares in her textbook (74th ed., 1893, p. 13), "God is identical with nature." This is pantheism in its simplest expression.

But the Bible constantly reveals a personal God. This is revealed in His attributes, His works, His claims, and His names—all of which unite in testifying to this great fact: God is a Person.

3. Christian Science denies the incarnation of Christ.

Mrs. Eddy declares: "The virgin mother conceived this idea of God, and gave to her idea the name of Jesus" (Science and Health, 74th ed., p. 334). Hence Jesus never existed in bodily form; the incarnation is an illusion.

The Bible declares: "And she brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger" (Luke 2:7). Again, the Bible says: "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree" (I Pet. 2:24). The Bible is replete with affirmations of the incarnation. To deny it is to demonstrate one's connection with Antichrist (I John 4:2-3). Let us put Christian Science to the test of this charge.

4. Christian Science denies the reality of sin.

Mrs. Eddy writes: "Man is incapable of sin, sickness, and death" (Science and Health, 1910 ed., p. 475). To her (until her own death) "sin, sickness, and death" were illusions, unrealities, the product of mortal mind (we wonder what new connotation she placed upon the word "mortal").

The Bible says: "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). What more need we offer in refutation of her deceitful wresting of Scripture! Human experience says "Amen" to this clear affirmation of God's Word.

5. Christian Science denies the reality of salvation.

MARRIAGE---WHOM, WHEN, AND HOW

Introduction—Too many young people stand before the marriage altar saying, "For better or for worse," seemingly indifferent to the truth that things can go wrong, tragedies can come—it may be worse than they think. Thus, in this study we want to bring to the attention of all the seriousness of this step and the proper preparation for it.

I. WHOM SHOULD I MARRY?

In Amos 3:3 the question is asked: "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" Nowhere in human relationships is the answer to that question so vital as in the marital life. The safest answer to the question, "Whom should I marry?" is, "MARRY YOUR OWN!"

Marry your own religiously—As a Christian you should seek a companion who is saved, who is born again, who knows the same Christ you know, who follows the same doctrinal interpretation of the Bible. That means the elimination of intermarriage between Catholics and Protestants. Such unions are fraught with every pitfall of disaster. Commitments have to be made that are un-Scriptural and unethical. You'll have many hours to regret your decision if you disregard this admonition. Love will not carry persons of divergent religious convictions over the troubled waters that result on the sea of matrimony.

Marry your own denominationally—"You go to your church and I'll go to mine" may be a good theme song for neighbors, but it definitely is not desired for husband and wife. The family should follow the same teachings, observe the same ordinances, enjoy the same services, pray for the same endeavors, support the same missionaries, and serve in the same church. The family should be in position to use such terms as "our church," "our class," "our pastor," and "our missionary endeavors."

Marry your own on the level of consecration—Many promising young ladies have lost out spiritually because they were wedded to young men who were not as consecrated to the Lord, and vice versa. Romans 12:1 should be the heart-desire of BOTH the husband and wife. Thus, you can pray together, read together, tithe together, give together, attend together, and serve together.

Marry your own personally—one with whom you would like to live 24 hours of every day for years to come. That means one who loves you and one whom you can love, forsaking all others for each other. That means one who respects you and one whom you can respect. Your chosen one should have the same high code of morals for you that he would expect you to have for him. That means one who wants you and one whom you want. I never heard sadder words than these from the lips of a disappointed young mother: "I knew when I married him I didn't want him." That means one you want to be like, and one who wants to be like you. You do more than change your name when you marry—you change your life.

Note your chosen one's habits. Are they good ones, such as cleanliness, neatness, modesty, thoughtfulness, thrift? Is he a gentleman in every respect? Is she a lady at all times? Note your chosen one's interests. Do you have common interests in the realms of pleasure, culture, education, and service. Note your chosen one's disposition. Someone has said that "cleanliness is next to godliness." We disagree. As desirable as cleanliness may be, the ability to get along with others is far more important. Here are some good "ty's" to look for in your proposed mate:

Personality—Is this one generally happy, optimistic, aggressive? Compatibility—Can this person get along well with others under all circumstances? Pliability—Can this person "give a little, and take a little" when the matter of conviction is not concerned, or must he always have his own way in all things? Responsibility—Does this person assume offered responsibilities, discharging them efficiently and promptly?

II. WHEN SHOULD I MARRY?

Solomon, in Proverbs 5:18, speaks of "the wife of my youth." Marriage should be for the young, primarily. Folks should not wait until they are too old for marriage, for then the matters of adjustment to each other are the more difficult. On the other hand, youth should be careful not to enter this all-important relationship too young, lest they are not ready for the demands involved. YOU SHOULD MARRY WHEN YOU ARE OLD ENOUGH IN FOUR REALMS:

Physically—Girls should look to marriage when they are old enough to assume the tasks of cooking, washing, ironing, cleaning, mending, and nursing. Boys should look to marriage when they are old enough to earn a living for a family, when they can plan and provide, when they are ready to work "about the house," not spending all the time with hobbies, sports, and pleasures outside the home. Please read I Corinthians 6:19-20.

Mentally—Young people are old enough for marriage when they can think maturely, make wise choices, have definite convictions, and have the power to stand alone when tested. The knowledge of the facts of life and the responsibilities of parenthood are a prerequisite to a happy wedded life.

Emotionally—Young people are spiritually ready for marriage when their affection is based upon "the love of God shed abroad in the heart" and not some passing infatuation of "puppy love." This means stability, self-control, and sensibility.

4. Spiritually—Those are ready for marriage who can withstand temptation, can bear up under trial, and who can mold their lives pleasing unto the Lord. Like Joseph of old, they must be well grounded in the faith and in morality, so that they sin not (Gen. 39:9).

Someone has said: "Short engagements, short marriages; marry in haste, repent at leisure." Indeed true. Go with your lover long enough to know all about him, or her, physically, mentally, emotionally, and spiritually.

III. HOW SHOULD I MARRY?

Marriages can be of the most simple nature or of the greatest show. How one arranges for marriage can

HAUGHTINESS---IS IT SIN?

By DONALD BISHOP
Missionary to Argentina

Haughtiness. What is it? Let us go to the dictionary for a definition of the word so that there is no mistake as to what the word means. Haughtiness is being "disdainfully proud; or arrogant." Some synonyms of the word are: "lordly," "disdainful," "proud," and "contemptuous." Some antonyms, or words that mean just the opposite, are: "humble, "unpretentious," and "unassuming." Therefore there can be no mistake as to what haughtiness is. With this definition of haughtiness let us look to the Word of God to see what it has to say with regard to this subject.

Haughtiness began before the creation of man. Isaiah tells us in 14: 12-17 about the downfall of Satan, who said: "I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God . . . I will be like the most High." Satan, lifted up in pride, self-will, and haughtiness, brought about his own downfall. Satan, the most beautiful of God's creation, was lifted up with pride, attempted to usurp the position of his Creator, and lost his fellowship with God. Another person who was carried away with his pride and the lifting up of his heart was Haman.

What is God's attitude toward haughtiness? "These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: a proud look . . ." (Prov. 6:16-17). The American Standard Version translates "a proud look" with the words "haughty eyes." Haughty eyes do not belong to the one who has been fellowshiping with Jesus, the King of Kings. The Lord hates this. It is sin in His eyes. James 4:6 tells us: "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." God's attitude toward haughtiness is that it is SIN.

What is the result of haughtiness? "Pride goeth before destruction and an haughty spirit before a fall. Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly, than to divide the spoil with the proud" (Prov. 16:18-19). Pride or a haughty spirit has been the ruin of many a man. It was the ruin of Satan, it was the ruin of King Saul, it was the ruin of Haman, it was the ruin of Belshazzar, and it is the ruin of many men and women today. "It is when one sees pride in another that its hideousness is clearly revealed. How often we will complacently tolerate in ourselves what, when we behold it in someone else, fills us with disgust. But God takes note of the least beginning of unjudged haughtiness in each heart. What mind can conceive how hateful it must all be to Him" (Dr. Ironside).

Pride and haughtiness results in contention, fighting, and quarreling among believers. "Only by pride cometh contention" (Prov. 13:10). Why is it that some people can't get along with others? It is because they have to satisfy their own precious little pride in having their own way. Their way is the only way to do things. They are the only ones who know how to do the job right. This is sin in the sight of God. David says of the Lord in II Samuel 22:28: "But thine eyes are upon the haughty, that thou mayest bring them down."

"The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day" (Isa. 2:11). Here again we see the admonition of the Lord. Haughtiness is not the way nor the life of the true believer. It is not the life of he who is trying to please the Lord. It is not the life of he who is trying to win souls to the Lord Jesus. This is not the life for the one who is trying to serve the Lord. The man or woman who is guilty of this is headed for a downfall. He is due for a spanking from the Lord. "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (II Cor. 10:12).

EVIL IMAGINATION---IS IT SIN?

By RONALD ROBINSON
Leon, Iowa

The word "imagination" can be used to describe either logical or fanciful activity of the mind—disciplined or undisciplined, good or evil. As it is used in the Bible in various places it describes "not only the imagination but also the purposes and desires" (Gen. 6:5, marg.).

We have had recent demonstration of the material blessings that can come to mankind through the logical, disciplined use of the imagination in secular and scientific fields of research. Vaccines, "wonder drugs," household appliances, and entertainment gadgets are all products of fertile imaginations that can be used to the benefit of many. But on the other hand, an undisciplined evil imagination can use the same sciences that produced these "miracles" to send a thrill of fear in nearly every heart because of the published horrors of biological or atomic warfare.

The sin of evil imagination was one of the reasons for the Flood. It helped to spoil the posterity of Noah (Gen. 8:21). It sent the divided kingdoms of Israel and Judah into shameful captivity. It was at the base of the pagan rejection of God (Rom. 1:21), and today it ruins ministries, testimonies, and generations of work by faithful believers. Evil imaginations breed hatred, wrath, strife, heresies, envyings (Gal. 5:20-21), maliciousness, debate, deceit, malignity, whisperers, backbiters, and even haters of God (Rom. 1:29-30). Faithful pastors and preachers of the Word are falsely accused (Tit. 2:3); false shepherds rend flocks asunder (John 10:10, 12), and unregenerated church members hinder mightily the work of God (Phil. 1:15-16) because of evil imaginations.

Both in the world and in the visible church evil imaginations have a baneful influence. The only hope for any man in this age—in the church or out—is in the work of the Lord in the heart. Since the source of evil imaginations is the heart (Gen. 6:5; 8:21; Rom. 1:21) a heart change is indicated. It is also expected that all those naming the name of Christ will demonstrate this heart change by a life that is free from evil imaginations (Matt. 7:17). How can we profess to know Christ and yet not possess the visible evidence of a new creation (II Cor. 5:17)?

Oh, pastor, evangelists, teachers, and brethren, let us "prove all things; hold fast to that which is good" (I Thess. 5:21); and "casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ" (II Cor. 10:5), let us be filled with the Spirit.

CARNALITY---IS IT A SIN?

By CURTIS MITCHELL

Pastor, First Brethren Church
Bellflower, Calif.

Just what is carnality? We certainly hear the term used often enough today, but do we really understand its implications and extent? Is it not stated on every hand that one of the principle problems existing in the church today is carnality among the membership? Yet I find an amazing ignorance, even among those who use the term profusely, as to its true nature and characteristics. Hence we pose the question: Just what is carnality?

So often we tend to categorize a set of amusements, a particular mode of dress, or certain questionable habits as the only marks of a carnal Christian. Consequently, all who violate one of these criteria which we have established are automatically labeled "carnal." Now while I am certainly not condoning nor excusing any of the above-mentioned marks of carnality, I do feel that often we as Christians limit carnality to our own stereotyped conceptions of it. Should we not rather consider God's Word on this subject just as we do on other points of doctrine?

First, what type of person is a carnal man? Is he saved or unsaved? In I Corinthians 3:1 the apostle states: "And I brethren could not speak to you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ." Hence we discover that a carnal person is unmistakably one who has been born again, for he addresses them as "brethren" and, further, Paul associates carnality with the term "in Christ." This then identifies a carnal person as one who is in the body of Christ (I Cor. 12: 13) and therefore not subject to condemnation (Rom. 5:1).

Again in I Corinthians 3:1 the carnal are likened to "babes in Christ" or baby Christians, referring, of course, to a state of immature spiritual development within the believer. Now it goes without saying that we expect certain traits and characteristics in small children which would be ridiculous in mature adults. Likewise with new Christians we more or less expect immaturity of one kind or another, but after awhile it is only normal to assume that the bottle, the diaper, the strained food, and other traits of babyhood will be left behind as normal development proceeds. However, if immaturity persists, it is no longer considered normal but abnormal. It is this very thing that forms the basis of Paul's complaint against the Corinthians. For in I Corinthians 3:3 he states, "ye are yet carnal." Hence carnality is discovered to be spiritual babyhood, especially when such immaturity persists in a believer.

Another aspect of carnality is discovered in Paul's statement in I Corinthians 3:3: "Are ye not carnal and walk as men?" Hence a carnal man is one who acts as an unregenerate man acts, thinks as he thinks, desires what he desires, and reasons as he reasons. In fact, the very connotation of the word "carnal" in the original infers one who is under the influence of the fleshly or fallen nature. Hence any evidence of the traits or characteristics of the flesh in the believer savors of carnality. In summation then, the carnal man is a Christian in whom there still persists traits of spiritual immaturity due largely to the fact that said Christian is living under the influence of his old, unregenerate nature. In short, they "walk as men."

Now that we have fully identified the carnal man as to nature and type, let us proceed to discover the items which are characteristic of carnality. As has been previously stated, all the works of the fleshly nature are evidences of carnality. The Bible is exceptionally clear in its identification of the works of the flesh; so clear, in fact, that one wonders why any Christian should ever misconstrue or fail to recognize the true marks of carnality. For instance, in Galatians 5:17 Paul lists no less than 17 characteristics which he labels "the works of the flesh"; and even this imposing list is far from complete as the writer attests by closing with the statement, "and such like," leaving room for additions to the list. In view of these facts, how can we limit or qualify carnality to any certain set of four or five so-called marks of worldliness to the seemingly utter exclusion of such things as hatred, envy, gossip, pride, and a host of others?

In this connection it is most interesting to note the specific items Paul points to as evidences of carnality in the Corinthian believers. He points first, not to their separation from the world, but to their shallowness of spiritual perception (I Cor. 3:2-3), for he says: "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it neither yet now are ye able. For ye are yet carnal"; as yet they neither had mastered even the simple things of God's Word nor developed an ability to comprehend the meat of the Word. They had not real desire for the deep things of God, hence Paul calls them carnal. I have known persons who were so separated that they were almost separated from themselves; yet these same people had no real appetite for the "meat of the word." Should they not warrant the label "carnal Christians" just as surely as the participant of the Hollywood movies? Can we include one and exclude the other?

In the next verse (I Cor. 3:3) Paul enumerates three more definite marks of carnality: "For ye are yet carnal: for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?" Notice the very first in the series is that old rogue "envy." Do we who think of ourselves as pillars of the church piously bemoan and denounce the carnal tobacco user while we ourselves are green with envy? Do we yearn to have the things others have or the positions others hold? If so, are we not carnal and walk as men?

Next, Paul labels "strife" as a characteristic of the carnal Christian. Do we as a church denounce vigorously the carnal practice of card-playing and yet find we cannot conduct a simple board or business meeting without having a battle royal in which all the separated and spiritual brothers refuse to give way in even the slightest opinions and blood pressures rise to astounding degrees? I repeat, are we then not carnal and walk as men?

Finally, Paul identifies "divisions" or faction-making as still another

OUR MODERATOR SPEAKS

By Rev. R. Paul Miller

WHY ALL OF US SHOULD ATTEND OUR PORTLAND CONVENTION—

FIRST, because Brethren people should be loyal to our Brethren National Conference. It is certain that if our own Brethren do not support our Brethren conference, we cannot expect Baptists, Presbyterians, and Methodists to do so! True Brethren do not show loyalty and sacrifice only when there is no cost attached. So many Brethren have been able to attend National Conference for a day or so with practically no cost in time or money that they simply dismiss the idea if there is any real cost or difficulty attached to it. The Scriptures command that we should prove our boast of loyalty "not in word, but in deed and truth." Just how much of a Brethren are you, anyway?

SECOND, because God speaks to us at such gatherings, and speaks through us. God has shown His approval of such gatherings in the way He honored and led the disciples in their first such convention at Jerusalem, as recorded in the 15th chapter of Acts. Problems were solved, great enlightenment was given, and real progress resulted for the Gospel. Wherever yielded Christian hearts gather in earnest seeking of the will of God for their ministry, God will meet with them and lead them. There never was a time of tense need for such leading as now, not only for Brethren, but for every Christian movement in the world. This is a crucial hour. God help us to realize it. The attendance of one single layman is important today.

THIRD, we should all attend our National Conference at Portland this year because we owe it to our western Brethren. When our National Fellowship meets at Winona Lake year after year, our western Brethren are expected to make that long trip without complaint. There is no better way that we can show our western Brethren how we appreciate their faithfulness and to show that our loyalty is as great as theirs, than by attending National Conference at Portland this year.

FOURTH, we owe it to our Northwest District churches. This has always been an isolated district. They have always had to fight against great odds. Distances between churches have always plagued them. They are now growing swiftly. But they do not have great numbers. They cannot make a national conference alone. If every member of the northwest churches were at the convention it wouldn't be enough. You can count on it, they will be doing their dead level best to get there. No finer encouragement could be given them in their fight for the Gospel in that great field than to attend this conference when it is in their district for the first time in history. It would lift their spirits high and make them to know that we appreciate the fight they are putting up. Give 'em a cheer!

FIFTH, we should attend this National Conference because we owe it to Jesus Christ. If we are in the Brethren Church by His will and direction, then He expects us to carry on to the fullest right where He has put us. If Peter, or Paul, or James had considered it too much of a trip to go to the Jerusalem conference, and had gone fishing instead, there would have been a different story told in the Book of Acts. But they were not made of that sort of stuff. They carried on. They were "one-thing" men. That one thing was to put the interests of Jesus Christ first. And they did! If you are worthy to follow in their footsteps, you will do the same. Jesus wants to know just how much you will put yourself out in order to be just faithful.

SIXTH, we should attend this Portland convention because expense is no longer a barrier. Any live-wire pastor could arrange with another pastor to get his people to Portland by chartered bus at little or no greater cost than to come from the Atlantic District to Winona Lake. It is amazing what can be done today. If two pastors cannot fill up a bus with 29 people, then get another pastor to go in with you. Put a big banner on the side telling the whole world who you are and where you are going. Take along a guitar or accordion, and your people can have the most unforgettable trip of their lives, and a great spiritual blessing. Pastor, don't think of yourself only. You are the shepherd of a flock. Lead them into green pastures. They will be green in Portland this year.

SEVENTH, we should all attend National Conference this year, for it may be your last, our last. World-wide atomic war was never nearer to exploding in our faces than now. The fact that Russia is singing a song of love right now for a change means nothing. I have an old Book which says: "When men cry peace and safety, sudden destruction cometh upon them." It may not be long till we will be making excursions to some of our great cities to see "where Chicago used to be," "where Pittsburgh used to be." We should be making ourselves as strong as we can now to gird us for when the storm breaks. In time of trouble, conventions are forbidden. We may recall the Portland conference for a long time.

Brethren, we should make the Portland conference the largest, the most spiritual, the most evangelistic, the most effective, the most constructive and progressive conference on record. Can our Lord count on you to be there and not let Jesus Christ down? There is only one answer to that question! Better start packing your bag, brother, sister. You will be glad you did!

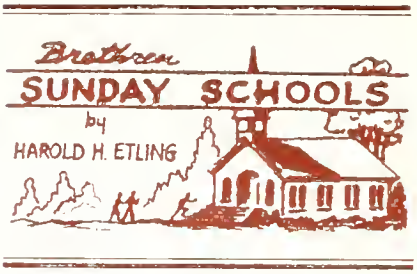
CONFERENCE INFORMATION

FACILITIES—Sufficient facilities either on the conference grounds or conveniently nearby are available for all Brethren people—even those without reservations.

Dormitory space is available on the grounds for individuals who can room with small groups of either men or women.

BEDDING (only for those who will live on the conference grounds or at Camp Menucha) — Jennings Lodge Assembly Grounds is NOT able to supply all the bedding for a group as large as our conference will be. They do have enough for those who will be coming by train, bus, or plane. However, it will be necessary for all those who will drive, and who can possibly do so, to bring at least blankets and pillows. Sheets, towels, and pillow cases will be provided for all who need them. The shortage is in blankets and pillows.

How Much Will You Do?



As I have been traveling throughout this past year, I have been amazed at the number of new highways that have been built, and the number of new places that can now be reached by these roads. If no new road had been built, those towns would still be isolated, and many of us would never have known they even existed.

While traveling over one such road to a district conference the other day, I could not help but make the comparison. To reach new heights in our Brethren Sunday schools, we need to build some new roads. If we do not, we will continue to walk in the same old ruts and many folks will not even know that there is a National Fellowship of Brethren Churches.

The command of Christ to "go ye into all the world, and teach all nations" demands the best efforts of every Christian and of every church. No church dares to do less than to plan to reach every individual in the community. Nowhere in God's Word are the people commanded to seek the church, but the church is commanded to carry the Gospel to the world. Your National Sunday School Board has adopted a slogan which has now become familiar to every Brethren Sunday school—"60,000 by 1960." With the continued rise in our population and with the great need of America for the Gospel, this goal is not beyond our grasp.

What can your church do to help us in the great task before us? What will you do to help us reach our goal? Let every church and every Sunday school assume their share of the responsibility. We need an increase in every Sunday school of at least 20 percent during this coming Sunday-school year. This means that every five members of our Sunday school at the present moment should —yea must—win at least one other Sunday-school scholar in the next 12 months.

We cannot allow this goal to be passed over lightly. It is a serious business—the most serious and important business in all the world, for we are going to have to give an accounting of our Christian lives at the Bema Seat of Christ. It means that every Sunday-school class will have to take a goal of at least a 20-percent increase. Perhaps we could start some campaigns in every local school. One for Five in 55! Let every member of your school know just what you are out to do. Challenge every newcomer to help in the campaign. This is an individual matter. We cannot say, "How much will Bill or Joe do?" but rather, "How many will I bring to my Sunday school?" "60,000 by 1960" dare not be just a slogan. "60,000 by 1960" must become your personal responsibility and mine.

TRAVELING WITH YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL DIRECTOR

It has been a long time since we have shared with you from our travelogue, but God has been richly blessing in our Sunday-school movement. The contest results have been published each month for a number of months in the Herald. You may compare those published in this issue, to know that there has been a real increase in many of our schools. But beyond these printed pages, we have been thrilled as we have had the privilege of sharing in many of the churches. As we write, we are in the Southeast District. Already this spring and summer we have had the privilege of sharing in the Northern Ohio, Southern Ohio, Atlantic, Iowa, and Southeast district conferences. It is our conviction that these district conferences have been the best in attendance and spiritual emphasis that we have had the privilege of seeing in many days. The messages of every conference have been real challenges to our own hearts and to all of the delegates.

In addition to the district conferences, we have had the joy of ministry in the Denver church, where a thriving Sunday school has won the Division A banner again and again. Likewise, while in the district, we had a fine workers conference with our Sunday school in Cheyenne, Wyo., second-place winner again and again in the same division. You may look for real growth in both of these churches in the immediate future, for God is blessing. Time and space forbid talking about all of the Sunday schools of our visit, but the thing that has thrilled us is that from east to west and all the way in between there are real signs of growth.

IOWA DISTRICT CONFERENCE—JUNE 23-24, 1955—BY RICHARD P. DeARMEY

As we gather for our annual Iowa District Conference of Brethren Churches, we are here in a fellowship of local congregations of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. From the very beginning, believers have joined themselves together in local churches as an immediate result of salvation. On the Day of Pentecost "they that gladly received his word were baptized; and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."

Because of the apostasy within the ranks of the professed church and the rising tide of cults and isms with their spurious teachings, we have laid much stress upon the matter of salvation in our churches. And certainly it is a commendable thing when we do maintain a strong gospel testimony. However, it is possible to stress one particular phase of doctrine to the exclusion of others which are vital to the building of a strong, healthy church. As we view the situation in many of our churches today, not only in the Iowa District but across the entire brotherhood, there is an indication that we have failed to stress as we should the meaning and responsibility of membership in the local congregation.

The meaning of salvation is beautifully expressed in I Corinthians 1:9, where it is portrayed as a fellowship with the eternal Son of God: "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord." Yes; ours is a partnership, a joint participation with Jesus Christ, the Redeemer. Likewise, church membership is a partnership with the redeemed and this fact is perhaps nowhere more clearly expressed than in the opening verses of Philippians 1, where Paul thanks the Lord for their "fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now." There in Philippi the members of that local body of believers were jointly participating in the furtherance of the Gospel of Christ.

The believer's relationship to the Lord is strikingly set forth in the sixth chapter of Romans, where Paul speaks of the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ reminding us that through the experience of salvation we jointly participate with Him, for we have been crucified with Him, buried with Him, and raised again with Him to walk in newness of life. This is the great declaration that is made every time an individual confesses Christ as Saviour and then goes down into the waters of baptism in obedience to the Lord. When a person makes this confession of faith and is baptized, he then becomes a candidate for membership in the local congregation, and to these individuals we have a solemn obligation to teach them the meaning and importance of church membership. And perhaps if we took more time to teach these things, we would not find church rolls so overloaded with members who seem to have no sense of responsibility to the church whatsoever.

If we believe and preach "the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible," then we must faithfully teach the whole counsel of God in this matter also. Are we so desperate for members that we would purposely refrain from teaching what the Word has to say about these things, lest we should scare somebody away? Are we so anxious to show a good report in numbers gained that we would border dishonesty by failing to tell each prospective member just what we really do expect of them? This must never be if we are to expect the blessing of God, but rather in a straightforward manner we must teach that to join the membership of the local church is to enter into partnership with the redeemed and that it involves much more than just a confession of faith.

There are many things that might be said of our fellowship together as believers, but we will consider it mainly as a fellowship in the propagation of the Gospel. This will have to do with our activity after we have received the right hand of fellowship and have been received into the membership of the local congregation of believers. When an individual comes and thus presents himself, he is saying in effect that he is in agreement with the church and that he desires to enter into partnership with them and jointly participate in at least three great avenues of propagation: in the preaching of the Gospel, the practice of the ordinances, and in the program of missionary endeavor.

Fellowship in the Preaching of the Gospel

If members are received with this understanding, then the church has every right to expect that they will participate in the preaching of the Gospel. The Apostle Paul did not hesitate to clearly state what he expected of each member of the church at Philippi. He exhorted them to strive together for the faith of the Gospel; he spoke of adversary, of conflict, and plainly told them that it was "given unto them in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake" (Phil. 1:27). May we not fail to plainly teach and exhort every man, woman, and child that comes into our churches that we expect them to take their places in the ranks as good soldiers of Jesus Christ and "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3).

In this evil day of apostasy, we must have a united front if we are to stand. It is not enough to have a fearless, uncompromising preacher in the pulpit, but there must be also in the pew a dedicated, informed, militant band of believers. May God grant that each church represented in this conference will always be a body of believers who take an uncompromising stand on God's holy, eternal, inspired Word, the Bible; those who believe in the absolute deity of Jesus Christ, in His incarnation by virgin birth, His perfect sinlessness, His substitutionary blood atonement upon Calvary's cross, His bodily resurrection from among the dead, and in the blessed hope of His coming again. These are the fundamentals of the faith, the Gospel of Jesus Christ our Lord; it is the plain teaching of God's Word.

And if we are to be true to the Word, a true church of Jesus Christ, then we must hold fast to the faith. And as believers at Jerusalem "continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine," so also must we expect that every member of our churches will stand and strive without reservation for the faith of this glorious Gospel as Paul exhorts us to do. Striving together is joint participation, it is partnership, it is fellowship. Let us then expect that each member who has accepted the right hand of fellowship will participate with the other believers in the furtherance of the Gospel by the personal testimony of his life and the personal witness of his lips. And this is one of the things which Paul says should be done without "murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world; holding forth the word of life . . ." (Phil. 2:14-16).

Fellowship in the Practice of the Ordinances

But not only are we to disciple all nations, to baptize and establish them in the local church, but we are to teach them to observe all things whatsoever He has commanded with the promise that He will be with us unto the end of the age. Among these things that were commanded of the Lord are certain ordinances which are to be perpetuated in the church; they include the washing of the saints' feet, the love feast, and the Eucharist. And if we are going to teach the believers to observe all things whatsoever He has commanded, then we must declare and practice these great commandments of the Lord. It is not my purpose to discuss here the Scriptural basis for these practices, but rather to remind us of our obligation to the Lord and to the church to do them.

However, it might be well to point out in passing why the practice of these ordinances is vital to our preaching of the Gospel. Every time we meet together around the table of the Lord we do show forth "the Lord's death till he come." In full, it is a symbolic declaration of the threefold ministry of Christ—that of justification, sanctification, and glorification. Scriptural practice of these ordinances will preserve the truth of these great doctrines, and Scriptural teaching of these doctrines will preserve the practice of these great ordinances.

If we have been faithful in "teaching them to observe all things," an individual presenting himself for membership in our local congregation is saying in effect that he is in sympathy with this teaching of the Word of God. Then we have every right to believe that he is in full sympathy, and if he does not then jointly participate in the practice, certainly we have every right to ask why. These are the commandments of the Lord and we do have a solemn obligation to our Sovereign Head. When we enter into partnership with those in the church, then we have a responsibility to them in these matters also.

There are usually some in almost every church who cannot participate in these things because of sickness or some other infirmity, and there are always other valid reasons. These are not our concern, because they would if they could, but the ones who pose a serious problem for every church are those who could but won't.

Perhaps there is a lack of understanding on the part of some people. It may be that the local church has not given these things their proper place and space in the teaching program, or it may be that some have been spasmodic in their attendance and have not availed themselves of the opportunity of being taught. But whatever the case, there is no need to go on with this lack. Ignorance is a poor excuse, especially when you belong to a church which teaches the whole Word of God. Go to your pastor and he will be glad to open up the Word with you. Search the Scriptures and see that these things be so, and then follow obediently the teaching of God's Word.

There are many other reasons why some people do not fellowship in the practice of the ordinances, and when persons habitually absent themselves from the service without due explanation or apparent reason, then the church must draw its own conclusion. Is it a matter of carelessness? If it is, it is a serious matter. Individuals who are careless about the commands of Christ are hardly to be counted worthy of responsibility in the church.

Or is it a matter of worldliness? This is something that might be reflected in many ways. If a man takes a day off from his work to go hunting or fishing or a dozen other things, but never once arranges his work so that he can be at the table of the Lord, is it not evident that he loves these worldly pleasures more than the things of the Lord? And then sometimes parents will engage a 15- or 16-year-old baby sitter to come in and sit with the children while they attend the social affair of the Sunday-school class or some other group, but then on communion night it takes both mother and dad to stay with the baby. Is it not apparent that the social is the most desirable thing with those parents?

Then again there is the possibility of a sin problem being involved when one refuses to fellowship in these things. However, this should not keep a man from taking his place at this service, for "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness" (I John 1:9). Paul instructs, Let a man judge his sin and so let him eat.

Then, too, there is always the possibility that some might profess to be in agreement with these things to get into the membership and in reality not be in sympathy with these practices of the church at all. This is perhaps the most serious of all things mentioned here, for it is nothing less than dishonesty. It is hypocrisy in the first degree and a dangerous place to be in, for it is to stand somewhat in the place of Ananias and Sapphira.

This ought to be a matter of serious concern for every church convened in this conference and also in the national brotherhood, for our statistical reports show that far too few of our members are actually practicing the ordinances which were commanded by our sovereign Lord. Those who cannot participate represent just a small fraction of the nonattenders; the great majority are those who will not. This leads us to one inevitable conclusion: either a large portion of our people are untaught, or they are careless, or they are worldly, or they are living in sin, or they are not sympathetic to the Scriptural practice of these ordinances. The existence of such a condition is tragic and ought to drive us to our knees before the Lord. Surely, if we expect the outpouring of God's blessing upon us, we must prayerfully labor to correct this situation as soon as possible.

To whom does the responsibility of correction in this matter belong? It rightfully belongs to the local congregation of believers. It's not enough that the pastor be heartbroken over the attention to these things, but the body of believers must share in the heartbreak also.

How best will the church approach this correction? It can be approached only through a program of systematic teaching which will utilize every available teaching channel of the church. If any one department of the church is given the whole responsibility, it can do it properly only by the neglect of other important needs, but if each will share, then the over-all instruction can be well balanced. The church can profitably supplement its teaching by the purchase and distribution of literature which deals pertinently with the subject. And finally, it ought to become a continual burden of prayer for the church—praying fervently that our local congregations will be not only hearers of the Word but doers also.

Fellowship in the Program of Missionary Endeavor

Our final consideration will center around our fellowship in the program of missionary endeavor. Here again is a field that will stand much cultivation in most of our churches. We cannot expect new members to shoulder their responsibility unless we plainly teach them what is expected of them. The missionary program of every church should be a constantly widening endeavor. If we are to buy up the opportunities that are afforded us, then we must have a mutual understanding and acceptance of the responsibilities.

Church membership has many attendant blessings and it is the desire of the congregation that each member, new and old, should partake of them in fullness, but when we agree to enjoy the blessings, we agree also to take our part of the load. And this is in no sense an infringement upon the doctrine of grace, but rather it is doing the work of the Lord "decently and in order." Let us be at least practical in our approach to these things lest we receive the grace of God in vain. The program of missionary endeavor for each church should be a fellowship of prayer, a fellowship of performance, and a fellowship of provision.

Prayer

When we realize that the program of our missionary endeavor includes the entire scope of our witness for the Lord, then we can better understand why we must urge a greater participation in the fellowship of prayer. A good barometer for every church is the response to the weekly prayer meeting. Last year the barometer reading for the district was a meager 28 percent, which indicates that the vast majority of our members feel no urgency in this matter at all. No one will dispute the fact that we are greatly dependent upon prayer in every avenue of our witness. Why then is it so greatly neglected in so many places?

Perhaps the biggest and most consistent group of nonattenders is to be found among the young married people who use their children as an excuse for absenting themselves. This ought to be a matter of serious concern for every congregation in view of the fact that a generation is being raised which will know nothing at all about fellowshiping together with other believers in public prayer. There has been a growing tendency in many quarters to popularize this service by the innovation of everything from Coffee Times to Pink Teas, but let us not be deceived. This is not the answer. Five people in earnest prayer will do more to open the windows of heaven than 500 ever will who are gathered together in a social fellowship.

But again I do not feel that it is so much a matter of stressing the Scriptural teaching of prayer, but rather of plainly teaching our people their responsibility of doing the thing they know to do. It has been often said that there is more said about prayer and less done about it than anything else in the spiritual realm. To the 72 percent who do not attend prayer meetings, we must say with Paul: "Those things which ye have both learned and received, and heard, and seen . . . DO" (Phil. 4:9).

Performance

In an ever-expanding missionary program there is always an ever-increasing need for manpower, for somebody to man the lifeboats, somebody to perform the doing of it. It is the business of the church to take the raw material at its disposal and develop it into usable products. That is the burden of the teaching of Ephesians 4, where Paul speaks of the gifts that have been given unto the church "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the building up of the body of Christ . . . unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." The lack of personnel to do the job is not a new problem, but in many places it is somewhat acute, and no doubt there are many contributing factors.

Undenominational and interdenominational activities must draw upon the local church for their manpower and in that way often sap a congregation of much needed strength. This does not mean that some of these interests are not worthwhile and that they do not merit the support of our churches. They can be aided and abetted by the members of our churches if they are worthwhile organizations, but they must be kept in proper relationship with the local congregation. If they are in their proper place, they will cooperate with and contribute to the welfare of it.

The New Testament program of missionary endeavor centers around the local church and when it functions properly, it will be sending forth a steady flow of laborers into the white harvest fields. But there must be a constant working nucleus at the home base. Each church must be a missionary training center, and to do the job properly we must have an adequate staff of trained consecrated workers. What is our responsibility as a church in this matter? It is simply this: we must educate our people from the very beginning that they have an obligation to enter into the actual labor of the missionary endeavor, and that their first and foremost responsibility is at home; namely, the home church.

This will naturally include the training that is necessary to prepare them for the work. This is not a selfish attitude but rather just good business; it is doing God's work in God's way. If every member of the church is in his place being trained and then in turn training, then we will be able to reach out into the regions beyond. If we have every post adequately manned at the home base and are able to expand our ministry by sending out workers, let us praise God and rejoice, but if we do not have enough to perform the work of the Lord at home because those who are able to do it are out doing something else, then we need to begin to teach that church membership is a partnership with the redeemed, each taking an equal share in the performance of it.

Provision

We now turn to the matter of provision in the missionary program, and I am sure that I will not be misapplying a good term if we view the situation as Paul saw the Corinthians and call it an "unfinished grace." There are many commendable things that can be said about the giving in our district churches; however, if we will face the facts realistically, we will admit that many of our people know little or nothing about this part of our fellowship. The responsibility of the pastor in this matter is again that of teaching, for it was thus that Paul exhorted Titus saying: "Insomuch that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so he would also finish in you the same grace also" (II Cor. 8:6). So may we as pastors go with the firm assurance that God would have us teach and instruct in the grace of Christian giving, but let us go in the spirit with which he approached the Philippians when he said: "Not that I desire a gift: but I desire fruit that may abound to your account" (Phil. 4:17).

Certainly we would not feel that we were fulfilling our obligation to the members of our flocks if we did not exhort them to abound in faith and love and in diligence; nor are we fulfilling that obligation if we do not instruct them in the straightforward manner of the apostle, saying: "Therefore as ye abound in every thing, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also" (II Cor. 8:7). Since our missionary endeavors reach beyond the confines of the home church, we must as a church teach our members not only the grace of giving, but also the commitments of the local group. If the established members have committed themselves to certain missionary programs, then the members who are added should be informed and in sympathy with it.

We have a great missionary program in the Brethren Church that has been singularly blessed of God. Beyond the confines of our individual churches, God has placed His stamp of approval on our Foreign Missionary Society, the Home Missions Council, Grace Seminary and College, the Brethren Missionary Herald, the Sunday School Board, the Board of Evangelism, our district mission boards, and other similar missionary arms of the church. Let us teach each new member to jointly participate in the program to which we are committed.

To conclude our remarks here today, I would remind us of the instruction given to young Timothy when he was told: "Be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also" (II Tim. 2:1-2). In like manner let us go and disciple all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things, so that they in turn shall be able to go and disciple and baptize and teach.

That is God's program for each local congregation fellowshiping together here in this Iowa Conference of Brethren Churches. It is the biggest business in all the world. How our people respond to this great commission of the Lord will depend largely on how we teach them to observe all things. May this coming year see our members, both new and old, fully conscious of their responsibility to their sovereign Lord and Redeemer and to their partners in the faith—the redeemed.

be either a testimony to the Lord or a display of personalities. This matter is very important and should be well considered by every prospective bride and groom. When two young people have considered all the above matters and have come to the God-led decision of matrimony, then they should be married properly as follows:

With proper consent — Marriage should be consummated after obtaining consent from the proper legal authorities. Common-law marriages are unlawful before man and are certainly not pleasing to the Lord. There should be no concealment of the facts when a young couple apply for a license to wed. There should also be the consent of the parents. These have been vitally interested, have been called upon to sacrifice much for your well-being, and they surely should be considered in any decision affecting your life and happiness. There should be the consent of your spiritual leader. Don't go to your pastor with your mind all made up, seeking only to establish a date for the ceremony. Go to him prior to making your decisions. He has your happiness at heart and will prove an invaluable counselor.

With proper ceremony—Your wedding ceremony should not be an elopement. You'll see such signs as these along some state borders: "Let Me Hitch You Up," "Marryin' Parson," "Marriages—Only One Dollar." No step as sacred as this should be desecrated by stopping off at such mercenary establishments. Don't run off to be married. Your friends and parents have an interest in your life and a right to share in your special times of joy. Stay at home, arrange a suitable wedding, and live to be happy for that decision.

Mary Baker . . . Eddy declares: "One sacrifice, however great, is insufficient to pay the debt of sin" (74th ed., p. 328). Again she wrote: "The material blood of Jesus was no more efficacious to cleanse from sin, when it was shed upon 'the accursed tree,' than when it was flowing through His veins, as He went daily about His Father's business" (ibid., p. 330).

But the Bible declares that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission" (Heb. 9:22). Again it affirms: "And having made peace through the blood of the cross" (Col. 1:20). An honest approach to such passages leads to but one conclusion: The shedding of blood and salvation are inseparable.

A Practical Examination.

It is thus apparent that Christian Science is neither Christian in its essence nor scientific in its methods. Its deceitfulness is revealed in its employment of Biblical terminology with completely foreign meanings to such Biblical vocabulary. Its deceitfulness is revealed in the way it reshuffles its content in each new edition of "Science and Health," thus making it very difficult to document one's exposure of its errors (see Haldeman's preface). It is satanic in its doctrinal content, denying the integrity and authority of the Bible, and then twisting the Scripture to fit its system of error, or outrightly denying the plain facts of the Bible.

Someone has described a delusion as "a misrepresentation of realities," which is just what "Christian Science" has done. It is a travesty of every doctrine of the Christian faith. It should be shunned as a deadly plague, which, in reality, is just what it is.

"Looking Unto Jesus"

By REV. W. CARL MILLER
Roanoke, Va.

"Looking Unto Jesus," the theme for this 11th annual conference of the Southeast Fellowship of Brethren Churches, is found in Hebrews 12:2. To my mind there is no greater admonition for believers in all of God's Word than that found in the 12th chapter of the Book of Hebrews. It is in this portion that the writer of Hebrews reaches the pinnacle of inspiration for believers to run the Christian race with all diligence. Verily, Christ Jesus our Lord, must be the One upon whom we fix our Godward gaze for the much-needed inspiration and strength. These are days which demand faithful service in the light of the deep inner craving for spiritual reality on every side.

Inasmuch as the task of expounding the key verses (Hebrews 12:1-2) was particularly given to several other pastors of the district, it is my desire to retain the thought mentioned in I Corinthians 13:13, which reads: "But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love" (ASV). Let it be our prayer that all of us as Bible-believing Brethren of this district shall be found always "looking unto Jesus" for our faith, our hope, and our love.

I. OUR FAITH.

Faith is basic to Christianity. Verily, He is "the author and finisher of our faith." We must have faith in Christ and His redemptive work to be saved. Likewise, believers are admonished: "As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving" (Col. 2: 6-7).

We must have a faith that refuses first place, or allegiance, to anything or anyone but the true God, even Jesus Christ. If there ever was a day when God's children needed to live lives of faith, it is today. We need to live our days in simple, childlike trust, even as we came to Christ for salvation. It is true that there is no faith but that faith which has been tested. If our faith in Christ has never been doubted, tested, or tried, we should do well to heed the admonition in II Corinthians 13:5 ,"Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith." In America there is little known in the way of physical suffering for personal faith in Jesus Christ. We have become so soft and indifferent as believers that we think nothing of staying home from Sunday school, church services, or prayer meeting on the slightest provocation. Uncomfortable weather, company for the weekend, or a desire to go see this relative or that friend, or a whim to go on an early picnic lunch because it is such a lovely day, are all too often in vogue in Christian family circles.

Our district statisician's report for the year 1954 presents an encouraging picture in respect to average attendance gains for all of the regular church services. However, in comparison of the ratio between reported membership and attendance at morning worship, we made a net percentage ratio gain of only 1 percent over 1953. Our attendance at morning worship was only 74 percent of our membership. Where are the other 26 percent? Only 50 percent were present at the evening service. The midweek prayer service, the spiritual barometer of the church, was considered vitally important by a mere 27 percent of our members, and the communion service by a shamefully low 27 percent.

Shall we be satisfied to mechanically remove all the "dead wood" from our church rolls once every six months? Or shall we pray for revival of real Christian compassion in our hearts that will send us forth to retrieve these wayward members? Unless we see an increased interest in our prayer meetings and visitation programs, we are doomed to certain defeat. Our soundness of theology and doctrine is rendered ineffective without a strong, comprehensive means by which the unchurched are faithfully and systematically reached for Christ and the church.

Two businessmen were talking as they waited for their bus one Monday morning. As both yawned, they smiled at how tired they were after a busy weekend. One told of driving to the seashore on the previous afternoon. Then emphatically he said, "Never again for me!" The other man looked surprised and asked, "Did you have an accident?" "No; not exactly," replied the first young man, "but you know what that highway is like coming home. Cars are lined up bumper to bumper for miles. It took us hours to come home. Then one fellow near me yelled out of his car with a hoarse laugh, 'The Sinners' Parade.' That set me to thinking. I know that all were not sinners, for there were probably preachers and other Christians on the road. But I knew that the title was true for most. They had forgotten God and the Lord's Day. Then in a new light I could see the dust, the noise, and worldly gaiety of the crowd. There were several accidents, too. Right then I made up my mind I was not going to parade with the sinners again. I am going to God's house on His day and have fellowship with the saints and serve Him."

We must possess a faith that relies solely upon God for the supply of every need—physical and spiritual. We are too ready to throw up our hands when the way gets hard. We need to remember the situation of Daniel and the three Hebrew children. They were ready to serve God at any cost. The outcome was left with God. We are too reserved in our reliance upon God. Theirs was not a blind commitment to God. They were doing the normal thing as always—obeying God. Let us then be vigilant in our common routine of life. In this is the true test pattern of life formed.

It is also ours to know a faith that rewards diligent devotion and service. We are very prone to lose sight of God's promises to richly repay for every service done in His name and for His glory. God always keeps His Word; we often fail in our vows to Him.

In a certain prayer meeting the names of the unsaved in the community were assigned. Seeing eight-year-old Ann's disappointment, the pastor gave her Sam Jones, the village drunkard, who had been sought in vain. Ann took her assignment very seriously. Each day she saw him and asked a simple question: "Mr. Jones, aren't you saved yet? Remember, I'm praying for you." Sunday morning he could resist her plea no longer, and with tears on his face, she led him down the aisle. Her friends could see her very thoughts—"I brought mine, where are yours?"

It may very well be that our faith in Christ will bring some persecution and suffering along with it, but "if we suffer, we shall also reign with him." May God grant to us the determination of purpose to endure "our light affliction, which is but for a moment, [and] worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." How many of us can say with the Apostle Paul: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith"? How stabilizing is this precious faith by which we are enabled to live well pleasing unto God each day! But our faith will one day be sight. This faith is the "substance of things hoped for."

II. OUR HOPE.

"Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ by the commandment of God our Saviour, and Jesus Christ, which is our hope" (1 Tim. 1:1). Surely our hope in Christ is priceless.

We are not "as others which have no hope." How thankful we should be that we know Christ as Saviour. For there was a time when we "were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world: but now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. 2:12-13). If our hope in Christ's redemptive work for us means what it should, we shall be more diligent in bringing others to a saving knowledge of the same hope. Beloved, we are guilty of being selfish and careless in Christ instead of sharing our Christ and being compassionate as He was. Where would you be if someone had not cared for your soul? We praise God for an almost 100-percent increase in number of conversions for the year 1954. Is there any valid reason before God why at least 50 percent of our membership could not win at least one soul for Christ in a year?

We have hope in Christ for the reunion with our loved ones when Christ comes again for His own. In Titus 2:13 we continue our heavenward gaze by "looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ." If you have ever attended the funeral of an unsaved person, you know a little of what it must mean for one to enter eternity with no hope in Christ. Have some of us forgotten that the funeral dirge is woefully sung over 100,000 Christless graves every day? Our first thought should be of preventive measures.

Let's consider what should be the year-round evangelistic arm of the church, the Sunday school. The statistician's report reveals an average attendance gain of almost 12 percent. This is commendable. But if we are to do our share in this district to reach the national goal of 60,000 by 1960, we must realize an 18-percent average increase each year for the next five years. Can we do it? Or, rather, will we do it? The potential to realize such a yearly gain is present in virtually all communities represented by our churches. Beloved, we must do it, or we will have failed God.

Evangelism is another means by which we can reap a real harvest for God. We can thank God for a 31-percent increase in revival-evangelistic attendance for 1954. I am sure this is the primary reason for such a fine increase in the number of conversions reported. But before we can see souls won to Christ in any great numbers we must have a revival among God's people. Let us earnestly pray for it. It can be ours according to II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." Our spiritual pride must go. The greater our claims to the truth of God's Word, the greater should be our humility before God for having received such spiritual insight. If we confess our self-righteousness, our selfishness, and our failures to God, we shall see our prayers answered for ourselves, our churches, and the unsaved.

We desperately need that hope in Christ that does not make us ashamed. The story is told of a bank president who was talking to a Christian. Suddenly he asked: "Do you really believe in Christ's final judgment?" to which the believer earnestly assented. The man then continued: "Yes; I too have read much about it in the Bible." Then in a puzzled way he exclaimed: "All my life I have been responsible for large sums of money and have taken enormous risks without fear, but when I think of appearing before Christ empty handed I am indeed afraid." Would to God we had more of such a fear in our souls. It is true that we are to be ever watching for the Lord's soon return, but nowhere in the New Testament do I read that we are to sit down and wait. The great commission to "Go" is ever before us. We cannot escape its urgency. Would our hands be empty if Jesus should come today?

In II Corinthians 3:12 we read: "Seeing then that we have such hope, we use great plainness of speech." Brethren, there are some matters about which we need to do some plain speaking, some sober thinking, and some deliberate action. Let us take a look at the picture of our missionary giving last year.

Our district gave an average of $3.47 per member to foreign missions for 1954. This is a decrease of $1.12 per member in foreign-mission giving. Those figures surely speak for themselves. Let us not be quick to look for excuses. Let us rather be quick to turn to our Heavenly Father in real heartsearching for the cause and by his grace change that picture by next year. God grant that we shall not be guilty of causing our missionaries to return from needy fields for lack of funds to support them.

During the year 1954 the Southeast Fellowship of Brethren Churches spent $1,285, or 76c per member to reach the Jew for Christ. This shows a decrease of 32c per member for the evangelization of the Jews. These are the true facts, according to our district statistician's report. The need is obvious. We must increase our giving here, too.

What has the Southeast Fellowship of Brethren Churches contributed to home missions in 1954? We gave approximately $3.06 per member for the work of building and maintaining new home-mission churches last year. This reveals a decline in giving to home missions of 59c per member in 1954 as compared with 1953. What is the answer? Surely we dare not blame it all on a minor economic recession in 1954. Are we spending more for ourselves and less for the Lord?

Let us also see what our record is for gifts to Grace Seminary and College for 1954. It was a mere 80c per member, as compared with $1.20 given in 1953. In other words, we gave one-third less last year. This is especially tragic in light of the staggering needs of Grace Seminary and College at this time when they are expanding so rapidly. We cannot say that we have more training than we can use in the Brethren Church. If we grow as we should, there may well be a shortage of Brethren-trained men and women to fill the needs. This is a critical time in the life of our Brethren schools. Let us determine by the help of God to turn the gifts per member upward instead of downward in 1955.

The ministry of the printed page in the Brethren Church is carried on by the Brethren Missionary Herald Company. We are happy to report an increase in our total giving as a district, but we are saddened to find that we actually gave only 21c per member in 1954, or a decrease of 2c per member as compared with 1953.

Beloved, these statistics call for sober reflection and earnest prayer and increased giving with God as our Helper. The picture must change. Let us begin now.

III. OUR LOVE.

Never has the Brethren Church been so deeply in need of the demonstration of love in each of its members as today. We may be busy about many things, but if we feel that we are too busy to show love to one another, beloved, we are too busy. We need to stop and meditate at the Saviour's feet as Mary did. May we not be deceived. It takes time. You will never find the time.

We must begin with a genuine love for Christ. "God is love," and we must seek Him for it. We have largely lost the art of meditation. We should do well to wait upon the Lord and be sure that He is leading us before we go ahead. No one is more interested in seeing that we fulfill the Great Commission than our blessed Lord Jesus Christ, who died to make it possible for us to share in the great ministry of reconciliation.

One day as a child knelt to pray, she grasped her mother's hands, which were horribly scarred and deformed. With upturned face and puckered brow the child caressed those hands and asked: "Why are your hands so different?" Her mother softly told her how several years before, upon smelling smoke, she dashed for the nursery. In panic, the child was snatched from burning bedclothes. The child was saved, but the mother bore the results of a labor of love.

Christ has given His pure hands to be scarred for our sins and the sins of the whole world. Have we any battle scars to show him? Oh, yes; I realize that we do not usually suffer physical persecution in this land for serving Christ. But do you have any spiritual trophies of God's grace to present to Him?

If we love our Lord, then we should experience no failure in reading His love letters to us in His Word. Who does not thrill at reading the letter of a dear loved one? Too many of us are abnormal Christians in this respect. Radio, television, and secular reading matter too often are given priority over the Word of God.

Along with faithfulness in the reading and study of God's Word is the need for a consistent prayer life. Here, perhaps, is our greatest failing. Do we not all agree that virtually anything else seems easier to do than pray? And yet we all know that for lack of prayer our work for Christ lacks much in the way of real spiritual power.

A rare and costly organ was installed in a large city church. The first Sunday it was used the electricity which operated the organ went off early in the service. A mechanic was hurriedly sent for. Soon a note was handed to the organist. The note read: "After the prayer, the power will be on." The mechanic did not realize the important truth in these simple words. A church without prayer is also without power. If prayer is weak, then the work will be weak. A church which prays in a mighty way will achieve mighty things for God.

At this point we feel constrained to challenge the parents of our Fellowship to the daily need for family devotions in every home. Those who have established a family altar and have known the immeasurable blessings coming from it will testify with me that no time is better spent. It will take determination. Satan is against family devotions, for he knows it to be the greatest spiritual exercise to keep our homes Christ-centered and our children strong in the midst of the unnumbered enemies of their souls. Do you have a family altar in your home? Then let me urge you to start one without delay.

Every home, Christian as well as non-Christian, is facing problems financially, morally, and spiritually which can be largely solved through the medium of a family altar. You and your children cannot gather together each day, preferably in the morning, and not be helped immeasurably through the day because of that precious time spent around God's Word and in prayer.

Am I speaking, perchance, to some who once had a family altar? Will you make the necessary effort to resume spiritual fellowship as a family? It requires first place in the family routine. It will enjoy the necessary priority or be lost. When family devotions are pushed around for a convenient time, it soon turns out that the family altar has ceased to function. Dr. James McLeod once said: "The Family Altar League will do more to make America great than scores of battleships." See your pastor about starting one today, or write to the Family Altar League, 108 N. Dearborn St., Chicago 2, Ill. This fine organization, founded by Dr. William Edward Biederwolf in 1906, will be most delighted to help you.

One of the most important marks of the believer is his love for the brethren. It has often been a source of great disappointment to me to see so little manifestation of the love of Christ among us as members of the Brethren Church. We know from the Bible that "love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God" (I John 4:7). It would appear that some of us as God's children do not reflect the image of God's likeness in this matter of loving one another. From this Scripture we are made to wonder if some of us are really born of God or know Him very well. If there are things between us as brethren, we ought to seek the forgiveness of one another and together confess our sins to God. I believe with all my heart that there is no greater need among us at this present hour than to show love to all of the brethren.

Many of the facts and figures we have presented in this address have shown cause for sadness. However, there is an encouraging note in relation to our gains in district missions.

In the first place, we know that the report which shall be given us tomorrow of the new Grace Brethren Church at Riner, Va., will show marvelous blessings. The unusual blessing of God upon that new church and pastor should be a real challenge to the rest of us in this district. There is a reason. Sacrifice is very evident. They have been willing to pay the price which brings blessing from God. Are we willing to do the same? May we all earnestly look to Jesus to that end.

In the second place, we can rejoice in a substantial increase in per-capita giving to district missions in the Southeast Fellowship of Brethren Churches during 1954. It amounted to $1.36 per member in 1954, as against $1.21 per member in 1953. This shows an increase in giving to district missions of 15c per member.

But let us note the final challenge and need in our district-mission outreach. We have all thrilled at God's blessing in the establishment of the new Grace Brethren Church in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. This group of God's people were just organized officially in April of this year. The reports have been glowing. But there is a need for closer fellowship for this group of God's people. The challenge to us is very obvious. We ought to begin pushing southward through the Carolinas, Georgia, and Florida to close in the gap with more Brethren churches. Beloved, it is our great opportunity. Let us unite in prayer and honest toil to see this vision realized to the praise, honor, and glory of our Lord.

May I conclude this address with a plea to all that we read and reread those portions of God's Word that tell us so plainly of the sinful condition and need of all men, and then pray for a love and compassion for the lost souls of men such as we have never yet known.

Beloved, "now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed" (Rom. 13:11). Is your neighbor ready, too? We as pastors must set the example with a real concern for lost souls about us.

The following story is very pertinent. While Dr. Tom Carter was holding evangelistic meetings in a northern town, a young man who had once lived next door to the pastor, committed murder. Upon visiting this young man in prison the evangelist was able to lead him to the Lord. Rising from his knees, the boy turned to the pastor and said: "Just think, I lived next door to you for years and you never told me about Christ. If only you had, I might not now be a murderer."

But we need to remember that this great task of leading others to Christ must be shared by every child of God. The "ye" spoken of in the Great Commission of Matthew 28: 19-20 was given to all of His disciples. Our pastors in this district can and must lead in this matter of witnessing, but the great task of soul-winning can be accomplished in the main part only by the complete cooperation of the lay members.

The following story should remind us of our general indifference toward those right next to us. As a Christian man approached his church he noticed a well-dressed stranger watching with interest the group which was gathering for prayer meeting. He greeted the stranger with a friendly smile and invited him to join them. The stranger accepted the invitation and remarked: "Three days after I moved here the groceryman, milkman, and salesman came to call, but you are the first one to be interested in my soul. I have lived here seven years."

Finally, Brethren, let us remember that our faith and our hope are rendered virtually meaningless unless we experience and manifest daily "the love of God [which] is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost." May it be the longing of our hearts to know the fruit of the Spirit which stems from love. Cold hearts produce nothing. Loving hearts produce fruit which is everlasting. "But now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love" (ASV).

mark of carnality. My, what a strange concept Paul had of carnality! Why, anyone knows that a carnal Christian is like that Mrs. Smith who wears excessive makeup or that Mr. Jones who watches television on Wednesday night! How unusual for Paul to mention such an innocent thing as faction-making and completely miss the big sins! Yet this particular sin, which is often so prevalent among us as to be taken almost for granted, is one of the most heinous sins listed in God's Word! In Proverbs 6:16-19 there is a list of six things which God is said to hate, and among the six we find the sin of sowing discord among the brethren. Oh, we would not think of going to a dance, but do we with well-chosen words seek to set brother against brother? Do we foster and cultivate cliques within the local assembly? Surely, then, in the clear light of God's Word we are carnal and we do walk as men!

I am positive that if Christians really began to understand the scope of carnality, there would be less name-calling and less labeling. There would be more individual heart-searching, more time alone in the prayer closet, and a greater caution toward inward as well as outward conduct. We should take care first to remove the beam from our own eye and then proceed prayerfully and tactfully to assist our brother in removing the mote from his eye (Luke 6:41-42).

Look at the Financial Report

Before you lay down your copy of the Herald, turn to page 490 and examine the report of gifts received by the school during the month of June. The total amount received from all sources amounted to $8,033.39. Of this, $7,935.39 were gifts to the General Fund, and $98 came in as designated gifts. The total gifts were somewhat more than the amount received in June a year ago. Even though $2,330 came in as maintenance gifts from the Winona Lake church and from the Foreign Missionary Society and Brethren Home Missions Council, the offering was still a good one for a summer month. Examine the list of churches and see if yours is represented. Churches that have money for the school in their treasury will help us greatly if they will send in such offering, large or small, immediately. We do thank God again and again for those who have stood by so faithfully.

Only 4 Percent of Ministerial Students Accept Inspiration

A volume entitled, "A Guide to Religions of America," has recently been published in an effort to give people a better understanding of each other's religious ideas and backgrounds. The book is the result of a survey in which clergymen and church researchers of many denominations participated, and it provides detailed data about the country's churches and what they are doing. From their investigation it is declared that among the clergymen of America, 38 percent believe the Bible is "wholly free from legend or myth," while among ministerial students, only 4 percent hold this belief.

Even though we may have some ground for assuming that this survey was largely confined to modernistic churches and schools, the result is still appalling, for it shows how deeply into the apostasy the churches of America in general have drifted. When a man ceases to believe that "all scripture is given by inspiration of God" (II Tim. 3:16), he has taken the first step downward toward outright infidelity, and there is no logical place for him to stop until he reaches the awful pit of atheism.

But where does such unbelief arise among 96 percent of the ministerial students if they come from churches in which 38 percent of the pastors still believe the Bible is true? The answer is clear. They are led, first of all, in the public schools to believe the Bible contains much in the way of legend and myth. Then this impression is confirmed in the modernistic seminaries which they attend, where all too often the Bible is held up to ridicule by the teachers who should rather be teaching men to "contend earnestly for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3, ASV).

Such a tragedy of unbelief offers the Brethren Church a very good and sufficient reason for maintaining just such a school as Grace Theological Seminary. If our denomination is to remain true to the faith, we must guarantee that the young men who go through its ministerial training institution will be taught to believe something. That something can be nothing less than the absolute belief, with good and sufficient reasons for that belief, that the Bible is nothing less than the inspired Word of God, "wholly free from legend and myth." We cannot do less!

Can't Name the First Four Books of the New Testament!

A shocking revelation of the public's ignorance of the Bible was made recently when, in a nationwide Gallup Poll, people were asked to name the first four books of the New Testament. Only one person out of three could name all four, and over half were unable to name any of them. Of course, there are two reasons for such tragic ignorance: most people are no longer reading the Bible, and many preachers are no longer preaching it. As a result, even though they may attend church, people are doubly starved. They get no food at home and they receive none at the house of God. Ministers today not only need to know the Word themselves, but they need to realize that it is their solemn responsibility to declare to their people "all the counsel of God" (Acts 20:27). They must be "apt to teach" (I Tim. 3:2), and they must do it so clearly that no man, woman, boy, or girl sitting under their ministry will leave the house of God ignorant of the Bible and its message. What is true of the minister is true also of the teacher in the Sunday school and the parent in the home. God forbid that anyone for whom you and I are responsible will ever be so sadly ignorant because we failed!

Increased Enrollment Seen

As the material for this magazine goes to the printer (July 15), it is evident that when the school convenes in September, the Grace Seminary and College student body will be larger than it was last year. Many young people do not send in their applications until August. But already the seminary has received 45 new applications and the college has received 35. Others have been making inquiry at the school and from representatives in the field. Let us pray that the Lord will direct every one of these young people, and that they may be fully yielded to His will. Not one can afford to make a mistake!

New Building for Our Campus

By W. A. OGDEN, D. D.

President of the Board of Trustees

The history of Grace Seminary and Grace College is replete with incidents in which the Lord has thrust us forward, almost beyond our faith to follow, or our ability to see the way. And now it is happening again. It is now 18 years since we launched the seminary with two professors, a dozen prospective students, no money, and the grace of God. Today God has given us more than 250 students and a campus, including 35 acres of land and a magnificent building, worth one-half million dollars.

In 1947, at the annual meeting of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, plans were approved for the establishment of a college division of our growing school. This operated first as a two-year preparatory course for seminary work. Now it offers a full four-year college course, leading to the A. B. degree. The college has developed, partly as a natural growth in a denominational school which is the only institution in the field of higher education, and partly from the constant demand made upon the board of trustees by our pastors and their young people all across the United States. In every move of expansion the board has responded to what has been felt to be the desire of the expressed will of the church. It is worthy of note that our alumni association in its last meeting passed a resolution asking for the new building which is the subject of this article.

Your board of trustees is glad to announce the decision to erect the second building on our campus. This will be a multipurpose building, containing an auditorium-gymnasium with a side annex with provision for 13 or 14 classrooms, especially for college use. In this part of the building we will house our growing music department with studios for both vocal and instrumental instruction. Laboratories, as well as classrooms for all branches of instruction, will eventually be included. The gymnasum will care for the physical education program of the school, and will provide an auditorium with excellent acoustical properties, seating more than 2,000 persons.

The board of trustees met at Winona Lake in a specially called meeting on May 18 and 19. These two days were spent in prayerfully and carefully considering the need for this building, and the advisability of building it at this time. We visited two high schools in the area where comparable buildings have recently been erected. We were highly pleased with the utility of these buildings, and the simple manner in which their basic plans might be adapted to our own needs. At the end of two days of work, the 13 men attending the meeting voted unanimously to recommend to the entire board, and the church, that we proceed at the earliest possible moment to erect as much of this proposed building as can be built for approximately $200,000. I have never seen better harmony on any board that was faced with such major problems, than that which prevailed at the moment of this action. We all felt that surely this is of God. Since our meeting our entire board of 28 members has been contacted by mail, and has approved, by a very large vote, this action taken on this occasion. We believe this further confirms God's approval upon this project. (Note: Since there was not a majority of board members in attendance, the action taken did not become official until approved by a majority vote of all members.)

We should say, to keep the picture clear, that it is possible to build this building in units. We can erect the auditorium-gymnasium with the annexed classrooms in either one, two, or three stories. We believe that to keep within the limits of our recommended figures we will have to build it at this time as a one-story unit.

The Brethren Church is growing. Our young people are going to college. Many of them have been enrolling in other Christian colleges because we had nothing to offer them. We must provide a Christian college, and at the same time one that is definitely Brethren in emphasis, for the training of our future ministers, missionaries, Christian day-school teachers, Sunday-school and church workers, and laymen. To do this we must have equipment with which to work. We are not planning a second-rate school that will offer a limited opportunity to those young people who attend out of a sense of denominational loyalty, but one that will enable our very fine young people to have their credits accepted in the professions for which they have studied, without embarrassment or loss.

In this program your trustees feel they are keeping faith with the trust imposed in them by the Brethren Church, and with the demands of the times for an education that will enable the leaders in our church of tomorrow to stand "for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints." We are justly proud of the loyalty of our faculty members to our school. These are men and women of ability who are in demand in other institutions. They stay with us because they believe in the purpose for which the school exists, and they believe that we are going to continue to provide them with the implements for the fulfilling of these purposes. This new building is the tool immediately needed.

THE NATIONS ARE BUT MEN

By Dr. Herman A. Hoyt, Dean

"The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made: in the net which they hid is their own foot taken. . . . Put them in fear, O Lord: that the nations may know themselves to be but men" (Ps. 9:15, 20). The truth of this portion of the Word of God the writer witnessed with his own eyes for the past millenniums and for the present situation. He came away from scenes beyond the sea more convinced than ever that "the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God" (Ps. 9:17). And what is true in the experience of other nations can well be the experience of our own beloved country if it follows in the footsteps of others.

At the very outset of the journey the writer was impressed with the fact that little progress has taken place in the last 3,000 years. This is evident upon every hand. The buildings, the people, the fields, the methods have not changed in all these years. For the most part, people are living in the same sort of homes as centuries ago: in mud huts, in caves in the hillsides, in the rudest and the crudest of structures. They prepare and plant their fields as in Bible times, stirring the ground with wooden plows drawn by oxen, camels, burros, or often a combination of these. They glean the fields by use of the hand sickle and several people binding the grain in sheaves. Water is carried in earthen jars on the heads of women from some common spring or well. The people dress the same way, eat the same foods prepared in the same way, and move about the same way.

Another feature of these civilizations that makes its impression upon one almost immediately is the lack of cleanliness. No special effort is made to protect the populace from filth and disease. The cities give little evidence of thorough care in sanitation. This is especially true of the smaller towns and villages. Foods are not sterilized or protected from germs and insects. The people themselves are ragged and dirty. Flies swarm by the thousands, and seem almost trained to fly from lip to lip and eye to eye. The water is dangerous, and unless it is boiled it is almost sure to be inhabited with microscopic enemies to human health. Where all these things abound, the odors that accompany filth and putrefaction also rise up to greet one. No one can adequately describe in words all that arouses the senses in these eastern lands.

The social conditions soon begin to impress themselves upon one's consciousness. Classes and castes among the people still exist. It is true that some progress has been made along this line, but for the most part very little. One soon sees that animals are truly beasts of burden. Surely the burro carries his share of the burden. And next to the burro is the woman. Women retire to the background almost everywhere. For the most part they are veiled. The women carry all the water. Many glean in the fields, or labor under other burdens almost inconceivable. A man child is welcomed, but not so the birth of a girl. And where any effort is made to provide for the diseases of the land, it is the health of the man and not the woman that is most valued. Add to all this the fact that the people generally do not know the freedoms enjoyed in this country and the picture of servitude and bondage is one no resident of this country would long enjoy.

It must be expected that these peoples suffer from great ignorance. No such thing as universal education is provided for the children of the land. As a result, they grow up in all the darkness and superstition of the parents. While some efforts are being made in some of the lands to provide schooling for as many as possible, this in no way reaches the majority of the population. Among peoples of the Bedouin type, who move from week to week and from season to season, absolutely nothing is done. As a result of this continued lack of training among so many, no progress is made, almost the same status physically, socially, and politically prevails, and the poverty and oppression of the masses continue.

Could one who has lived his lifetime in a country where the Gospel is heard upon every hand and its power is felt in every realm of society fail to detect its absence in these eastern lands? Nothing but a degenerate Christianity, a dead Mohammedanism, and rank paganism prevails everywhere. Only rarely does one find a Christian community or a Christian congregation. The Christianity, or that which goes under the name, is a dead formalism which spends its energies on rites and ceremonies but knows nothing of the living Christ. Mohammedanism prevails. Its fatalism has settled down upon the peoples like a deadly pall, and there is no desire to know more or do better. Since their god, Allah, "has so decreed the present status, it would be futile and wicked to change things." Paganism gathers up what little is left and is not too different from the others.

Basically the reason for little progress, little cleanliness, little freedom, little knowedge lies in the fact that there is little Gospel. These nations have turned away from God and have rejected His properly constituted representative, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world. They are sunk down in the pit that they made. It is only too evident that they are just men. But it will be necessary to prove to them that they are but men. Nothing will ever change this situation except the coming of the Lord himself.

Seminary Library Receives Gift of Early Brethren Journals

By Ben Hamilton, Research Librarian

Rev. Hugh Walter Nowag, of Johnstown, Pa., grandson of Elder Henry R. Holsinger, presented Grace Seminary, this last May, with volumes of 19-century Brethren magazines. The volumes were the possessions of Mrs. Annie Holsinger Nowag, daughter of Elder Holsinger and mother of Mr. Nowag.

The Monthly Gospel-Visiter

Volumes 5 (1855) and 6 (1856) of this publication are part of the gift. The spelling given above is that found on the covers of the various monthly issues of the paper.

As late as the January 1855 issue, The Gospel-Visiter appeared half in English and the rest in German. With the February 1855 issue the magazine, edited by Henry Kurtz, was all English. Later on, a special German edition appeared simultaneously with the English.

Originally this journel was published at Poland, Ohio, which is close to the Pennsylvania state line on today's U. S. highway 224. The Gospel-Visiter is a rich source of Brethren thinking a century ago. This is expressed by doctrinal articles and comments on contemporary events and thoughts of pre-Civil War days.

The Christian Family Companion

The other portion of Mr. Nowag's gift comprises six volumes of the above journal, all bound. These comprise volumes 3 (1867) through 8 (1872). Through the October 17, 1871, number, The Christian Family Companion was published at Tyrone, Pa. This town is about 16 miles north of Altoona on today's U. S. highway 220. In October 1871 The Christian Family Companion moved to Dale, Pa., in the Johnstown area, and from October 31, 1871, the paper continued to be published there. Elder Henry R. Holsinger was the editor of the paper. Each cover of this magazine bore the legend, "An Advocate of Primitive Christianity, and Pure Undefiled Religion." Beneath that were Christ's words, "Whosoever loveth me keepeth my commandments."

The Christian Family Companion became a controversial magazine in Brethren circles prior to the formation of the Brethren Church in 1882, under the leadership of Elder Holsinger. One Church of the Brethren book charged the editor of The Christian Family Companion with being very abusive in many of his writings. Having read several issues of the magazine, including portions that were supposed to be distasteful, I find that while Elder Holsinger may have been vigorous in his methods of expression, he was not abusive and certainly not uncharitable—especially in the light of the language used by the Standing Committee, as reported in their meetings.

Historical Résumé of The Family Companion

In Holsinger's History of the Tunkers and the Brethren Church, Elder Holsinger points out that he joined the staff of The Gospel-Visiter for a year, before The Christian Family Companion appeared. In 1863 Elder Holsinger "purchased a newspaper office at Tyrone, Pa., and established the Tyrone Herald, in the interests of the new Republican Party." In 1864 Elder Holsinger received the approval of the middle Pennsylvania district for publishing The Family Companion. That is why all issues of the early years bore these words on the cover:

BRETHREN PUBLICATIONS NEEDED FOR GRACE SEMINARY LIBRARY

The Monthly Gospel-Visiter, Vols. 1-4 (1851-1854), Vol. 7 (1857) and all succeeding volumes up to 1874.
The Christian Family Companion, Vols. 1-2 (1865-1866), 9 (1873).
The Christian Family Companion and Gospel Visitor, all volumes after 1874.
The Progressive Christian, all volumes.
The Brethren Evangelist, all volumes from 1883 through Vol. 50 (1928).
The Brethren Herald, Vol. 1 (1939).
All other Brethren papers, issues of 1870-1883.

"Published by the Editor, by Permission of the Church of the Brethren."

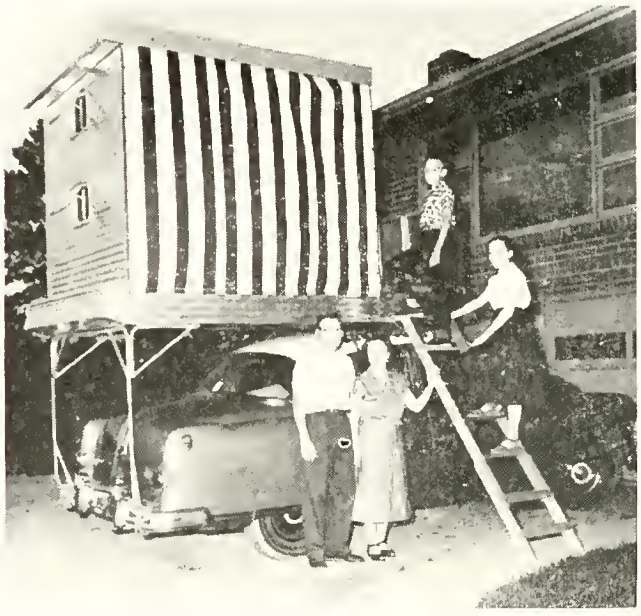
In 1869 Elder Holsinger attempted to have a reporter take down proceedings of the annual meeting at Virginia. This aroused protest on the part of officials of the old Church of the Brethren. As a result, Elder Holsinger "for the faults charged . . . was called up at next conference, which convened at Waterloo, Iowa, and the matter was satisfactorily arranged." This entire matter is recorded in various 1870 issues of The Family Companion.

In 1873 Elder Holsinger voluntarily turned the magazine over to Elder Quinter. From that point on the history of Brethren journalism is recorded, in part, in Elder Holsinger's book on Brethren church history.

The Family Companion contained many interesting advertisements on the last page or two of each issue. These included patent-medicine advertisements, as well as those of various railroads and many other like items. The advertisements included also lists of Christian books and hymbooks for sale.

This interesting gift of Brother Nowag is genuinely appreciated by the seminary library. The magazines will make an interesting nucleus for a future, expanding library of Brethren journalism.

Faculty on Wheels



Two seminary families are traveling westward with modern equipment for camping along the way as the time for our national conference in Portland approaches. Early in June Dr. and Mrs. McClain left with their trailer for a leisurely trip westward, stopping along the way to visit relatives and various points of interest. They expect to spend some time particularly in and around Sunnyside, Wash., where the McClain family lived many years ago.

Dr. and Mrs. James L. Boyer, together with their two younger children, Janet and Donnie, left on July 11. Dr. Boyer spoke at the district conference in Portis, Kans., July 12-14. He will also visit several churches along the way as the family travels to California and then northward to Portland. The camping equipment used by the Boyer family is unique. The car-top penthouse contains sleeping accommodations for four people. During the day it folds into a neat waterproof box on top of the car. The same kind of equipment is also available in trailer form.

Other members of the seminary family are traveling to Portland by various means. These will include Dr. Hoyt, Dr. and Mrs. H. A. Kent and their son, Wendell; Dr. Paul Bauman, Prof. John Whitcomb, and the school secretary, Miss Dorothy Magnuson.

Martin Luther Believed in a Personal Devil!

By Dr. Homer A. Kent, Registrar

One thing sure, Martin Luther believed in a personal Devil! To him this archenemy of the Christian faith was no mere figment of the imagination. He was a person with whom he had continual conflicts.

Never were his conflicts with the Evil One more terrific than when he was working on the Holy Scriptures. While in the castle at Wartburg, translating the Scriptures into German, he had such conflicts with the Devil that he appears to have actually seen him. On one occasion especially, it is said, as Luther was so engaged in his translation of the New Testament, he fancied he beheld Satan, filled with horror at his work, tormenting

Work Can Be a Pleasure

By Norman Rohrer

All work and no play may scare you, but for Elener Norris, trim little Grace College freshman par excellence, her tireless precollege days have accumulated some enviable honors.

Born of enthusiastic 4-H parents (her father, Leroy Norris, is a U. S. Army major) in Mentone, Ind., Elener participated in 12 different projects during her eight years with the farm organization, completed a total of 49 project-years by preparing 2,919 dishes and 423 meals in food preparation, 303 bakings, 20 clothing garments, 208 jars of canned food, 24 articles in crafts, 10 articles in home improvement, 18 electric items, and 50 plantings in home grounds beautification. She also wrote 19 scripts and made 36 appearances for the radio project, raised 10 pigs, took four health exams, and supervised 46 4-H members as a junior leader.

As county speech contest winner, Elener received a blue ribbon for her oration in a state contest. She has also won the county dress review, the county and district home improvement judging contest, and placed in the blue ribbon group in the state fair home improvement judging contest.

Elener has also been a state fair exhibitor in a variety of projects. She took over the leadership of the Mentone 4-H'ers club for two years and was name state 4-H leadership winner last year.

She's still in the club this year, even with college studies, taking a money management project designed especially for college and/or working girls.

"My 4-H work has been a lot of work," says Elener, "but the things I've learned and the good times I've had in 4-H have made it all worthwhile."

Added to the club finesse, Elener excelled in Latin, and in 1952 qualified for the state final contest. She was second in a regional English contest of State Achievement Tests and participated in the state finals of 1953-54. She was 1954 delegate from Mentone High to attend a Model U. N. at Manchester College. She "represented the United States."

From among her teen-age colleagues, the D. A. R. chose her as "Good Citizenship Girl" of 1954.

Elener's work in her home church she considers her most important activity. One year she forfeited a trip to the 4-H Roundup at Purdue University to be superintendent of the junior department of DVBS. She sings in the choir regularly, and teaches fifth-graders their Sunday-school lessons.

Elener's straight-A accomplishments through high school and college prove the feature of her life—preparation for service as an English teacher in the name of Christ.

While in Washington the group participated in an intensive program of education and citizenship training and visited many points of interest. They met President Eisenhower and were entertained at the White House.

All four of these young people from Indiana are attending college somewhere in the state. Grace College is highly honored in having one of the group as a member of its student body.

him, and prowling around him like a lion about to spring upon his prey. Luther, alarmed and incensed, snatched up his inkstand and flung it at the head of his enemy. The figure disappeared and the missile was dashed in pieces against the wall. The visitor to the castle of Wartburg is still carefully shown the spots made by Luther's inkstand.

Quite likely Luther's imagination got the best of him at times, but nevertheless it is a satisfaction to note the reformer's childlike faith in what the Bible has to say about the existence of Satan. If more folks were like him in this respect there would be fewer of them caught off guard as he prowls about "as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour."

In his "Table-Talk" Luther says of the Devil: "He has more boxes and pots full of poisons, wherewith he destroys men, than all apothecaries in the world have of healing medicines. If one poison will not despatch, another will. In a word, the power of the Devil is greater than we can imagine. 'Tis only God's finger can resist him." Wise is the believer who recognizes the truths herein emphasized and loses no time in putting on "the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

A VETERINARIAN OR THE MINISTRY?

By DAVID LEAPLINE

Dunbar, Pa.

It is said that the Lord works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. I found this to be precisely the case as the Lord led in many trying and deciding circumstances during the last four or five years.

I was saved at the age of 13. Throughout high school there was a struggle going on in my mind concerning after-graduation activities. I had always wanted to be a veterinarian. However, I felt the need for definite Christian education, and at times I felt that the Lord wanted me in full-time Christian work. Which would it be—a pre-veterinarian school or Christian college?

As my senior year drew to a close the conflict between the two possible decisions suddenly disappeared. Almost overnight I had an audition for a position in the First Air Force Band, had enlisted, and had been accepted. I am sure now that God's will was performed in this and other like incidents that followed, even though it only added to my bewilderment at the time.

Thirty-eight months and many challenging experiences later, I received my discharge. I took advantage of an early discharge provision, getting out suddenly on the 28th of August, 1953. Since this was near enrollment time in the colleges, and since no time was to be wasted, I neglected to seek the Lord's will in the matter of selecting a college.

After I had made complete preparations for entering Penn State's pre-veterinarian course, God closed that door by making it impossible for me to find any type of housing for my family. This caused me to stop and think and to realize that God must have other plans for me. After prayerful consideration of several Christian colleges, along with the helpful advice of my pastor, I felt a definite leading to come to Grace College. I was encouraged even more in hearing Rev. Clyde Landrum tell firsthand of this school.

Having attended one year at Grace, I am more fully convinced that God has had a definite plan and purpose in my life.

ARTICLE ON AUGUSTINE BY BEN HAMILTON IN STAMP JOURNAL RECEIVED FAVORABLY

By Ava Schnittjer

Who would have thought a postage stamp had possibilities as a subject for a Christian article?

The April issue of Scotts Monthly Journal, a magazine for stamp collectors, carries an article entitled, "Augustine, Sinner Into Saint," by Ben Hamilton, the seminary research librarian.

Following a biographical sketch of Augustine, who has been recently honored on two Vatican stamps, Mr. Hamilton presents this fourth-century Christian's theological view of justification by faith.

Mr. Hamilton points out the fact that Augustine's views have influenced the basic doctrines of the Reformed and the Presbyterian branches of Protestantism, and that, ironically enough, the Council of Trent, called in the 16th century to systematize Catholic dogma, turned against Augustine's justification by faith teaching.

Mr. Hamilton's article is scholarly, and he handles an explosive subject with delicacy and extreme good taste. Mr. Hamilton is a philatelist of many years who has been looking for a way to witness through this hobby. A letter from the editor's secretary to Mr. Hamilton reveals the providential guidance in the publication of this article. She writes: "I just want to tell you how much I enjoyed your 'Augustine' piece and how much I learned from it Your letter and article came first to me—quite unusual—and I read it. After Mr. H. read it and was quite ready to decline it, I was able to persuade him, because I knew immediately what it was all about. I praise the Lord for having inspired you to write this piece and for having used me, too. Every little bit of truth helps."

SEMINARY WOMEN'S FELLOWSHIP

Composed largely of the wives of students, the Seminary Women's Fellowship meets regularly in the social lounge of the school. Here the wives of men who are in preparation for the ministry have an opportunity to get away from home problems for fellowship with others who have common problems and interests. Here they have an opportunity to join with the women students of the school and wives of faculty members for instruction and discussion of the new problems they will face in Christian service with their husbands. Every possible aspect of their own particular work is touched upon. This is all a part of Grace Seminary's program of giving young men and women the most thorough and practical training possible.

God Led Me to Grace College

By WILLA LEIDY

Curryville, Pa.

Being raised in a Christian home, I was taught the way of salvation in my childhood. It was the prayers of my God-fearing parents that saved me from the worldly crowd. I am thankful I don't have the fangs of sin marked upon me, as so often other young people do who experience the lusts of the world before coming to a saving knowledge of God. But how thankful we all can be that God heals those scars and welcomes us into His divine presence.

Ever since my freshman year in high school, I anticipated going to college. I had no definite plan as to where I wanted to spend those years. It wasn't until last spring that I felt certain that the Lord was leading me to Grace College. Do I like it here? I'll let you answer that.

After the first day I felt like a chick just breaking the shell of an egg and bewilderedly taking the first step toward the unforetold future. I realized then that college wasn't going to be easy, but God's promises of help seemed more dear than ever.

The other students are grand. I never expected to feel so at home in such a short time. It took only a few days until I knew all the students. It's also wonderful to sit under the God-centered teachings of Christian instructors. I found there is never a dull moment around here. Some people think you can't have fun at a Christian school, but I found that some of my greatest enjoyments have occurred since I've been here.

I'll never regret God's leading me here to Grace College, and I hope that I can spend many more happy hours here.

Dr. Bauman on TV Program

The television program entitled "Frontiers of Faith," appears from time to time on the NBC-TV network from coast to coast, and is prepared under the direction of the American Council of Christian Churches. Recently an invitation came to Dr. Paul Bauman to appear as speaker on this program, and he traveled to the NBC studios in New York to kinescope it on June 30. Dr. Bauman will speak on the subject, "They Wrote History in Advance!" The following table gives the dates and identification of stations throughout the country which will carry the program.

Seminary Training Evaluated

By J. P. Kliever (ex '45)

A card on a piano in a social room of a school bore this note: "For Students Only." Someone had printed the words: "Once a student, Always a Student," below the note. I have often thought of those words. We never get beyond being a "learner," or if we do, it is a tragedy.

J. P. Kliever

There have been periods when the learning was very concentrated, when we groaned and had some doubts as to the worth of such a heavy schedule. We have learned to appreciate these times of concentrated learning. One of these periods was the time spent at Grace Seminary. After beginning to work on the mission field I began to praise the Lord for this time of concentrated training. We had our own very definite ideas as to what should constitute our missionary service, but we were soon disillusioned!

If we had just been given the results of our teachers' studies, outlines, sermons, and synoptic studies, we would very soon have been out of materials. They taught us how to evaluate, how to do original study, how to analyze problems and situations. In other words, we were not given a loaf of bread and told to go feed the multitudes; we were shown how to find and to mix the ingredients so that we could produce loaves of bread. Then we were not at a loss when the loaf ran out!

The courses in the Bible languages equip the missionary for translation work, a first-line necessity; the courses in missionary methods, history, and principles prepared us to meet many and changing situations on the field.

If I should be asked to evaluate the training received in various schools with a view to stating which one I might have done without, the training in our seminary would be first on the list as a requisite, and last on the list as training to do without. May the Lord continue to prosper and to bless our seminary as men and women continue to receive this most important training.

Kenneth Teague; vice moderator, Charles Turner; secretary, Mrs. Edward Byrne; assistant secretary, Forrest Meyers; treasurer, Frank Poland; statistician, Rev. Russell Ogden; members at large, Rev. Herman Hein and Rev. Ord Gehman. The next conference will be held in Elkhart, Ind.

HONOLULU, T. H. Jacquelyn Dyer was united in holy wedlock May 21 to Lyle Marvin, Jr., son of Lyle Marvin, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, San Bernardino, Calif. The ceremony was performed at Grace Chapel, with Rev. Foster Tresise officiating. The bride is a member of the Long Beach, Calif., First Brethren Church.

NORTHWEST DISTRICT SMM. We want to welcome our eastern neighbors to our beautiful Pacific Northwest and Camp Bethany. Don't forget the dates—August 10-17. Let's all turn out to truly make this year the "biggest and best of all time."

RITTMAN, OHIO. Charles Ashman, Jr., pastor of the First Brethren Church, has announced his resignation effective Sept. 25 and has accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Brethren Church of Phoenix, Ariz. He will assume his new duties about October 23.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS. The temporary address of Robert Griffith, pastor of the Grandview Brethren Church, is: c/o Mrs. Ruth Wear, Box 147, Prosser, Wash. The new secretary of the First Brethren Church, Phoenix, Ariz., is Mrs. Lloyd L. West, 2941 W. Palo Verde. The address of Rev. and Mrs. Sibley Edmiston is now Box 384, Laredo, Tex. The address of David Morsey has been changed to 2435 Orange Ave., La Crescenta, Calif.

CANTON, OHIO. The next Northern Ohio District youth meeting will be an overnight rally Sept. 23-24 at the First Brethren Church, John Dilling pastor.

FREMONT, OHIO. The average Sunday-school attendance for the second quarter was 298. In the same quarter for 1954 the attendance was 42.6 percent less than 1955.

WINONA LAKE, IND. During the months of June, July, and August News Briefs are being written by Mrs. Goldie Buikema, editorial secretary of the Herald.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (EPS). Dr. Billy Graham, evangelist, will be invited to Moscow, according to Rev. J. L. Zhidkov, president of the Evangelical Christian Baptist Council of the Soviet Union.

CALLING ALL YOUNG MEN

There has been a "blind spot" in our youth program—the young men have been forgotten. The Brethren Boys Club reaches the younger fellows, but those in high school and above have had no definite program. At Camp Bethany we hope to initiate some definite plans for a challenging young men's movement in the Brethren Church. These plans will be discussed at Portland Aug. 10-17, and Winona Lake Aug. 22-29. Send in your registration now for National Camp Bethany. Help to formulate a movement to challenge our Brethren young men.

UNION ON WHAT LEVEL?

THIRD IN A SERIES—"FOR BETTER, NOT FOR WORSE"—BY KENNETH ASHMAN, WOOSTER, OHIO

Introduction.

Marriage puts two people together in relationships that are new and entirely different from anything known to either before. In this relationship the chances of continuing happiness are very slim unless both parties are willing to work for it together—yes; willing to work at it as the biggest undertaking of their lives.

The union of marriage is on three levels: (1) physical, (2) intellectual, and (3) spiritual. True marital happiness results from a well-balanced union on all three levels. If the attraction is physical alone, then the result is unholy lust. If the attraction is intellectual alone, the union is but one of interest and convenience. On the other hand, if the union is spiritual alone, there will follow frustration and possible misunderstandings. A proper attitude and practice on all levels is desired for a happy marriage.

Note at this point the wisdom of Paul as expressed in I Corinthians 7. In verse 2 he points out that marriage is the general good rule for all, one man for one woman being the divine plan. In verse 8 he allows that some would be better unmarried—perhaps for the Gospel's sake. In verse 9, however, he exhorts that marriage is desirable to avoid immorality. And in verses 3, 4, and 5 he declares that the husband and wife should be "benevolent" each to the other. This benevolence surely is expressive of the three marital levels mentioned; namely, physical, intellectual, and spiritual.

We disagree with the Roman Catholic teaching of celibacy—that all the servants of the Lord should remain unmarried. While this doctrine is not in contradiction to the Scriptures, it certainly is not demanded in the Word. In Genesis 2:18 we read: "It is not good that the man should be alone." In I Timothy 4:1 and 3 we are warned: ". . . some shall depart from the faith . . . forbidding to marry." In I Timothy 3:2 recognition is given to the marital status of the bishop—"a bishop . . . the husband of one wife."

I. UNION ON THE PHYSICAL LEVEL.

It is to be feared that American marriages are too much on the physical level only. The motion pictures of our day are primarily based upon the bodily attraction of the sexes, one to the other. They present love, marriage, and faithfulness in the light of the flesh. That our people are attracted by this portrayal of evil is evidenced by the fact that the weekly attendance at these motion pictures of evil approximates the entire population of the nation.

But while there is much evil on this score; yet the Bible declares—

The physical union is honorable. "Marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled" (Heb. 13:4). It is the scheme of the Devil to cause people to think of the physical union in marriage as a vulgar thing, to be spoken of in terms of filth and suggestiveness. Thus our newsstands are flooded with all kinds of sex magazines, articles of unwise counsel, and pictures of nudity and lustful appeal. We need to remember the instruction of the aged John: "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world." God created these bodies with strong emotions. To use these emotions well pleasing to God requires—

The right knowledge of the facts of life, the functions of the body, and the proper exercise of those functions. This knowledge should be imparted to our youth in the home and the church. This knowledge should be imparted by those who know, not by those who speculate and imagine. As a pastor we have been appalled at the lack of information possessed by young people contemplating marriage. Due to disinterest, false modesty, or ignorance, their parents have allowed them to come to a very important crossroad of life without proper knowledge. This ought not to be.

The right attitude concerning the body. Youth, as a result of proper home training and example, should look upon the body, and its functions, as a holy thing from God. False modesty, fear, and "defrauding" (I Cor. 7:5) have been the source of much marital unhappiness. The husband and the wife must know that in giving themselves to each other they are not sinning against each other or against the Lord.

The physical union is a responsibility. Read Proverbs 5:18-23. Solomon sets forth the responsibility of the marital relationship in the most beautiful of language. He calls forth the best in man and woman to assure happiness. He indicates that husbands and wives should be thoroughly satisfied in and with each other. He asks the question: "Why wilt thou, my son, be ravished with a strange woman, and embrace the bosom of a stranger?" Graphically he thus points out that married ones are responsible to each other and have no privileges otherwise. Any infraction of this law of purity will be sorely punished of the Lord.

When you find wives flirtatious with others, husbands with a longing look and a roving eye, then you know that one, or both, of these factors is true: (1) the marriage relationship is an unhappy one, not bringing satisfaction, or (2) the marriage relationship is of unredeemed people, their minds not being pure and holy.

The physical union is purposeful. At the very outset of recorded truth it is declared: "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth" (Gen. 1:28). To obey this exhortation is the pledge of multiplied blessings in the home. The bringing of children into the world is the high and holy privilege of married ones. Parenthood is an elevated position, one that should be desired by all. Parenthood is a stabilizing factor in the home, and a satisfying one indeed. There are understandable conditions in life that make this "fruitfulness" impossible or unwise. However, this is not God's norm for the union of husband and wife. In cases of involuntary childlessness, medical advice and the mind of the Lord should be sought. In cases of voluntary childlessness, the forgiveness of God should be prayed for.

The physical union is rewarding. "Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them" (Ps. 127:3-5). Edgar Guest once wrote: "It takes a heap of living to make a house a home." We add that the "heap of living" is most rewarding when it involves the rearing of our own offspring.

Children give purpose to the home. Too frequently the purpose of the home is lost to those without families. Their interests are centered elsewhere with resultant differences and loss of fellowship. It is commonly known that the highest incident of broken homes comes where there are no children born into the home.

Children provide an outworking of the parents' personalities. This is a good thing. To have invested oneself in a child, and then to strive to develop that investment gives husband and wife a common field of labor.

Children drive parents to the Lord. That attitude of self-sufficiency fades away when parents begin to cope with the problems of rearing a family "in the fear and admonition of the Lord." It is then that the family altar takes on new significance, and the Lord is more frequently called into counsel.

Children bring a unique joy into life, a joy that is nowhere else obtainable. True, this exercise of the privilege of physical union and the resulting bearing of children has its problems and heartaches. But, like the Lord, "who for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross," even so do fathers and mothers, for the great joy involved, gladly assume the responsibility devolving upon them. It is rewarding indeed.

II. UNION ON THE INTELLECTUAL LEVEL.

Those who counsel married people often hear expressions such as, "We live in different worlds," "We have nothing in common," and "His friends and my friends are not the same." We are prompted to ask with Amos (3:3): "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" And the answer obviously is "No!" As there must be a compatibility in things physical, so there must be a compatibility in things mental. For the union of husband and wife to be "for better and not for worse," there must be—

Union in social life. The friends and pleasures of husband and wife must be the same, generally speaking. Too frequently this is the scene: A baby sitter comes to care for the little ones. The wife goes off to her party and the husband off to his sport. And as these scenes multiply, the happiness of the home slowly fades away. If the social life of the family is centered in the home and the church, this problem is immediately solved.

Union in cultural life. "Through wisdom is an house builded, and by understanding it is established" (Prov. 24:3). Husbands and wives should be mutually beneficial to each other in their pursuits. Personally, I am a better preacher and pastor than I otherwise would have been had I been deprived of the helpfulness of my fine wife. In like manner I have endeavored to assist her in being a better homemaker and helpmeet unto my family. This is as it should be for husbands and wives. The promotions in the home should be a unifying factor. Common goals and ambitions, for each other and the children, are desired. Such community of ambitions will bring a united front against any kind of an enemy, within or without the home.

Union on the family level. There needs to be family solidarity as to (1) procedures—how, when, and by whom things shall be done and enjoyed; as to (2) discipline—the dealing with such matters should be one in which all agree and in which there is a consistency that fosters correction and improvement; as to (3) finances—which should include a common earning and common spending of the family purse, all sharing according to need, and all agreeing as to the Lord's portion; and as to (4) goal—such as the building of a home, the sending of a child to college, the support of a missionary, or some other united endeavor of the household.

Union on the intellectual level requires: (1) an analysis of the present situation; (2) an adjustment toward the ideal; and (3) an assumption of the responsibilities to make it so.

III. UNION ON THE SPIRITUAL LEVEL.

God wants each marirage to be a happy one. But if it is to be happy, in the fullest sense of the word, there must be a spiritual foundation. When the honeymoon is over, and the stark realities of rent, fuel, light, and food bills, plus the trials of sickness, disappointments, disagreements, and setbacks face the newlyweds, then there must be more than physical attraction and intellectual agreement to keep the union a happy one. Christ must be in the home if there is to be marital happiness and success.

Husbands and wives should be saved. ". . . thy God my God" (Ruth 1:16), should be the rule for those united in holy wedlock. They should (1) worship the same God; (2) believe in the same Christ; and (3) live by the same Biblical doctrines. When we speak of salvation, we do not mean the works of righteousness on the part of the individual. Salvation is the gift of God (Eph. 2:8-9), is bestowed by the grace of God through Christ Jesus, and comes upon the individual through faith and confession (Rom. 10:9-10). The experience of salvation is called "the new birth," being born anew, from above (John 3). A saved person becomes a "new creature" in Christ Jesus (II Cor. 5:17).

Husbands and wives should belong to the same church. They should be (1) united in prayers; (2) united in service; and (3) united in giving. Sons going with the dads and daughters going with their mothers denies the headship of the husband and the vital influence of the wife. The choice of the family church should be made after careful consideration of several factors. First, is this a Bible-believing and -preaching church? Second, is there an outlet of service for the members of the family? Third, does this church have a worldwide missionary vision? Fourth, will my children be led to Christ and challenged to His service in this church? Fifth, is this church free from extreme doctrines and fanatical restrictions? Sixth, does this church have ample facilities for the spiritual growth of our children, such as an adequate Bible school, college, Bible institute, or seminary? This wise choice of the right church will mean much to family solidarity and happiness.

A word needs to be said in encouragement to those who are united in wedlock to an unsaved mate. Paul speaks of this condition in I Corinthians 7:10-16. Read the passage, please. Here are the main exhortations of the apostle:

Dwell together, not using the occasion of the unbelief of one's mate as a reason for separation.

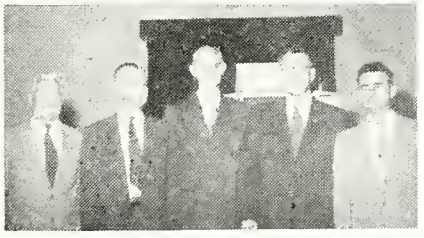
What God Expects of the Brethren Church

Moderator's Address—Southern Ohio District Conference—Clayton, Ohio, May 16-19, 1955—By William A. Steffler

It becomes my happy privilege, by virtue of my office as moderator of the Southern Ohio District, to bring a message to this conference of Brethren churches, assembled in the First Brethren Church, Clayton, Ohio.

It is fitting and proper that we, as followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, acknowledge once again His Lordship. Let us, in faith, humble ourselves before Almighty God and acknowledge that there is no other name in heaven, or in earth, or under the earth which compares with the blessed name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Shall we again claim Him as our Lord and Saviour and the One we seek to serve?



Our beloved church has been the recipient of manifold blessings from the hand of our Heavenly Father since last we met in the capacity of a district conference. He has not only preserved us as a district, but has used us in His service, as the report of our statistician will show.

The perilous days which are upon us demand that the children of God be certain of the constant guidance of the Holy Spirit. The arm of flesh will fail us; we must not trust our own strength. From the beginning of time God has blessed those who have trusted Him for guidance and protection. He still can use the pillar of cloud by day and the fire by night, if it be necessary. Not only is God able to protect and sustain our physical life as we serve Him, but our spiritual life is divinely protected as we trust Him. There is comfort in this because the forces of evil are opposing us on every hand. We have the assurance that He will never leave us or forsake us.

The Brethren Church is a part of the bride of Christ, which today is also the body of Christ (Eph. 1:22-23). We must examine ourselves to see if we are accomplishing the work whereunto God has called us. Have we been filling the place and the position God expects us to fill?

Our business as a district, as separate churches, or as individual members of the church is to be certain that we are working according to the plan of God; the command of Christ has never changed—we are still called upon to be witnesses (see Acts 1:6-11). This is the most difficult task confronting the church. We talk too lightly about witnessing for Christ. We so often act as if it is such an easy thing, such a childish thing to ask grownups to do. Do we realize that this job cost most of the early disciples their lives? This is the task that draws blood. It has dungeons, prisons, lashes, and hatred connected with it. It is not a soft job. Real witnessing is never easy. It was such a difficult job that Christ told His disciples (those who had been close to Him for three years): "Go to Jerusalem and wait there until you are endued with power from on high" (see Acts 1:8). The task of the three Hebrew children was not greater or more dangerous.

We are faced with a world that is falling apart. Thousands are being blinded and misled. Thousands today are discouraged and ready to give up the fight. Many are drifting today. The Spirit of Christ and the spirit of the Antichrist are waging a bitter struggle over the souls of men. We cannot relax now. We should be spending our every effort in witnessing. Christ is not looking for attorneys to represent Him. He wants witnesses. He has a definite plan as to how this work is to be carried on "at Jerusalem" or "at home." Many times the hardest place to witness for Christ is right in our own home, especially if our Christian life has not been right. "At home"—the place where we lost our temper, where we manifested that grouchy, selfish, mean spirit. Christ gave the disciples boldness to do this task and He will give us boldness.

Let us, this new conference year, bend every effort to win our loved ones for Christ.

"In all Judaea." Each of the churches in our district has its own field. No field is easy. We should get back to the early church method of the "seventy" to get after inactive ones and canvass often the neighborhood we are responsible for. Our people should be organized and thoroughly instructed to go out after the last. There are many precious jewels to be won for our Lord.

There is no line drawn in the Scriptures which divides the missionary work of the church. We are to teach "all nations," in Jerusalem, in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.

In whatever channel our Lord's money may be dispersed, we want the people of our district to give generously to their own church and to carry on its work to both home and foreign missions. Our giving must be in a way to unite our various works, not to cause strife. Our church has a great missionary program. We want more Brethren churches in the homeland. Our home missionary program should have the wholehearted support of every church in this district. Our gifts to sending the Gospel abroad must increase. We have not reached the saturation point in our district. We should encourage our people to give to the local work. Our aim should be to take care of our home church so God can bless and use her with a greater missionary program.

The Gospel must be preached. Let us lay aside our own personal feelings in minor matters and give ourselves without reserve to the proclaiming of this glorious Gospel, which is able to make a lost sinner a new creature in Christ Jesus.

To the ministers of our district I would suggest that we think less of impressing congregations with the idea we are a better preacher than the other man and, with a sincerity and truthfulness, preach the Word to reach the lost and please our Heavenly Father. Let us be faithful watchmen, warning of the wrath to come.

The Brethren Church has a ministry untainted with modernism, for which we ought to thank God from the depths of our heart. To my knowledge, I do not know of a Brethren pastor who wavers on the fundamentals of the Bible.

The laity should show a deeper appreciation for the servant of God who labors for and with them. Each congregation of our district should see to it that their shepherd is relieved of all outside worries, so he might enter his study each day thinking of spiritual matters. No pastor can bring a Spirit-filled, helpful message to his congregation while worrying if the merchants will extend credit to him much longer. The church should exhaust all means to keep the servant of God from engaging in outside work. There may be extreme cases when it becomes necessary. No man can serve two masters and do both jobs well and pleasing to God.

Let me tell you of a church (not Brethren, not in Ohio). The pastor of this church held an outside job in addition to his preaching assignment. This church got several hundred dollars in arrears with his salary. At the end of the year the preacher made a proposition with his church. "Pay me $100 in cash and I will give you a receipt in full for all you owe me." With his other position he was able to do this without too much difficulty. Along came a new preacher to this church. He had a family to care for. This man felt called to preach and desired to give full time to his ministry and the building up of his charge. Once again the church got in arrears with the pastor's salary. When he did not come up with a proposition to the congregation, as his predecessor had done, the members sought ways and means to get rid of this "money grabber," as they termed him. Laity, care for your pastor's physical needs so he may better care for your spiritual needs.

We do praise our God for the forward march of our denominational school, Grace College and Seminary. There has been a need for many years for a place where Brethren young people can prepare for their life's service. Believing our school is meeting that need, the churches in this district should go all out in encouraging our young people to attend our own school and seminary. We should pray and give liberally so the new program of additional buildings for our school will be quickly realized.

A sincere effort should be made this year to line up the members of our district with all district and national organizations. The Women's Missionary Council and men's fellowship, especially, should be given every consideration. These organizations are splendid and offer real worthwhile programs. It will have a tendency to draw our district closer together when we band together in these national projects.

We should plan bigger and better programs for our young people. Our Sisterhood of Mary and Martha is an outstanding organization and each girl of our district should be encouraged to belong. Together with a spiritual program for our boys and young men, we should have sport activities. Competition in baseball and basketball would do much to bring our young men together. Perhaps a committee to study the possibilities of this would be in order.

In these last perilous days we should spend more time together in the things of the Lord, encouraging one another in the matters which connect us as children of God.

The distribution of good tracts on what the Brethren Church believes and the message of the Brethren ministry should have a larger place in our ministry. The support of our publication company should be stressed in our district this year.

We praise God for the constructive program now being offered by our National Sunday School Board. We are certainly headed in the right direction. A strong Sunday-school program will help our church to grow. We should encourage our Sunday-school board every way possible.

God expects the Brethren Church to maintain the Scriptural order of discipline. One need only read such passages as Matthew 18:15-17, I Corinthians 5, and the first part of I Corinthians 6 to realize that discipline is the will of God for His church in dealing with the "worldly Christian." Discipline must be carried out in our church if our good name is to be preserved. It must be practiced even if it is an unpleasant task.

We believe a committee should be appointed to study this important matter and a report brought back to next year's conference, so there might be uniformity in the Southern Ohio District in our dealing with wayward ones. There is no reason under the sun that I can see why a Brethren church, in giving a letter of dismissal for conduct unbecoming a Christian, should discover that without making an effort to find out facts, another Brethren church has welcomed that excommunicated one into its membership. The church is always weakened when it lacks the power to maintain its purity. When one is dealt with, the church should stand as a unit in condemning the guilty one and urging them to get right with God.

Might I urge that we once again instruct our people on the importance of keeping clean and unspotted from the world so that we will always be vessels meet for the Master's use. A greater emphasis on the separated life is in order. May we carry on our good name and, if the Lord tarries, hand that name down to our children and grandchildren.

God expects the Brethren Church to be a place of prayer. Many churches are nothing more than houses of amusement. Cantatas and entertainments have superseded the preaching of the Gospel. The smiles and kisses of the world are far more dangerous than its frowns and curses. Let us encourage a larger attendance on the day of prayer, the 15th of each month. Let us make the midweek prayer meeting a "must" in our program. Less than 22 percent attend prayer meeting in our district. Let us try and make the prayer meeting so attractive that more of our people will be encouraged to attend.

God expects the members of the Brethren Church to be reverent. There is sadly needed today the lesson of reverence--reverence for God, for the Bible, for our church, for our body, for our elders. Reverence is sadly missing in many churches. May God help us to guard carefully the reverent spirit.

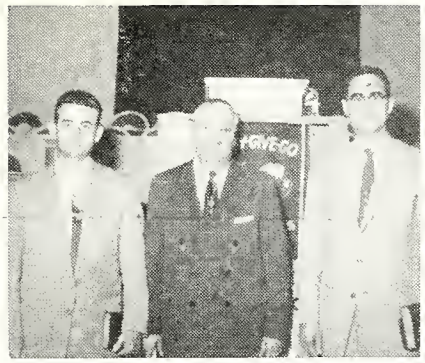
God expects the Brethren Church to be a "teaching church." I would recommend that our pastors have a definite teaching program. People are erring today because of lack of knowledge. We should give forth the great doctrines of the Bible. Ordinances held dear by the Brethren Church as taught in the Bible should be proclaimed often so people will surely know where the Brethren Church stands. There should never be an uncertain sound going forth from any pulpit in our district.



The Brethren Church follows closely the practice of the apostolic church and admits no one into its fellowship until they have made a confession of the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour and have been baptized by trine immersion. Let us never lower the bars in order to increase our membership.

The threefold communion service has always been a blessing. I believe it would be fitting and proper that when we meet as a district conference that we arrange for a communion service. There is no better way to express our love and unity as fellow believers. The expenses for such a service could be taken from the conference treasury.

We need to emphasize more than ever today what the Bible teaches concerning marriage, divorce, and remarriage. Our beloved church holds that the marriage bond is sacred. Divorce is permitted for one Scriptural reason as we find in Matthew 19:9—but no ground for remarriage. Let us not fear in declaring there can be no true marriage after divorce during the life of either party. Such a union God calls "adultery." Our young people need careful instruction concerning marriage. If our people are rightly taught, there would be fewer divorces and there will be more happy marriages.

Let us teach our people "temperance" in all things. Let us discourage, whenever possible, the use of intoxicants and tobacco. Let us be Christians "that need not be ashamed."

In closing, let me briefly, but emphatically, summarize. We, as Brethren, should face the opportunities and perils of this hour with a clear vision, strong faith, warm heart, and a dauntless courage. We should strongly assert our time-honored position, "The Bible, the Whole Bible, and Nothing but the Bible." When many denominations are losing their identity, we should take a definite stand to maintain our denominational distinction. We need to emphasize our distinctive doctrines. A "Denominational Day" could be observed with much profit (perhaps an exchange of pulpits for the morning or evening).

We should strive to keep the "unity of the Spirit" in the bonds of peace. Let us be "fellow labourers," "fellow sufferers," "fellow servants," "fellow heirs," with no factions, no backbitings, no bickering, no self-seeking. Just one big, happy family in the Lord, having but one mission —the salvation of the lost and building up of the church until its completion and the Lord himself shall return to take us unto himself.

The first company of emigrants from the mother church in Germany arrived in America in the fall of 1719, almost 236 years ago. There were but 20 families. Their faith in the living God is shown by an incident that occurred during the voyage. A furious storm arose which threatened the destruction of the ship. The sails were lowered and most of the merchandise thrown overboard, but to no avail. Meanwhile, the Brethren were in their quarters in the hold of the ship, unitedly pleading with their Heavenly Father. The captain of the ship, for some reason or other—perhaps directed by God himself, or perhaps to tell them there was no longer any hope for the ship—went to their quarters and, to his amazement, found them on their knees praying and singing as unconcerned as though the sea was calm and no danger existed. His message of warning was completely forgotten in this atmosphere of faith and hope. He returned to his quarters and encouraged the crew, declaring that Almighty God would not suffer the ship to perish with such pious people on board. With such assurance, all worked together, the storm abated, the sea became calm, and the voyage completed with all safe and sound.

God has given to us, in these perilous days of storm-tossed waters, the same mission. It is for us, by our devotion to God, our faith in Him, our obedience to His will, to carry to a world that faces shipwreck the confidence, courage, and the faith that only comes from having our hearts and minds stayed on Him. This is to be accomplished not merely by a program of evangelization, but by every-day, every-life, every-member evangelism. Let us go forth living the Christlife before a godless and adulterous generation.

A whole Bible for our textbook. A whole Christ for our Saviour and Lord and coming King. A whole world for our responsibility to evangelize. A whole brotherhood for our fellowship. Let us go forth in this new conference year to conquer in His blessed name.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Pauline Pluck, 39, has gone to be with the Lord whom she loved. She had been ill for six weeks prior to her death. She was the wife of David Pluck, pastor of the Barberton Bible Church and a licensed minister from the First Brethren Church, Akron, Ohio, where both held membership. She leaves her husband and two children, Janet Lee and Raymond Leroy.—M. L. Myers.

Emma Linthicum, 78, has departed this life to be with Christ. She was a member of the Grace Brethren Church of Fremont, Ohio. Two years ago she moved to Kansas, where she lived at the time of death. Rev. Gordon Bracker conducted the service. —Gordon Bracker, pastor.

[The date of death was not indicated.—Ed.]

Frederick Hague, 61, a charter member of the Grace Brethren Church has gone to be with the Lord. Mr. Hague was a former member of the Detroit and Toledo professional soccer teams, and was actively interested in athletics. Although confined to a wheelchair for many years, he remained active in the Grace Brethren Church as a Sunday-school teacher and choir member. He was a native of Sheffield, England.—Gordon Bracker, pastor.

UNION ON WHAT LEVEL?

Win the other, by a consistent testimony for the Lord, both by word of mouth and practice of life.

Consider the other, who may depart or stay, but every endeavor should be made to maintain peace.

Peter adds a similar word of exhortation when he writes: "Wives, be in subjection to your own husbands; that, if any obey not the word, they also may without the word be won by the conversation of the wives; while they behold your chaste conversation coupled with fear [respect]" (I Pet. 3:1-2). Peter suggests that (1) the problem be approached positively, with an aim to correcting the fault; (2) that the testimony be more one of life than of constant speaking; and (3) that the believing partner consider his or her position and maintain it in all chastity. If you have an unsaved mate, talk more to God about it than to that unsaved one. You'll get farther faster!

Conclusion.

Our study has revealed that a truly happy marriage is based upon compatibility, not on one level, nor on two levels, but upon all three levels — physical, intellectual, and spiritual. If our marriages and homes are built wisely upon these considerations we will be following the exhortation of Jude—"Keep yourselves in the love of God"—and we will be enjoying happy homes.

Parents, let us teach our children these truths during the very formative years of their childhood and youth.

Prospective husbands and wives, consider these facts well before you ask another, or give yourself to another in wedlock.

Husbands and wives, apply these exhortations and discover that the home can be "a little bit of heaven on earth."

Norwalk, Calif.

Our day-school program is going forward. We now have an enrollment of 77. We have room for only 33 more and feel sure we will be entirely filled up. We have three teachers and another one to be hired. Two years ago Whittier Community Brethren Day School opened with an enrollment of 28, and this spring they closed with 150. We have a good field here, and these school contacts are wonderful.—Henry G. Rempel, pastor, Norwalk Brethren Church.

Wooster, Ohio

There were 171 students and 30 staff members enrolled in the vacation Bible school at the First Brethren Church, Wooster, Ohio. The average attendance was 186, with offerings totaling $195. The closing commencement-demonstration service was enjoyed by 200 parents who viewed the classroom displays and the prepared program. The theme used was, "Heroes of the Cross." Special features of the closing service included the "weighing-in" of the offering, the "Happy Day Express," presented by the Tiny-Tots, and the building of a cross, using the names and virtues of the heroes studied. Pastor Ashman directed the school.—Kenneth Ashman, pastor.

Martinsburg, Pa.

The daily vacation Bible school held at the First Brethren Church had an enrollment of 148; the average attendance was 135 and seven children accepted the Lord.

Everett, Pa.

The congregation of the Grace Brethren Church of Everett has purchased a large two-story building located next to their church edifice. The building is made up of 40 rooms besides cellar and there is a one-car garage and a two-car garage with apartment above which goes with the property. The purchase price was $40,000. An apartment will be used for a parsonage and the remainder will be used for church activities.—Fred B. Bucher, secretary.

Building Purchased at Everett, Pa.

Dayton, Ohio (Bethany)

Our vacation Bible school had an enrollment of 119 children and the average attendance was 51, with an offering of $34.04.

Bethany is still without a pastor and the field of souls that surrounds the church is still growing. We do praise God for His many blessings and we have the faith to believe that He will provide us with a shepherd to lead our flock. We covet the prayers of all believers in our behalf and that Bethany will continue to be strong and true to the Lord Jesus Christ.—Doris Hapner, sec.

Ozark, Mich.

Our meeting with Crusade Team Two is now history. We trust the blessing in the lives of many will carry on through the years to the glory of Christ.

Because of the ingathering of souls a year ago with Team One, this was primarily a time of sowing the seed and strengthening Christians.

This team, consisting of Evangelist Archie Lynn, Songleader Bill Byers, and (for this campaign only) Pianist George Saylor, is a good visitation team and many new contacts were made. The fellowship with the members of the team was appreciated by the pastor.

During the meetings, four came to know Christ as Saviour, many decisions were made for a closer walk, and some gave their lives for witnessing.

We as a church wish to thank all who had a part in sending this three-man team to us.—Earl Funderburg, pastor, Grace Brethren Church.

The BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD

FOREIGN MISSION NUMBER

AUGUST 6, 1955

Amazon River Scene, Brazil

"BE STILL, AND KNOW THAT I AM GOD"

For Your Information---

— BULLETIN —

Just as the Herald was ready to go to press a cable reached our Foreign Mission Office advising that Miss Estella Myers, who first went to French Equatorial Africa in 1918, will be returning to the States immediately for health reasons. Please pray for her as complete examinations and treatment are undertaken in the homeland. It is probable that she will leave Bangui on August 4 with the Don Miller family and arrive in the States about the middle of August.

Thank You, Lord!—

Our hearts are overflowing with praise today—the day before our copy for this issue is due at the Herald office. A week ago we were not at all sure that our foreign-mission offering would exceed the offering for the corresponding period last year. But the gifts have come in very rapidly in the last few days, and for the period of January 1, 1955, to July 21, 1955, we have received gifts totaling $210,697.25, which is an increase of $21,441.87 over last year. Now you can see why we are saying, "Thank you, Lord." The next page presents a report of gifts by churches to date.

The Report Analyzed—

Since determining the totals there has been no opportunity to make a careful analysis of the offering. Suffice it to say that for the period reported we have a gain over last year's offering for the same period of about 11 percent.

Last year our total offering for the entire calendar year was $212,552.97. During the year of 1953 it was approximately $223,000. We now have received during the first seven months of 1955 an amount of $210,697.25. If we all do some sacrificial giving during the rest of this year, in amounts even comparable to that which we did for the same period last year, we may possibly exceed the $223,000 of 1953. If so, we will give the largest offering to foreign missions in our Brethren history. Even in anticipation, we say, "Thank you, Lord."

Wonderful Cooperation—

I don't know how we could ask for finer cooperation than we have received from all pastors and churches in their efforts as they relate to foreign missions. For several years now, in the ordering of supplies, in the using of materials sent, in promoting missionary rallies, in the receiving of offerings, and in the reporting of offerings, we have had almost 100-percent cooperation. You will note from the report on the next page that all but three churches have sent to us those reports that might be thought of as "Easter Offering Reports." Doubtless before you read this, we shall have a 100-percent report. Thank you, thank you, all of you, so very much!

From the Fields—

Annual field reports coming to us during the last few days tell of victories all along the line. Not quite all of these reports have reached us as yet. In the next Foreign Mission Number of the Herald, or in the October issue, we will be able to give you digests of all of these fine field reports. Until you read the reports for yourselves, will you please believe me when I say: "Your foreign-mission dollars are really accomplishing things in the saving of souls and in the establishing of Brethren testimonies around the world."

"Please Send Us More Workers"—

This is the plea of every one of our fields, and their pleas are based on the needs and opportunities which are certified by facts. You can be assured that your Foreign Board wants to send out more missionaries and will be prayerfully considering these pleas at about the same time you read these words. Breathe a prayer for us, will you, please? We now have an all-time high in our roster of foreign missionaries—a total of 94 adults. Pray with us for at least 100 by January 1, 1956.

Returning to Africa—

Miss Mary Emmert is making rapid preparations to return to her beloved Africa. She first went to the field in 1925 and served for four terms. She came to the States on her fourth furlough in 1946 and following that time gave herself unstintingly in a loving ministry to her aged father. Now she is returning to the field in Africa, and the missionaries are pleading to have her there just as soon as possible after September 15.

The Marvin Goodman, Jr., family, as mentioned in a recent issue of the Herald, is also returning to Africa after almost three years of waiting in the United States while the Lord restored little Anne to health. As you read this note, the Goodmans will probably be spending their first few days in France. They expect to spend about three months in Lyon for some language study before proceeding on to Africa.

We Can Do Something—

The increase in our foreign-mission offering this year will make it possible for us to do many things toward expansion on our six fields. We will not be able to do everything that the fields have urgently requested—that would require an increase in offerings of over $60,000 more than the total for last year. Will you be praying with us that throughout the coming months we will use every one of our foreign-mission dollars wisely to accomplished the most for our blessed Lord?

FIRSTS In Our Work in France

By P. F. FOGLE

The first services were held in the new Brethren Gospel Hall in Lyon, France, on Sunday, February 27, of this year.

On the evening of December 24, 1954, the contract was signed which gave us the right to rent three rooms which were formerly used for a grocery store. These quarters are on the first floor of an apartment house and are located on one of the important avenues of the city of

Centre Evangelique—Our Brethren Gospel Hall in Lyon

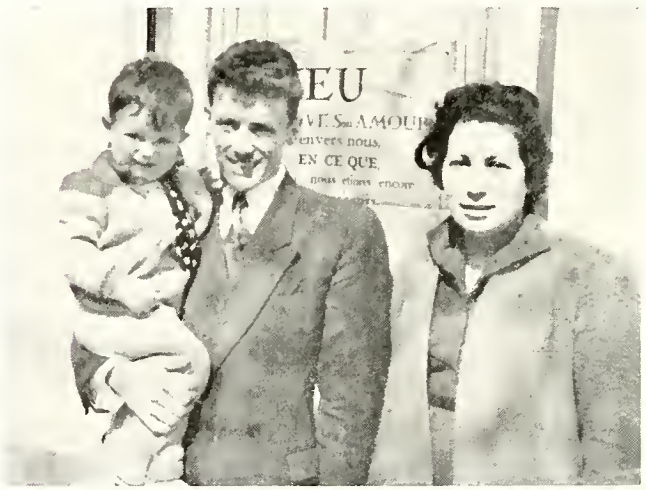
Lyon, France, in a heavily populated section where there is no other gospel witness. France is not at all like the United States, where a church can be seen on many street corners. Geographically speaking, the hall is almost in the center of the city, and can be rather easily reached by city buses.

The gospel hall itself is about 45 yards square. The capacity crowd seated would be about 80 persons. Behind the hall there is a small apartment of two rooms, and in the court behind we have a rather large storage building which has already proved of great use to us.

The repair work and redecoration began on December 27 and were completed two months later with the exception of painting which had to be finished in the two-room apartment. The ceiling was painted white; the walls are a light green. We have placed a light-tan congoleum on the floor. Due to the indirect lighting, our meeting place is very pleasant and attractive.

The front of the building stands out in the neighborhood, for it was painted white. Nice letters were painted across the top, spelling "CENTRE EVANGELIQUE." There are two large windows on each side of the entrance. Where groceries were once displayed we now have gospel posters, tracts, New Testaments, and Bibles. Being equipped with fluorescent lights, these windows are illuminated until 10 p. m. each evening.

It is interesting to note that those who have helped in one way or another in the work at the hall are Christians born in the following countries: France, Switzerland, Ireland, Spain, Greece, Russia, and the United States. We have been a "United Nations" in ourselves, but our unity is on a spiritual basis—united in Christ. This is a wonderful commentary on what the grace of God can do to unite men of all countries who have one main goal in mind: to see the Lord's name glorified by the winning of souls.



The schedule of meetings is the following: morning worship on Sunday, child evangelism on Thursday morning (French children are out of school on Thursday, but attend on Saturday), Bible study on Friday evening, and young people's meeting on the first Saturday of each month.

Our attendance the first Sunday was 23. The highest at regular services has been 24, but the average is between 10 and 15. From March 27 to April 4 we held special evangelistic meetings each evening. No decisions were made during this time, but every night there were new people who came to hear the Gospel.

It is a great joy to us to have this meeting place where those who have been won to the Lord can come regularly to feed on God's Word and where we can invite the unsaved to come and hear the "Good News" of salvation.

The first service of baptism was held on Sunday, May 15, with four persons experiencing trine immersion. It was a blessed privilege to carry out at this time the second part of this command of our Lord—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost."

The first person baptized was Madame Jeanine Kasak,

Mr. and Mrs. Andre Kasak and son. Brother Kasak is the French evangelist working with us on a full-time basis.

wife of the French evangelist working with us here on a full-time basis. Though she was saved 11 years ago she had never been baptized. Believing that the Bible teaches baptism by immersion, she obeyed the Lord in this ordinance.

The second and third persons to be baptized were a mother and daughter, the mother being an Israelite. It is wonderful to see how the Lord has worked in this home and how hearts have been transformed. These two have become zealous Christians.

The fourth was a young man in his thirties, a former Catholic. He was first contacted through our gospel posters. Upon receiving his New Testament, he began reading and searching out the simple truths of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. After a few months he experienced the new birth, and now he is a fine young Christain busy testifying to others.

The first communion service was held on Sunday, May 29, and all 13 who took part received an exceptional spiritual blessing.

God has already blessed us in our efforts, but we need your prayers for even a much greater blessing at our Brethren Gospel Center. The Devil has well succeeded in causing French people to be indifferent to the Gospel. Pray that the Lord will work in their hearts, making them realize their need of Jesus Christ in these days when the door of salvation is still open. Pray also that many similar Brethren Gospel Centers may be opened in France in the next few years.

ATTENTION—CORPORATION MEMBERS

The regular Annual Meeting of the The Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church, Inc., will be held at Jennings Lodge, Portland, Oreg., on Saturday, August 13, 1955, from 12:00 to 12:30 p. m.

THEY PASSED!

Miss Rosella Cochran and Rev. and Mrs. George E. Cone, Jr., passed their French examinations at the end of June, receiving the Certificate d' Etudes, which is the first in a series. We praise the Lord with them for the successful accomplishment of this particular course, as well as for His blessing in other ways.

During the summer months, when there are no classes in Lyon, Miss Cochran is in Paris for more language study. Mail will reach her at the following address: Miss Rosella Cochran, Chez Mme. Lemoine, 15 Rue Littre, Paris 6, France.

The Cones are remaining in Lyon and have assumed the responsibilities of our work there while the Fogle family is on furlough in the States.

WE'RE SOLD ON GOALS

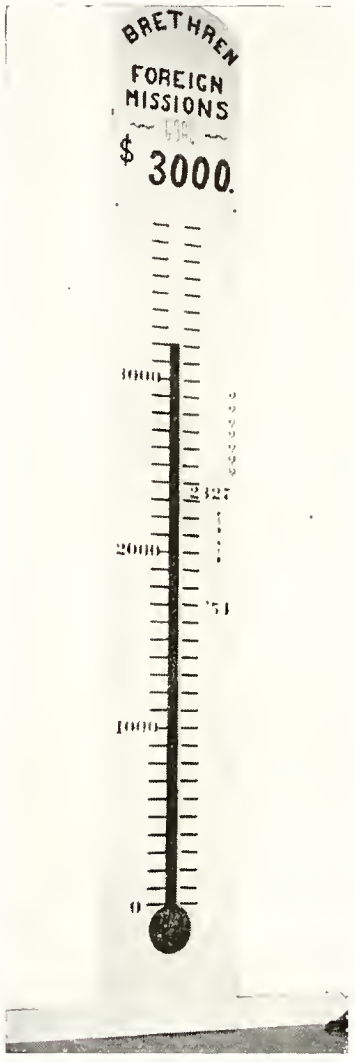
By Gene D. Farrell

Pastor, Cherry Valley Brethren Church, Beaumont, Calif.

Yes; we're sold on goals and missionary rallies, too!

It was a rally with Bro. Jake Kliever that gave us the courage to aim $1,000 higher this year in our foreign-missionary offering. Even then it looked for a while as though we had done the foolish thing, for as late as April 17, the Sunday after Easter, the figure stood at only $1,203! But the Lord gave us some Ephesians 3:20 offerings after that, and by Sunday, May 29, the last day of our special emphasis, a total of $2,505.43 had come in!

That was wonderful! But how about that $3,000 goal which we felt the Lord had led us to set and which, therefore, we had insisted would be reached by the last Sunday in May? Would we make it? We were about $500 short. And such splendid offerings had already come in from our small congregation that it seemed not a little presumptuous to expect the largest one to date!



But we had to admit that the Lord who guides must be the same Lord who provides. So we gulped back our doubts and announced in Sunday school and in the morning worship service, as we had done on previous Lord's Days, that a "Victory Celebration" would be held the first Sunday in June. It was only the Lord who enabled us to do this, as many other pastors and people who read this can testify, as He helped us to look, not at the "bottom of the barrel" which had been scraped already until it seemed to be bare, but to "his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19).

Those attending the evening service on the concluding Sunday of our special emphasis were the first to know the outcome. (One of the many ways it pays to be a two-service Christian!) However, it wasn't until the following Sunday that all of our Bible-school teachers (who had spearheaded the drive) came to know how the Lord had worked for us.

As in '54, we planned something each Sunday with an element of suspense, and it was a tense moment when the mercury in the thermometer (see the picture) began to climb! Up and up it went—from 2,505 to 2,600, to 2,700, to 2,800, 2,900! The atmosphere was electric! Would it go to 3,000—the figure which for four long months we had anticipated reaching? Our church treasurer, who was winding up the red column, showed no signs of quitting. Sure enough, victory was ours!

But even then the mercury kept climbing—3,050, 3,100, 3,150! Would it ever stop? Yes; it did, at just a little over $3,200, which we later learned was $3,269.75 to be exact—$700 on the last Sunday! We could almost hear the Lord saying, as He did to Peter of old: "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"

The "Victory Celebration" continued then with everyone standing to sing, "Rise, Shine, Give God the Glory," and "Great Is Thy Faithfulness," after which prayers of praise were offered for His goodness. A picture of our Sunday-school superintendent was taken as he placed the final figures on the register. Another highlight was the lighting of the last five bulbs in our missionary map (each bulb represented a mission station), something we had been doing each Sunday during the Sunday-school hour as the funds came in. Last of all, a picture was taken of the winning classes. Again, as in '54, there were eight that reached their class goals. Oh yes; a picture was snapped, too, of a Junior C. E. group which gave almost $19!

Yes; we reached our goal—and over!

Thanks to the suggestion of the Foreign Missionary Society and a lady in our congregation who adopted it as a project, we used the missionary village idea to advantage, with the children and adults marching up each Sunday with their huts as we all sang, "Jesus Loves the Little Children of the World." As a result, on the Monday following that last Sunday's offering, our treasurer banked some 1,583 pennies, 510 dimes, and 129 nickels! During the last week of emphasis, an out-of-town member sent in 11 dime-filled folders with three one-dollar bills to bring his total to $25!

Other things that helped, we believe, were the week-by-week bulletin announcements of individual class achievements and goals and of the church offering and its goal. And last, but no doubt most important of all, we thank God for the ministry of Brother Kliever, the Churchills, the Sheldons, and Sister Sickel, whom the Lord permitted to be with us as our missionary rally speakers.

Yes; WE'RE SOLD ON GOALS—goals that demand sacrifice, goals that challenge us to "believe" for the impossible, goals that are somewhat proportionate to the desperate need in the "regions beyond." And when the going gets rough, and it appears that we have exceeded our ability to give, it might be well for us to "keep on believing" as did little Jimmy Hicks, a junior-age lad in our congregation. He happened to be sitting all alone up toward the front of the auditorium on that particular Sunday after Easter when the total had only risen to a meager $1,203. While making the usual emphasis before the offering was taken, the Lord directed our attention to him and the question was asked: "How about our goal, Jimmy? Do you think we'll make it?"

Jim's head had been down, but that didn't mean that he hadn't been listening. Quick as a flash he looked up toward the pulpit, his face intense, his hair pointing—as it usually does in spite of every effort to the contrary—in every direction of the compass! He didn't say much, but what he did say is now classic with us—just a little three-letter word, not even a word if you consult Webster, but it spoke volumes to those of us who stood in need of a child's calm assurance. Would we reach our foreign-missionary goal? Little Jimmy had the answer. He simply said, "YEP!"

I am not careful for what may be a hundred years hence. He who governed the world before I was born will take care of it likewise when I am dead. My part is to improve the present moment.—John Wesley.

The Man Who Hunts Words

The man who translates the Bible into African languages is always asking questions. Here are some of the questions he asks himself: "What did this word mean in the beginning?" or "How can I explain snow in this hot country?" Most of his questions, however, he asks over and over again. "What is the word for this?" "What do you say when you are sorry?" "How do you change your words when you are speaking to several people at once?" "What is the difference between this word and that one?" he asks, until his neighbors begin to nickname him "The-Fellow-Who-Pesters-Us-With-Questions." When he finds a new word, he gleefully writes it down, and is as proud of his catch as a "big-game" hunter.

He works hard. Day after day, week after week, he hunts for the right words for the Bible story in a new language. Verse after verse, chapter after chapter is written down and the sheets of paper or the exercise books pile higher and higher. Often he makes mistakes and his neighbors laugh at him. "You mustn't say, 'The captain is over his soldiers,'" they say with a grin. "It sounds to us as though he were sitting on top of them." Then he has to try again. Repeatedly he asks questions and hunts for words until he has a book of the Bible which he thinks his neighbors will understand.

But still he has not finished. He invites a few of his neighbors in to listen, to try it out. They sit around while he reads. Sometimes their eyes light up and they say! "Ah, now we understand. How wonderful to hear the Book of God in our own words." Sometimes they look puzzled. Sometimes they laugh. Then the translator must begin once more asking questions, hunting for words until his neighbors are satisfied. Then the book is finished and is ready to be posted off to the Bible Society to be printed.—Congo Mission News.

NOW ABIDETH LOVE

As I have loved you, beloved flock,
Love one another! It is your mark
Of discipleship, yea, your task
To lighten with your love, the dark.
Regard neither race nor face of man
But with guileless vision search kin
Within my fold. One family bought,
Led out, redeemed from sin.
Better to be blind and dumb than
To distort a brother. If you profess Me
As your Lord, cherish all my sheep.
For greater than faith or hope is charity.
—"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three;
but the greatest of these is charity" (I Cor. 13:13).

Four members of the Pocket Testament League of America distributed 58,139 copies of the Gospel of St. John to Mau Mau and other prisoners in Kenya during May. The team held 42 meetings in detention camps and prisons to give out the books, which were printed locally, according to Glenn W. Wagner, the league's foreign secretary.—The Alliance Weekly.

Our African Field at a Glance

In the heart of French Equatorial Africa there is a territory of about 80,000 square miles which is very dear to the hearts of all Brethren people. It is an area in which the extreme limits north and south extend to about 500 miles and the greatest width to about 350 miles. Some one-half million people live in this area. Most of these people will never hear the story of His blessed Son, the Lord Jesus Christ—at least not in this generation—unless we of the Brethren Church tell them.

Our interest in this field began as far back as 1915, when James and Florence Gribble, who had been serving in Africa in mission work with another fine missionary agency, began to tell Brethren people of this great untouched, thoroughly unevangelized area in the province of Oubangui-Chari, French Equatorial Africa. Through the years this interest has continued to grow. The first missionary party sailed from New Orleans, La., on January 7, 1918, but the field was not yet open to us. Three long years were spent in waiting, the first one and one-half years at the place which has been fittingly called "Camp Wait-Some-More" at Brazzaville, and the additional one and one-half years about one-half way to the interior at a center called Carnot.

There were four in that pioneer party—Rev. James S. Gribble and his wife, Dr. Florence N. Gribble, parents of Mrs. Harold L. Dunning, who now serves in our mission in Africa; Miss Myrtle Mae Snyder, and Miss Estella Myers. The Gribbles and Miss Snyder have gone "home" to be with the Lord, Miss Snyder after just 19 months in Africa, and Miss Myers continues her service for the Lord at our Nzoro station. Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Rollier sailed for Africa in 1918—our first reinforcements. After only a few months in Africa, and even before they had arrived in our present field, while traveling on the Sanga River, Mrs. Rollier became ill and was promoted to glory.

After the years of waiting the depleted little party was granted permission to enter the field—the permission being granted on February 2, 1921. It was March 5 when Pioneer Gribble arrived at our present station at Bozoum, and on November 9 of the same year the first tent was pitched at what is now our Bassai station, the first location for a permanent establishment. The Bozoum location was not actually opened until some years later.

Through years of success and failure, joy and sadness, our work in Africa has had a phenomenal growth until we now have 58 missionaries on our roster for Africa. There are 11 different locations—Bassai, Batangafo, Bekoro, Bellevue, Bossembele, Bouca, Bozoum, M'Baiki, Nzoro, Yaloke, and Bangui.

Bangui is our most recent location; the buildings just completed and the native church organized. Progress is above all we could have asked or thought. Bangui is the capital city of the province of Oubangui-Chari, and is a city of about 100,000 people, with some 3,000 white population. The last reports indicate that attendance at the new native church was averaging between 850 and 1,000 per Sunday.

At Bozoum there are two centers of activity—one at the station proper and the other at the Bible Institute, located some three or four miles from the station. After a number of years at the Bellevue station, operating as the Central Bible School, this school was moved to the present location near Bozoum and is now called the Bible Institute. This graduate school and the junior Bible schools in the various districts form the framework of our training program for our Christian workers. The junior Bible schools are the elementary Bible schools—for pastors and leaders of the various districts—and those completing these elementary courses and meeting certain other requirements may be admitted to the Bible Institute for further training. Almost 200 have now been graduated from the Bible Institute and most of these are faithfully serving the church in Africa. Recently the institute course was increased to three years.

At Bassai there are also two units of work—the pastoral activities, and more recently the French monitors' (teachers') school was established. This school looks toward a better-educated ministry and laity in our Brethren fellowship in Africa.

Dr. and Mrs. Orville D. Jobson and the new missionary residence at Bangui.

Bekoro also has two distinct activities, the center of pastoral activities and the leper dispensary. Leper work has been done for a number of years in the various medical centers of the mission, but in 1950 it was determined to establish a center dedicated exclusively to leper work. This was located at Beandje, just two or three miles from the Bekoro station. Lepers are now being returned to normal life and activity through the ministry of this station and the blessing of the Lord. Treatment centers continue, however, in connection with the different dispensaries.

A medical ministry has also grown, demonstrating the blessing of the Lord. We now have two doctors and nine nurses in our work, with six of the nurses working almost entirely in medical work. All give assistance in the work in addition to many other activities. Dispensaries are located at Bassai, Bellevue, Bozoum (Bible Institute), Bekoro, and Yaloke. Other centers will probably be added as there are those to care for them. A new medical center is being serious considered and, if funds permit, will probably soon be constructed at or near Boguila in the north part of our field. Yaloke will continue to emphasize medical work in the south part of our field.

Vernacular (native language) schools are a very fruitful avenue of service. A number of our missionaries have engaged in this work. In the past years these have contributed very largely to the education of the native church and will continue to be especially valuable as preparatory for the French and Bible schools.

In 1946 our mission was enabled to open another department of work when Mr. and Mrs. Albert Balzer went to the field, Brother Balzer as an experienced builder. Prior to this time each missionary needed to be a builder as well as a preacher-missionary. Great building strides have been made with outstanding economy in these recent years. Mrs. Balzer has had special training in music and Bible teaching and is a valuable colaborer with her builder husband.

Some 75 different missionaries have served in Africa since the beginning of the work, with the present missionary personnel numbering 58. Eight noble souls have given their lives in the work in Africa, and all but one of these have bodies resting in African soil awaiting the day of resurrection and greater glory. These eight were James Gribble, Dr. Florence Gribble, Allen Lee Bennett, Lester W. Kennedy, Sr., Mrs. Mary Rollier, Miss Myrtle Mae Snyder, Miss Edna Patterson, and Joseph Foster.

Yes; those years since 1921 have been fruitful years, and today there are some 18,000 to 20,000 who give evidence of being born-again believers, with a very large number having received the rite of Christian baptism by trine immersion. They constitute a well-organized and a remarkably effective unit of Brethren churches in this great land of Africa. There are testimonies in about 700 villages, but there are 1,200 to 1,500 villages yet without resident testimonies. About 1 out of every 25 people in the area is a believer, but you can see the challenge still confronting us with some 24 out of every 25 people still without Christ. There are between 700 to 1,000 who would be thought of as engaged in full-time Christian service in the native church in Africa. Possibly this fact—1 out of every 20 to 25 of the native believers a definite worker—may explain very largely the success of our work in Africa, and could serve as a proportion fitted to challenge us in the church at home.

IT IS ESTIMATED—

About 70 percent of East German youth are holding to church teachings. The other 30 percent are followers of authority, which at present is Communistic.

More than half of all Indian families still live on less than $250 a year. India covers a vast area, as large and varied as Europe, with a population speaking 14 languages.

Israelis are learning basic Hebrew at a rapid rate—more than 40,000 in the last six months. According to educators, almost everyone in Israel up to the age of 25 thinks in Hebrew. Hebrew is the national language, but it is estimated that one-third of the population cannot use it freely.—EFMA Missionary News Service.

Another Answer to Prayer

Praise the Lord with us for His answer to the many prayers that went up throughout our Fellowship in behalf of our missionaries in Argentina during the recent period of internal strife. Word from various of the missionaries advises that they are well and were not involved in any of the difficulties. We desire to share with you some excerpts from the last letter we received from Brother and Sister Hill Maconaghy, who are located at Jose Marmol, a suburb of Buenos Aires.

Rev. and Mrs. Hill Maconaghy

"Were you wondering about us on June 16 when the attempted revolution took place here? It was very exciting, but fortunately we weren't in town that day and didn't know that anything was happening until the grocer across the street began to close up. Hill wondered why he was closing in the middle of the afternoon and so went to ask him. Then he said there was trouble in Buenos Aires, so we turned on the radio and listened. The saddest thing was that so many civilians on the streets were injured and killed. Many folks we know were down there, but fortunately none were hurt. Things seem to be normal now.

"We're having real winter now. Today is so blustery—the shutters keep banging—and the wind is very cold. It's a good day to be inside. Hope it calms by this evening, as this is prayer-meeting night.

"We've been having better attendance in Sunday school lately, and the Sunday-evening attendance has been pretty good, too. Last Sunday it fell, but it was so very cold."

Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
And looks to God alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And shouts, "IT SHALL BE DONE!"

Moderator's Address

By REV. GEORGE O. PEEK

Introduction.

As the moderator of the California District Conference of Brethren Churches, I have the privilege of welcoming the delegates and friends to this 45th district conference of Brethren churches.

In the good providence of our God we have been brought through another year of labor in His vineyard and have come together in this conference for a time of fellowship, planning, and prayer.

Both the sacred Scriptures and secular history reveal that conferences such as this one have been a common practice among believers from the earliest days of the church of Jesus Christ. However, let us hope that we have come to this conference not only one year older chronologically but also more mature in the inner man.

This conference cannot be just another conference because "now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed." Each tick of the clock has served to bring us farther along the pathway that leads to the consummation of the ages when Jesus Christ shall rule and reign as Lord of lords and King of kings, forever and forever.

During the year there have been changes in our personnel. New members have been added to our group; some of the undershepherds have been moved to other fields; other members of our conference have been set aside from active service; while some have been summoned into the presence of the Captain of our salvation.

Our financial assets and liabilities are not the same as they were a year ago. Neither are our responsibilities and opportunities the same. Therefore, as a businessman takes inventory and makes plans for the future, let us appraise our position and some of the facts that bear upon it. Although this is not exhaustive, let us consider this vital subject from the following six points:

I. OUR POSITION IN THE WORLD.

It is certainly a precarious one. The international situation is the darkest in the history of mankind. This is not a wild, personal judgment. This is the opinion of nearly everyone who has a true understanding of what is happening in our world today. Here and there optimistic voices are heard, but their pitiful cries remind us of a small boy whistling in the dark to hide his own fears. Only a fool can face the possibility of another world war—with all the diabolical means of destruction now known to man—and not realize the seriousness of the hour.

The dangers without are perhaps no greater than those within our nation. There has never been a generation in America as morally corrupt as ours. Proof of this is seen in that there are more drunkards, more gamblers, more thieves, more murderers, more illegitimate children, more of every type of sin than ever before in the history of our nation. Already the penal institutions and hospitals give a sickening testimony to the awful cost of this moral decay.

These conditions all severely jeopardize the position of the church of Jesus Christ in this world, for these evils all militate against the true, born-again believer.

Do not be misled by reports of the largest church membership in the history of our nation because the majority of these so-called Christians have but joined a religious system that will some day be the tool of the Antichrist.

Paul in his day spoke of "troubles within and troubles without," and the truth of the matter is "this world had never been a friend to grace." Therefore, our position is indeed a dangerous one.

If the Apostle Paul could look on the Ephesus of his day with its many adversaries and still say, "A great door and effectual is opened unto me," what would he say if he could look on the harvest fields in California?

In our introduction we said that our responsibility differs from that of former years. It is greater than ever before because in the last five years the population of California has increased several hundred thousand, and it is continuing to grow at the rate of 37,750 every month. In addition to those being transplanted into our midst from other states, it is estimated that in the 1950's over three million babies will be born in just our state. The United States Bureau of Census estimates the population of California in 1960 at 14,626,000. Although this may represent a potential dollar market to the businessman, it means for our church more souls to be reached with the Gospel. When we consider how few we are in comparison to the job to be done, it is almost frightening.

However, God has not given us an impossible task, for we are never asked to do anything we are not capable of doing. As our responsibilities have increased, so have our potentialities. With our modern means of transportation and communication, it is possible for us to reach more people with the message of the Gospel in one year than it was for the early church to reach in its lifetime. One is almost amused when one reads Luke's account of the "many days" that were required to go from one city to another and of the planning to "winter in Crete" that they might escape the bad weather while crossing to Rome.

No doubt Paul and his companions would have liked to have the means available to us for spreading the Gospel, but they did not. They had their day, and we have ours. The challenge of this push-button age is ours to use for the glory of God, for like Esther we have come to the kingdom for such an hour as this.

This is true even if the dangers previously referred to do not interrupt our labors. This fact needs to be strongly emphasized because too many of God's children forget that life is transient and that death is always imminent. While acknowledging the inevitability of death, the average believer is living as though he expected to be around for the next 200 years. It is true that more people are living to what we call "old age," although the Biblical threescore and ten is still the best that can be expected. On the other hand, if longevity of life should be our lot, we still must realize that the years go by so rapidly that life can certainly be referred to as being very brief. All this is true of both the believer and the unbeliever.

However, there is another reason for the believer's position in this life being temporary. The promise of our Lord's return to gather His church unto himself has never been so near fulfillment as it is today. It seems as though so many of the great events happening before our eyes point to the hour of His return. The return of Israel to the land of promise, the increase in the powers of evil, the "one worldism" that has become an obsession with men, and the worldwide distress among nations are but a few of the warnings that our labors on this earth may be interrupted at any moment by the coming of our Lord to gather us home.

Then, we maintain, our position in the world is threefold: precarious, challenging, and temporary, all of which leads to the second point.

II. OUR REASONS FOR PRAISE AND THANKSGIVING.

We should thank our Heavenly Father for the provision of our every need as He has brought us to this hour, and we should rejoice in the knowledge that our future is in His hands.

We should thank Him that we have maintained our position of faith and confidence in the Bible as the inspired Word of God. This has been done in a time of the greatest apostasy in the history of so-called Christendom. Almost unbelievable is the number of churches that were born through the efforts of Bible-believing men who have now slipped into today's fashionable heresies, which specialize in denying the infallibility of the Bible.

Many who are leaving the apostate churches are turning to our church as one of the few groups still believing the Bible to be the Word of God. May we always contend for this blessed truth; it is basic to our faith. Apart from it we have no authority for the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ, His atoning work on Calvary, His resurrection, His coming again, and all the other great truths we hold so dear.

We thank God for two new churches in our conference. The statistical report for this year will speak for 30 churches. We praise the Lord for adding to our number the Stearns Street Brethren Church of Long Beach and the West Covina Brethren Church.

We are thankful for the progress of the Christian day-school movement which is encouraging. Six schools are now being operated by churches in our district, and we understand that there are plans to open three or four additional ones in the near future. Inasmuch as this is still pioneer work in our denomination, the full fruit of this endeavor will not be seen for a few years. However, every effort should be made to encourage those working in this field.

We can praise the Lord for our young people. At Grace Seminary and in other theological schools and colleges, young people from this conference were a credit to our Lord and our church. Several of our young people have brought special recognition to this district by their achievements in the classroom, on the athletic field, and in various places of Christian service.

We praise Him for the privileges of stewardship that were granted us. Over $600,000 was expended by our churches in 1954. Approximately 20 percent of this amount was given to district and national Brethren organizations.

We praise our Lord for the trophies of His grace. Our churches reported 868 souls saved during 1954. If we had no other reason for thanksgiving and praise, this would be sufficient.

We praise God for our Sunday schools. Many of our California Sunday schools were among the "progressives" in the attendance contest conducted by our National Sunday School Board. One church from this district won first place in its division in the attendance contest conducted by the Christian Life magazine.

This by no means exhausts the reasons for praise and thanksgiving. These are but a few of the victories to which your moderator has felt led to call special attention at this time. But there is a third point for our consideration.

III. OUR REASONS FOR CONCERN.

I believe we should be concerned about the small increase in our numbers. This is certainly something that anyone should be able to see. Although we live in the fastest-growing area in the United States, in the last five years we have enlarged our work from 25 churches in 1950 to just 30 churches in 1955. Furthermore, we have increased our membership by only 394 members in this same period of time. This can be called progress only if you are broadminded in the loosest sense of the word. Do not let us hide behind the claim of quality at the price of quantity. God is concerned about numbers and we should be too.

I think we should be concerned also about the small harvest of souls. Eight hundred sixthy-eight are possibly more than were converted in all the churches of some denominations. Certainly we praise the Lord for each soul saved, but when we consider that this means less than one convert for every five members in the district, then we see it in a different light. I know the Lord gives the increase, and decisions are sometimes nothing more than verbal agreements; nevertheless, it would seem that every member could win at least one soul in a year's time.

I believe we should be concerned about our meager offerings. This is not a contradiction of a previous observation concerning stewardship and the amount of money expended by our churches last year, but it is to call attention to the fact that our gifts averaged about $100 per member for the year 1954. Now I am sure that many children and retired people with small incomes are represented in the membership of our district. Regardless of that, this figure stands as an indictment that our giving was somewhat short of sacrificial. We should not be concerned with how we stand in comparison with other districts nor how we rate in the national averages for church contributions. Our standard is set by God's Word. We are to give "as God has prospered us." Have we obeyed?

I believe we should be concerned moreover that more young men are not looking forward to the ministry. I have mentioned the achievements of some of our young people—and we can be proud of them—but it is a fact that more and more our young men are looking forward to serving the Lord in some other phase of Christian endeavor than that of the ministry. I am aware of the importance of Christian teachers, mechanics, and businessmen, but it should be the basis for concern that young men of our district are not enthusiastic about serving in a pastorate. I recognize that the ministry is a calling and not a choosing and that many times a good layman has been spoiled by someone's telling him he should preach. Nevertheless, do we not have a responsibility to encourage our young men in this direction? The establishing of scholarships to assist them in getting an education, and a placement service that will give them some assurance of a position when they are ready for full-time service, would be steps in the right direction on this matter.

I think we should be concerned with the dangers of legalism. Nearly 20 years have passed since we separated from another group of Brethren churches. The basis of this separation was Scriptural, and although there were many ramifications, the old heresy of Galatianism was responsible in a large measure for this division. Still, like some evil specter the error of "Sanctification by Legislation" still haunts the Brethren who profess to believe in pure unadulterated grace. Some have even attempted to put teeth into grace, but let us remember that the minute this is done, grace will cease to be grace. This has always been one of the dangers facing a group of believers desirous of maintaining the purity of the church. It seems to be the trick of Satan if he cannot lead into a loose life, then he will goad into legalism. Present sanctification is still the work of the Holy Spirit and always will be. Let us believe the Scripture when it says: "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

In the last place I believe we should be concerned about the growth of Pharisaism.

There seems to be a growing tendency on the part of all fundamentalists to point with scorn to the apostasy in other denominations and say with a religious zealot of long ago: "God, I thank you that I am not as other men are." Certainly we are to contend for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints, even at the cost of our life's blood if necessary, but the attitude of the heart is of great importance. You recall that Jesus rebuked Jerusalem for its sins although He wept over it. Perhaps the words of Paul to the Galatians are appropriate at this point: "Brethren, if a man is overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted" (Gal. 6:1).

These observations neither present a complete picture of our imperfections nor are spoken with a critical spirit. They do express an earnest desire that we might examine ourselves and be aware of some of the weaknesses in our ministry.

Now in the fourth place, let me make some suggestions for strengthening our ministry.

IV. OUR NEEDS FOR A STRONGER MINISTRY.

I believe we should have some definite objectives to strengthen our ministry.

There is a sense in which the old saying, "Aim at nothing and you will hit it," has been true of our district, for we have not reached our present strength by planning. Like Topsy, we just "growed," and it is by the providence of God only that we have 30 churches in our conference instead of 10. I understand that the Lord is building His church, but let us be realistic about this matter of objectives. If goals are profitable for the supermarkets and the gas stations, the Southern Baptists and the Assemblies of God, we should be able to use them also. "Nothing ventured, nothing gained" is not in the Holy Book, but the principle is certainly Biblical. About the only goal we have had lately has been the district mission board's budget, and we have not done so well on it. However, if we had a few more objectives it might sweeten the task. Therefore I suggest that this conference authorize one of our existing committees or boards to draft a program of expansion with definite objectives to be achieved in the next three to five years. Such a program should include the number of churches to build, souls to win, members to recruit, Sunday-school attendance to reach, and other pertinent objectives. If it is argued that this is not a spiritual approach, let us confess that we have been using the same principle in our Sunday-school classes for years. Is it not time for us to do it on a larger scale?

I believe that we should conduct Bible classes as a means to starting new churches.

Each year we have claimed that we cannot build more Brethren churches unless we have more money for extension purposes. Why do we insist that the only way to start a church is to have a nucleus of Brethren people, a plot of ground, and enough money to erect the first unit?

It is granted that these assets will help, but the record reveals that many of our finest churches are the outgrowth of a neighborhood Bible class conducted in a home. I believe we ought to consider seriously the matter of starting Bible classes in several of the new communities in our district with the thought in mind that these classes will eventually become Brethren churches. I have reason to believe that there are people who will open their homes for this purpose if the program is properly presented.

I believe we need a literary voice to strengthen our ministry.

The Missionary Herald, the Fifth and Cherry Light, and the District Mission News are fine papers and are doing a good piece of work. However, there is a definite need for some attractive literature setting forth the ministry of the Brethren Church in this district. No doubt every pastor has longed for something of this kind to be put into the hands of persons interested in our church. With all due respect to the tracts and booklets now available, most of us recognize that there is room for improvement. This voice need not be limited to supplying tracts and booklets for distribution to individuals, but it should have the responsibility of seeing that the newspapers of our area give some coverage to the activities of the Brethren churches in this district. One of the reasons we have seen Cardinal McIntyre's picture so often this year is because there are men who have the responsibility of getting this information to the newspapers.

Now the average pastor is too busy to write news articles and to pester newspaper editors. Most ministers are fortunate if they are able to write their sermon topics in time for the deadline. Yet it is a fact that every denomination that is really progressing has a central office to distribute denominational articles for newspaper publication.

I believe we need an executive secretary.

To realize the most from the program already suggested, such as planned objectives, Bible classes, and a voice in print, I am convinced it is imperative that someone be authorized to take the lead and then follow through in assisting this district to reach these goals. Let us face reality. Volunteer workers, lay or ministerial, will not do the job. There is nothing shameful about this admission, for our pastors and people are just too busy. What would happen to the Foreign Missionary Society or the Home Missions Council if there were no men to push the work of these organizations? The same principle applies to the program of this district. The work of such a person would not encroach in any way upon the sovereignty of the local church. Neither would his duties take away from our present cooperating agreement with the Home Missions Council. He should be under the direct supervision of the ministerial examining board, the district mission board, or any other body appointed by this conference to supervise his work. The simple truth of the matter is we need a man who can give his full time to spearhead our program. Therefore, I suggest that a committee be appointed to consider this matter further and that this committee be asked to make a report of its findings sometime before this conference closes.

5. Another matter that should have immediate attention is the revival of the district men's brotherhood. This is not a new suggestion, for it has been urged by former moderators. I am simply adding my plea to theirs. At present, the strongest auxiliary organization in our church is the Women's Missionary Council, and they certainly accomplish things. Is it unreasonable to believe that we could accomplish even greater things if we had a men's organization of comparable strength. Therefore, I suggest that this conference appoint a committee of one pastor and four laymen to do something about this great need immediately.

6. I believe that our boys' work should be strengthened.

At present there are several different types of boys' clubs in this district. These clubs are doing a good piece of work. However, we should admit that the work needs to be improved. I believe the over-all accomplishment could be much more effective if the program for these clubs could be standardized and promoted on a district basis. Rallies and projects add much to the work of the Sisterhood girls. Perhaps something similar can be employed in promoting the boys' clubs.

This brings us to the fifth point.

V. OUR GREATEST DANGER.

Many of God's people feel that Communism presents the greatest danger to the church of Jesus Christ. Certainly this feeling is partly justified when we consider the slaughter of human beings by this godless monster as it swept across Europe and Asia. However, I do not believe this to be the greatest danger facing us today.

Others have felt the possibility of total destruction or the annihilation of civilization by atomic bombs or deadly gases to be our greatest danger. However, this does not seem to be in keeping with God's program for man at this time.

Then there are those who are certain that the internal moral decay that caused the downfall of ancient Rome will also spell the final doom for our land. They believe that the hour is not far distant when we shall succumb to a 20th-century barbarism far worse than that which motivated the pagan hordes that conquered Rome.

Some seem to think that the "one worldism" and the "one churchism" that is gripping America will soon rob us of our freedom of worship and witness.

Personally, I believe that our greatest danger is to be found in another source. It is that attitude of mind which I have chosen to call the "business-as-usual" philosophy. This is that strange dream that leads people to believe that Communism will eventually spend itself and fade from the scene like some of the evils of the past. This philosophy says that the idea of destruction by bombs will pass as men learn to use atomic power for peaceful pursuits. It also holds that the crime and immorality of our day is the result of the war years and will pass after this generation has had its fling.

This weird dream of maintaining the "status quo" is the lie of the Devil, for this world cannot remain the same. America is a little island of wealth and luxury in the midst of a sea of hunger, disease, and suffering that beggars description.

While we go merrily on our way, more concerned about cars with 200 horsepower or four bedrooms and two baths, there are refugees by the millions in the nations around us who never know what it is to have a full stomach from one day to the next. If we think this condition can exist for long, we are fools. America needs to wake up and face reality. This is a death-struggle.

And in the face of all this, many of God's people are like the little girl who told her Sunday-school teacher that she loved the Lord and wanted Him to come again—but first she would like to get married and have a family.

Doom is a terrifying word, but doom is the word that best describes the fate that awaits this Christ-rejecting world; and our greatest danger is in a "business-as-usual" outlook which will give us false confidence in the flesh.

Finally, let us consider the sixth point.

VI. OUR ROAD TO VICTORY.

I realize it is usually quite easy to make observations. Even a fool like Belshazzar could see the handwriting on the wall, even though he did not understand it. Nor does it require great wisdom to make suggestions, for it is true that "advice is cheap." However, I sincerely believe that the road ahead can be a victorious one for this conference of churches.

There are three words we should keep in mind if we would triumph—

Holiness. The Bible says, "Except the Lord build the house they labour in vain that build," and we may be assured that He will not build the house and bless our efforts unless our lives are clean.

His Word declares that blessing and power are given only to those who are separated unto Him. Let it not be that negative separation of "taste not; touch not" which is often nothing more than a perverted form of pride, but may it be that dedication of the heart and mind that will cause the smile of His favor to rest upon us.

Sacrifice. Some have forgotten that the symbol of our faith is a cross, not a cushion. Let us associate the word "sacrifice" with our money, our time, our sons, and our daughters. Yes; may God help us to learn to sacrifice all of self, our personal ambitions and petty desires, that He might have the preeminence in all things.

Daring. Daring is the final word on the road to victory. William Carey's exhortation: "Attempt great things for God and expect great things from God," could well be our slogan for the coming year. A daring spirit is something we must have. In the past, God's people have seen great victories when they were bold in Him. The apostolic church defied man in order to please God. Daniel's companions faced the fiery furnace with confidence that their times were in God's hands. Esther went before the king having resolved, "If I die, I die."

In this age that clamors for security from the cradle to the grave, where is the fearless spirit of the prophets to be found among God's people? Brethren, this is not an hour for weaklings or cowards to play at church; it is a time when God is looking for men to stand in the gap and fight.

"CHILDREN, OBEY YOUR PARENTS"

Introduction.

In Psalm 127 David declares that "as arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them." God has ordained that the happy result of matrimony shall be childbearing. In too many homes today there are no children. Those who have made a study of this situation declare that 20 percent of those cases of childless homes are the result of sterility. In God's all-wise planning He has declared that some unions should be without children. And, while we cannot always understand the mind of God, yet we know "that all things work together for good to those who love the Lord." If you are in one of these homes without children, look for greater blessings from the Lord that He has in store for you.

On the other hand, 80 percent of childless homes are that way by choice. To plan such a home is unholy. It is contradictory to the plan of God. It is a desire to enjoy all the satisfactions of the marriage relationship but to avoid all its responsibilities. This is a growing evil in our land and God surely is not pleased with it.

But in this study we are concerned about the responsibility of children to their parents. God's Word has much to say on this score. Children are a heritage from God. Some folks call them "bundles from heaven," though often it would seem that they were packaged some other place. Children are like wheels in a watch —some big, some little, some seen, some unseen. But they all work together to bring joy to the household.

I. CHILDREN OWE THEIR PARENTS HONOR.

It is to be remembered that we are all children. We should never lose sight of the fact that we have a responsibility to our parents. An old Chinese pilgrim was seen weeping. When asked why, he said: "I have just been punished by my father." "But you are old; your father must be a very old man. Why did he punish you?" "Because I was disrespectful to my grandfather." The Chinese follow ancestral worship. We do not approve, of course. However, it is to be noted that juvenile delinquency is lowest in Chinatown of New York—lower than in any other part of the city. Why? Because the children have been taught respect for their parents.

Parents should be respected. Disrespect is often shown by the children to Dad as "the old man," and Mother as "the old woman." Remember, Dad got old working to supply your needs. Remember, Mother too got old and wrinkled, her hair gray, her hands not so soft as the advertisements tell because she washed your clothes, cooked your food, mended your garments, cleaned your home. Each wrinkle, each scar, each infirmity is a mark of their love for you, love manifested in unselfish service through the years. Never show disrespect to your parents; they are worth something better.

Parents should be honored because of their position (Eph. 6:2-3). Paul writes: "Honour thy father and thy mother." Note that this is the one and only commandment with promise—"that it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth." They brought us into the world; they cared for us through the years, and they have our best interests at heart. They are our best counselors. A good child is always willing to go to a good parent to "talk things over with Dad," or "talk things over with Mom." Esau failed to listen to his parents, Samson also failed—these men had bitter experiences and ended in infamy because they refused the wise counsel of their godly parents. You too will rue the day that you turn a deaf ear and a rebellious heart against the wise counsel of your parents. Remember, they have been along the road before you and they know the way more surely. "My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother" (Prov. 1:8).

Parents should be honored because of their love. I would give a great deal if once again I could kneel before my mother and ask her forgiveness for the heartaches I caused her and thank her for her loving care for me. She is gone now, and that I cannot do. If your mother is living, if your dad is with you, don't wait until they are dead to bring them flowers—let them know now how much their love has meant to you.

The true story is told of the girl who was being graduated from college. Her education had been made possible by the hard labors of her widowed mother. Upon the occasion of that graduation the mother decided to allow herself a luxury, a luxury which she had denied herself for the sake of the daughter's education. She would go to see her at the campus. Upon arrival, she made her way to the campus and there met her daughter, who was conversing with several others of the senior class. The mother was recognized by her daughter. But because she was old, not too well dressed, had not the sophisticated marks of culture about her, the daughter refused to speak and refused to introduce her to others. That mother went home brokenhearted and utterly dejected. That daughter will always be guilty of one of the worst sins known to mankind — unthankfulness. If the truth were written on the death certificates of many a godly parent, it would read not "cancer," "heart trouble," etc., but would read, "He died of a broken heart"; "She died of a broken heart." In the name of all that is right and holy, children, honor your parents.

Parents should be honored with our confidence. Children should tell them their place of going, who they will be with, what they will be doing, when they will get back, and should not let them sit and worry when there is some emergency or change of plans. Keep them informed so that they will have peace of mind and perfect confidence in you. I admire one girl's introduction of her mother: "Meet my best friend, my mother."

II. CHILDREN OWE THEIR PARENTS OBEDIENCE.

One could almost conclude that the sum total of the child's responsibility to his parents is obedience. It is to be remembered that the parents must be worthy of the obedience expected. Paul says: "Obey your parents in the Lord." Parents are warned by Paul not to "provoke their children to wrath." No child is duty bound to obey a father or a mother who might ask him to do contrary to the Word of God. When a parent tells a child to steal, to lie, to deceive, to smoke, to drink, to do anything contrary to righteousness —that is the point at which the parent is no longer worthy of obedience and the child's obligation stops.

Parents should be more concerned about the spiritual well-being of their children. This concern will manifest itself in a careful study of their needs, their tendencies, and their characteristics. In turn, this will be reflected in the right demands upon those children. One would well copy the plan of one mother who made a record in the family Bible not only of the birth and the marriage of her children, but also of the time of their being born again, when they were baptized, and when they joined the church. Another portion of her record was the spiritual service rendered by her children. Her efficient plan paid off in the spirituality of her household and the usefulness of her offspring.

"Children, obey your parents . . . for this is right" (Eph. 6:1). Paul lays down a principle that obedience to parents is the right thing to do. This is in keeping with Scripture, for we are always instructed to be in subjection to the higher powers. Disobedience of this command leads to lawlessness, one of the curses of the day. Any teacher in school, public or Sunday, can tell within reasonable limits of accuracy just what kind of homes her pupils come from. Their obedience, or lack of it, is reflected in their attitudes in the classroom. Parents should not only be worthy of obedience, they should demand it.

"Children, obey your parents . . . for this is well pleasing" (Col. 3:20). Here another principle is set forth by the apostle. Children should be well pleasing unto their parents and unto the Lord. A careful observance of this instruction will cause us to be more considerate of our parents. Here is what happens. The children bounce in from school or play, they slam the door, and they yell: "Hey, Mom, I want my supper right now; the gang is going out and I don't want to be late. Is my shirt clean? Where is my belt? Hurry up, Mom." One of the English visitors to this land was asked his impression of America. He replied: "The thing that impressed me the most was the complete control the children have over their parents." This is not well pleasing unto the Lord.

"And Jesus was subject unto them" (Luke 2:51). Here is the crowning example for all children. Jesus, Son of God though He was, and is, was subject unto His parents. He was superior to them; He was sinless as against their sinfulness; He knew all things from the beginning—but He was subject to them. As a Christian child you are to be like Christ. Are you?

Obedience should be loving. It should not have to be prompted with threats. I well remember how diligent I suddenly became one day when my mother said: "Kenneth, I want to meet you in the woodshed." Now to you younger folks that doesn't mean much, but to those of us of older years, we well remember some of the painful scenes that took place in the woodshed. You see, I was willing to obey under threat. That wasn't loving obedience. I might say that when we arrived in the woodshed, Mother simply said: "I want you to carry in some wood; the box is empty."

Obedience should be unquestioning. Parents have good reasons for asking certain things. And they do not always have to explain to their children. Jesus himself told the disciples on that last night before the crucifixion as He supped with them in the upper room: "Thou knowest not now; but thou shalt know hereafter." But in spite of their ignorance of the meaning of the acts, He told them to obey, and they did so.

Obedience should be prompt. How often does a parent get for an answer, "Just a minute," "Pretty soon," "Just as soon as I finish this page," "I'll do it a little later." The little lad who had been taught prompt obedience found that it saved his life. He wandered onto the railroad track and his father noted the danger from the onrushing train. He cupped his hands and called to the boy, "Lie down flat!" The lad obeyed promptly and the speeding train passed over his prostrate body and he was safe. You'll discover that prompt obedience to your parents' instruction will result in many blessings in your own heart and life.

Our obedience should be in absentia, when our parents are not there to watch us. A young lad was tempted to sin. He would not compromise because, as he said: "If I did that thing I would not be able to look my father in the face when he comes home." Remember, it is more blessed to "walk by faith than by sight." In like manner, it is better to obey when parents may not even know of our obedience than to be obedient when we know they are there watching.

III. WE OWE OUR PARENTS HAPPINESS.

It is the duty of all Christians to try to make all other Christians happy. This truth is nowhere more necessary than in the home. Parents and children working together in the Lord can be the source of untold happiness to each other. And it should be quickly added, it can be otherwise. Many homes are miniature hells because of the lack of loving devotion one to another. Paul advises in Romans 12:10: "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honour preferring one another." This may well be applied in the home.

Happiness can be fostered by politeness. It seems as though we treat outsiders so much better than we treat insiders. Coming in the front door seems to be a license to let down the ordinary laws of courtesy, to start complaining, to start shouting, to say cutting things, to be impolite. A correction of this fault will lead to home happiness.

Happiness can be fostered by kindness. As was written on the flyleaf of the Bible of one of our fine young ladies, since gone to be with the Lord: "We should always say the kindest things in the kindest way." Our speech should be seasoned with love. Our facial expressions should be expressive of love and joy. Our daily acts should show forth our devotion to each other. As one little girl said as she held the hand of her deceased brother: "This little hand never once struck me." There should be a mutual concern one for the other in all things.

Happiness can be fostered by an attitude of mutual protection. The Africans have a heathen rite in which they cut themselves over the heart and then press their bleeding bodies together. They thus conclude that blood passes from one to the other and they are thus of one blood. What affects one, affects the other. This is nowhere more true than in the home. Parents and children, brothers and sisters, these are all of one flesh and one blood and there should be a mutual desire to care for, protect, and make all happy.

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray for the house-to-house visitation program at Cleveland, under the direction of Pastor Robert Cessna, that the immediate community might be reached for Christ.

2. Praise God for the financing of the new Grace Brethren Church at Elyria, Ohio, and pray for the Brethren Construction crew as they erect the church, which will be their seventh one.

3. Pray for the Mountain Brethren Church, La Crescenta, Calif., that the property title may be cleared so that the remodeling program may be completed.

4. Pray for the Seattle church regarding a delay in their building program due to the real-estate dealer not keeping his word concerning the property contract.

5. Pray for the sale of the present church property in Cheyenne and the relocation of the work.

6. Pray that our Brethren people will be challenged and burdened with the need of sending forth the Gospel here in the United States. Prayer is a prerequisite for the Home Mission Offering.

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Praise God for answered prayer in bringing in a good offering for the month of June.

2. Continue to pray for the monthly offering plan and for other good offerings throughout the summer.

3. Pray for the growth of the school and the additional building necessary to care for our growing college.

4. Pray that the young people may be directed to Grace by the many contacts being made this summer by students and faculty.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Pray for Miss Mary Emmert as she makes final arrangements to leave the United States for another term of service in Africa.

2. Praise the Lord for passage to France for the Marvin Goodman, Jr., family. Pray for them as they spend some time in language study in France.

3. Praise the Lord for an 11-percent increase in our foreign-mission offering for the period of January 1 to July 21, 1955. Pray for the wise use of these funds.

4. Pray that the Lord will lead in the carrying out of the many important decisions made at our Foreign Board sessions and at National Conference at Portland.

5. Pray for the work in Brazil as we acquire new property and look toward expansion both in the church and in Christian day schools.

6. Praise the Lord for answer to prayer in the safety of our missionaries, national believers, and mission property during the recent unrest in Argentina. Continue to pray that there will be no hindrances to the going out of the Gospel.

7. Pray for our workers in Hawaii as new opportunities arise as new doors of opportunity stand ajar.

8. Pray for increased spiritual activity on the part of national believers in France, and for Bro. George Cone, Jr., as he administers the work.

9. Pray for the goodly numbers who have accepted Christ during recent trips down deep in Mexico, and for the special efforts being put forth in the teaching and training of believers.

10. Pray for the missionaries in Africa as they train native leadership, and especially for these young men training to be teachers in the French schools.

11. Pray for Miss Estella Myers, our pioneer missionary in Africa, who is returning to the States immediately for health reasons.

MISSIONARY HERALD—

1. Pray for the Lord's guidance as the denomination office building is being constructed, that wisdom might be given for every decision.

2. Pray that the Lord might use the new Brethren church bulletins to the profit of our churches and the glory of the Lord.

3. Pray regarding the sale of the present Missionary Herald building.

WMC—

(By Mrs. Kenneth Ashman, president.)

1. Pray that our women will have a zeal from the very beginning of our WMC year to put forth every effort to promote the work "as unto the Lord" and not as unto man.

2. Praise the Lord for the blessings of our past year in seeing offerings go over the goal, in seeing prayers answered, in the organizing of so many new councils, in the increased number of family altars established.

3. Pray for our officers of national, district, and local groups, that they may be guided by the Holy Spirit and be in His will.

4. Pray that we women will realize the blessed privilege we have in serving through WMC, and conduct ourselves always as Christian women.

5. Pray for our WMC women on the foreign fields: Africa, Brazil, and Argentina.

SMM—

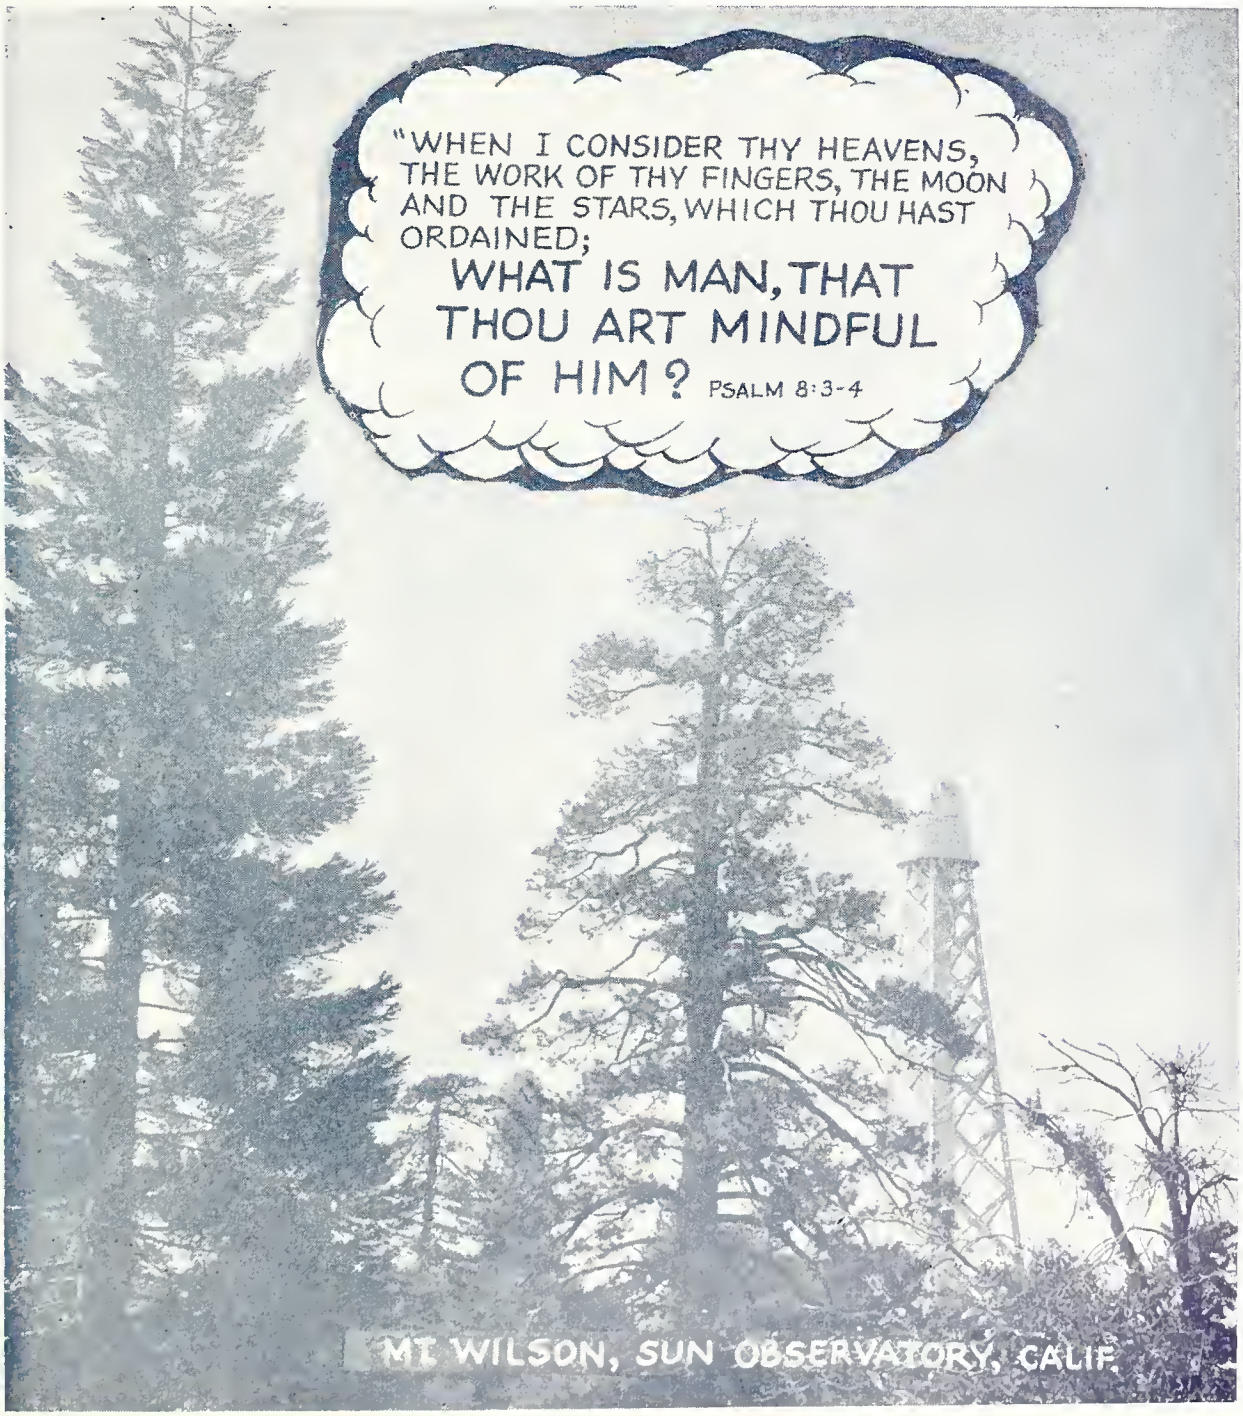
1. Pray for our national officers, that the needs will be supplied for their transportation to National Conference.

2. Pray for a safe journey for all girls attending the conference in Portland.

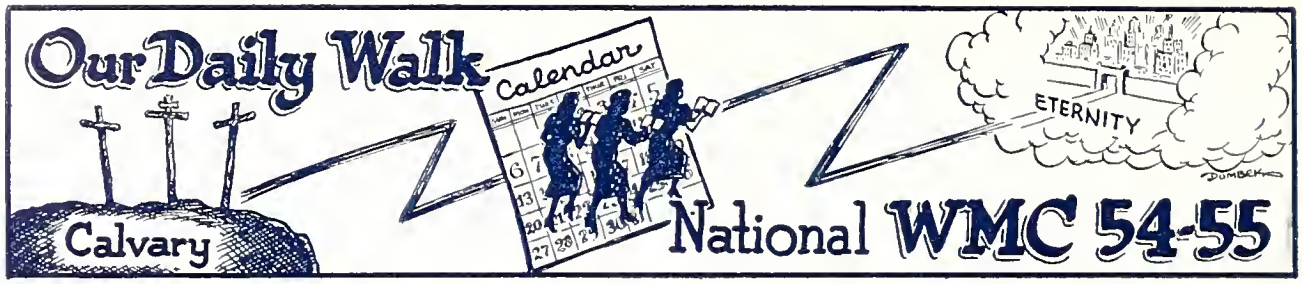
2. Pray that many girls in the West will be able to attend the SMM sessions in Portland.

BYF—

1. Pray for our youth as they return to school, that they may get a vision of how the Lord can bless a truly Christian testimony.



2. Pray for the new projects, that all may willingly support them.



3. Pray for strong leadership among our Brethren young people, themselves, that there may be initiative and consecration.

IN HIM IS NO DARKNESS AT ALL

By MRS. C. W. MAYES

The days have been dark in this poor sin-cursed world ever since the cloud of sin came into the Garden of Eden to hide the face of God. The children of men need light. God has made provision for their need, but they refuse to accept His provision. Vainly they try to provide their own light.

It is left for us who are the representatives of One in whom there is no darkness to so walk in His light that men will see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. What shame that they often find reason to say: "If that is Christianity, I do not want any of it." God has pity for the lost. Do we?

Just as the whole creation is dependent upon physical light, so all that is in the spiritual realm depends upon the light of the glory of God.

We who have always known material light, take it for granted. We see around us the manifestations and effects of light. They seem very common and simple. However, it would seem almost impossible to define light itself to one born blind.

So it is with spiritual light. Only those who have gone into the blackness and darkness of heathendom can begin to appreciate even the byproducts and the reflections of the True Light. We take them as a matter of course, scarcely realizing from whence they have come.

How much easier, then, is it for even Christians to fail to appreciate that which is intangible. This wonderful treasure that is ours, we carry it so loosely and carelessly in these earthen vessels. We find it difficult to define natural light, except by its manifestations and effects. How then can we expect a world born in spiritual blindness to understand that "God who commanded light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ" (II Cor. 4:6)?

As we look around us, read the newspapers, or as we try to witness for our Lord, we are reminded of Paul's description of the gentiles. Indeed we see a people "having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart: who being past feeling have given themselves over unto lasciviousness, to work all uncleanness with greediness" (Eph. 4:18-19).

We are made to feel that like the fish that live in the darkness of the depth of the sea, they have lost even the sense of sight. The awfulness of their condition should shock us into action, but many of us seem to shrug our shoulders and, at least by our actions, say: "So what? After all, we Brethren live in prophecy. We know that 'evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" (II Tim. 3:13). We will just lift up our heads, for we know that our redemption draweth nigh."

Truly ours is a blessed hope, but God never meant it to lull us into carelessness and indifference. Before we lift up our heads, we need to bow them in humility and shame. Why has all this darkness come? We are in Christ, Christ is God, and "in him is no darkness at all." Where is our light?

It has become almost trite to say that the church has lost its power because Christians fail to manifest the Light. Naturally the churches that have no light are not giving any out, but why Bible-believing, Christ-honoring people should become smug and indifferent as the darkness settles down and the coming of the Lord draws near, is hard to understand.

Oh, that we might realize the awfulness of that darkness and the urgency of the need! Even as little children we sang—

> "Jesus bids us shine with a clear pure light
> Like a little candle burning in the night.
> In this world of darkness, we MUST shine,
> You in your small corner, and I in mine."

How is it in your corner, and how is it in mine? "If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness" (Matt. 6:22b).

Walking in the light to many of us means walking according to our standard for another person. Perhaps you are doing more than anyone else in your church. God does not give us the example of another good person, not even of a good Christian, but of himself. His promises are to those who "walk in the light as he is in the light."

Or you may feel that you have done your share and now it is time for another to take over. Beware of trying to patch up the present refusal to walk in the light by recalling past experiences when you did so walk. He does not cleanse us more and more from sin, but when we are walking in the light we are cleansed from all sin. In our relationship to God we do not grow step by step. Either we are in the light or we are not.

Those in our denomination who are in a position to know, tell us that with the setting aside of the 15th day of each month as a day of prayer, all of our auxiliaries took on new life. From information at hand it would seem that about 1 percent of the membership of the Brethren Church observe this day. What would happen if we really took it seriously?

Prayer-meeting attendance, Sunday-evening attendance, and other statistics on our church reports are nothing short of tragic. These things are only starting places. Are we Brethren walking in the light of Him in whom "there is no darkness at all"?

"THE LORD BLESS THEE"

By ISOBEL FRASER

"The Lord bless thee, and keep thee: the Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace" (Num. 6:24-26). So familiar, isn't it? But it is ever a precious Scripture, and in behalf of the Brethren Messianic Witness, I would invoke this blessing upon you ladies of the WMC for your interest and support of our witness to Israel. I know He will, for I stand upon His promise: "I will bless them that bless thee [Israel]" (Gen. 12:3).

Each time we say the above WMC benediction, I am reminded of Israel. For, if you will check the context, you will note that this was the blessing the Lord commanded Aaron and his sons to pronounce upon His chosen people. This fact was brought to my attention several years ago by an orthodox Jewish friend. At many of their holiday seasons, I send cards upon which a Scripture is written; often this passage in Numbers. Mrs. B. always expressed her appreciation and mentioned the Scripture. Upon one such occasion she mentioned that this was a Levitical blessing and only the c*ohenim* (priests) were really permitted to use it. Upon checking the Scripture, the reason was quite apparent. Even today, it is the benediction the rabbi pronounces at the close of the service. Thinking back, I am reminded that it too was always the closing benediction at the First Hebrew Christian Church of Chicago, which I attended while in that city.

Since I mentioned the c*ohenim* (priests) above, perhaps I should make the following explanation, which will also be of interest to you. As you know, the Jewish people today cannot authoritatively prove from which tribe they come—Judah, Benjamin, Gad, Simeon, Reuben, etc.—for the records were destroyed in the destruction of the temple and of Jerusalem in 70 A. D. However, present-day Judaism divides Jews into three groups, c*ohenim,* Levites, and Israelites. The first two classifications you will recognize as representing the descendants of Levi, those who were responsible for the worship services according to the Old Testament. Those who belong to these classifications have special privileges in regard to the services in the synagogue and temple today. Those who are so designated, however, have only tradition to substantiate their claims. Usually those named Cohn, Cohan, Cohen, Levy, Levitt, etc., are of these groups. If I remember correctly, Mrs. B. said that her husband came from the priestly group. Even in this, the preserving hand of God can be seen, for undoubtedly from these groups will come the priests and attendants in the restored temple at Jerusalem when the Antichrist makes his covenant with the Jews.

Returning to our Numbers passage, my present concern is with the verse that follows: "And they shall put my name upon the children of Israel; and I will bless them." True, it was the descendants of Aaron who are so spoken of, but this is God's indictment against them: "My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray" (Jer. 50:6a). Therefore, we must bring God's message to them. Actually, it is our desire to put His name upon them—Christian, which actually is "Messiahan." And it is only as they bear His name through faith in His shed blood that they can be blessed of God. Mainly it is by personal contact that they are brought into this blessed relationship with Him.

Perhaps some of you have read the article on Judaism in the June 13, 1955, issue of Life magazine. If not, try to do so; it will give you a more complete idea of Judaism, especially orthodox. The pictures in particular are excellent. However, I was quite amazed to read that 2,000,000 were orthodox, 800,000 conservative, and 800,000 reformed. I have met very few truly orthodox; perhaps most of my contacts are of the remainder of the 5,000,000 in the U. S. that are not accounted for. However, do not think that means they are atheistic; they are just indifferent; as are most of the gentiles. To most Jews, Judaism is not a religion, but a way of life.

A dear Jewish friend asked me about this article, stating that it expressed what she believed; that is, the section on conservative Judaism, for that is what she considers herself. As we talked, she asked about an after-life, which conservative Judaism does not hold to. I gave her God's answer from Daniel 12:2 and Job 19: 25-26. "The're wrong then," she replied, referring to the article. She told me that her mother, who had been a Hebrew teacher, believed in an after-life and in Messiah. She has been doing quite a bit of reading in an abridged Bible (contains parts of Old and New Testament), and she asked me about Saul and Paul. It was quite confusing to her; she had asked her husband about it, but he, of course, was unable to help her. She was confusing Saul of the Old Testament with Saul of Tarsus, and then could not figure out how he became Paul. I had a wonderful opportunity to explain it to her. She especially likes the writings of Paul and she read to me all of Acts 26. What a testimony it contains! She takes such a stand for the existence of Christianity that she told me her husband insists she is already a believer. However, she is quick to assure me that she is just my Jewish friend. And she is that, indeed. I am trusting that one day she shall be persuaded by the Holy Spirit through the Word to be a believer.

I'm just now getting back into the swing of our calling program, as I had the privilege of counseling and teaching at the junior-high and junior sessions of the California district camp. At first I was at a loss as to how to present our work to these age groups, but I found it a real blessing and no problem as I used Jewish customs as my springboard. Many of them asked questions after the sessions and told of their experiences with Jewish friends. Above all, I felt this an opportunity to acquaint our Christian young people with a better understanding of the Jews, a real need in combating anti-Semitism. This week as I was visiting Mrs. B. (orthodox friend previously mentioned) she asked about camp. I told her a little about it and mentioned showing the Bnai Brith (Jewish organization) film, "Your Neighbor Celebrates." She was quite impressed and said that was what was needed to combat the growing anti-Semitism.

Ladies, really, this is one of the greatest barriers in reaching the Jews for Christ. Just yesterday, I was talking to an elderly Jewess who is quite atheistic. One of the main causes of the attitude has been the recent persecutions in Europe. She has come from an orthodox, rabbinical family, but repudiates everything now. The Scriptures mean nothing—man's words!

Since returning from camp, almost every day I've had at least one good contact in my daily calling. One elderly man said he had attended services at the Calvary Temple in Winnipeg, Canada; also other churches, including Catholic. But, said he, "I'm not satisfied." "Have you accepted Jesus as your Saviour and Messiah?" I asked. His answer was negative. "That's the reason you are not satisfied," I replied. "Jew and gentile alike can only find satisfaction when they are in the right relationship to God through faith in Jesus." He told me that he believed Jesus was Messiah, but that was all. Previously he had asked if I were a Jehovah's Witness. (We are too often thought to be J. W.'s.) He had even looked into that cult, but, praise God, was not taken in. He asked about our church and place of meeting. We couldn't speak further, as he was leaving for work, but he did accept a New Testament. Most of our contacts are just indifferent, but there is His promise of the remnant (Rom. 11:5); may these be included.

Ladies, I'd just like to say a word about the banks that are a gift to you from the Jewish department of our Home Missions Council. We have so greatly appreciated your support, especially financially through the Thank Offering. The bank is designed to give you an attractive depository for that penny-a-day offering. Brother Button has received a sample of it, and I do wish you could see it. Shaped like a Jewish synagogue, it is light blue and white in color; triple significance—for Israel, for WMC—and for heaven, which we pray that many Jews will gain because of your offerings.

Since we had the sample, I showed it to the WMC's of Inglewood, and they were as pleased with it as we are. One of the ladies said something that just thrilled me. She has several Jewish friends and neighbors and remarked that the bank would give her an opportunity to witness to them. May it open the way for all of us to witness; perhaps not only to Jews. May it also afford the opportunity to say a word regarding the Jews that might counteract the growing anti-Semitism in America. In serving Him in these ways, "The Lord bless thee."

OUT OF THE EDITOR'S MAIL BOX

The ladies of Beaver City, Nebr., have been busy helping improve the interior of their church with new kitchen equipment and served meals to the men as they painted the church.

Mrs. Jake Kliever was a surprise guest speaker at the June WMC meeting in Phoenix, Ariz., and the message was thoroughly enjoyed.

THANK YOU

By Bill Burk

"When he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me."

It's been a month since moving; the books are on the shelves, the radio antenna is in the attic, and the mosquito nets hang over the beds. "Rejoice with us." These and other similar things have made the month seem like a watch of the night and we feel that we're just now beginning fully to enjoy the new house and its conveniences. However, from the first day the running water with a shower has been a new reality and luxury almost forgotten. In the tropics I know of few things which so quickly invigorate a withered, hot body as does such water "out of a tube" (as the Portuguese language would probably state it).

We've come home after traveling as pilgrims in places not our own for some years, and it certainly is an occasion for rejoicing on our part. The house is wonderful, but not made of gold. In fact, some of the poor quality of Brazilian concrete is already chipping off. (It's poor because by Stateside standards they mix it with too much sand). Furthermore, when it rains hard, the water comes through the roof in places, through the ceiling, and onto the floor. As any Brazilian homeowner, I climb into the attic during downpours to arrange the tiles of the roof for the least leaks, but down here perfection is not expected.

But we still rejoice because the house is not unlike many to be found in Icoraci. Without a doubt it is better than the average, for the average man in Icoraci works for less than a dollar a day (and has a bigger family to feed than do most Norte Americanos). Still there are many more expensive homes in Icoraci, but we don't think they're any nicer (naturally). Since the description of the home has already appeared in the Herald, I'll not repeat except to remind the reader that it's made of common clay tile covered with plaster and with hardwood floors. It's a pleasant home in appearance, but not fancy; probably the most luxurious thing in the eyes of the people being the screened windows—a must at home with merely flies; a necessity here with disease-bearing mosquitoes, tarantulas, etc. (Since the people don't have screens and since only a few have mosquito nets, last Sunday—with more than a dozen in my junior Sunday-school class—there were only two families represented who still had all their brothers and sister living. Most of the children had two or three gone from their families!)

The ladies of the National Women's Missionary Council will be interested to know that our new front room (or sala de visita) is the meeting place of our local WMC and other women's meetings such as baby showers. The home is frequently visited by the people of the church, young and old alike. Many of them have eaten with us at the table at various times and daily there are youngsters of the church and/or neighborhood playing with Linda and Art on the wide porch all around the house. Sometimes the Brethren (but most often their wives) come in groups to visit with us and occasionally singly, usually the latter when there is some item of business involved. We're pleased that the people realize that this is their home, the property of the mission and not of the very grateful Senhor Bill e Dona Imogene."

WMC IN BRAZIL

Hi!

Since Bill isn't around to write this week, thought I'd drop a line and say "Hello" to everyone and tell you about our first WMC meeting. In May we had a mother-daughter banquet. You should have seen the conglomeration of plates and silver Jean and I collected between us. It was quite a sight, but we all got fed. We took pictures and will send them as soon as they are finished. The men pretended to be very put out because they weren't invited.

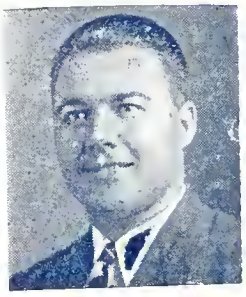
Monday night we organized the WMC, or rather concílio de misionario das Senhoras. There were 32 women and girls and five little ones present. A president, secretary, treasurer, prayer chairman, visitation committee, and welcome committee were elected. The ladies have somewhat to learn about parliamentary procedure, but we had an election anyway.

The visitation committee consists of two women and two girls who were to visit absent members and anyone else they knew to invite them to our next meeting. However, these people have an entirely different idea of visitation than do we, and I hope it never changes. The next afternoon I saw one lady from this committee in action.

I had gone walking with the children when I passed the house of one of the new converts. I didn't know she lived that near the church. Gathered in the house singing were four women and two girls. I was invited in, and after two or three more hymns were sung, was asked to read something from the Bible. I read without comment a portion of John 3. I was rather sorry I happened along, for I'm sure the leader of the group would have preached her a good sermon probably on the value of church attendance since she had been absent a while. After one of the ladies prayed, I excused myself and left. The rest stayed for cafezinha and a social time. This group had already visited another home.

The welcome committee is composed of three girls and three women—a girl and woman for each of the three meetings here in the church. Their job is to greet strangers, give them a tract, and direct them to a seat, and, on Sunday morning, to the Sunday-school classes. Our women take their responsibilities seriously and are proud to serve.

Has Bill written about the child evangelism class in Furo? Two more little girls accepted the Lord there yesterday, making a total of four in the six weeks. They average 10 or 12 years of age. I visited the home of the first girl and was received very cordially as were the deaconesses who visited there this week. The mother expressed a definite interest and we're praying she will start coming to the services.



Of course all is not smooth sailing; our hearts grieve as some go back into sin, and also the Catholics are beginning to take notice of us; yet these very discouragements also encourage us, for we know that where there is opposition the power of the Gospel has been felt.

We're supposed to receive the keys to the house today. It's all finished except for cleaning paint from woodwork and mopping floors, etc.

We thank God upon every remembrance of you,

Imogene Burk.

Who's Who for August

ROBERT E. A. MILLER

Rare indeed is the case of any preacher's family which can settle down in one spot to serve the Lord until all the children are grown and gone from the nest. As the oldest child of 10 born to R. Paul and Anne Miller, Robert learned from firsthand experience the truth of this fact. Born May 20, 1915, in Covina, Calif., a gift to his parents on their first wedding anniversary, Robert entered school in Spokane, Wash. From thence he continued schooling in Los Angeles, Calif., Philadelphia, Pa., and Berne, Ind., where he finished high school at the age of 16.

The following four years were spent at Wheaton College, from which he was graduated with a degree in science in 1935. From the day he had taken Christ as his Saviour when a lad in the First Brethren Church of Philadelphia, which his father pastored, Robert desired to serve the Lord as a medical missionary to Africa. In the latter part of college days the young man met God in a genuine struggle and yielded to Him the long-cherished dream to study medicine. From college he went to seminary and was graduated with the first class from Grace Seminary in 1938.

In 1935 he married his childhood sweetheart, Althea Schwartz, whom he met in Philadelphia First Church. Robert often teases his wife by telling friends she had him on hand since he was eight years old. Althea is not so sure of that as she is sure their five sons and four daughters will keep them both "on hand" and stepping for a few years. He is now serving the Lord in his third pastorate in Roanoke, Va., and daily rejoices in the sweet faithfulness of God. He is confident that "we have no might . . . neither know we what to do: but our eyes are upon thee" (II Chron. 20:12).—Althea Miller.

MRS. EDWARD D. MILLER

Eileen Goodman Miller comes from a missionary minded family. As this is being prepared, Eileen's brother, Rev. Marvin Goodman, Jr., and his family are returning to their field of service in Africa, and her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Goodman, Sr., are waiting for visa renewals so that they may return to their work in India under the Child Evangelism Fellowship.

Born in Empire, Calif., on September 18, 1924, Eileen lived in and around Modesto until her graduation from high school in 1942. That summer she and her parents moved to Winona Lake, Ind. Eileen entered Bob Jones College that fall, but transferred to Bryan University the following year. It was during her junior year at Bryan that she was married to Edward D. Miller, also a student at the same school, on December 18, 1944. They both were graduated from Bryan University in 1946 with A. B. degrees.

College graduation was followed by three years' residence at Winona Lake while Eileen's husband took further training at Grace Theological Seminary. Eileen had accepted the Lord when she was a child of 10, and later she had given her life for foreign-missionary service. It was while they were at Grace that both Eddie and Eileen felt the definite call of the Lord to go to Brazil. The field was just being entered with a Brethren testimony by the Keith Altig family in the year of 1949. Not many months after their acceptance by the Foreign Missionary Society, the Millers were on their way to the field, and arrived in Belem, Brazil, on March 6, 1950. In August of 1951 the Millers moved some 200 miles across the Amazon River to Macapa, on the north bank, where they opened the station where they are still in residence.

There are four children in the Miller family: Carol Ann, who was born in this country in 1947; and the other three all born in Brazil—Jeanette in 1951, Edward, Jr., in 1952, and Stanley in 1954.—Marcia Lowe.

NATIONAL WMC OFFERING REPORT

Home Missions	$2,895.40
Christian Education	2,715.76
Foreign Missions	2,720.51
Thank Offering (Penny-a-Day)	3,594.65
Missionary Birthday	2,169.68
Missionary Residence	612.89
General Expense	2,163.82

This is a report of which we as WMC members can be justly proud. The Lord has used WMC to channel many dollars into His work. This is a total of the regular national offerings as our national treasurer closed her books on July 15. At that time some councils had not yet sent in their offerings but would be entered on next year's report. Did your council have a part in each of these offerings? This does not include any local or district project offerings, which would total a good many more hundred dollars. Truly we can praise the Lord for a good year financially.—Editor.

WINONA LAKE JUNIOR WMC BUSY

Although it seems everyone in Winona Lake is always "so busy," the Junior WMC has had an interesting and profitable year, with several special events in addition to the regular meetings.

One of the highlights was their "Birthday Party" in April. They were privileged to have Marybeth Munn as the special speaker. The Junior SMM girls were also guests that evening and put on a skit and other numbers for them. An excellent birthday offering was received by the group.

The June meeting was in the form of a "family picnic," with husbands and children of members as guests. In spite of the cool, rainy evening, which necessitated having the picnic indoors rather than at the park where they had expected to meet, the turnout was gratifying. The tables abounded with food, and pleasant fellowship was enjoyed by all.

THE BRIDAL TRAIL

By Mrs. Arnold R. Kriegbaum

As you choose your subjects this fall and plan your year's work, the Lord is leading you IF you're yielded to do God's will. There are three verses in the Psalms that you should underscore. "The Lord thinketh upon me" (Ps. 40:17); the word for "thinketh" has the idea of planning, or weaving. "God that performeth all things for me" (Ps. 57:2), or worketh everything together for good for me. "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me" (Ps. 138:8).

God is interested in your bridal trail. It is a very important step in your life, as your future weal or woe may depend on your choice of a husband. The story of Rebekah reveals how God silently plans for His own children, and the blessings that result when a life is presented to the Lord.

Turn in your Bible to Genesis, chapter 24, and follow the interesting story about the wedding of Rebekah and Isaac. Customs have decidedly changed, but God plans for you just the same, for Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and today, and forever.

Abraham was Isaac's father, and his first thought was that Isaac should marry a girl from a home where they loved and trusted the true and living God. So he made his oldest and most trusted servant swear that he would go back to Abraham's hometown and bring a bride for Isaac. Abraham, the friend of God, told the servant that the Lord God of heaven would send His angel before him and show him what wife to take from thence.

Eliezer, the servant, took 10 camels and departed. When he arrived at Nahor, he made his camels to kneel down by the well, where women go out to draw water. Then he prayed and asked the Lord of his master Abraham to show him which of the daughters of men was for Isaac. "Behold, I stand here by the well of water . . . let it come to pass, that the damsel to whom I shall say, Let down thy pitcher, I pray thee, that I may drink; and she shall say, Drink and I will give thy camels drink also: let the same be she that thou hast appointed for thy servant Isaac; and thereby shall I know that thou hast showed kindness unto my master" (24:13-14).

The servant did not look for the bride in some glamour magazine or questionable place. It was at a well. And look what he asked for: (1) that she may be good, virtuous, a virgin; (2) that she may be polite to a stranger; (3) polite to an old man; (4) not lazy, willing to draw for 10 thirsty camels that could drink a lot of water, and (5) that she might be the one appointed for Isaac. Before he had done speaking, Rebekah came out with her pitcher upon her shoulder. She was very fair to look upon, a virgin; she went down to the well, and filled her pitcher and came up. The servant ran to meet her and she said: "Drink, and I will give thy camels drink also," which she did hastily.

The man was wonderstruck. As soon as the camels finished drinking, he gave her beautiful jewels of gold, and asked if there was room at her father's house for them to stay. Her answers were straightforward and pleased the servant, who bowed his head and thanked God for bringing him to the very house of Abraham's brother.

Rebekah ran home and told the news and showed her gifts. She did not try to be deceitful. Her brother, Laban, then went to the well and guided the servant and his company to the house, where they received gracious hospitality.

The servant did not want to eat before he told why he had come. His story convinced Rebekah's loved ones that the whole proceeding was of the Lord, and they told him to take Rebekah to his master's son to be his wife. Her brother and mother wanted her to stay at least 10 days, but the servant said the next morning to please not detain them. Rebekah said, "I will," and she started on the bridal trail, riding a camel with her attendants beside her following a rather different "flower girl."

Isaac was roaming in the field and looked up and saw the camels were coming; his bride was "coming down the green-carpeted aisle." When the servant told Rebekah the man was Isaac, she slipped off the camel and modestly drew her veil over her. The servant told Isaac all that he had done. And Isaac brought Rebekah into his mother Sarah's tent (maybe he carried her over the threshold). She became his wife and he loved her.

Did you read how Eliezer gave Rebekah's brother and mother precious gifts? When you follow God's path, you not only get blessed, but your family and friends are blessed, too. What if Rebekah had played sick, or disobedient that day and not gone for the water? Obedience is better than sacrifice, and one disobedience can rob you of God's richest blessing.

Rebekah was kind, loving, modest, industrious, helpful, polite, and virtuous. These traits will make you beautiful, too. God rewarded her with a fine, noble husband, besides great riches. No good thing will God withhold from you if you walk uprightly.

THINGS TO REMEMBER

1. Don't fail to have a fall cabinet meeting. Prepare for some outstanding meetings for the coming year.
2. Begin working now on the goals and personal projects.
3. Something for the monthly leader. Do you want to make your Sisterhood meetings just as interesting as possible? You can do that by using all the material found in the Herald. This includes our devotional topic, missionary biography, and special items appearing in the WMC Number of the Herald. A great deal of time has been put into these topics, so make good use of them!

The Hand of God on the Life of Dorothy Maconaghy

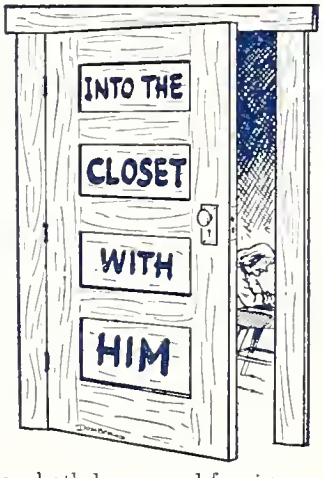
By Althea S. Miller

Teaching a class of colored children in the Eighth Street Rescue Mission in Philadelphia seems to be a far cry from telling the Argentines about Christ and His salvation. But that little class of children was the starting point in a life of missionary endeavor.

Dorothy

Dorothy Lewis, of Philadelphia, came to know Jesus Christ as her personal Saviour when 13 years of age. Her mother and a faithful Sunday-school teacher were God's instruments in the young girl's salvation. God led this child of His to attend the Philadelphia School of the Bible, from which she was graduated in 1930. Dorothy and her fiance, Hill Maconaghy, yielded themselves to the Lord for missionary service at about the same time and spent many of their courtship days at the Eighth Street Mission and in classes at PSOB.

As Dorothy and Hill sat under the dynamic teaching of R. Paul Miller in personal-evangelism classes at PSOB, they became interested in the Brethren Church. It was not long until they were convinced of Brethren doctrine, and became members of the First Brethren Church at 10th and Dauphin Streets in January of 1928.



Mrs. Maconaghy still marvels at the leading of the Lord in these better than 17 years spent in South America. As a young Christian and a teen-ager she had no dreams or ideas of becoming a missionary. She had rather planned on marriage and the ordinary life of any U. S. citizen. But when God has His hand on a child of His, the ordinary becomes extraordinary and the obscure person is lifted from the humdrum and put in the place of greatest influence for Christ. This is exactly what happened to this missionary. When God called her for foreign service, she did not rebel against the call even though she was surprised. Dorothy said "yes" immediately to her Lord and has been glad ever since.

Having no children, Mrs. Maconaghy works constantly beside her husband in house-to-house visitation, personal work, Sunday school, and Bible-school work. God has used them to open new works in Argentina by going into cities where there is no evangelical testimony, winning the unsaved to Christ, and establishing a church. This job is much easier written about than done. It takes persistence, prayer, and personal sacrifice to realize spiritual fruit. But God is always faithful and Mrs. Maconaghy counts the work all joy for Him.

If you are looking for a real thrill, one which will not soon leave you, Mrs. Maconaghy urges all Christian youth, both fellows and girls, to yield yourselves completely to the call of the Lord, having not one "if" or "but" when you say "yes." Then when you are used of Him to the salvation of lost humanity you'll experience a thrill such as nothing in this life can offer.

There is hardly a man or woman who does not expect and want satisfaction in his job, no matter what that job may be. Dorothy Maconaghy says you get that too in missionary work. After the lost are saved and they begin to show evidence of salvation in spiritual growth, you have the deep-down satisfaction of having been a part in leading one from the awful realities of hell to the realities of eternal life with Christ. Our missionary challenges each Sisterhood girl to personally experience these facts by answering God's call, no matter where He may lead you. Will YOU answer this call?

PRAYER REQUESTS

Pray for newly elected officers in each local SMM and district organization. Especially remember the national officers, that the Lord will give them physical strength and the wisdom needed for their work.

Pray for the National Project, that we may start now to do our best for the Lord.

Pray for the young people in college as they will soon begin a new year of study in preparation for the Lord's work.

Pray for all the missionaries, both home and foreign.

SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR SEPTEMBER

THEME SONG—Open your meeting and the new year by singing the theme song, "My Desire, To Be Like Jesus," and an opening word of prayer.

SCRIPTURE—Read together Psalms 37:1-7.

PRAYER CIRCLE—Have each girl take part in this phase of the meeting, even if it is only a sentence prayer.

DEVOTIONAL TOPIC—Seniors and Middlers study "The Bridal Trail," by Mrs. Arnold Kriegbaum; Juniors study "Come, Rebekah," by Mrs. R. Paul Miller.

SPECIAL NUMBER.

MISSIONARY BIOGRAPHY—An interesting article on the life of Dorothy Maconaghy has been written for your consideration. Don't miss it! Juniors, there's one for you by Mrs. Rose Foster!

CHORUS—"Saved, Saved to Tell Others."

BUSINESS MEETING.

SMM BENEDICTION.

AWARD WINNERS

Would you like to know who the girls are who memorized the Book of Colossians? Ask any of these girls if they regret that they did it, and then put some effort to do some memorizing this year! The following all memorized Colossians:

Evelyn Tschetter, Winona Lake, Ind.
Marjorie Turner, Portis, Kans.
Kathleen Cheney, Williamsburg, Iowa
Joyce Baker, Jenners, Pa.
Lois Tschetter, Winona Lake, Ind.
Leemay Suiter, Long Beach, Calif.
Carolyn Oberholtzer, Clay City, Ind.
Mary Jane Keyser, Tangent, Oreg.
Shirley Ann Kuhn, Berne, Ind.
Nancy Weber, Hagerstown, Md.
Betty Fiscus, Kittanning, Pa.
Mrs. Leola Schantz, Dayton, Ohio
Mrs. Ralph Burns, Altoona, Pa.

Hope we didn't miss anyone! If we did, please notify the general secretary at once!

In your Sisterhood meetings this year you will enjoy the 12 true missionary stories by Mrs. Rose Foster. With her husband she served 25 exciting but glorious years in French Equatorial Africa. Four years ago her Joe went to be with the Lord. They not only served faithfully and capably on the field, but were always a rich, spiritual blessing to the homefolk. Mrs. Foster now serves on a committee for the National Women's Missionary Council, and travels extensively to meet her speaking engagements. Though but 4 feet, 7 inches in stature, she is every inch a gracious, lovely Christian lady. If you like her stories, she would love to hear from you.—L. K.

ALL ABOARD!

By Mrs. Rose Foster

We sailed at noon October 17, 1925, on a typical October day, neither rainy nor clear. Many of our friends had come from Philadelphia to say farewell, and some for the first time saw an imposing and majestic ocean liner. All of our company gathered on the deck, and with Bro. R. Paul Miller, our pastor, we had one last beautiful service together. Then the big whistle blew, and that meant "Get off, visitors!" Everyone wished us a last "good journey." The gangplank was pulled in, and there we were with the waterline widening between us and the wharf. Naturally we all wished for a good voyage. But, how changeable the things in the world can be.

We arranged our cabins; then we went on an inspection tour. What a beautiful ship! How could we describe it! We couldn't. The then practically new Paris was built for the wealthy, and we had never before enjoyed such luxury. The boat was so large and wonderfully made, I never dreamed there were waves large enough to completely cripple such a boat. But more than one such floating castle has limped into port after passing through an outrageous storm.

Ere long, Dr. and Mrs. Orville Jobson, Joe and I were snuggled in our blankets enjoying life from our deck-chairs. With evening we saw the waves becoming larger, and by the time 7 o'clock dinner was over, we had only one urge—to snuggle into our beds. We had a good night dreaming of being pioneers exploring the unseen of God's great world.

The afternoon of the second day, the sky lost its brightness as the sunshine disappeared. Dark clouds overspread the entire visible heavens. The winds and the waves began to beat and blow instead of soothe and caress. The boat began to rock from side to side. Gradually the voyagers disappeared from the deck. As the darkness increased, the severity of the storm increased. The boat creaked as it swung from side to side, and I wondered if it could long endure the great beating it was receiving.

The stewards had put our steamer trunks under our berths. All night long one of those trunks rolled with the boat. Bang! It was against the outside wall. Bump, bang! It was against the inside partition. What a night! Morning brought no abating of the storm. I couldn't find my eyeglasses. Mrs. Jobson and Mr. Foster had to remain in bed; they had succumbed to the dreaded seasickness.

The two of us who were able to be about worked our way to the dining room and then to the deck to snuggle in our steamer blankets. All of a sudden a huge wave struck the ship. Every passenger on deck was thrown against the heavy guard railing. Some were slightly injured. One of the lifeboats was lifted from its anchor and had a large hole knocked in its side. Some of the portholes were forced open, and into the cabins poured a stream of water. Everything was in confusion, both inside the ship and on the decks. But in it all I found my glasses. Have you guessed where! They were lodged on a strip underneath that steamer trunk that had rolled and banged all night, and there was only a slight scratch on one lens. I wore them for five more years before they were changed.

After three long days and nights of suspense and discomfort, early in the morning we sighted Plymouth Lighthouse on the British shoreline. What relief and gladness as we realized we were near our journey's end! That lighthouse assured us we had made the hazardous trip and were now nearing our destination. The captain had piloted the ship safely through the troubled waters.

Do you know, girls, life is very much like a sea voyage. Some days are bright and sunny, and we move across the sea of life without a ripple. Other days the waters are troubled all about us, and we know not where to hide from the storms of life which come over us in the way of temptations of the enemy without and from the self life within us.

On the good ship Paris there was an experienced pilot to guide us. He knew the ship, and he knew the way, and he was able to bring the ship safely to harbor.

Jesus said, "I am the way." There is no other way. He knows all about our troubled pathway. He knows how to guide us through the troubled waters of life. And when the journey of life is over, we will be safe at home in gloryland with the Lord—if we are on Christ's ship. "Git on board, little children."

SUGGESTIONS FOR SEPTEMBER

1. JUNIOR PROGRAM MATERIAL—The junior material will not appear in packet form this year due to circumstances involved in having the conference at Portland. The junior material will appear monthly in the Herald.

2. IMPORTANT—We need a list of names and addresses of all DISTRICT officers. District Secretary, this is a job for you. Thanks.

3. FALL CABINET MEETING—Yes; start making plans now for your officers to have a meeting in which to organize the year's work. This is a very important job, local president.

4. HAVE YOU GOTTEN YOUR NEW MATERIAL? Maybe we didn't get a statistical blank from your group. Write to the national literature secretary immediately. Be sure to specify how many girls are in your group.

5. IS YOUR SISTERHOOD BACKSLIDING? If your group has ever done better than they did last year —you're backslidden! Let's see if your group can go forward this year in the Lord. Remember—it takes the cooperation of each girl.

"COME, REBEKAH"

(GENESIS 24-25) By Mrs. R. Paul Miller

Rebekah was born into a God-fearing, God-loving home in the Land of Ur of the Chaldees. Her father's name was Bethuel and her grandmother's name was Milcah. She honored her parents, listened to their teaching, and grew to be a kind, obedient, trustworthy young lady, polite to her elders. God had rich, beautiful plans for Rebekah and she fitted into these plans, which brought great riches and blessing to her life.

Over in the land of Canaan, Abraham and his son were sad because their faithful wife and mother had died. Abraham turned to his servant and told him to go back to the land where Abraham used to live and choose a wife for his son, Isaac. Now Isaac was Sarah's only son and was greatly beloved by his parents. He would receive all his father's wealth. God had prospered Abraham with many menservants, maidservants, camels, flocks, herds and lands, silver and gold.

The servant was fearful the girl might not be willing to follow him back to Canaan. But Abraham assured him the angel of the Lord would go before him and if the girl was not willing to follow the servant back, he was free from his orders.

God had planned everything for Rebekah, and we have this same God and His angel to watch over and lead our lives if we listen to the still small voice of the Holy Spirit who dwells in each of our hearts when we accept Christ as our Saviour.

As Eliezer, Abraham's eldest servant, neared the city of Nahor, he made his 10 camels to kneel down by a well of water. It was evening, the time that the women went to draw water. He prayed to the Lord God of his master Abraham and asked that the damsel whom he asked for a drink of water would say, "I will give thy camels drink also," would be the one the Lord had chosen for Isaac.

One of Rebekah's daily duties was to get water from the well. So this day Rebekah came with a pitcher on her head to the well. She was very pretty to look upon, and when the servant saw her, he ran to meet her and asked for a drink of water out of her pitcher. She gave him a drink and offered to draw water for the camels. She went back and forth hastily filling the trough for all the 10 camels. The servant wondered a bit, then gave her gold jewels—bracelets, and earrings. He asked her whose daughter she was and if there was room for them to stay all night in her father's house. She answered every question to the delight of the servant, and he at once bowed his head and worshiped the Lord. We should always stop and do the same when God answers our prayers. Nothing makes God so happy as gratitude from His children.

The servant blessed the Lord God of his master Abraham for taking him right to the house of his master's brother's granddaughter, Rebekah.

What if Rebekah had been careless about her daily tasks and had not gone to the well that day? It is very, very important to obey, because Rebekah would never have been there or talked to Abraham's servant if she had been disobedient, because he only came one time to that well. Just one disobedience can spoil our whole lives.

Rebekah was so excited she ran home and told them all that had happened. She didn't try to hide the gifts or be deceitful. When her brother, Laban, saw the gifts and heard her story, he went to the servant who was standing by his camels at the well and told him: "Come in, thou blessed of the Lord! wherefore standest thou without? for I have prepared the house, and room for the camels." Laban unharnessed the camels and gave them straw, food, and shelter. He gave the men water to wash with and set them down to eat. In God's great dramas in the Bible He reminds us over and over of the blessings that are ours when we are hospitable.

The servant was faithful to his errand, and didn't want to eat until he had told them the purpose of his being there. He then told them he was Abraham's servant, and all about Sarah, and their son, Isaac. He told them how God had prospered Abraham with great riches and that Abraham wanted a wife for his son from the city of his relatives who trusted God. Then the servant told how he came to the well, how Rebekah came and answered his prayer and gave him the right answers and led him to their house. Now he wanted to know if Rebekah might go with him to be Isaac's bride. Then Laban, Rebekah's brother, and Bethuel, her father, said: "The thing proceedeth from the Lord Behold, Rebekah is before thee, take her, and go, and let her be thy master's son's wife, as the Lord hath spoken." When the servant heard the good words, he bowed himself to the earth and worshiped the Lord.

The servant brought out jewels of silver and gold and beautiful clothes and gave them to Rebekah. He also gave precious gifts to her mother and her brother. When we do God's will we not only receive blessing but our families do, too.

The servant and his men ate and drank, and stayed all night. The next morning the servant said, "Send me away." Rebekah's mother said: "Let her stay at least ten days, then she can go." But the servant said, "Please don't stop me." And they said: "We will call Rebekah and inquire what she says." They said, "Wilt thou go with this man?" And she said, "I will go." They sent Rebekah, her nurse, and her maidens with Abraham's servant, and told her to remember she was their sister. Rebekah waved goodbye and they rode upon the camels and followed the man.

Isaac went for a walk in the field at eveningtime. He was thinking and wondering what his bride would look like, when he looked up and saw the camels were coming. Just then Rebekah saw Isaac and asked who he was. She climbed off her camel and covered her face with her veil. The servant told Isaac everything that had happened.

Isaac said to Rebekah, "Come," and he took her in his arms and he might have carried her over the threshold of his mother's house, and she became Isaac's wife and he loved her.

Rebekah was rewarded with great riches, but best of all, she loved and obeyed the Lord. Isaac and Rebekah bowed their heads and worshiped the Lord God of Abraham's servant.

ANNOUNCEMENT

There will be SMM sessions at Bethany Camp in Winona Lake. This will be a real time of inspiration for each SMM girl.

The Second Coming of Christ and the Day of the Lord

By PAUL E. DICK
Pastor, First Brethren Church
Winchester, Va.

In I Thessalonians 4:16-17 we read: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air."

Ordinarily when we think of the second coming of Christ, we think of the time when we as believers will be taken out of this world and into the presence of the Lord in heaven. This event is, of course, preceded by the resurrection of those who have died in Christ. We call our being taken out of the world "The Rapture." The word "rapture" itself does not appear in the Scriptures. It comes from the Latin word rapio, which means "to snatch away suddenly." Our English word "rapture," when applied to the Lord's coming, means "to carry away to sublime happiness."

The Rapture is the first phase of the second coming. The second phase we call the "Revelation." The Rapture is an event which brings comfort and encouragement for all of God's people everywhere. It will mean a deliverance from all sins and corruptions of this world. The Revelation on the other hand is an event following the judgment of the Tribulation period, when the Lord descends from heaven with the saints and with flaming fire to take vengeance upon the ungodly and to destroy the wicked.

In Paul's second letter to the people at Thessalonica he places the Rapture of the church before the day of the Lord. These people were disturbed no little by a false report (I Thess. 2:1-2) that the day (Rapture) had come and they had been left behind. They had been taught by Paul that before the day of the Lord the church would be taken away. They wanted to escape the awful judgments of the Tribulation, and quite naturally they were disturbed over the report that they had been left. (As if we wouldn't be!)

If the Apostle Paul had taught these people that the church must go through the Tribulation period, they would have been expecting it and wouldn't have been disturbed. But the very fact that they were troubled by the false report is only one of many reasons to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that Paul taught and expected the church to be raptured before the Tribulation period.

The Day of Christ

Invariably this expression brings us face to face with the Lord's soon return for His saints at the Rapture of the church. I Corinthians 1:7 reads: "So that ye come behind in no gift; waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." In II Corinthians 1:14 we read: "As also ye have acknowledged us in part, that we are your rejoicing, even as ye also are ours in the day of the Lord Jesus." Philippians 1:6 tells us: "Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." Turning to Philippians 2:16 Paul states: "Holding forth the word of life: that I may rejoice in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, neither laboured in vain."

The Day of the Lord

In Paul's first letter to the Thessalonians, he told them first of the resurrection of the dead and the translation of the living saints (I Thess. 4:16-17). Then he went on to write about the unexpected coming of the Day of the Lord (I Thess. 5:1-5) and the sudden destruction of that day. In writing to the believers he used the pronoun "we." In writing about those upon whom the Day of the Lord shall come (vs. 3) he wrote "they," which certainly excludes all believers. He wrote in I Thessalonians 5:4: "But ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief." In verse 5 Paul says: "Ye are all the children of light, and the children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness."

If we turn our attention a moment to the Old Testament, we are reminded that the Day of the Lord is described in Joel 2:2 as "a day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness, as the morning spread upon the mountains." Zephaniah 1:15 says: "That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness." In Isaiah 13:9 we read: "Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate: and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it." In Isaiah 26:20-21 we have this prophecy: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth shall also disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain."

Since the Day of the Lord is a day of wrath and fierce anger we can thank God that Paul wrote in I Thessalonians 5:9: "For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. Who died for us, that, whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him."

The salvation in view here is from the wrath of the Day of the Lord, and it shall be to live together with the Lord for all time and through all ages. This is accomplished by our being caught up (raptured or resurrected) to be with Him forever. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!

PRIDE

The first challenge set before mankind was the one to "subdue it [the earth]: and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth" (Gen. 1:28). In the achievement of this God-given goal, however, man was faced with another challenge. After tasting the thrill of his power over the physical realm, would he still come humbly before his God and acknowledge his need of Him? Would he always be willing to "let God be God"?

Origin of Pride

At the very outset, as Adam and Eve were facing this test in the Garden of Eden, there was one who had already failed to keep his appointed place, one who had "set his heart as the heart of God" (Ezek. 28:2), one who had said: "I will exalt my throne above the stars of God I will be like the most High" (Isa. 14:13-14). Satan saw man just starting out endowed with power, capable of great achievements and destined to a brilliant future in God's plan. Adam listened to Satan's insinuations against God's goodness and wisdom, and as a result the God-given drive to achieve goals and to view the accomplishment with satisfaction, under God, was infected with a spiritual virus, which the Scriptures call PRIDE—the outstanding characteristic of the sinful nature. Pride leads us to use the powers we have from God for self-aggrandizement, leaving Him out of the picture. Of course this identifies it as sin.

Sometimes proud people are fairly successful in keeping the respect of others. It is revealing to see this sin brought out into the open by God's Word and listed along with some pretty repugnant and coarse forms of sin, all of them having their origin in man's heart, his sinful nature derived from Adam. "For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness . . . pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within, and defile the man" (Mark 7:21-23; see also Rom. 1:28-32; II Tim. 3:1-4).

Examples of Pride

No doubt it will help us to recognize pride if we look at some examples in Scripture. While they refer to men long dead and gone, yet the pride exhibited in their lives is very much alive today, perhaps in you and in me. It is such a subtle form of spiritual cancer that it is possible to have it without being aware of it unless we allow the Holy Spirit to be constantly searching our lives. Such was the case of the woman who made the statement that at last she had reached the place where she was no longer committing any known sin. Someone remarked that she must be very proud of her achievement, to which she replied that she most certainly was.

Consider King Herod Agrippa in Acts 12. If we had his whole life story we could trace the growth of his appetite for praise. Here we see it in its last stages. He was willing to have James and Peter murdered because it gave him favor with the Jews. Peter's deliverance must have been quite a blow to him. Later, when the crowds in Caesarea hailed his oration as being from a god, his starved pride seized upon it and for a few brief moments he basked in praise he had never dared dream of. Then God struck him dead.

IS IT A SIN?

Before we say, "I thank God that I am not like Herod," let us ask ourselves whether we have ever sought favor and praise through dishonest and unholy means. Have we ever "ruined" someone because it would put us in favor with someone else? If recognition comes to us after some accomplishment, do we use that moment when we have the attention of others to direct their thoughts to Him who ought to be the object of all men's gratitude and praise?

Another example is that of King Hezekiah. His case may strike more closely to home for Christians since he was a believing king. His pride is the pride of privilege. He "reigned twenty and nine years in Jerusalem . . . and he did that which was right in the sight of the Lord" (II Kings 18:2-3). The Lord saw him through difficult situations in his dealings with Assyria, granting a miracle in answer to his prayers (II Chron. 32: 20-21). God granted him deliverance from a fatal illness. Hezekiah became very wealthy, "for God had given him substances very much." "And Hezekiah prospered in all his works."

But at the height of all this prosperity, honored with so many privileges, Hezekiah "rendered not again according to the benefit done unto him; for his heart was lifted up" (II Chron. 32:25). It was "in the business of the ambassadors of the princes of Babylonia" (vs. 31; cf. II Kings 20:12-19) that Hezekiah left God out of the picture. The royal visitors from Babylonia had been attracted to Jerusalem by reports of Hezekiah's illness and recovery. If Hezekiah did refer to it, no mention is made of it. His main concern seems to have been to impress the Babylonians with the wealth and the importance he had, "for his heart was lifted up." Instead of directing his visitors' thoughts to the One who had made all this possible for him, Hezekiah kept God "locked up in the closet while the company was around," so that all the attention and praise could fall on him.

How easily we fall into the same kind of pride. We know that all we are and have is due to the Lord's mercy and provision. Yet when any attention is focused on us, how quick we are to take the bows for what appears to be our patience or perseverance or cleverness, and the Lord is not even mentioned.

The Cure for Pride

The cure for our proud hearts is found in facing the truth that our primary goal in life is to love and glorify God. When the regenerating power of God is released into the human heart through the Word of God and faith in Christ as Saviour, then "all our being's ransomed power" are at His command and our highest satisfaction in life is found in seeing Him exalted and made known to others. "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace ot the humble. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time" (I Pet. 5:5-6).

BY JACK B. CHURCHILL
MISSIONARY TO ARGENTINA

HUSBANDS, LOVE YOUR WIVES

Introduction.

The purpose of this series of studies is to make us all do some serious thinking about our homes and our relationships in those homes. That the series has produced that result is evidenced by the fact that several have come to the writer and asked for clarification of points and helps in their own problems. For this we are glad.

Our text for this study is a very familiar one, a passage used in all truly Biblical wedding ceremonies: "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it" (Eph. 5:25). The passage implies that men should marry, should be devoted unto their own wives, and should do those things necessary to cherish that wife. A perfect example is provided for the husband in the relationship of Christ, the Bridegroom, to the church, His bride.

There are four current philosophies of marriage; namely,

1. Theosophy—"There is no reason why man should not marry if he likes to take the risk that it involves; it is a lottery where there are so many more blanks than prizes."

2. Sociology—"The modern customs and restraints of marriage are nothing more nor less than veneered savagery, the brute nature with an outward semblance of respectability."

3. Communism—"The institution of marriage is purely capitalistic restraint, to be discouraged, to be destroyed. True communism declares physical freedom in every respect."

4. Bible—"Marriage is a holy institution, come from God, involving moral problems. Only when the husband and wife come to the realization that the vital virtues of Christianity must be reflected in their home life—only then is marriage consummated in the Scriptural sense, and only then can real happiness result."

Listen to some of the pathetic cries every pastor hears too frequently these days: "After many happy years together, we are drifting apart and are very unhappy." "I am about to marry, but I don't want to make any mistakes; can you tell me whether or not I am doing the right thing?" "We are happy together; what shall we do to guarantee that this happiness shall continue?" or, "Our home is about to be broken. Our differences have been over various matters in the home. We don't want this to happen, but we seem to be unable to make amends and agree."

The background reason for such conditions is that the members of the family have not yet learned to obey the command of the Word: "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God" (Eph. 5:21). In the home, responsibilties fall upon the husband, the wife, and the children. In this study, we consider the husband's position and calling.

A certain home had a bulletin board upon which each posted his or her activity for the day. Upon one occasion it displayed these cryptic notes: "Gone to the city for the weekend. Mother." "Gone to the tournament. Dick." "Gone to Mildred's. Gladys." "Gone to the dogs. Dad." That is too often the story in too many homes. Here are Bible helps that will forestall any such stalemate and tragedy in your home. Let's analyze our text. There are four words in it:

I. HUSBANDS.

The word "husband" means "a house band." He is called upon to be a binder for the household, to keep things together. As such, the Bible presents him as:

The head of the wife. "For the husband is the head of the wife" (Eph. 5:23). One of the disgusting sights among men is to see an unrespectful wife "ordering" a meek husband. That is not God's order. As the head of the wife, the husband is not to be a boss, a bully, or a tyrant. However, as Christ is the final authority in all matters in the church, so should the husband be the final authority in all matters in the home. The headship of the husband is recognized:

In creation, Adam being formed first and then Eve;

In Scripture, Paul declaring it to be so;

In the social order, this position being recognized among men; and

In civil courts the law establishes this headship.

Someone has well said: "The wife is subject to the government of the husband, but he is subject to her heart; she bows to his rule, but he bows to her need."

The savior of the wife. Again in Ephesians 5:23, Christ is declared to be the "saviour of the body [church]." Then Paul writes: "For the husband is as . . . Christ." Three things are true of the husband:

He is a man by nature. Unregenerate men may be classified as (1) predatory, always seeking for self-satisfaction; (2) domineering, displaying his superior position; (3) possessive, being jealous of all others; and (4) sexual, given to the satisfaction of the lusts of the flesh. Man, by nature, is sinful, incapable of the high requirements of Christian husbandry.

He is married by choice. There is no coercion from God or man. His own will is the determining factor in whom he shall marry, when he shall marry, and why he shall marry. This choice, outside of the will of God, is fraught with every possibility of trouble. However, in the will of God it is filled with every promise of good.

He is a husband by grace. He who is a man by nature, and who chooses to be a married man, must then rely upon the grace of God to make him a husband. For it is not in man to be a husband in the Biblical sense of the word. That's why young women should choose a Christian for a husband. That's why husbands should be saved. Otherwise there is not the power nor the will present to fulfill the high requirements involved.

The lover of the wife. The relationship of the husband to the wife is likened unto the relationship of Christ to the church: "Even as Christ loved the church" (Eph. 5: 25). It is always to be remembered that Christ loved the sinner and died to purchase his redemption. And He also loved the sinning saint. Fortunately He does not abandon us the minute we transgress His holy will.

Even so, says the Book, should a man love his wife. Husbands may wish their wives to be better in beauty, temperament, spirituality, and health. But regardless of what they are, they are loved by the husband even as Christ continues to love an imperfect bride, His church. Christ loves us as we are, not for what we should be. Even so does a husband love his wife. Suppose Christ would divorce His church every time there appears a defect, every time there is a strained relationship—how unhappy would be our condition. Ah no; He's not that kind of a lover. Neither should husbands react—they are to love regardless.

Now Christ is constantly endeavoring, in love, to cleanse His church, for He will present her faultless in the day of His coming. Again, in love, the true husband endeavors to lead his wife into better things. But it is always in love, not coercion or threat.

II. YOUR.

Note that our text continues: "Husbands love YOUR wives." This is a possessive. She belongs to you. She is your sole possession and responsibility.

Your choosing. Out of all the women in the world you chose this one woman to be YOUR wife. Jestingly it has been said: "I sought her till she found me," or "I ran after her until she caught me." But seriously, she was your choice. Why did you choose this woman to be your life companion? If that choosing was because of physical attractions only, there is trouble ahead, for these beauties soon fade away. If, on the other hand, there were spiritual qualities that attracted you to her, there is happiness ahead, for these qualities become more attractive as the years move along.

Your self-devotion. In the ceremony you were asked: "Wilt thou keep thee only unto her so long as ye both shall live?" And you answered, "I will!" You thus entered into an exclusive relationship (read Matt. 19:5-6); an intimate relationship (read Prov. 5:18-19); a rewarding relationship (read Eph. 5:28, 31).

Your self-sacrifice. In that ceremony you also promised: "For better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health." This self-sacrificing commitment expresses itself in kindness, both in word and deed; thoughtfulness, wherein most husbands have their greatest fault; tenderness, which is a fulfillment of the exhortation: "Deal not treacherously against the wife of his youth"; and gentleness, which remembers her weaker nature and special needs, knowing that a woman's life is made up of many important "little things."

For a husband to be unfaithful in his devotion and sacrifice to his wife and family is a crime against himself, against his chosen bride, against his children, against society, and against God. Obviously, then, there are multitudes of "marital criminals" among us. Again we declare: "It ought not so to be," especially among the redeemed of the Lord.

III. WIVES.

The word "wife" means "a weaver," the personality in the home that binds the family together into a beautiful and useful pattern of righteousness. Someone has likened the home to a wheel. The husband is the rim, the tire—going afar, taking the bumps, searching out the pathway ahead. The wife is the hub—the center around which the home revolves, often carrying the heavier load. The children are the spokes—binding the rim and hub together. In these "spokes" there are the ties of love, of shared sorrows, of attainments.

Husband, if you have a good "hub" in your marital wheel, praise the Lord and be sure to take good care of her. Keep her well supplied with the "oil of gladness" so that there will be no occasion for friction, resulting in creaking and groaning along.

Wives are partners. Life is made up of partnerships: man and his Lord, where man becomes a steward of the manifold riches of the Heavenly Father; man and his wife, where man becomes a husband, loving, striving, sacrificing, for mutual joy; and man and his family, where the husband becomes a provider, bringing the children up "in the fear and admonition of the Lord."

Wives are a recompense. The Bible calls the wife the "helpmeet." She is not an ornament or an idol. She is that "one flesh," rounding out the personality of her husband.

Emotionally, she gives him pride in his home, joy in his children, and satisfaction in his doings. Physically, she responds to his affections, and shares with him the powers of life. Spiritually, she shares his salvation, his problems, his joys, his convictions, and his eternal reward.

4. LOVE.

The entire responsibility of the husband to his wife and family is summed up in the one word, "love." This is her "wage" for being a wife. Husbands should not be stingy; the wife should be well paid.

The two aspects of love are giving, to give oneself to another; and getting, to get another to oneself.

True love springs from what a husband can do for his wife and what she can do for him in return. The perfect illustration is Christ and the church. He gave himself, and receives in return the redeemed bride.

Greek words for "love" are the following: storge, which means emotion, not used as such in the New Testament; philia, which means brotherly affection (Rom. 12:10), but is not used in connection with marriage; eros, which means physical attraction, not being used in the New Testament; agape, which is spiritual love, based upon the possession of Christ in the heart, and manifested in a right affection to God and to man. This is the word used in our text: "Husbands, have a spiritual love for your wives."

Love involves provision (I Tim. 5:8), protection (Eph. 5:25), presentation (Eph. 5:27).

Conclusion.

And now that it is well established that a husband has high and serious responsibilities to his wife, the concluding consideration follows: "How can he fulfill these requirements?" Our answer is found in Ephesians 5:26: "That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of the water by the word." Christ's love to His bride is fostered by the Word of God. Even so, a man will be a true husband when he is grounded in the Word and lives by it. To do this he must (1) know the Word, (2) believe the Word; (3) apply the Word; and (4) practice the Word.

God help us to be true husbands, loving our wives!

"MAMA'S GONNA PREACH!"

It was just after the noon hour when the young mother called her daughter and said: "Honey, call the other children. It's time for family worship."

With leaden feet and an air of impending doom the little miss went to the door and called: "C'mon, kids. Mama's gonna preach again."

A chuckle swept around the room as the mother told her story.

"And did you preach?" I inquired.

"Indeed I did. We had an especial need for some at that time anyway. I don't know how much of my 'preaching' was appreciated or understood, but at least I delivered my soul."

"Do your children ever resent being told that the Bible says thus and so, therefore they cannot do a thing which they wanted to do?" one mother asked me.

"We have experienced a little rebellion from time to time when our denial of certain requests was based on God's Word. But more often than not the Word silenced the rebellion when the child was made to read for himself a passage of Scripture dealing with the problem. We have actually met more rebellion when a denial was based on our personal opinions rather than on the Bible. I praise the Lord for this reaction on the part of our youngsters. We have taught them from infancy that the Scriptures are from God and are to be obeyed whether we can understand or not. Our children know that the Bible is the final court of appeal and have respected it as such."

"Do you think my children will ever respond to the Scriptures the way your children do when it comes to discipline?"

"I can't say yours will respond in exactly the same manner or measure. But I am confident that God's Word is sufficient to meet the need of your children, as well as mine. God is no respecter of persons. There is just one condition to be met as far as we parents are concerned. If our children see that we do not bow to the Word as the final court of all authority to us personally, neither will they. We simply cannot expect our children to respect and obey God's Word if we don't. It is also important that we start early enough in the lives of our children to teach them obedience to God by way of the Book of Books."

"Why is it that some adults, even Christian adults, get so perturbed when certain sermons are preached? You'd think mature believers would be glad for the Word even if it does step on their toes. Isn't that the purpose of preaching the Bible anyway; to cleanse and mature us in spirit?"

"Yes; that's the purpose, along with being a map to lead us Home by the right path," I answered. "But the human heart is very proud and very deceitful. Satan knows this all too well and capitalizes on the sin. And sometimes Bible-taught Christians become a little proud of their knowledge of the Word, and of their orthodoxy. The next step down from pride is to apply the preached Word to someone else in the church. Then when it continues to hammer them down to size, they turn against the preacher and yell he is preaching 'at' them."

"Doesn't the Bible say that all sin is against God?" another mother questioned. "I'm afraid to try to push a sermon off on someone else even though I squirm under conviction at times."

"Just pray that you will allow God to keep you sensitive to the preaching and teaching of His Word," I replied. "It is a sin to deny the working of God's Spirit in your heart by gnashing your teeth at the messenger or trying to push the message off on someone else. Men may think they are rebelling only at the messenger, but they are actually sinning against God in refusing the Word."

"God will not wink at the sin of refusing His Word," I continued. "I well remember an incident in another church in another state where the Bible-school superintendent was indulging in a habit which hurt his testimony. The pastor did not know that the superintendent was hiding this sin in his life. God led him to preach through the Book of I Corinthians, which, by the way, is not the easiest book in the world to preach through. God's Spirit directed Paul to write it as a pattern of discipline for the saints whenever sin creeps into the congregations. The preaching of this book usually brings repercussions.

"This man sat in great conviction through one sermon on a certain Sunday morning. As he left the church at the close of the service he lit into the pastor with a fury born of Satan. 'Why did you have to mention my sin from the pulpit? Why couldn't you be man enough to come to my house and tell me about it rather than broadcast it from the pulpit so all could hear?'

"The flabbergasted preacher asked what sin he had mentioned which this man was guilty of doing. When the man tried to explain, he became more angry than ever. Actually the pastor had not mentioned this man's sin from the pulpit; in fact, he did not even know the man indulged thus. When the smoke of this man's anger had cleared away it was evident to all who witnessed the scene that God's Word had convicted him to the point where he must either relinquish the sin to God or defiantly go against God's will. He did the latter and took his visible anger out on his pastor. Within a year from that date, God called that man out of this life. It is an awful thing to fall into the hands of our living God and have to face Him with rebellion in our hearts against the Word.

"God give us more little girls who will listen to 'Mama preach.' And give us more men and women, fathers and mothers who will allow His Word to do its work in our lives, cutting out the cancer of daily sin no matter how painful the operation. 'Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way' (Rom. 14:13). 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness' (I John 1:9)."

Home Mission Season Begins

August-September-October-November is the time when we supremely emphasize the needs of offerings for our Brethren home-mission work throughout our National Fellowship. This time has been set aside in our calendar in order that all of our churches may assist in expanding the gospel testimony through a united effort. Each Brethren should be thinking in terms of praying and giving during this period.

Prayer Brings the Blessing of God

How may we be assured of the blessing of God on Brethren home missions? How does God send laborers into the harvest field? How do we secure more funds to send these laborers in manning new frontiers for the Gospel? The answer may be given in two words—Biblical prayer! In direct proportion to our praying for Brethren home missions God will bless His work.

Promotion will not suffice. Preaching and emphasis will not bring the ultimate in God's blessing. No plan or program can take the place of Biblical prayer in opening heaven's windows on God's earthly work.

If we will have more pastors to carry the Word of life to lost men, we must pray. If we will have a larger offering to send them, we must pray. Our blessings have been limited in both of these ways because we have not prayed enough.

Christ Our Supreme Example

While here on earth Christ did everything by prayer! He, the Son of God, with all power in heaven and earth, the Creator of the universe, not only felt the need of constant prayer, but He undergirded each aspect of His ministry with prayer.

In John, chapter 17, our Lord covered the whole gamut of His earthly ministry and His return to glory to resume fellowship with His Father. Not a single phase of His ministry is omitted from this high-priestly prayer. At many other times and on other occasions Christ went to God in prayer. Gethsemane preceded Calvary. Only God knows, but perhaps Calvary may not have become the place of supreme sacrifice for sin if there had been no Gethsemane. As the Lamb of God agonized in prayer He received strength from above to carry the sacrificial task of redemption to a glorious conclusion. Even in such small matters as lifting His heart to God and giving thanks for the food before feeding the 5,000, our Lord emphasized the importance of prayer.

If the Son of God, the Lord of Glory, so consistently resorted to prayer, how much more we who are humanly frail, sinful, and erring? And yet we are more consistent in our failure to pray than in our will to pray. We have not because we ask not!

Jesus Christ has left us an example in this ministry, a "writing copy" that we should follow (I Pet. 2:21). Will we be true to His exampleship or not? On the answer to this question depends the success of His work through us.

50 Mission Points Need Your Prayers

Is there subject matter for prayer in Brethren home-mission work? Only 50 mission points with as many varied needs as you can find in any church starting with a few members. All of these are listed in the Brethren Annual, and monthly prayer letters come to your church giving certain special needs.

In some of these missions there is a need for lots, for a church building and furnishings and all sorts of equipment to really go into business for Christ. All home-mission churches need constant prayer for the movement of God's Holy Spirit in the members of the church. The church will not grow in numbers or any other way without consistent prayer. Satan is best rebuked and defeated as believers bare the arm of God against him through prayer.

Missionaries occupied in Brethren home-mission work have mounted to the total of over 100. These servants of God are working in hard places and under conditions which often bring discouragement. Pastors preach to small groups when perhaps they could be preaching elsewhere to many more. Yet they believe they have been led by God to pioneer these new fields so that others may build on their foundation. They must organize the church from the ground up, which is a difficult and challenging task. They need more than education and practical training. They need excessive amounts of the blessing of the Lord and abundant wisdom from above. These blessings come only through prayer.

The needs of the national work are multiplied. Daily, Brethren people should be praying for the board of directors and for the office staff at Winona Lake. We desperately need your prayers each day.

Such a work is not without its problems on a national scope. Our hearts should abound in prayer to God that the spirit of Christ will be seen in all of our relationships with other believers. The principles of God's Word for Christian conduct must dictate and limit our words and attitudes.

Unless the children of God pray that God will send us investment funds to build Brethren churches this program may well come to a halt. The money is available if we pray, but God will not provide it otherwise.

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 34

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. Hoyt, vice president; William Schaffer, secretary; Ord Gehman, treasurer; Bryson Fetters, member-at-large to Executive Committee; Walter Lepp, S. W. Link, Mark Malles, Robert E. A. Miller, True Hunt, Lyle W. Marvin; Arnold R. Kriegbaum, ex officio.

THEY BELIEVED---

"According to your faith be it unto you" (Matt. 9:29)

God always rewards the intelligent faith of His people. This has been true in all the divine dealings with men of all ages. Especially is it true in this age of overflowing grace through Christ.

The former home-mission church in Alexandria, Va., believes that the same faith in Jesus Christ which brought sight to the blind men brings the blessing of the Saviour today. At a time when financial stress was critical and the church faced additional building expense, and when there was a slight economic recession, the Alexandria people and pastor were led to test the grace of God by faith through the Holy Spirit. They decided that since there were so many home-mission challenges which could not be grasped because of lack of funds, and even though the Brethren Home Missions Council had made an appropriation to help them for another year, they would trust the Lord to meet their needs and go self-supporting. "According to your faith be it unto you" began to mean something to them immediately. God pulled up the windows of heaven and the stream of blessings began to flow in amazing abundance, financially, spiritually, in every way. Today the church is stronger than ever and growing under the blessing of God.

Faith means vision in the service of Christ. It was missionary vision, a desire that others might have the true Word of God through a Brethren home-mission church which sparked this decision in Alexandria.

As the Brethren Home Missions Council presents another self-supporting Brethren church in fellowship with our growing group of churches we heartily congratulate the people of the Commonwealth Avenue Brethren Church for their faith in Christ and vision for the lost.

Alexandria—Starting With Six Families—Now Self-Supporting

By Robert Wm. Markley, Pastor Commonwealth Avenue Brethren Church, Alexandria, Va.

"So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work" (Neh. 4:6).

The walls of the church at Alexandria have written in them a story of hard work, sacrificial giving, and persistence fortified with prayer.

In a little more than 10 years after the first Bible-class meeting, the church went self-supporting. This first beginning involved six Brethren families, members of the First Brethren Church at Washington, D. C. These families lived in the area and, due to gas rationing during World War II, found it difficult to attend faithfully at Washington. Romans 8:28 has proved true: "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose."

The first meeting place of the organized church for regular services was an abandoned church building which was later demonished, forcing the congregation to move. They met for three years in a public-school building until the basement of the church was completed. Under the able leadership of Rev. Kenneth L. Teague, the auditorium was completed and the building was dedicated March 29, 1953. Less than two years after dedication, the group voted to go self-supporting. God has blessed in a financial way, in opening hearts, and in spiritual growth since the church ventured on this step of faith.

We pay tribute to the First Brethren Church, Washington, D. C., for the faithful support in prayers and finances, especially in the early years of the church. We pay tribute also to the Brethren Home Missions Council for taking this church under their wings that this building might be possible. Their faithful prayers for the pastor and people of the church at Alexandria cannot be measured as to results. We count that stock of prayers as the fairest inheritance we could receive on this earth. We pay tribute also, to YOU, Mr. and Mrs. Contemporary Christian, who have given your dollars and prayers to the support of Brethren home missions. The $1,500 which you gave last year and which the board set aside for Alexandria is now being used to start another Brethren church somewhere in these United States. We praise the Lord that our supporting ourselves has made it possible for this money to be used somewhere else.

The first pastor of this church was the late Rev. William Clough, who is now at rest with his Lord and Maker. He came to the church in March of 1946 and his ministry was terminated in July of 1947. Following Rev. Clough was Rev. David Stone, who was succeeded by Rev. Burl Washburn. Rev. Kenneth L. Teague came as pastor in July 1951 and terminated his work here in the fall of 1953 to accept the call of the Wheaton, Ill., church. Dr. Karl Keefer, of the Washington Bible Institute, served as interim pastor from the fall of 1953 until Brother Markley arrived on the field in September 1954. In the short history of the church, it has had six pastors, and each has contributed to the will of God for this church. We trust that when the Lord comes this church will have received a well-rounded ministry from its pastors.

The Lord has abundantly blessed our ministry with the church during the past year. We have had the privilege of leading some 35 people to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. Not all of these have made their profession in the public service, however. We have baptized 10 believers and 17 have been added to the membership.

We mentioned earlier that the Lord had blessed in a financial way. In the first half of 1955 the Lord has supplied us with as much income as the church received during the whole year last year. The offering for foreign missions was over $500, compared with less than $200 for last year. So goes the story of the Lord's blessing at Alexandria.

May the Lord continue to put His blessing of favor upon the Brethren Church as we seek to do His will in winning the lost to Jesus Christ, His Son.

Bro. Roy E. Glass, Sr., Finishes His Task

Roy E. Glass, 55 died suddenly of coronary thrombosis on June 10, 1955. Brother Glass was a faithful member of the Commonwealth Avenue Brethren Church, where he served the Lord in many official capacities, but the most honoring was that of chairman of the building committee. He served in this office to the dedication of the building. The funeral service was conducted at Alexandria by Pastor Robert Markley, and in Altoona, Pa., where he was buried, by Rev. Ward Tressler.

In the accompanying photo Brother Glass is seen turning over the keys to the church to the trustee chairman, Mr. Edward B. Murphy, on March 29, 1953. He had finished his task upon dedication of the completed program. In the background of the above picture (not visible) were two more members of the same building committee who have gone home to be with the Lord since that dedication day. They are Mr. J. E. Means and Mr. O. H. Taylor. These men likewise finished their task, one of which seemed to be the finishing of the church in Alexandria, Va.

The national home-mission offering decreased last year. As a result the next two or three years will not see the growth we should be having in our over-all denominational program. There was no lack of funds available, because people spent more for the comforts of life than in any previous year in history. But there was a lack of prayer! This is the basic reason for the decrease.

Will there be an increase in the offering this year? God's people in the Brethren Church will answer this question on their knees! Fail to pray and there will be no increase. Pray and God will send His presence, His power, and His provision as never before.

We enlist each child of God, whether a member of the Brethren Church or not, to pray for the evangelization of America through the Brethren Home Missions Council and other Bible-believing organizations during this coming year.

Brethren, pray for us!

Possibilities Unlimited

By Galen M. Lingenfelter

Elyria, Ohio. Is it just another city? No! To us it is home. We like it here very well. It is a prosperous, growing community, increasing in population more than three times above the average across our great nation. We believe that God led in the planning for a church in this community, and we know that because of the help of many of His people in the Brethren Church it is becoming a reality. So with Him as our Supreme Leader and Almighty Lord we believe that the possibilities are unlimited and that He is going to do great things for us.

Our church began with a week-night Bible class about two years ago. Rev. Lester Pifer, then pastor at Fremont, Ohio, was the teacher. About six months later the Lord called us to this field to work with these people in establishing a church and in winning precious souls to Christ. On our first Sunday here we began holding services in a grange hall just outside the city. At times it has been a very undesirable place in which to meet, but in spite of all the bad odors and other inconveniences the Lord has blessed. Souls have been saved, our attendance has increased, and we have been able to reach many fine prospects for the Lord and our church. We have a group of fine people who love the Lord and we believe that as we work together He is going to help us win these prospects and many others to Christ.

The Lord has given us more than an acre of land in one of the finest sections of our community. On these lots, on Sunday afternoon, July 17, 1955, the first shovel of soil was lifted to initiate the construction of our church building. Needless to say, this was a day to which we had been looking for quite a few months. As we look back, we remember how difficult it was to find suitable lots, but we rejoice as we recall how the Lord enabled us to buy this fine plot of land in a new and growing area of the city. We waited and prayed for months until our faithful Lord answered. Even these lots were declared as not available, but our Lord answered prayer and made them available to us. With Him all things are possible and the possibilities certainly are unlimited.

More than 100 people attended the ground-breaking service and the Lord gave us a beautiful day. Rev. Gordon Bracker, pastor at Fremont, Ohio, delivered the message and eight other pastors of the Northern Ohio District had part in the service. Several businessmen of the city gave testimonies and words of encouragement, and special music was provided by the First Brethren Church of Wooster, Ohio. God blessed in the service and it was an inspiration and blessing to the people. We ask you to pray for us that our zeal for the Lord may increase and that we may win many precious souls for Him.

One week after the ground-breaking service the men of our Brethren Construction Company began moving into Elyria from Goshen, Ind., where they had just completed a new church building. We are so thankful to God that we have these Christian men to build our church for us. Facts already prove that they will help us save thousands of dollars in the church construction, and our men will lend a helping hand as often as possible.

We often think of the fact that this church in Elyria would not be organized, there would have been no ground-breaking service, and there would be no building under way if many of you folks had not answered that Brethren Minute-Man appeal about 18 months ago. New homes are already surrounding our church lots and it is certain that we could not have bought these lots had the Brethren Home Missions Council waited another year before entering the field. We are so thankful that many of you gave that little extra gift at a time when it was so important to the church here in Elyria. Also, we are indebted to the Brethren Home Missions Council and the Northern Ohio District Mission Board, who joined hands with all of us to make this church a reality.

Friends, please remember us in prayer! And as you see our church building going up, our congregation growing, and souls being saved, we want you to know that this is your church too—a church that would not be here if it had not been for many of God's people just like you. From Elyria, Ohio, we say, Thank you and may God bless you.

Dear Mr. Grubb.

My name is Mike Terry. I am 8 years old. I go to the First Brethren Church in Sunnyside.

I am sending you a check for $100. I want to laan it to the Seattle Church. I am saving it for collage and will not need it for 10 years. Mr. Painter said 3 ½ % interest will be alright.

When I grow upI want to be a missionary or a preacher.

All Records Broken at Clayhole, Ky.

This year we broke all previous records of enrollment, daily attendance and offerings. The enrollment was 182, with an average attendance of 115. The Sunday morning following Bible school we had our program, and Rev. Clyde Landrum, of Winona Lake, Ind., gave the message. There were seven decisions for Christ during the 10 days of the school.—Sewell S. Landrum, missionary.

I thank the Lord today for the blessed opportunity of serving Him in Kentucky this summer. I have often heard and read about our work in Kentucky and of the great need there, but little did I realize that I would someday be there teaching Bible school.

I enjoyed working with Miss Evelyn and the Landrums. Although our school was a large one at Clayhole, I had a wonderful time teaching these little ones of Christ and His saving power.

It was a treasured experience and I pray daily that souls will be saved through our testimony in Kentucky. —Carolyn Bearinger.

"In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths" (Prov. 3:6).

I am thankful for the privilege of serving the Lord at the Bible school in Clayhole, Ky. It was a great joy to work with Brother Landrum and the other girls.

I enrolled 44 boys and girls in my class, and I enjoyed teaching them about some of the pioneers of Christ. My aim was to teach the boys and girls more about the Bible and about the Lord Jesus Christ and help them find Christ as their Saviour.

My work in Kentucky was profitable to my own Christian life because I was drawn closer to my Lord through the Christian fellowship I had with the people there.—Marie Curtis.

With the Apostle Paul of old I can say: "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you" (Phil. 1:3). As I look back over the two weeks which I helped in DVBS at Clayhole, Ky., I realize more than ever the good times I had. Telling the children the blessed plan of salvation was really an experience for me. I had taught in DVBS before, but I had never before had 28 children for whom I alone was responsible in making clear to them the things of the Lord. It really put me on my toes and made me work harder than ever. Actually I think that I learned more than they. Although the work was hard, I never enjoyed two weeks more in my life.

We surely had a wonderful time at the Landrums' home. Nothing can take the place of Christian fellowship which we enjoyed there.

As I look forward to future service for my Lord, I will always look to Clayhole and thank the Lord for the many experiences which I encountered there.—Betty Guinn.

"Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest" (Luke 10:2).

I have never been so impressed with the need of mission work right here in America as I was while working in the DVBS at Clayhole and Dryhill. Somehow I had always been under the impression that the greatest challenge was on the foreign field, but it took only a few days spent on a home-mission field to reveal an equally great challenge. The Lord is greatly using our Brethren works in Kentucky, but the need for more workers is apparent and growing constantly.

Clayhole VBS Workers—(l. to r.)—Miss Patty Paul, Roanoke, Va.; Miss Marie Curtis and Miss Betty Guinn, Johnson City, Tenn.; Miss Carolyn Bearinger, Waynesboro, Pa.; and Miss Lois Kay Landrum, Clayhole, Ky.

Although I went to Brother Landrum's expecting to give out more than I received, I returned knowing that I had gained much more than it was possible to give—in knowledge, experience, and spiritual blessings. The three weeks spent with the Landrums and Miss Evelyn Fuqua were a constant source of joy and Christian fellowship. I know that I shall profit by the things the Lord taught me through them for the rest of my life.

Teaching others of the Lord Jesus Christ is truly the greatest thrill life affords.—Patty Paul.

"Decision Day" Highlights Seattle VBS

The highlight of the entire two weeks of VBS at Seattle, Wash., was "Decision Day," when 19 boys and girls made definite decisions for Christ. Despite a hard rain, 82 people were on hand for our closing program. To say the least, the parsonage was almost full. The missionary offering of $26.81 was given to buy shoes for the Navajo Indian children.—Thomas Hammers, pastor.

Largest VBS in History at Jenners, Pa.

We have been pleased this summer to see the largest VBS that the church has ever known. The average attendance, including pupils, teachers, and helpers, was 138. Also we were quite pleased to see the interest shown on the night of the program, when 211 were present. We believe that in time many of these parents will be won to Christ.—Victor S. Rogers.

ISRAEL CALLS!

HOW SHALL THEY ESCAPE?

By Leanore M. Button

I went up the apartment-house stairs. The place seemed unusually dirty, with cigarette stubs on the steps and dirt in the corners. Even the window upstairs was smudged and a layer of dust was deep on the sill. It had been a depressing morning. At the homes where I expected to make some good contacts there had been yapping dogs, making conversation of any kind impossible. I knocked at the door. An obviously dyed-blonde head popped up at the grille in the door, her smile quickly changing when she saw who it was.

I offered her the Mediator. "I don't want it!" The grille was shut quietly but firmly. I shrugged to myself and turned to the door across the hall, not expecting much of a reception.

A young man answered. I explained my purpose. The paper was written by Jewish men who believed Jesus was their promised Messiah. Had he ever personally checked the claims? To my surprise, he asked that I step inside. Before I could say anything, he had taken up a book and was reading aloud the definition of a Christian. When he had finished, I told him what a Christian really was. That launched our discussion and I discovered he was atheistic, a recent product of some university. I had the opportunity of presenting the plan of salvation to him, as well as to discuss such passages in the Old Testament as Isaiah 9:6; 53; Zechariah 12:10 and 13:6; Micah 5:2; Genesis 49:10; Leviticus 17:11, etc.

When I had to leave to meet my husband, I was able to give him a New Testament, which he promised to read, and several other pieces of literature. As I left, he said "You could never appeal to me through logic, but through the heart—who knows?" I told him true belief must include faith which goes beyond logic and is able to comprehend the truth contained in the Word of God. Cold reasoning can never fully realize the grace of God. Rather, it is the heart where, through faith, one must realize he is a sinner in need of a redeemer and that God has provided His Son a sacrifice for sin. Please pray for this young man as he reads the Word of God.

The following day I called at a very neat home in a residential area. An elderly lady answered the door and asked me if I were a Jehovah's Witness. I told her no, that our literature was free, and then spoke to her of the grace of God in that all He has given us is absolutely free. At first she refused to accept the Mediator (stuffed with a tract and an invitation to our Wednesday-night meetings), saying she wouldn't read it anyway. "My husband studied to be a rabbi," she said, "but we have found better things. We believe in helping the poor and needy. That is our belief." A few more sentences and I realized she didn't even acknowledge God. I told her I could understand when the goyim made such statements, but coming from Jewish people—and a Jewish man who studied the Word of God—well! Just then the husband came to the door.

"Religion!" he said. "Bah! It's an opiate of the people!" And he promptly disappeared again into another room. But I knew at once they were communistic. I told her that helping the sick, the poor, and the needy was what God wanted us to do, but that first we must get right with Him ourselves before we had the power to do that. I talked to her about sin and its consequences, and how it is sin in men's hearts that is the cause of all the troubles of the world today. I told her the answer to the world's problems could only be found in Jesus, the Messiah of Israel and the Saviour of the world. She seemed open enough, even a little interested. When I left I was able to give her a Gospel of Matthew. As I walked away I thought how awful it must be to have no hope. It was a beautiful day with a cloudless blue sky and the green leaves of the tree making shadows on the velvety carpet of grass. How could anyone deny that God made such beauty for us to enjoy? Pity seems to fit the lost. The sad part is they could have what we have if it were not for their cold, cold hearts.

And last, but not least, I must mention again one for whom many of you have prayed in the past and I hope are continuing to hold up in prayer. Her name is Frieda. One day recently my husband gave her a book to read. It was written by a Hebrew Christian and bore quite a testimony. Strangely enough, she read only 80 pages and refused to read further, flying into a rage and accusing me of undermining her home.

She called me one morning, to my intense surprise, and began to tell me all the things that were bothering her. We talked most of the morning, and the next day I went over to discuss it further. For the first time I felt she was actually under conviction. I was there the entire morning from 9 until 2 that afternoon. Neither of us stopped to eat. She continued to tell me I was trying to break up her home by "brainwashing" (repeating over and over quotations from the Bible regarding sin, sacrifice, Jesus as the Messiah, and perfect sacrifice, etc.). She asked me if I realized what would happen if she ever would believe that Jesus was the Messiah—if I realized she would lose her husband and her children and how much pain they would suffer. I told her nothing better could happen to her and that I believed God was powerful enough to save the entire family.

She wanted me to promise I would not do any more to undermine Jewish homes (not just hers). I pointed her to the New Testament, where we are told to take this wonderful story of God's saving grace to ALL creatures and into ALL the world. Then she wanted me to promise to leave her alone—that she was always on the defensive with me. After all the talking we were back where we started, but much had been said regarding the Word of God, and I believe of all our contacts this Jewess has had more light than any other. Certainly, if she chooses to shut her eyes to things that MUST worry her, she will have more to answer for than most when they stand before their Maker. Please pray that she will continue to be miserable. Certainly she was at that time.

These are merely a few episodes. Please remember that we have many, many just like these every day. And DON'T FORGET TO PRAY!

In Memoriam

Mrs. Mary Morris, member of the Sunnymede Brethren Church, South Bend, Ind., went to be with the Lord on March 31. Mrs. Morris was for many years a Bible teacher and chart lecturer in the Church of the Brethren, and is the author of several pamphlets, as well as of a book entitled, "Prophecy and Revelation." For the last seven years she has been an active member in the Sunnymede Church, serving as teacher of the adult Sunday-school class. In addition, she has taught many classes in her own home, and was well known and loved throughout the area as a staunch defender of the faith against the inroads of modernism. She died at the age of 72, after being confined to her room for over a year with a serious heart condition. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor.—Russell Ogden, pastor.

Raymond F. Anthony, long a faithful member of our Conemaugh (Pa.) Brethren Church, was very suddenly caught out and loosed away upward. It was in the early evening (8:30 o'clock) on Friday, one day after our district conference, while mowing the grass on a little tract of land he owned in Vinco, Pa. Brother Anthony was always a blessing and help to every minister that served our church. He held the important positions of moderator and deacon. With this he taught the men's class in our Sunday school. He was the husband of Ida Mae Anthony (nee Wright). Surely we shall miss his straightforwardness, his good judgment and fairness. He was laid to rest in Forest Lawn Cemetery at Johnstown, Pa. His pastor, assisted by Rev. Wm. Schaffer, of Kittanning, Pa., brought the message.—Stanley F. Hauser, pastor.

Edwin B. Schrock went home to be with the Lord on Monday, August 1, at the age of 82. He was a charter member of the Grace Brethren Church at Waterloo, Iowa. He served as a trustee in the church for a number of years and in various other capacities until impaired by health during the past few years. Brother Schrock was the father of Rev. Lynn Schrock, missionary serving under the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church in Argentina. Another son, Vernon W. Schrock, is a licensed elder in the Brethren Church at Waterloo. Two other sons are active in the church: Edwin, serving as Sunday-school superintendent, and Albert as a trustee. The homegoing of Brother Schrock has ended a marriage union that has lasted for 59 years.—Richard P. DeArmey, pastor.

"THE TIME IS AT HAND"

Moderator's Address of the Indiana Fellowship of Brethren Churches, Delivered at Flora, Ind., July 12, 1955

By W. Russell Ogden
Pastor, Sunnymede Brethren Church
South Bend, Ind.

When Daniel concluded his prophecy of the culmination of the ages, he was told to "Seal the book . . . for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end" (Dan. 12:4, 9). When John concluded his revelation of the same events, he was told to "Seal not the . . . book: for the time is at hand" (Rev. 22:10).

If ever in history men have had reason to classify their age as the "last days," men of today have more reason. Events that were yet millenniums in the future to Daniel and to John have become contemporary history to us of the 20th century. We see God's Word being fulfilled with a precision and a rapidity that is nothing short of amazing to the informed student of the Scriptures. Things considered unlikely, if not impossible, in 1900 are common knowledge in 1955: Israel is in her homeland; apostasy grips the church; evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse; men are crying, "Peace," but there is no peace; science and technology are counterfeiting a "Golden Age," and men in general are looking for anything to happen except the physical, visible return of Jesus Christ to the earth. Our Lord has warned: "In such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh" (Matt. 24:44).

Politically, the nations are unifying in a grand attempt at world order which promises to make war a thing of the past. Yet, in spite of multiplied conferences and negotiations to make all men one, these very means seem only to emphasize more strongly the basic differences which separate men, and which lie deeper than political considerations. The Christian sees behind the scenes a decided move toward the greatest of all wars, and man's final rebellion against God which precipitates his violent destruction.

Socially, we live on a higher plane than ever before. "Civilization" has made all men neighbors, and the traveler can skirt the globe in an atmosphere of comfort and hospitality. But we see beneath the social structure a foundation of humanism and base materialism which will cause the whole house to fall when the floods of God's wrath beat upon it.

Medically, we are driving back the frontiers of disease. A longer and more pain-free life is now possible through the development of drugs and serums. Yet sin, in the form of alcoholism, tobacco addiction, social diseases, murder, highway lawlessness, and suicide, continues to cut life cruelly short, and to remind us more emphatically that the chief sickness of man is not in his body but in his soul.

Economically, we are living in the world's most prosperous age. But, rather than moving men to give praise to the giver of every good and perfect gift, it has produced a fascination in the gifts themselves, and brought an almost universal submission to the mastery of mammon which precludes any recognition of the mastery of God. The result is confusion, toil, strife—trouble between management and labor, trouble at home, trouble abroad, and strife between nations.

Scientifically, the core of the material universe has now been unlocked. Our heads whirl at the mounting achievements of human skill and genius. Man is now traveling at nearly twice the speed of sound, and piercing the atmosphere to unprecedented heights. He is plunging to the depths of the sea, and conquering the highest hills, and in every way showing his near-mastery of the earth and its forces by subduing it (cf. Gen. 1:28). It is common to read in our daily newspapers statements such as "For the first time in scientific history . . ." followed by the announcement of some new and increasingly spectacular attainment. However, man has not been able to keep step physically or spiritually with his progress technologically, and as a consequence threatens to destroy himself by his own unprincipled ingenuity.

Religiously, the goal of "ecumenicity" dominates the scene. To achieve it, self-styled "theologians" continue to search the Scriptures for "new meanings," and to reweave the entire fabric of historic Christianity. The salvation of eternal souls from an endless hell is no longer an object. Rather, all effort is given to an adjustment to the present world, in which man's relation to man, and to himself, is the goal. The solving of race relations, labor relations, economics, and world politics has supplanted the preaching of the Gospel and the evangelizing of the world. Compromise for unity's sake is the keynote. And set for the accomplishing of these dubious ends is a corps of organizers, advertisers, compromisers, placaters, pseudo-psychologists, free-thinkers, and other categories of charlatans and traitors, the like of which the world has never before seen, all operating congenially under the common banner of Christianity. The true disciples of Christ are threatened to yet again be repelled to the caves and catacombs before the tide of this relentless apostasy.

Morally, we need no statistics or diagrams to enable us to understand what is happening. With our country spending nearly twice as much annually for alcoholic beverages as it spends for religion, public welfare, public recreation, and private educational institutions combined, it is not surprising to view the resultant carnage both physically and spiritually. With homes undisciplined by the law of God, it is not surprising to see the incorrigible hostility in modern youth toward any and all forms of restraint. What we benignly call "juvenile delinquency" has turned into the biggest crime wave in our history, and since 1950 has been increasing four times as fast as our population. This tragedy is not the sole product of youth, but is abetted and augmented by such adults as the Chicago high-school principal who advised his graduating seniors that, since there could be no foreseeable future for them in a world at war, the best thing they could do with their lives is to go out and have themselves "one big time." Only divine intervention can save us from impending disaster.

Typical of the moral anarchy of the day are articles occurring daily in our current literature. Reader's Digest, July 1955, carries an article entitled, "The Day I Met Caruso," the sole object of which is the ridicule of Puritan propriety and the recommendation of the extravagance and excesses of the theatrical world as the only justifiable mode of life. Our world is running to excesses too rapidly, even without such irresponsible encouragement.

The South Bend (Ind.) Tribune printed an article on July 8, 1955, which was distributed by International News Service, entitled, "Prim Old Maid 'Gone Forever.'" The story had to do with Mrs. Gwendolyn Needham, who claims to have discovered that the typical "old maid" is a thing of the past. She does not claim that there are no longer women who go through life unmarried, but she does claim that there are none who remain unmarried and still retain their purity. Her thesis is a blunt plea for immorality. She says: "Women have fought and won the right to work and the right to education . . . women are (now) fighting for the fulfillment of a 'total' personality—the right to love, sex, and motherhood whether married or unmarried." For this opinion, 49-year-old divorcee Mrs. Needham has been awarded a $3,500 scholarship from the American Association of University Women, and a bid from the University of California Press to publish it in book form. Sample chapters of the proposed book are, "Virginity: Its Rise and Decline," and "The Old Maid's Right to Love." Sodom, were she alive today, would blush at the shamelessness of America. What could be ahead for us on this broad road of licentiousness and lust but God's forewarned destruction.

Never has man soared higher in his material and intellectual attainments; never has he sunk lower in immorality, bestiality, and brutality. Humanity is approaching its zenith scientifically, its genius is burning more brightly and carrying it to greater heights than ever. But because of its lack of accompanying moral and spiritual attainment, humanity threatens to cross the apex of its climb with energies and resources exhausted, and plunge into infinite oblivion a smoldering ash.

What is the responsibility of the Brethren churches in the State of Indiana, U. S. A., in view of such conditions? Are we to bemoan the fact that these are the last days, and that all this evil is merely a fulfillment of prophecy, and therefore we can do nothing about it? Are we simply to share these facts with one another, and shake our heads, and hope for the end, and look for the Rapture? Or are we to go in compassion among those who are presently doomed and warn them to flee the wrath to come? Those of us who know the conditions of sin, and know the salvation from sin through the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, are under both moral and divine responsibility to be early and late after the salvation of souls through the preaching of the Gospel.

As surely as our Lord had a time appointed for His death, He has a time appointed in which He shall return to the earth in power and great glory. All indications would lead us to believe that "the time is at hand." The Brethren Church must not fail to be prepared for His coming.

We, therefore, in the Brethren Church need to do whatever we are going to do for God with all possible haste. We are not large and strong, as churches are measured these days, but we do have the responsibility of a lost world before us, and the resources of the omnipotent God behind us. We need to draw in faith upon these resources, and enter boldly the fields which God has committed to us. There are those who are making giant strides on all sides of us, while we go along as grasshoppers by comparison.

The Brethren Church has accomplished much in recent years of which we may praise God with full hearts. We have built churches at home and missions abroad. We have a fine Christian school and a publishing house. We are progressing in the work of Sunday school, evangelism, and youth work. Our leaders have planned and organized well to achieve greater goals. But they must have the full and unreserved support of every member of the Brethren Church if we are to do the job God has for us to do in the few remaining days of this life. What we have done is only foundation work compared to what we ought to do in the days ahead as we raise the superstructure of a great church for the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Brethren have traditionally been a conservative people. We are now living in an age of radical progressivism, much of which we must shun as belonging to the excesses of a godless worldly system. However, this does not mean that there is not some progress that is good, and much progress that is needed in the thinking of the Brethren people toward the work of the church. Our doctrines must never change, but the manner in which we propagate these doctrines must be constantly adapted to the times and the peoples that we would reach with them. Could it be that while we have entered physically the atomic age and we whisk our bodies around by the aid of rocket engines and fluid transmissions, we are still living spiritually in the old stone age and cart our minds around in horse-drawn carriages?

Cults and "isms" superabound. Fanatics and religious eccentrics on every hand draw huge followings. Emotional sideshows on one hand, and cold formalism on the other hand, seem to have stolen the hearts of the public. By the imitation of methods which were meant to propagate the Gospel of Christ, Satan is spreading his doctrine of lies with alarming success. By missions and evangelism, by schools and printing presses, by door-to-door witnessing, and by toil and sacrifice, forces of error are claiming territory that should rightly be ours. Are we to surrender it without a contest? We of the fundamental faith need to take heed to the opposition's activities, and to counter with something of like zeal and force. We need to get our eyes off our inabilities and look unto God's capabilities, and by faith possess the land God has promised to His people.

The present pace of the Brethren Church can hardly be called competitive in the field of religion today. Seventh-Day Adventists, for instance, now report a membership of one million, which represents an increase by one-third in the last four years. This group gives annually $50 million to missions—which largely accounts for the numerical increase. Jehovah's Witnesses and others are following close in gains. Many Protestant groups, whether by legitimate growth or by merger, now number their membership in millions and their churches in thousands. Of course human statistics are not the final criterion in work done for God, but they should at least cause us to pause and reflect upon the effectiveness of our own spiritual service.

In view of this tremendous challenge of the needs of the hour, may we as Brethren make several timely observations:

I. We must give ourselves to prayer for God's power as never before. Prayer is the only means by which God's blessing is ever obtained by His people. Our Lord himself felt that He could not live without prayer. The Apostle Paul accomplished his work through prayer —his own and the prayers of those to whom he ministered. Real work for God of all time has been accomplished in direct proportion to the amount and the earnestness of the prayer lifted in its behalf. "God forbid that [we] should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray" (I Sam. 12: 23).

II. We must give ourselves in unreserved obedience to the will of God as He makes it known to us through the Scripture and through prayer. Sin, and indifference to God's will in holy living, is the explanation for the impotency of our churches today. The fruits of the Spirit are not borne in the lives of professing Christians because of harbored sin—lust, covetousness, anger, bitterness, selfish ambition, pride—these things must be sacrificed to God and cleansed by the blood of Christ before Christians are ready to do God's work. The world will not respond to the Christian's message unless it sees Christ in the Christian's life. We need an orthodoxy of living that measures up to the orthodoxy of our doctrine. We must beware of a Pharisaical pride in observing the letter of our law through ordinances and rituals, while we fail to show the spirit of the law in holiness, and love, and compassion, and judgment of sin. Our witnessing must not be in word only, but "in demonstration of the Spirit and of power" (I Cor. 2:4).

III. We must not spread ourselves too thin. We cannot support every Christian project which makes an appeal for funds, and still continue to build and expand the Brethren ministry. We are not a large and powerful group of churches, nor are we wealthy as individuals. We must use our stewardship wisely lest we come to a piece of bread. It is said that "just trying to act rich keeps some people poor." It also keeps some churches poor, and some church groups poor. If we believe in the ministry of the Brethren Church, that is the ministry we should support. If we do not believe in it, then let's stop the pretense and hop into the mixing bowl with the rest of the interdenominationalists.

If all Brethren people would learn to give, and then give to the only work they can wholeheartedly endorse, the Brethren Church would be able to make some of the larger strides that it is our desire to make for God. This is not a selfish plea. It is simply a plea, to use the vernacular expression, to "put your money where your mouth is." Remember, we are accountable to God for the spiritual returns gained by the way in which we invest our money.

IV. We must keep pace in spiritual growth with our material and numerical development. A praying leadership and praying people alone can assure the stability and permanence of a rapidly growing church. If our ideals and goals are attained, new converts will soon outnumber the "old regulars." Will they uphold the same standards of the Brethren ministry? That depends upon the spiritual impact made upon them by the lives and spiritual qualities of their predecessors.

We are building at Winona Lake, Ind., at the present time, a great denominational organization. This organization is on the New Testament pattern because the men who are building it are sound in the New Testament faith. As long as men such as these remain in office, the machine of denominational headquarters can be a great instrument for sowing and reaping a harvest field for God. But who can measure the destruction and waste when such an instrument is confiscated by ruthless and godless individuals and turned into a bulldozer for the acquirement of selfish and personal ends. How often in the history of men and movements this has been the course! The Brethren themselves have tasted the bitter experience. The only final safeguard to such catastrophe is an alert and spiritually powerful and maturing church. The people in the pews must know God in a personal way, and be concerned enough in His work to see that purity of doctrine and practice is maintained. Spiritual growth which keeps pace with material growth is God's way to keep His church true and strong.

V. As members of the Indiana District, we ought to be setting the pace for the other districts in our growth and attainments. We have more ministers, missionaries, teachers, evangelists among us than any other district. We are constantly in touch with the very heart of our denominational workings. If this contact does not challenge us to do the work with more fervor and effectiveness, there is little chance that others more removed will be so challenged.

Our conference a year ago suggested that each church undertake the sponsoring of a Bible class, or some corresponding endeavor, in its own vicinity which might develop into another Brethren Church. We have not yet undertaken to do this as we ought, and as we must if we are to reach our immediate field. The fruits of such endeavor are seen in the establishment of our Elkhart church, and God's blessing upon the Osceola church which sponsored it. This is the New Testament way of building churches, and is being employed profitably by the Baptists, Assemblies of God, and numerous other rapidly growing church bodies. May God move more of our Brethren churches in Indiana and elsewhere to "go . . . and do likewise."

Finally, Brethren, may there be a conscious and resolute forsaking of sin by turning to Christ among us. May there be a trust in the infinite God more than in any and every organization and device of man. May there be a compassion and seeking for the souls of men, not simply the building and enlarging of an organization. May there be a fearless upholding and enforcing of New Testament standards in the church in regard to Christian life and testimony. And may this be so NOW!

May our finest sermons be preached, and our noblest efforts be put forth NOW! May our most faithful living and our most fervent praying and fearless witnessing begin NOW! May our most earnest Bible studying and effective Sunday-school teaching be done NOW! We cannot be better Christians and workers and fathers and mothers and neighbors tomorrow—we must be so NOW! "The time is at hand."

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named, that he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strength-

"Wives---Love, Cherish, and Obey"

Introduction—

In the wedding ceremony such words as these are repeated: "to love, cherish, and obey, till death do us part." Now if you object to the words of the ceremony, you actually are objecting to the Word of God, for so the Good Book teaches concerning the wife in the marriage union.

It is to be remembered that these principles of Christianity have been a blessing to you women. Your state, before man, before your elevation under Christ, was more that of a slave. Many times you were considered nothing better than a beast of burden. The entrance of the Gospel has changed all that for you—the change has definitely been for the better.

"Let every woman understand that it is a high honor to be chosen of a good and pure man. She has a responsibility and an opportunity which the angels in heaven might well covet. She holds in her hands the destiny and the earthly usefulness of her husband more than she often realizes . . . a good wife is heaven's last best gift to man, his angel and minister of grace innumerable, his gem of many virtues. Her voice is his sweetest music, her smile his brightest joy, her kiss the guardian of his innocence, her arms the pale of his safety, her industry his surest wealth, her economy his safest stewardship, her lips his safest counselor, her bosom his softest pillow for his cares, and her prayer the ablest advocate of heaven's blessing upon his head" ("How to Have a Happy Home"—Branch).

God wants each marriage to be a happy one. To have a happy home, all must abide by the rules, both husband and wife must be happy—it is their mutual responsibility to make each other happy. It was said of Jacob that "he served seven years for Rachel, and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had for her." A recent high-school poll revealed that 81 percent of the students wanted happiness in marriage more than anything else. The labors of love will be light when the returns are satisfying. There is a way to happiness between husband and wife—it is laid out for us in the precious Word of God. We have dealt with the exhortation, "Children, obey your parents," and "Husbands, love your wives." Now we speak to those wives in the words of our text: "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord" (Eph. 5:22).

I. WIVES ARE INSTRUCTED TO LOVE THEIR HUSBANDS.

In Titus 2:4 we read: "That they may teach the young women to be sober, to love their husbands, to love their children." Paul was instructing the church as to the performance of good works of righteousness, the fruits of their salvation. He tells the older women to be patterns unto the younger women, giving them the above exhortation. Wives are to love their husbands.

Love Involves Sharing. Love does not consist of gazing at each other, but in looking toward a goal together. Wives must belong to the "Royal Order of the Understanding Heart." Sharing involves two things:

1. Trials. A little lad came in the door after a bitter experience, the tears streaming down his face. One of his parents remonstrated with him, saying: "We don't cry in this house." The little lad retaliated: "Then where can a fellow go to cry?" He had a point. Home is a place to bear one another's burdens, to face trials and tribulations together. The wife should expect, in her love, to share her husband's ill-fortune, his heartaches, and his setbacks, and to share these trials graciously.

2. Triumphs. There is a real joy in victory of any kind, but a greater joy in victory resulting from understanding and loving cooperation between husband and wife. In her love, she rejoices in his triumphs and willingly basks in the reflected light of his glory. Every great man has been backed by that unseen and usually recognized personality of a loving, understanding spouse. That's the high calling of the wife.

Love Involves Encouraging. The western song has it: ". . . where seldom is heard a discouraging word." Yes; that's how it should be. The Christian wife will frequently hide her own troubles and sorrows to encourage her husband and children in their pursuits. It is told of Disraeli's wife that upon an occasion when he was to present a very important message to the parliament, she journeyed with him to the meeting. Upon alighting from the carriage, her hand was inadvertently caught in the door and badly crushed. However, lest she disturb her husband upon this important occasion, she quickly folded the bleeding hand within the folds of her dress and quietly was escorted to her place of honor. Not until the message was delivered, and the acclaim for her husband finished, did she reveal her injury. She was a good wife.

Love Involves Faithfulness. That beautiful 31st Proverb declares: "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her, so that he shall have no need of spoil." She is faithful in:

1. Speech. Since 90 percent of her speech pertains to her husband, her home, her children, she will be careful what she reveals. She talks to two persons about her husband's faults—to him and to the Lord, and mostly to the Lord. Otherwise, she bringeth confusion upon her own head. If she talks too freely about her husband's private affairs, her friends are apt to ask: "What did he see in her anyway?"

2. Friends. His friends are her friends, and her friends are his in like manner. Diversified friendships are not productive of good in the home. Each may have to forego some privileges in this respect to satisfy the temperament of the other. It is good to thus be considerate and faithful, one to the other.

3. Activities. Paul declares that the wives of deacons must be "faithful in all things" (I Tim. 3:11). Any wife, by lack of wisdom in her pursuits in life, may undo the labors of her husband. In this respect she must choose with wisdom.

Love Involves Forgiveness. "Forbearing one another and forgiving one another . . . even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye" (Col. 3:13).

The secret of forgiveness is presented by the apostle in the very next verse—"Put on charity [love], which is the bond of perfectness." Forgiveness is a crowning virtue in the home, not to be banked upon, but to be granted as necessary. Remember:

"For every evil under the sun,
There is a remedy, or there is none;
If there is one, try to find it,
If there is none, never mind it."

II. WIVES ARE INSTRUCTED TO REVERENCE THEIR HUSBANDS."

The term "fear" in Ephesians 5:33: ". . . the wife see that she reverence [fear] her husband," means to have respect for his position, his love, his authority, and his desire. Such reverence is another secret of happiness between husband and wife.

Reverence Involves Contentment. There are some circumstances of life that are necessary; they cannot be changed. The Christian wife must learn to accept these conditions in the light of Hebrews 13:5: "Let your conversation [way of life] be without covetousness; and be content with such as ye have: for he hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." There is a double surety for the reverent wife. She will never be forsaken of her God, nor of her godly husband. If both are saved, then there is every possibility of reverence and mutual respect. If only one is saved, then that one must practice I Peter 3:1-6. If neither are saved, then they need to study the third chapter of John.

Reverence Involves Getting Along. Wives should learn early to live within the means of the head of the house. It is more or less true that you married your standard of living. Wisdom from Proverbs declares: "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith" (Prov. 15:17). Your husband provides your house and supplies; it is your privilege to make these into a happy home.

Reverence Involves Making a Happy Home. There are two appearances that can make or break a portion of your home happiness:

1. The appearance of your house. Wives are to be "keepers at home." To look into many a household, one would wonder whether or not the housewife knew the meaning of that instruction. Again from Proverbs: "She looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness" (Prov. 31:27).

2. The appearance of yourself. Someone has said that "a good wife is LIKE and UNLIKE three things: (1) A snail: she keeps within her own house but does not carry it all around on her back; (2) an echo: she speaks when spoken to, but does not repeat everything she hears; (3) a town clock: she always keeps time and regularity, but does not speak so publicly that the whole town can hear her. By all means she should endeavor to be neat in her appearance, modest in ways, and gracious in spirit.

III. WIVES ARE INSTRUCTED TO OBEY THEIR HUSBANDS.

"Therefore, as the church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing" (Eph. 5:24). No Christian wife need hesitate to obey a Christian husband who really loves her.

Obedience Involves Submission. The wife is to be submissive to her husband in the three vital purposes of marriage: (1) She is to bear children (Gen. 3:18; I Tim. 5:14); (2) she is to glorify the Lord—"As it is fit [glorifying] in the Lord" (Col. 3:18); and she is to win her husband —". . . they also may without the word be won by the . . . wives" (I Pet. 3:1).

Obedience Involves Satisfaction. For a wife to remove the promise to "obey" from the wedding ceremony is to seal her own unhappiness. Husbands rule the wives with authority, the wives rule with love. The husband ought by no means to displease his wife; and she ought by all means to please him. Judy, in the story, "Daddy Long Legs," in speaking of her husband, said: "You took away my peace of mind and my carefree way of life, for now you are my constant care and concern—but I would not have it different." That's the attitude of the obedient wife.

Conclusion—

A good wife:

Loves her husband by sharing faithfully with him all the affairs of his life, forgiving him for wrongs made right, and encouraging him, bringing forth the best within him.

Cherishes her husband by being content in all necessary circumstances, making ends meet on the provision earned, and by always endeavoring to present herself, her home, and her affairs in a pleasant and winsome manner.

Obeys her husband by being submissive to his judgment and desire insofar as these do not conflict with the Scriptures: bearing children, glorifying God, and producing fruits of service, especially in the home and in the church.

It was Spurgeon who wrote: "A good wife delights in her husband, in his person, his character, his affections; in his eyes he is all-in-all; her heart's love belongs to him and to him only; his honor is reflected in her and she is happy; his smiling gratitude is all the reward she seeks; even in her dress she considers him, and nothing is pleasing to her that is distasteful to him; he has many objects in life, many of which she does not understand, but she believes in them all, and anything she can do to help him is her delight—thus she is the model Christian wife."

We hasten to add that the joy and pleasure of her husband is only one of her rewards. In Proverbs 31:28 we read: "And her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

And how can she accomplish so high a calling—a calling that is sometimes quite difficult in its demands? Paul gives the answer in several great verses of promise:

"Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report . . . think on these things. Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you. I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me. But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:8-9, 13, 19).

O blessed house, where man and wife, united
In Thy true love, have both one heart and mind;
Where both to Thy salvation are invited,
And in Thy doctrine both contentment find;
Where both, to Thee, in truth, forever cleaving
In joy, in grief, make Thee their only stay,
And fondly hope in Thee to be believing,
Both in the good and in the evil day. —K. J. P. Spitta.

THE INCARNATION OF CHRIST

By Charles W. Turner, Pastor Grace Brethren Church, Flora, Ind.

INCARNATION DEFINED

One of the great revealed truths of the New Testament Scriptures is the incarnation of Jesus Christ. It was announced by the prophets and proclaimed by an angel of the Lord. Paul, writing after his Lord's ascension, said: "And without controversy great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh" (I Tim. 3:16). This statement of Paul, "God was manifest in the flesh," is about the clearest definition we can find for the incarnation. Men of God in early church councils struggled to fathom the depths and definition of this Biblical truth given to them by revelation. Some stumbled into great error regarding His person because they could not grasp the truth. Passing years have in no way dimmed the truth, and we today stand amazed at the fact the Second Person of the Godhead "took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men."

INCARNATION CLARIFIED

Christ's coming in the flesh at Bethlehem does not mean that it was His beginning, for He said, "Before Abraham was, I am." He existed with God the Father, and God the Holy Spirit in eternity past, before the worlds were ever framed. He always existed; Bethlehem was His manifestation in the flesh.

It would be laxness upon our part not to call attention to this most important fact: that though He was "in the form of man," He was apart from sin. He was the One unique person of history towering over all others; He was the God-Man. Never forget, though He changed His position from heaven to earth, and His form, and His possessions, He never ceased to be any less than the very God He always was and will be. The man of this world struggles to comprehend this great truth, but he only becomes confused and bewildered. The child of God looks at the revelation of the incarnation of Christ, and though he may not be able to understand it all, must utter with Thomas, "My Lord and my God."

INCARNATION WAS REAL

Was His humanity real? Yes. Weariness of the flesh overtook Him as He sailed across the Sea of Galilee; sorrow overcame Him as He wept over Jerusalem; sympathy made His heart go forth to Mary and Martha; suffering on the cross was as real as any that has ever coursed through your body. He was indeed human, but also remember not to become confused by comparing Him with yourself or others, for though He was human, it was not sinful humanity which we know about us. He was the unique person —humanity and Deity combined.

Was He still God while He was on earth? Yes; His own words confirmed this fact that though He was in the flesh He remained equal with the Father. Biblical revelation confirms this fact to be true. Let me remind you again of the fact, Paul said: "God was manifest in the flesh."

PURPOSE OF THE INCARNATION

One question that has probably come to your mind is: "Why was Christ willing to leave the glories of heaven for this old earth marred by sin?" In the question we find the answer—"this old world marred by sin." He came because of sin and its devastating effect upon the work of His own creation. Sin brought the Saviour into this world that He might be able to help us. He came to reveal to man what God was really like. Man had only seen and known through experience other sinful men, just like himself. We needed a glimpse of God, and Jesus Christ was the answer.

Merely to reveal God was not enough for the desperate plight of men. Man needed someone to help him with the problem of sin. Jesus Christ was again the answer. For man having sinned against God had heard the decree: "The wages of sin is death." God incarnate in the flesh could pay this penalty by dying and providing the gift of eternal life.

He came not only to be our Saviour but to be a great High Priest for us. He had always been the obedient Son of God, but in the days of His flesh "yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered." There is a vast difference between knowing about something by fact, and then knowing it by experience. Jesus Christ learned by experience not to obey God, for this He knew, but He learned by experience the problems of human existence and the following of the commandments of His Father. His obedience led Him through suffering and finally to death. This made Him not only the Saviour but a merciful and faithful High Priest for us. Jesus Christ knows and cares for us who today are seeking to follow the Word of God. Jesus cares, and is sympathetic to our problems, our burdens, and sufferings. He knows, for He too has walked this old world.

He came to set at naught the works of the Devil, that Old Deceiver, and with the victory on the cross over sin, Satan now stands condemned, the sentence passed of his impending doom, the execution of the sentence waits God's good time.

The angelic announcement of the incarnation of Jesus Christ was this: "They shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us." "God with us" is one of the finest and clearest statements of His coming in the flesh to be with us and help us answer otherwise unanswerable problems. Bethlehem becomes a higher place in our mind when we see its true meaning.

ened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height; and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fulness of God. Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us, unto him be glory in the church by Christ Jesus throughout all ages, world without end. Amen" (Eph. 3:14-21).

Our National Conference

As the Educational Number of the Herald goes to the printer the meetings of our National Fellowship of Brethren Churches are just getting under way at Jennings Lodge, just a few miles outside the city of Portland, Oreg. If any had fears that the attendance at a conference in the Northwest would be unduly small, those fears were certainly allayed at the very first session on Wednesday evening, when the attendance was estimated at approximately 700 people. At the first business session there were 260 lay and 119 ministerial delegates.

Jennings Lodge is a beautiful spot located about 10 miles outside of Portland on the Willamette River. All who came from a distance seem to have enjoyed their journey to this scenic country. Many came in their automobiles, some came by train, and some by plane. Several people brought their own accommodations with various kinds of house trailer or camping equipment. One group of relatives from southern California came together in a three-trailer caravan. They reported big business for the gasoline station fortunate enough to have all three pull in at the same time for refueling. In addition to the sale of gas, in the hot part of the country each station profited by the sale of 13 "cokes." There has been little time to hear many of the experiences from the delegates, some of whom made their first cross-country trip. All, however, agree that America is a marvelously wonderful country in which "every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

As one travels across this great land, sees the thousands of people who are on their way, seeking something to bring them a bit of happiness, and as he passes through hundreds of cities and towns, he cannot help but realize that these thousands of people represent souls without Christ! While the beauties of nature on such a trip bring pleasure to a Christian, there is also the added burden for fields that need to be harvested before it is too late. Let us train them, and then let us send them out while there is still opportunity, lest we lose even the opportunity to travel and enjoy the beauties of nature.

A Pastor Writes

One of the greatest thrills in the work at Grace College is that of watching young men and women develop and mature under the teaching and spiritual atmosphere of the school.

Spiritual development is like physical growth in one respect: it is often more evident to those who see the individual after months of absence. It is therefore gratifying indeed to receive from time to time letters like the following, written recently by one of our pastors:

"It was a genuine joy to us to have ——— at Grace this last semester, and his testimony for Christ and the school is already counting here at ——— Brethren Church. He is a changed lad since spending a semester there, and make no make mistake about it. He was a fine lad when he left, but we certainly can notice a decided alteration. And does he like Grace! We will pray with you about our young people and their schooling for the fall."

Do Missionaries Put Us to Shame?

People have changed very little through 20 centuries of time! In the days of Christ and in the early church those who, humanly speaking, could least afford to give were sometimes the ones who possessed the greatest spirit of liberality. Recently two letters arrived at the school—one from a missionary to Africa and the other from a missionary in South America. A portion of each is reproduced here, not because they represent the unusual, but because they are similar to many which have come from our missionaries.

The first writes: "Having recently heard of a need in regard to the operating expenses of Grace Seminary, we take this opportunity to send a gift ($50) for the General Fund. We appreciate the work that Grace Seminary is doing. We are continually thankful for the time we spent there, and we pray that the Lord will continue to bless and provide for every need."

The second adds: "We trust that this gift of $15 will help a little to meet expenses in the school so dear to our hearts." Are some of us leaving the support for the training of future missionaries to some who are on the foreign field? How long has it been since you have used one of the Monthly Plan envelopes?

From a Man Who Should Know!

J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), recently said: "The spectacle of a nation praying is more awe-inspiring than the explosion of an atomic bomb. The force of prayer is greater than any possible combination of man-made or man-controlled powers, because prayer is man's greatest means of tapping the infinite resources of God."

In a few days Grace Seminary and College will open its doors to nearly 100 new students in addition to those who will be returning to us. Their training and spiritual development is a great responsibility. Will you covenant with us to pray daily for them and for the school of which they are a part?

Scientists and Theologians Meet at Grace Seminary

The first joint meeting of the American Scientific Affiliation and the Evangelical Theological Society was held at Grace Theological Seminary June 21-24, 1955. Approximately 100 scholars from all parts of the United States and Canada attended. Papers and discussions were on the relationship of the Bible and scence, and both the theologians and the scientists expressed their belief in the complete scientific accuracy of the Bible.

Among those who spoke were Prof. Herbert Feely, of Columbia University, one of the developers of the carbon-14 process for the dating of ancient objects by radioactivity, whose subject was, "The Impact of Geological Dating Upon the Interpretation of Biblical Chronology"; Dr. Edwin R. Thiele, of Emmanuel Missionary College, Berrien Springs, Mich., on "Difficulties Concerning Biblical Chronology and Their Solutions"; and Dr. Martin J. Wyngaarden, professor of Old Testament at Calvin Theological Seminary, Grand Rapids, Mich., on "Problems of Chronology in Genesis."

A panel on the comparative methods of scientists and Biblical expositors included Dr. Robert P. Dilworth, professor of mathematics at the California Institute of Technology, on the role of statistics in the scientific method; Dr. Henry Weaver, Jr., professor of chemistry at Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va., representing the physical sciences; and Dr. Charles J. Miller, formerly of the American University of Beirut, Lebanon, giving the approach of a professor of history. Representatives of theology were Prof. Henry Van Til, of Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Mich., and Prof. Berkeley Mickelsen, of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill. Summary papers included those of Dr. Allan A. MacRae, president of Faith Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, Pa., on "Implications of Biblical Inerrancy for the Investigation of Scientific Facts," and Dr. J. Oliver Buswell, Jr., president of Shelton College, Ringwood, N. J., on "Implications of Scientific Discovery for the Doctrine of Biblical Inerrancy."

Discussion groups, which had been working on particular aspects of the relationship of the Bible and science, submitted their reports on June 24. The group on "The Antiquity of Man," while noting that the oftenquoted date of 4004 B. C. for the creation of Adam is not held by reputable evangelical scholars, pointed out that the Bible seems to favor a date for man's creation of not too many thousands of years B. C., that the earliest scientifically proved date for man is about 20,000 B. C., and that attempts to place man on the earth hundreds of thousands of years ago were simply "educated guesses." Another group considered the deluge of Noah and reported that the applicability of science to the flood is less than generally supposed. Fossils and stratification need not be associated with the flood, and an ancient universal record of the flood is to be maintained, which seems to favor a universal rather than a local flood, and which certainly demands the destruction of the entire human race, except for the family of Noah.

The group on "Probabilities and Certainties of Scientific Methods and Methods of Interpreting the Bible" stressed that while istic theories to explain those facts, such as evolution, are not. The group also stressed that the original manuscripts of the Bible are without error, but that men are not without error in interpreting the Bible.

Other papers were read by Dr. Harold Hartzler, of Goshen College, Goshen, Ind., the president of American Scientific Affiliation; Dr. Burton L. Goddard, dean of the Gordon Divinity School, Boston, Mass.; Dr. Willard W. Paul, of Shelton College, Ringwood, N. J.; Dr. G. Douglas Young, dean of Northwestern Schools, Minneapolis, Minn.; Dr. Samuel J. Schultz, of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill.: and Dr. R. Laird Harris, of Faith Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, Pa. Devotional and other leaders included Rev. W. Gordon Brown, of Central Baptist Theological Seminary, Toronto, Canada; Dr. Chester K. Lehman, dean of Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va.; Prof. William H. Pardee, of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) Baptist Theological Seminary; Dr. Milford Henkle, of the Winona Lake (Ind.) School of Theology; Dr. Stanley E. Anderson, of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.; Dr. William J. Tinkle, of Taylor University, Upland, Ind.; Prof. Stanley M. Norton, of the Central Bible Institute, Springfield, Mo.; Dr. Irving Jensen, of the William Jennings Bryan University, Dayton, Tenn.; Dr. Paul Bauman, of Grace Theological Seminary, Winona Lake, Ind.; and Dr. Roger R. Nicole, of Gordon Divinity School, Boston, Mass., vice president of the Evangelical Theological Society.

The joint session recommended to the coming annual meetings of both the American Scientific Affiliation and the Evangelical Theological Society that the invitation of Wheaton College be accepted for a gathering to continue the cooperative work of the societies. This meeting is planned for the week of June 18-22, 1956. It was voted to publish the reports of the 1955 sessions, including proceedings, all papers read, and the resulting discussions. To obtain copies write the secretary of either the Evangelical Theological Society, Prof. J. Barton Payne, of Trinity Theological Seminary, 1726 W. Berteau Ave., Chicago 13, Ill., or of the American Scientific Affiliation, Prof., Hendrik J. Oorthuys, of Purdue University, 435 Robinson St., West Lafayette, Ind.

THE GENESIS FLOOD

Editor's Note—The following article is the first of a series written by Professor Whitcomb. The subject is one which is receiving considerable attention today in theological and scientific circles. Whether one agrees with all of his conclusions or not, the writer shows a devout reverence for the Bible. The articles should cause every true believer who reads them to engage in a more careful study of God's two great revelations—His Word and His world.

Did the Flood destroy the entire human race outside of the ark? Were the land animals of Australia killed by the Flood? Did the Flood leave any marks upon the surface of the earth that can be traced today? These and many questions like them were discussed by nearly 100 Christian scholars from the United States and Canada at Grace Theological Seminary late in June, in the first joint meeting of the American Scientific Affiliation and the Evangelical Theological Society.

The Provocation

One of the factors that provoked such discussions was the publication earlier this year of a controversial book by Dr. Bernard Ramm entitled, "The Christian View of Science and Scripture." In this book Dr. Ramm says that modern geologists and anthropologists reject the possibility of a universal flood within the past 10,000 years, and that for this reason we must interpret the Flood in Genesis 6-9 as a purely local phenomenon which destroyed only those people who inhabited the Mesopotamian Valley in Noah's day (p. 239).

This opinion found a very unfavorable reception at the A. S. A.-E. T. S. conference, with two papers by professors of Old Testament from Wheaton College and Faith Seminary to refute it, and no one to defend it. Furthermore, book reviews in The Sunday School Times (May 7), The Presbyterian Guardian (March 15), Eternity (August), and the Concordia Theological Monthly have taken Dr. Ramm to task on this and many other points in his book.

The Issues

But why all this discussion, and what difference does it make, after all, whether an ancient flood covered the whole earth or just the Mesopotamian Valley? For the average listener, this would be the inevitable attitude, but actually, the issues at stake are far greater than may appear on the surface. The real issue is whether current scientific theories (such as organic evolution) should be the criteria by which theologians must interpret the Bible, or whether the clear teachings of Scripture are the perfect standard by which current scientific theories must be judged.

The point at which all such discusisons must begin is the Biblical record. What does the Bible actually say on this point or that point? Are there legitimate differences of opinion as to what the Bible actually means to say concerning this particular problem? In the problem of the Flood, for example, does a fair and unbiased interpretation of Genesis 6-9 and related passages lead us to the conclusion that the Bible teaches a universal destruction of human beings and land animals by the Flood? Since this must be our starting point, we shall devote the remainder of this and an entire subsequent article to an examination of Old Testament passages that shed light on the problem of the Flood's universality. Perhaps in later articles we may examine the New Testament texts on the Flood, the interesting evidence from ancient Flood traditions, and the problem of physical evidences for the Flood.

The Genesis Account

Turning immediately to the key portion of the Biblical account of the Flood, we read in Genesis 7:19-24 that "the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth; and all the high mountains that were under the whole heaven were covered. Fifteen cubits [about 22 feet] upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered. And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both birds, and cattle, and beasts, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man: all in whose nostrils was the breath of the spirit of life, of all that was on the dry land, died. And every living thing was destroyed that was upon the face of the ground, both man and cattle, and creeping things, and birds of the heavens; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only was left, and they that were with him in the ark. And the waters prevailed upon the earth a hundred and fifty days" (ASV).

Scholars who believe in the inspiration of the Bible, and who, like Dr. Ramm, believe that the Flood was confined to the Mesopotamian Valley, are forced to explain this passage phenomenally. That is, they must teach that "the deluge was universal in so far as the area and observation and information of the narrator extended" (p. 240, italics are his). Thus, according to this interpretation, Noah thought that the waters cov-

Following On

By John Rea

Professor, Grace College

How often we feel perplexed in our Christian walk! We ponder daily: "Should I do this or not? Would the Lord have me speak to that soul today?" Just how can I know the Lord's will for my individual life each day? Proverbs 3:5-6 contains the secret of following on: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him [or, take him into consideration in everything you say and do], and he shall direct thy paths."

Some excellent spiritual advice on this matter comes from the pen of John Newton, the great hymnwriter of the 18th century. While he labored devotedly for his Lord in the pastorate in England, his hymns and his letters, rather than his sermons, have lived on after his homegoing to be of great blessing to us today. In one of his choice letters to a fellow pastor (Voice of the Heart, the Wycliffe Series of Christian Classic, pp. 208 f.) he says:

"To combine zeal with prudence is indeed difficult There is often too much self in our zeal and too much of the fear of man in our prudence. However, what we cannot attain by any skill or resolution of our own we may hope in measure to receive from Him who giveth liberally to those who seek Him and desire to serve Him. Prudence is a word much abused; but there is a heavenly wisdom which the Lord has promised to give to those who humbly wait upon Him for it. It does not consist in forming a bundle of rules and maxims, but in a spiritual taste and discernment, derived from an experimental knowledge of the truth and of the heart of man, as described in the Word of God; its exercise consists much in a simple dependence upon the Lord to guide and prompt us in every action. We seldom act wrong when we truly depend upon Him and can cease from leaning to our own understanding.

"When the heart is thus in a right tune and frame and His Word dwells richly in us, there is a kind of immediate perception of what is proper for us to do in present circumstances, without much painful inquiry; a light shines before us on the path of duty; and if He permits us in such a spirit to make some mistakes, He will likewise teach us to profit by them; and our reflections upon what was wrong one day will make us to act more wisely the next. At the best, we must always expect to meet with new proofs of our own weakness and insufficiency; otherwise how should we be kept humble, or know how to prize the liberty He allows us of coming to the throne of grace for fresh forgiveness and direction every day? But if He enables us to walk before Him with a single eye, He will graciously accept our desire of serving Him better if we could, and His blessing will make our feeble endeavors in some degree successful, at the same time that we see defects and evils attending our best services, sufficient to make us ashamed of them."

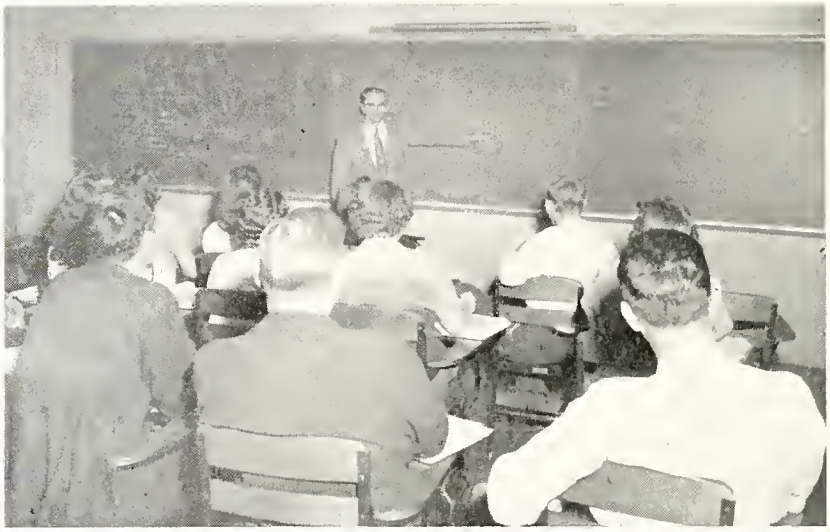
Rev. and Mrs. Henry Dalke and family are shown in the picture at the top. Below, Rev. Glen Welborn (left) and Dr. Paul Bauman join in the ordination prayer.

The morning service of August 7 was set aside by the Grace Brethren Church of Yakima, Wash., for the ordination of its pastor, Henry Dalke. Two elders shared in the ordination service—Rev. Glen Welborn, of Albany, Oreg., and the writer. The one spoke on "The Responsibility of the Church to the Pastor," and the other on "The Responsibility of the Pastor to the Church."



Brother Welborn, humanly speaking, was largely responsible for Rev. Dalke's coming into the Brethren Church after several years of successful ministry in another denomination. Several years ago it was my privilege to have Brother Dalke in my classes at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, and one year ago I had the joy of baptizing him and his wife in the baptistry at Grace Seminary.

The Lord has graciously blessed since Brother Dalke assumed his duties in our home-mission church at Yakima a little more than a year ago. We rejoice in the way God has led in his ministry.—Paul R. Bauman.

Thoughts on Education

By Jesse D. Humberd

Jesse D. Humberd, assistant professor of science and mathematics at Grace College, is enrolled this summer at the Ohio State University for further graduate study.

Professor Humberd and One of His Classes

Philosophy—"By their fruits ye shall know them." It is estimated that from 90 percent to 97 percent of the graduate students of a university come out with the philosophy of that university. In spite of the claims that such schools are open-minded and broad-minded, and that their students are taught to look at all sides of every question impartially, this is the result. The graduate has carefully weighed all the facts and concludes for himself that his alma mater maintains the one democratic philosophy.

Thus one university will produce realists in the field of education, another will graduate idealists, and a third will send forth pragmatists.

This situation is not found only in the universities on the graduate level. The average student enrolled in the average college has gone there to accept what he will be taught. He expects to do his own thinking, but believes that he can trust the college to add to his understanding and knowledge, and he has come to follow the leading of the faculty. This fact is of great importance to any prospective college student, and to his parents. The choice of schools may well be the choice of one's life philosophy.

Fortunately, this does not lead to a hopeless situation for the Christian young man and woman. Under the guidance and direction of the Lord, colleges, Bible institutes, and seminaries have been raised up where the Word of God is taught and believed. Many of these schools are making every effort to provide an equal or superior education for their students, to what they could obtain in a large university.

Teachers—Have you wondered what teachers do in the summertime? You have doubtless heard of the sailor who takes a rowboat ride in the amusement park, or of the bus driver who drives his family to the city on his vacation. Teachers are just as human as sailors or bus drivers. And teachers go to school in the summertime. At the large state universities there are hundreds of teachers enrolled; at the smaller independent or denominational colleges scores more are taking additional work. The trend is toward more and more education for those who will teach the present and future generations.

Much has been made of a shortage of teachers on the elementary-school level. There is now developing a shortage of teachers for the junior high and senior high schools. The experts predict that in a few more years a similar shortage will exist in the supply of college and university teachers. By 1970 there will be two or three in college for every one who is there today. The Christian college must not only accept the responsibility of increasing her standards for those students she can handle now, but must enlarge her borders.

Christian young people must accept the challenge the teaching field offers. If you like to work with children, perhaps there is a place for you in the Christian day school, the public school, or the Christian college. Grace College is developing a strong department of education, and has been given annual accreditation by the Indiana State Department of Education beginning September 1956.

Size of Institutions—So you want to be a teacher? a preacher? a doctor? or do you just want a college education? or perhaps you have a son or daughter, niece or nephew, granddaughter or grandson whom you wish to help educate. What type of school should you consider?

Consider first the large state universities with 15,000 to 25,000 students. Certainly one would find scholarly men on the faculty, the best in scientific research, nearly unlimited facilities in many fields, and a large library. But for the average college freshman, the main advantage is that there is no tuition charge for residents of his own state. This advantage might easily be outweighed by some of the disadvantages of a large school. Perhaps a large university would be advisable for students who intend to go into medicine, dentistry, law, or engineering. For the future minister, teacher, homemaker, or average citizen, the large university is not the place.

You assume the instruction is superior. Yet you will find many of the freshmen sections being taught by graduate students working for their own advanced degrees.

For advanced work toward master's or doctor's degrees a large university is more desirable. Not only are there library and laboratory facilities beyond the reach of the small college, but the contact with a greater number of people with similar interests is valuable. For example, a teacher studying to become a superintendent of schools will meet and share experiences with many others in his own field, whereas in a small college his advanced work might be limited to research or contact with a very few.

Secondly, we might consider the schools with enrollments between 700-1,500. This group of schools comprise in general the independent liberal arts colleges or denominationally affiliated colleges. For the undergraduate the quality of instruction here is usually good. A reputable school will have a majority, or nearly so, of its faculty with doctoral degrees in special fields, and perhaps half of your teachers from your freshmen year will be such scholars. You will know all of the faculty by sight, but not all of the students. The school spirit is high and is sustained by sports, musical and dramatic groups. The library facilities are frequently very good and kept up to date.

The disadvantage of this size school quite frequently is its departure from the simple philosophy or statement of purpose of the founders. Many of the denominational schools are quite frankly secular, and the independent colleges are nonreligious.

Finally, there are the schools with enrollments under 500. In this group are a great variety of schools which defy description in any general way. These schools have a family spirit not so evident in larger schools. It is possible to know all of the student and faculty members. The teachers are generally of the same belief or philosophy. Many of them will be continuing their own study toward advanced degrees in their chosen fields. These schools, more than the others, tend to remain true to the purpose for which they were founded.

Search for a school that claims to be and is a Christian school. Be sure that it is interested in high standards of scholarship and conduct; and that it is ever improving those standards in order to increase its recognition and accreditation.

Scholarships Awarded at Grace College

By Prof. Homer A. Kent, Jr.

Four scholarships for the 1955-56 school year have been awarded to students of the incoming freshman class. These scholarships cover the amount of tuition at Grace College for one year. The Grace Seminary Alumni Association has provided one of these scholarships, and the college has granted the others. From many worthy applications the scholarship committee made its selection. The choice was made only after prayer and careful deliberation. It was not easy. Many worthy applicants had to be set aside. Every effort was made to issue the scholarships where the qualifications were the highest and the need was most urgent.

1. MARY JANE KEYSER (see cover picture No. 2) was awarded the Academic Achievement Scholarship. Mary Jane is a member of the Grace Brethren Church at Albany, Oreg., where she has been active in young people's work and has demonstrated spiritual growth and leadership. She was editor of the newspaper at Shedd High School, and was valedictorian of her senior class.

2. JEANETTE TURNER (see cover picture No. 6) was also awarded an Academic Achievement Scholarship. Jeanette is 18 years old, and is a member of the First Brethren Church at Portis, Kans. She was an outstanding student in Portis High School and graduated as valedictorian of her class. She has also been active in her church, and has demonstrated high qualities of leadership.

3. HYLA MAE PALMER (see cover picture No. 13) was awarded the Academic Encouragement Scholarship. Hyla is 18 years old, a member of the First Brethren Church at Wooster, Ohio, and a graduate of Wooster High School. She has been a faithful worker in her church and a leader among the young people. The physical disability of her father has created a financial need which this scholarship will greatly relieve.

4. RANDALL POYNER (see cover picture No. 10) was awarded the Grace Seminary Alumni Scholarship. Randall is 19 years old and is a member of the Grace Brethren Church at Waterloo, Iowa. He is a graduate of West High School, Waterloo, and was salutatorian of his class. He has been engaged in farming for one year following his high-school graduation because of an obligation to his parents. He will be preparing for Christian service in the pastorate or the mission field. The Grace Theological Seminary Alumni Association is providing the tuition for this scholarship.

Members of Grace Seminary Staff Help School Trustee Start New Illustrated Sunday School

The above photo shows the group attending the new Brethren Illustrated Sunday School at Barbee Lakes, Ind., about 10 miles northeast of Winona Lake. Started June 5 by Foye B. Miller, well-known Brethren layman of Winona Lake, and Grace Seminary trustee, the school is a combination Bible school and worship service featuring color slides of gospel verses, illustrations, and pictures. Speakers the first two months, when attendance grew from 50 to 87, included Dr. Paul R. Bauman, seminary vice president, who appeared four times; Rev. Nathan Meyer, 1955 seminary graduate and new professor of homileties, who spoke twice; Dr. Norman Uphouse, Prof. Jesse Humberd, Rev. Clyde Landrum, and Rev. Lester Pifer, the latter two being seminary alumni. A Grace College sophomore, Gerry Adams, of Temple City, Calif., is songleader at Barbee.

Although Brother Miller started the work "on his own" without help from any church or mission group, he has had the active and prayerful support of his missionary-minded pastor, Nathan Meyer, whose congregation (Leesburg) generously released him and supplied their own pulpit to help the new work. The Barbee services start later than the usual Sunday school, opening at 11 o'clock and closing at 12:15.

ered the mountains; he thought that all men and animals outside of the ark were destroyed; but in actuality this was not the case!

How ridiculous the Genesis account of the Flood appears when seen in such a light! Questions crowd in upon us such as these: (1) Why did Noah have to spend 120 years building an ark as large as a modern ocean liner (Gen. 6:3-22) just for a local flood? (2) Why was it necessary to take two of every kind of animal on board if only those in the Mesopotamian Valley were drowned? (3) Why couldn't the birds have flown over to dry ground if the flood was local? (4) How could even 22 feet of water remain for five months in a small coastal area without raising the water level of all the oceans to that extent, to say nothing of the fact that according to Genesis 7:20 the highest mountains were covered to such a depth? (5) If the purpose of the Flood was to destroy man for his sins, except for Noah's family, how was this accomplished by destroying only those who lived in Mesopotamia? (6) If this was only a local flood, what becomes of God's promise never to bring another such flood upon the earth (Gen. 9:11-17)?

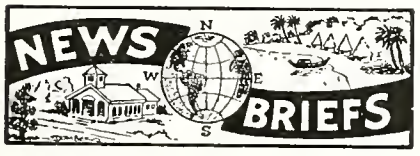
WINONA LAKE, IND. Dr. Alva J. McClain, president of Grace Seminary and College, has been invited, and expects to participate, as one of several speakers on the program of the Second International Congress on Prophecy in New York City November 6 through 13.

STERLING, OHIO. Miss Ruth Moine and Mr. Alva Steffler, instructor in music at Grace College, Winona Lake, Ind., were married in the First Brethren Church August 20.

CAMDEN, OHIO. Rev. Stanley F. Hauser, of the Conemaugh (Pa.) Brethren Church, will be the evangelist for the meetings to be held in the First Brethren Church. Dr. Randall Rossman, pastor, the first two weeks in September.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. Dr. Richard A. Elvee, president of Northwestern Schools, has announced that the schools will be renamed "Northwestern College" in order to more accurately describe the nature and academic standing of the institution.



RELIGIOUS SPOTLIGHT

THE SWANK BAHAMA SHORES YACHT CLUB, OF ST. PETERSBURG, FLORIDA, IS NOW A RELIGIOUS HOME FOR THE AGED OF ALL FAITHS.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF. Dr. W. A. Ogden, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa., and former pastor of the First Brethren Church here, will again occupy the pulpit as guest preacher on August 28. Glenn O'Neal is pastor.

LEESBURG, IND. While Nathan Meyer, pastor of the Leesburg Brethren Church, and family were on a vacation visiting relatives in Pennsylvania, Brother Meyer was guest preacher on August 21 at the First Brethren Church, Philadelphia, William Male, pastor, and August 28 at the Harrisburg Melrose Gardens Brethren Church, Conard Sandy, pastor.

WINONA LAKE, IND. In scanning the bulletins from the different Brethren churches, it has been interesting to note the guest preachers from various walks of life and occupations who have occupied Brethren pulpits while the pastors have been to National Conference. Much as we would like to include them all in the Herald, this has proved to be impossible. It is nevertheless a wholesome testimony of the love of Christ for all brethren of like precious faith.

SOUTH GATE, CALIF. In addition to several conversions resulting from two weeks of DVBS at the First Brethren Church, the children contributed $66.50 toward the cottage and well so urgently needed by Miss Evelyn Fuqua in Kentucky.

WINONA LAKE, IND. The Winona Lake Bible Conference invited two professors from Grace College and Seminary to speak on the 2 o'clock broadcast over WMBI from Winona Auditorium. Nathan Meyer, instructor in homiletics, spoke Aug. 11, and Homer Kent, Jr., assistant registrar and associate professor in New Testament and Greek, spoke Aug. 18.

CHICAGO, ILL. The fourth annual conference of Evangelical Literature Overseas will be held in Moody Church Dec. 13-15, 1955, according to a recent announcement by Harold Street, executive secretary. The conference will take the form of a literature workshop and will consider the problems related to original writing, translation, publication, production, distribution, and training of nationals. Missionaries on furlough are particularly invited.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (AP). In Lagos, Nigeria, the sale of wives on the time payment plan may soon begin. A government committee investigating current prices paid to parents for brides has recommended a price freeze of $84, to be paid in installments. The committee recommended rationing, too—one wife! The marriage mart of that British colony has been inflated since World War II by soldiers loaded with mustering-out pay.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (ERA). E. C. Manning, premier of Alberta, Canada, led his Social Credit Government into a quarter century of uninterrupted power last June 29 when he won his fourth victory in a general election. Manning, who assumed leadership of the Social Credit Party in Alberta in 1943, combines evangelical religious work with politics—along with his government work Manning directs a Bible school, a monthly Bible magazine, and a dominionwide gospel broadcast.

This issue of the Missionary Herald has gone into 8,332 homes in many countries of the world.

GOSSIP - - - Is It a Sin?

The origin of the word "gossip" is very interesting. According to Webster's Dictionary it came from the Anglo-Saxon word godsib, which is from god (God) plus sib (related, a relation). It referred to a person spiritually related to another through being a sponsor at a baptism. The word has a different meaning to most of us today. Webster's definition of the word as in common usage is one who goes from house to house or goes about tattling and telling news; a newsmonger. One can easily see how easy it was for the person who was a "godsib," and therefore knew all about another, to become a "gossip" and tell what he knew about another.

Does the Bible declare gossip to be a sin? The word itself is not found in the Scriptures, but there is a word therein which describes what it means to be a gossip. It is the word "talebearer" which, according to Strong's Concordance, means "scandalmonger" as it is used in Leviticus 19:16: "Thou shalt not go up and down as a talebearer among thy people." Here we have a definite command from the Lord not to carry scandal from one person to another. The Christian Herald illustrates this verse by the following story of a decent and honest old woman who had for more than 40 years earned a livelihood by taking in washing, and who was asked how it was that she was so well liked by those who came in contact with her. She replied: "I make it a practice never to say in one house what I hear in another."

Now let us look at the sin of gossip. Proverbs 20:19 tells us that "he that goeth about as a talebearer revealeth secrets." Everyone sooner or later will gain the confidence of another who in time of distress will confide serious personal matters to his friend. To reveal such secrets to others could well damage the reputation of the one confiding in the friend. The tale of the gossip always has a way of getting more damaging as it goes from mouth to mouth. The flesh loves to exaggerate for the hurt of another. Or the matter may not have been entrusted to one personally but be merely a bit of rumored information about another which, if passed on, could ultimately bring great injury to the one upon whom the gossip is centered. There may be no evidence that the rumor is true, and even if it were true, there is no reason to pass it on if by so doing injury would be brought upon someone. Then, too, it is possible for one to be so desperately wicked that with malicious intent he will generate within his heart some juicy bit of scandal and pass it on to others with the sole purpose of bringing injury to the one hated. Such gossip always has a ready hearing in some people and it spreads like the devastating forest fire driven by the wind.

By Dr. Herman W. Koontz, Pastor
Winona Lake Brethren Church
Winona Lake, Ind.

In the seven things that God hates, as given in Proverbs 6:16-19, it is easy to see how much the sin of gossip enters. "These six things doth the Lord hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, an heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, a false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among the brethren." The only way for any of us to be free from the awful sin of gossip and to help stop its harmful spread is to take to heart the words of Proverbs 26:20: "Where no wood is, there the fire goeth out: so where there is no talebearer, the strife ceaseth." If we refuse to be the instrument in the hands of Satan for passing gossip to others, it will soon die like the fire that has no more fuel to keep it burning.

There may arise the question as to what gossip is, and what it is not. Possibly we should ask ourselves some very frank questions before passing on to someone else what we have heard about another. Are we sure it is true? Would it help the person involved by repeating the matter? Would I feel that I had betrayed a trust by passing on the information? Would the cause of Christ be advanced by keeping the incident to myself or by telling it? Would I want the matter repeated to others if I were the one involved? Surely, if we could sincerely ask ourselves these or similar questions, we would be much more careful in what we tell others concerning the rumors or facts that come to us.

We know from the Book of James that "tongue control" is a most difficult thing. James states in chapter 3 how the bit in the mouth of the horse can turn its whole body, and that a small helm is able to steer a huge ship. He goes on to say that the tongue is a little member also, but it can work havoc even as a little fire can produce awful consequences. He even goes so far in this epistle as to state that the tongue no man can tame.

If this is the case, then how can one ever overcome the sin of talebearing? We know, of course, that what comes from the tongue is but the expression of what is within the heart. Therefore heart control must come before tongue control is possible. The Lord Jesus Christ is the answer. That is why He came to this world, and went to the cross. He took the guilt and penalty of our sins upon himself and made it possible for those who believe on Him to receive a new life, so that they can say with the Apostle Paul in Galatians 2:20: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." The tongue has met its master in the Lord Jesus Christ, who longs to change believers from talebearers to Gospelbearers.

The Christian Race or Looking Unto Jesus

By Arthur F. Collins, Pastor
Summit Mills Brethren Church
Meyersdale, Pa.

"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus . . ." (Heb. 12:1-2a).

This letter was written to Jewish Christians before the complete destruction of the Herodian Temple at Jerusalem in A. D. 70.

We see that Christ is herein revealed as our "great high priest that is passed into the heavens" (4:14).

The key word is "better" (used some 13 times). This clearly emphasizes the theme of the epistle in the fact that the new experience in Christ is so much better than the former life of Jewish ritualism even though most of the old practices were good for their time and people.

Finally, we see in the text the summarizing of a better walk of faith as these early Christians look unto Jesus rather than depend upon what they could have done in the way of faithfully keeping the Mosaic law with all of its sacrificial program and rigid ordinances.

In chapter 11 a beautiful panorama of the Old Testament witness of faith is presented to reveal the emphasis on the fact of faith to the redeemed of the early Christian church. Even though these historic saints were used by God, the basis for His use of them was through their faith in His promises as He led them through their experiences of trial or of triumph.

Now today we should be much stronger in faith than those early witnesses of Old Testament fame. The object of our faith is Jesus, whose first advent is now a definite, historical, and supernatural fact. Their faith in the Messiah was veiled in the faithful performance of the sacrifices and the keeping of the law. They looked through a glass darkly, as it were, for the Saviour. We see clearly.

The writer of this epistle to these Hebrew Christians uses the analogy of the Greek races in suggesting that these witnesses, thus mentioned in the previous chapter, ran well. We should likewise take up the torch and enter into the race with all the spiritual vigor and godly fervor at our command. Hence, with this splendid analogy in mind, may I suggest the unusual reduction of our text to this: "The ideal Christian life is a race, in faith—looking unto Jesus."

The ideal Christian life is a race that is set—looking unto Jesus. In this respect we enjoy a faith that is fixed, for it is anchored to the "Rock of Ages." The course is laid by God in redemption's wonderful plan. The race is set—established—with Christ as the prize. The course is fixed. The markers on each side of the track deliberately point us to faith in the unchanging Saviour of mankind. Jesus has delineated the tape and the triumph when He declared in John 14:6: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

Again we see that the race is set and our faith is fixed in the observance of the negative emphasis suggested by the Apostle Peter as he writes: "For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ (II Pet. 1:16). May we add by way of contrast: "But we have followed a sure and fixed thing in the contemplation of our blessed sin-bearer."

We have reason to believe that the race is set and our faith is fixed in the immutable Word of God. Truly herein is revealed His plans and His purposes (insomuch as we need to know) for us, in this life, that we live in faith through the Son of God. Did not Jesus proclaim that "heaven and earth may pass away, but my words shall not pass away" (Matt. 24:35)? Thus the ideal Christian life is a race that is set in a faith that is fixed—looking unto Jesus.

The ideal Christian life is a race that means service—still looking unto Jesus. Here we can enjoy a faith that functions—a practical, everyday working faith in Christ and in the power of the Holy Spirit. Christianity is reasonable, logical, practical, and workable. Or else why would the Apostle Paul be so willing to commit himself to the position of a bondslave in the execution of his responsibility to the Lord Jesus? A bondslave abandons selfish and personal aims to please the Master he loves.

The author of the Hebrew epistle clearly draws our attention to the runner in the race as one in violent action, one progressively moving toward a given goal, one in motion with a definite purpose, program, and prize in view. This virile activity requires the runner to lay aside (1) every weight (possibly some of the better things in our lives?), and (2) sin (the obvious offensive element in our endeavor to reveal the glorious righteousness of Christ). As we run the race let us throw aside, as refuse and nonessential, anything that does not enhance our vision of our blessed Saviour.

The ideal Christian life is a race that may mean suffering—but still looking unto Jesus. Here we can witness a faith that flourishes—bearing fruit unto eternal life. "For unto you it is given in the behalf of Christ, not only to believe on him, but also to suffer for his sake" (Phil. 1:29).

We may be called upon to suffer mental anguish when our former friends forsake us as we look unto Jesus. We may be asked to bear the brunt of ridicule, scorn, criticism, and, sometimes, physical torment, as we are exercised in a faith that is tried yet flourishes. History is filled with the record of the martyrs and their significant sufferings for Christ. Are we any better? Let us not look for trouble, but be reconciled, should it come, inasmuch as frequently more power might be presented through pain and more souls "born again" by a willingness on our part to pay the price in a torturous death and personal sacrifice. (Example: John and Betty Stam in China were greater soul-winners by their death than they may have been by their lives.)

Jesus said, "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit" (John 12:24).

Beloved, this is not asking too much of our faith if we can see Christ formed in others as true and living epistles—born unto Jesus be-

Three Essential Books in the Home

Introduction—

Of the writing of books there has been no end. There have been educational, inspirational, fictional, pictorial, musical, spiritual, desirable, and objectionable books written. Our homes, like our hearts, need to be free from the impure in literature. "Keep thy heart with all diligence; for out of it are the issues of life" (Prov. 4:23). We might add, "Keep the literature in thy home with all diligence, for therefrom come the actions of the members of the family."

Most fairy tales end, ". . . and they lived happily ever after." Most marital stories would continue and end thusly if the proper books were possessed and obeyed in the home. In our homes we have thermostats to control the temperature, humidifiers to control the atmosphere, and appliances to control the conditions—we need literature to control the thoughts; to make for the right conditions, temperature, and atmosphere of the hearts of that home.

Someone has said that the most important books to man are God's Book, the bankbook, and the cookbook. Now we heartily agree that the cookbook has an important place in the home library. However, there are times when we wonder what was the final purpose of the author when we see and try to digest some of the menus that come from some of these cookbooks. In this study we have in mind another book to take the place of the cookbook—the hymnbook. Three essential books in the home, therefore, are the Bible, the hymnbook, and the bankbook. Let's consider them from last to first.

I. THE BANKBOOK.

Statistics reveal that the sixth prevalent cause of divorce is difference over money matters in the home. There are three reasons why people get into these kinds of difficulties: (1) extravagances, (2) carelessness, and (3) foolishness.

Classify Expenditures. (1) Necessities—things we must have, (2) comforts—things that are desirable, but not necessary, (3) luxuries—things we could best get along without.

"There is a treasure to be desired and oil in the dwelling of the wise; but a foolish man spendeth it up" I heard a man say, after indulging himself in the smoking habit all his life: "I have seen a farm go up in smoke." Another could say: "I have poured a new home down my throat in the cost of liquor." Some parents would have to admit: "I have squandered the education of my children by putting its cost on my face and back."

Maintain a Budget. Most folks report that they get 25 percent more usefulness out of their funds when they budget them wisely. Solomon advised: "Be thou diligent to know the state of thy flocks, and look well to thy herds" (Prov. 27:23). In modern language that would read: "Be thou diligent to watch thy expenditures and thine investments."

(1) Know your income and live within it.

(2) Plan your expenditures and work out your plan.

(3) Remember others and share with them according to ability. "He that giveth unto the poor shall not lack: but he that hideth his eyes shall have many a curse" (Prov. 28: 27).

(4) Maintain savings, in modest amount, for that rainy day.

(5) Place the Lord first in tithes and offerings, "as God hath prospered," "the first day of the week," "not grudgingly, or of necessity."

You'll remember that many an Ephraimite was killed on the day of testing because he could not say "shibboleth." True it is that many homes are destroyed because the members haven't learned to say, "We can't afford it." In I Kings 4:25 we read: "Every man under his [own] . . . fig tree." That's a good goal for any family, to have a home of their own. It stabilizes the family budget remarkably.

Share in the Finances. The family earning and the family spending should be a joint affair. Each should contribute his or her share, and all should have a voice in the distribution. The husband should not spend large sums without the advice of the wife, and vice versa. Nor should the wife feel that she must go to public works to contribute her share. Should we have to pay, on current rates, the salary due a wife and mother for all her labors in the home we would have to raise the family budget approximately another $400. Indeed she is doing her share in cooking, cleaning, washing, sewing, counseling, etc.

Give Together. Read Malachi 3:8-10. Remember that this statement of man's obligation to God, the tithe, is approved by Christ in the New Testament record. The tithe is a debt, to be paid—it is not an offering. A bank teller, at gunpoint, hands over $50,000 to a bandit. Surely no one would say that he GAVE the man the money—it certainly was not a gift; it was handed over under coercion. So with the tithe: that is the Lord's and we are commanded to hand it over. Then, out of the love of our hearts, we add our gifts. Some folks are "elastic givers," presenting just as much as they are forced to under the circumstances of the moment.

There are several motives in giving. Note them carefully, please:

(1) Obligation. "I surely feel sorry for the heathen; here's a $5 offering."

(2) Gain. "I would like favor from the Lord and the church; I'll give to gain recognition and favor."

(3) Exchange. "God has been good to me and so I'll give a generous gift. The church helps the community and so I'll be glad to help the church."

(4) Control. "I'll wait until all others have responded to the canvassers, and then I'll subscribe the largest amount; that way I'll be in position to influence the board."

(5) Choice. "This can be deducted from my income taxes."

(6) Need. "How much do we need to meet the budget?" "How much did others give?" "How much is expected?"

(7) Gratitude. "Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift." Little

Chang Fu, recuperating in an American-built hospital in Japan, gave his whole savings to the missionary offering at the hospital. An attendant said: "But you can't give all this." "Yes; I can; for they gave their all for me." Giving for any other cause than pure gratitude is not giving at all.

Give Carefully. There is too much reckless giving in these days of multitudinous appeals. One needs to carefully diagnose the appeal to make sure it is of the Lord. It is often true that a major portion of the gifts, in some causes, is simply used to maintain a large and expensive staff, the purpose of which is to raise the small amount actually applied to the cause being appealed for. Be sure that your family giving is unto the Lord and not unto man.

Administer Surpluses for the glory of the Lord. Inherited estates should be used to further the Lord's work. Accumulated estates should be made available to the Lord's needs. And large estates should not be left for non-Christian relatives to squander. The rich young ruler had amassed a fortune, without taking God into consideration; then he died. Jesus' judgment was: "Thou fool . . . then whose shall those things be?" Remember the Lord and His church in your will—it's an eternal investment.

People should grow in giving. The percentage of giving to the Lord should increase proportionately to the increase in ability. Too often it is just the opposite—the luxuries are added instead of the gifts.

How much shall a family give to the Lord? How much do we love our children? All we can. How much do we love our partners? All we can. How much do we love the Lord? All we can. How much shall we give? ALL WE CAN. One of the members said to me one day, commenting on his growth in giving over the period of years: "I've given the Lord a farm in the last 15 years." Indeed he has, and the Lord will richly reward him for his consistent growth in this spiritual grace.

II. THE HYMNBOOK.

Music Important. The thought of music is referred to 333 times in the Bible. There is a treasure of joys for each family in the hymbook. In the home it might be exhorted: "Let's all sing like the hirdies sing." How do they sing? (1) With great feeling and exuberance so that we thrill with their joy; (2) with great purpose, just for the joy of sharing the goodness of God; and (3) with great regularity, allowing no circumstance to quiet their tunes; and (4) with great clarity and precision so that we can recognize their kind.

Fanny Crosby, the blind hymnwriter, after speaking at a Northfield conference, closed with these words:

"Some day the silver cord will break,
And I no more as now will sing;
But, O, the joy when I shall wake
Within the palace of the king!

Some day my earthly house will fall,
I cannot tell how soon 'twill be,
But this I know—my All in All
Has now a place in Heav'n for me.

And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story—Saved by grace;
And I shall see Him face to face,
And tell the story — Saved by grace."

The hymn, along with the many others she wrote and sang, was a means of sustaining her across the troublous waters of life. The missionaries on the ill-fated Zam Zam sang, while their vessel was sinking, "Jesus Never Fails." Music has a power that needs to be often utilized in the home.

Variety. Music in the home should be of a varied nature, though always uplifting and spiritual. That which we sing and play should be believed and lived. There should be vocal music, instrumental music, and recorded music.

Biblical. Our music cabinets should dispense that which is according to the Word of God. The word "psalm" means "to sing with an instrumental accompaniment." How wonderful in the home to witness the family singing together about the piano, the organ, or some other musical instrument. There is a family tie thus knotted that many storms cannot sever. Note these passages from the Word: "Sing unto him a new song; play skillfully with a loud noise" (Ps. 33:3). "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord" (Eph. 5:19). "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (Col. 3:16).

Remember, music is a part of our preparation for heaven. Read Revelation 5:9-10; 15:2-4; and 19:1-7.

III. THE BIBLE.

The story is told of a traveler who had his grip all packed with the exception of one corner space, about 10 inches by 6 inches by 2 inches. When asked what he intended to place there he replied: "In that corner I am going to pack a guidebook, a map, a lamp, a mirror, a telescope, some poems, some songs, some history, some biographies, a sword, a shield, some food, some refreshing drink, and a constant companion—MY BIBLE. The Bible is:

A Prepared Book. Moses was prepared to write the law, David was prepared to write the Psalms, John was prepared to write about love, and Paul knew all about law and grace before he wrote his epistles. God prepared the peoples in their times and prepared the writers in their subjects.

A Revealed Book. God has, through various means, revealed himself unto His creation. The Bible is such a revelation from God. The message of the Bible was revealed to man in several manners: (1) The direct voice of God, such as His speaking to Moses; (2) the writing of God, such as the Ten Commandments; (3) the dreams sent of God, such as those revealed to Daniel; (4) the visions sent of God, such as the one Peter experienced; (5) the handiwork of God, such as the firmament and the heavens; and (6) the Holy Spirit of God (read II Pet. 1:21).

An Inspired Book. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God" (II Tim. 3:16). This inspiration is demonstrated by the following factors. (1) Its unity, for there is not one mistake or contradiction in the original; (2) its rationality, for it is righteous and reasonable; (3) its power, for it can change men and nation; (4) its authority, for "thus saith the Lord"; and (5) its permanence, for the Lord declared, "My word shall not pass away."

A Preserved Book. "For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven" (Ps. 119:89). God has seen fit to preserve the book by (1) making it a cherished possession of the He-

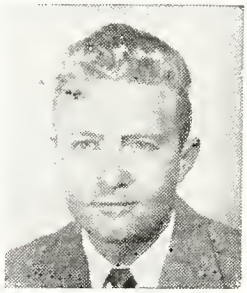
The Importance of the Word of God Today

Address by Moderator Evan Adams at 12th Annual Midwest District Conference, July 12-14, 1955, at Portis, Kansas



Brothers and sisters in the Lord, delegates to the 12th annual Midwest District Conference, we greet one another once again, gathered in a body for unity of purpose in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. A year has passed, and with it many opportunities, some grasped, some lost. The purpose of this conference is to share victories, problems, challenges, and to make plans for even a better year in the work of the Lord in these states represented. We are met together as individual members of the body of Christ, and as members of organized, visible representations of His church in local congregations of Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, and New Mexico, calling themselves Brethren churches.

As a group of local congregations joined in a special fellowship of purpose and Scriptural attitude we have crystallized our doctrinal statement into the phrase, "the Bible, the whole Bible and nothing but the Bible." Perhaps this simplicity of statement has tended to give a feeling of triteness to the facts and beliefs contained in that short statement. Today I wish to restimulate our thinking on this subject of the importance of the Word of God today, and to dedicate our conference to awakening in our people of the churches of this district, along with other groups in our fellowship, a personal sense of its importance. The subject is a very ambitious one, and I do not intend to cover every phase of it. Others will be speaking on this subject in the next days relative to the importance of the Word of God today in the work of foreign missions, home missions, and the educational ministry.

My desire today is to especially remind us of the importance of this Word of God in the individual life of a person. The past few years, and the past year especially, has been characterized in the field of evangelical effort by great mass movements; crowded tents, overflowing stadiums are the overt displays of this movement. Correspondingly our thinking tends to follow the trend of great movements. We are amazed by the great numbers, pictures, results. We have forgotten that the masses are really individuals gathered in one place at one moment of history. And though a man be speaking this Word to a crowd of 10,000, he is actually contacting 10,000 individuals at one time.

I do not intend to belittle the wonderful work accomplished in recent months and years by the mass evangelical movements; I wish only to call our thinking back to the smallest unit in that great crowd, the individual soul. What these mass movements should teach us is that thousands of individuals are hungry for the Word of Life today as they have not been for many years before. Most of the churches represented in this Midwest District fellowship are not located in centers where thousands can he reached at once. Let us concentrate on the few hundred souls in our areas.

The Word of God is primarily important today, as always, as the revelation of God, His plan and purposes to redeem lost men through the finished work of His Son, Jesus Christ. The Word of God is written so that each individual creature of God might know the provisions made for the salvation of his soul. To this end we as members of His body are responsible to see that we are reaching all of these "whosoevers" in His gracious offer.

Mass evangelism and its type of work has tended to confuse the average layman with the idea that the work of evangelism is that of a certain class of specialists, and gifted speakers. I am sure the leaders in this field today would be the first to remind us that it is the great army of unnamed, consecrated, Christian workers, doing the personal work behind the scenes that are securing the victories for our Lord. Let us remember this in the work of our churches. Though the pastors have a responsibility of leadership, there must be an every-day-of-life evangelistic program carried on by every member of His body.

The Scriptures are full of examples of this kind of work. The Lord took time to sit down by the well in Samaria to talk with an adulterous woman; Andrew went looking for his brother, Simon, when he had found the Lord; Philip found Nathanael and invited him to meet the Lord; Peter went to the home of Cornelius, Ananias went to the aid of a blinded Saul; Paul and Barnabas explained the Word to the deputy on the Isle of Cyprus; Aquila and Priscilla explained the way of God more fully to Apollos. Let the people of our churches realize their responsibility to contact the many lives about them each day in this rushing age. Let them present His Word as all important, all sufficient, to cope with the problems of each individual soul. We trust that each one gathered here in this conference, whether delegate or visitor, has experienced the important fact of the new birth brought about by the implanting of the incorruptible seed, the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever (I Pet. 1:23).

I wish to stress now the importance of the Word of God today for the life of every member represented by the churches of this conference. Aside from the salvation of a soul, there is nothing God is more interested in than the holy living of His children, individually. Again we will find the Word of God all important and all sufficient for this. Peter tells us that God has "given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness." The epistles abound with admonitions to holy living. Paul reminds us that "having these promises," we are children of God, "let us cleanse our selves" (II Cor. 7:1). The aging Apostle John, recalling us to the fact that we are the sons of God and shall be like Christ, says that "every man that hath this hope purifieth himself, even as he is pure" (I John 3:3). Peter reminds us of the coming Day of the Lord and says: "Seeing that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness" (II Pet. 3:11).

Again I wish to offer the Word of God as all important in this matter of personal holiness of life of every church member. One evening, shortly before His death, our Lord said to His disciples: "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken to you" (John 15:3). It is this same Word that daily cleanses us. Christ's provision for the sanctifying and cleansing of His church is by the "washing of the water by the word" (Eph. 5:26). As His bride-elect we are told to look into His Word and behold the glory of the Lord so that we might be changed into His image.

The Scriptures as a bound volume, beautifully encased in soft morocco, today lie on the table in the homes of the children of God as a socially acceptable objet d'art, as a fetish to happy home life, as a sanctimonious flourish in the visit of the pastor. That more would realize that the beauty contained within is transferable to the life, that happiness in the home and true spirituality come not merely from its presence but from its daily use. Let the people of our churches put the Scriptures back to work as the laver of cleansing, the lookingglass to reveal the ugliness of self-centered lives, a sword to cut off worldly attachments, a lamp to light the daily path, a diet of living bread to bring radiant, healthy Christian life.

As moderator of the Midwest District for the year 1955, I call our people to a daily concerted effort, for habitual use of this Word for their individual lives. Many of the problems of the churches today are due to the superficial spirituality of the members; attempts at living the holy life without consulting the Book of true holy living. Failures in giving to support the mission programs in the past year are not so much due to national economic conditions as they are to personal spiritual conditions. It is a shame to think that some of the work of the church has had to be curtailed through lack of increases in offerings. Home-mission points, ripe with opportunity, have had to be turned down because of lack of funds. Foreign missionaries have not had the cry for help heeded because there has not been funds to send additional workers in quantities needed. Training of workers has been hampered by lack of funds to meet the demands of buildings and equipment.

If the Christian people of today spent one-tenth of the time searching the Scriptures, which they claim to believe wholly and only, as they do daily gazing at the television screens, there would be g r e a t changes in individual lives, changes in church programs, changes in offerings, and changes in other lives touched by the people. Brethren, let us go home with a message to our churches not only to believe the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible, but to live daily by it as the individual source book that it is.

cause we were willing to run the race—even unto death—in a faith that flourishes.

The great consolation that Paul, the greatest of runners, was given for his burdensome thorn in the flesh was, "My grace is sufficient for thee" (II Cor. 12:9) and the apostle's noble reply re-echoes across the ages: "Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me." Here is a faith that flourished in real fruitfulness even though suffering was a part of the price to be paid. Yet through it all Paul consistently kept his eyes of faith, I am sure, on the prize of the high calling of God in Christ by steadfastly looking unto Jesus.

Finally, if our lives are to count for Christ, let us remember that we are in this race that is set with a faith that is fixed.

We are in this race that means service with a faith that should function to God's glory alone.

We are in this Christian race that may mean suffering, with a faith that should flourish in real fruitfulness to His praise and blessing.

Therefore, let us run this race daily, diligently, deliberately, and decidedly—always and only with our eyes of faith looking unto Jesus.

brews; (2) making it the greatest work of printing; (3) making it the theme for all great masterpieces; (4) making it to weather the storm of many revisions; and (5) making it the controlling purpose in lives of men.

A Needed Book. The Bible is the most important book in the home. Read II Timothy 3:13-17. Note especially verse 16: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." The Book meets the home need for:

(1) Doctrine. "He who is not taught by his parents will be taught by the world." From the Word we obtain a system of doctrinal thinking for life, giving us a Christian philosophy, a sure foundation for life-building. "Through thy precepts I get understanding" (Ps. 119:104).

(2) Reproof. "I will never forget thy precepts: for with them thou hast quickened me" (Ps. 119:93).

(3) Correction. "Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Ps. 119:11).

(4) Instruction. "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes, and I shall keep it unto the end" (Ps. 119: 33).

Conclusion—

There are three essential books in the home:

1. The Bankbook, which reminds us that God giveth all things.
2. The Hymnbook, wherein we joyfully sing His praise and pledge our devotion to Him.
3. The Book of God, which tells us the secret of personal and collective happiness in every walk of life.

Some of the new students entering Grace College in September are pictured on our covers of this issue. Hailing from various parts of the country, they are: (1) Thomas Irwin, Jr., (2) Mary Jane Keyser, (3) Sally Ann Hiler, (4) Betty Butterbaugh, (5) Rachel Austin, (6) Jeanette Turner, (7) Jack McKeever, (8) Sherwood Durkee, (9) Ernest Bearinger, (10) Randall Poyner, (11) Gloria Fiscus, (12) Daryl Umbower, (13) Hyla Palmer; (14) Ronald Glidden, (15) Lois Brown, (16) David Garaux, (17) Kenneth Koontz, (18) Edward Mensinger, (19) Janice Grubb, (20) Robert LeFevre, (21) Sandra Watson, (22) Robert Dell, (23) Barbara Echard, (24) Curtis Stroman, (25) Mrs. Patricia Watts, (26) John Johnston, (27) Carol Parker, (28) Dalene Rider, (29) Charles Stoner, (30) Shirley Smith, (31) Frank Hartwig, (32) Phyllis Stone, (33) Paul Bauman, Jr.

The BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD

SEPTEMBER 3, 1955

IT WAS WONDERFUL!

The Brethren Are Missionary Minded!

Those of us here at this Portland conference cannot but believe the Brethren Church is a missionary-minded church. With over 20 of our foreign missionaries present, with the many home-mission pastors and their families, and with the specialized missionaries serving with the Brethren Home Missions Council, this conviction is intensified. In the over 30 years of my ministry in the Brethren Church I have never seen such an impact for missions. With the Saturday-evening challenge hour dedicated to foreign missions, with the Sunday-morning service as a presentation service when all foreign missionaries and their families who were on the grounds were introduced, with the Brethren missions rally on Sunday afternoon when both home and foreign missions were presented in unique ways, and then with the concluding Sunday service in the evening a challenge hour devoted to home missions, I have never felt a greater impetus for missions. Our prayer is that pastors and delegates as they return to their local congregations may be enabled of the Holy Spirit to interpret this missionary urge to those at home.

Not in 50 Years—

It is the seasoned judgment of those who are older in our National Fellowship of Churches that, following the formal service on the Sunday evening of the National Conference here at Portland Oreg., the blessed Holy Spirit gave us a refreshing not seen in any conference or fellowship meeting in the Brethren Church within the last 50 years. The service had been completed, the messages—two very searching messages had been presented—the pleas for response had been made, and there seemed to be little or no response—then the blessing came. Weeping, yes; tears watered the arid ground in all of our lives.

People by the hundreds came to the front of the auditorium or knelt where they were, and such a time of confession, prayer, and dedication as I have never experienced before came upon all of us. Brethren are not given to being an emotional people—there was no appeal to the emotions, other than an appeal that would be considered as regular and proper in any Brethren church. It was not "our" meeting. The blessed Holy Spirit took the meeting away from us and made it His own. I am writing this during the week following that Sunday service, and every word and thought and deed on the part of all of us have been ordered and controlled by that wonderful experience from God. I am sure the prayer on the heart of each one is: "Lord, may the results of that wonderful meeting be lasting results." Transferred and transmitted to all of our Brethren people the results will be unbelievable—in missions, in Grace Seminary and College, in our publication program, and in the great business of soul-winning in all local areas. "Thank you, Lord," is our sincere expression.

Additional Missionaries—

No additional missionaries were presented to the Society for appointment at this annual meeting, but the Society granted to the Board of Trustees the authority to make appointments during the ensuing year. We are not ready to make any announcement, but we feel we can assure you that there will be missionaries sent out during the year, probably enough to put us above the 100 mark in our missionary personnel. A number of new people have approached us while here on the conference grounds with respect to possible missionary service with our Society. Prayer and careful consideration will be given in each case.

Five Fields Represented—

Five of our six fields have had representatives at this great meeting. We have probably never had a greater world view of our missionary program. Beautiful illuminated murals stood in front of the auditorium during the conference, representing each field and each speaking forth a challenge during every moment of every service. These will be available for display during district conferences and in local missionary rallies.

Reports in Next Issue—

That's almost what we said a month ago, but board meetings are not yet completed as this is being written, and we feel it will be best to give a composite picture of our whole missionary program in the next Foreign Mission Number of the Herald. I assure you that these are great days, and great things are being undertaken for the Lord in foreign missions. The great blessings of the past year have been possible because of the empowering of the Holy Spirit and the wonderful cooperation on the part of pastors and people—almost 100-percent cooperation.

Our Greatest Financial Challenge—

Just ahead we will be facing what is probably our greatest financial challenge in the history of our Society. We have expanded so rapidly. Pastors and churches everywhere have urged us to continue in this business of sending out missionaries. For many years we had large reserve funds—a carryover from the war years when offerings came in and we could not send out missionaries. But those surpluses are long since gone.

The Brethren Church has increased her foreign-mission giving; we have sent out more missionaries and opened new fields. Now the crisis is approaching. Increase in gifts to foreign missions have not been proportionate to our rapidly increasing operational costs. Before the next annual offering for foreign missions is available for our use, we will need an additional $40,000 over and above what we now have in prospect. We present the need and will ask that you who believe in our foreign-mission program of expansion pray with us that this need shall be fully met.

Editor, Foreign Mission Number.

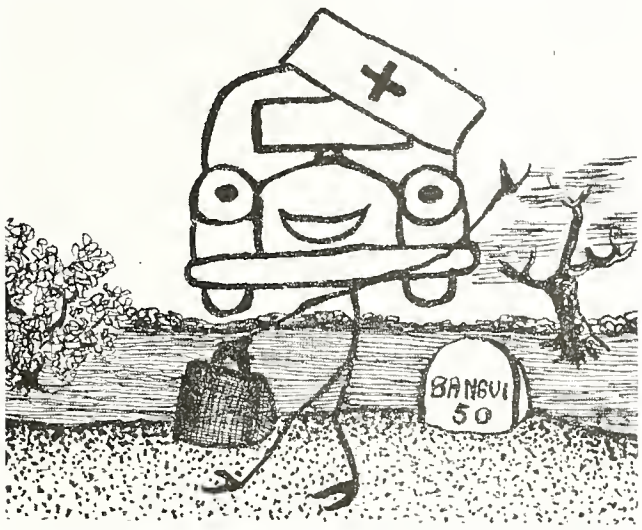
AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY — PART 4

(Editor's Note—Our trucks and pickups in Africa are very important in all phases of the work. This article will give you an understanding of just how important they are in the medical work. Miss Elizabeth Tyson has been in the States on furlough and is present with us here at National Conference in Portland, Oreg., as we are preparing the copy for this issue of the Herald. She has been approved for return to her field of service in French Equatorial Africa and will be returning to that land in November of this year. We are praising the Lord for restoring her to health and strength again.)

They are not giving me very long to play lazy at Yaloke after my terrible trip inland—just time for oil, gas, a grease job, wash, and polish. Now they tell me my first trip with my new boss will be to take Miss Tyson to Bangui to get the cast off her leg.

They all stand around discussing whether there is enough room for her leg in the cast to stick straight out under my dashboard or whether they will have to put her on a bed in the back. They take measurements two or three times, and I guess they decide she can sit in the cab because they try a couple of boxes until they find the right size to fit in front of the seat. Then they cover the seat and the box with a lot of cushions and blankets. Imagine all that folderol about a he-man truck! Then they back me up on the path against the bushes that tickle my ribs until my door is right at the end of the walk opposite the steps. And they begin to complain that my door will not open wide enough. What do they expect? A truck door to open like an ambulance?



Here she comes—walking with a cane, with a missionary holding each arm, and with one in front and one behind to help her get in through my door. Of all the pulling and hauling and squeezing and twisting! At last she is in, seated with the cushions underneath her, beside her, and with blankets over her. Then the nurse and my boss get in, and off we go.

We had a nice comfortable ride to Bossembele, doing the 45 miles in about an hour and a half. When we pulled up to the Hill house I began to get scared they might want to take Miss Tyson out. And they did! All that fuss over again! But no—getting out was a lot easier than getting in.

We all had lunch and siesta—that is, all except me. I stood out under a tree impatiently waiting to get going. When I have a job on I like to get it finished. At last they came out, and I braced myself. But getting in this time was not nearly so bad as before. It seems even human beings learn to do things the easy way after so long a time.

Now we are on the long lap of the trip, and we want to make it as fast as we can before Miss Tyson gets too tired. This gives me my chance to do my stuff for the first time. Until now they have held me down on the pretext that I was just getting broken in. But now that my speedometer is getting near 2,000 and I am well loosened up—60—70—80—90—100; boy, are we flying! I never dreamed we would do this on African roads, and is my boss ever pleased with my "zip." (Perhaps I should reassure my readers that my speedometer is in kilometers, not in miles.)

Six miles from Bangui we actually come into paving. We are just beginning to enjoy that when we turn in at the famous mission, "Kilometer 8." We learned that we were to sleep here and that the arrangements were all made for us to go to the hospital the next morning. This is a historic spot. It was a rendezvous of Brethren and Baptist missionaries in the early days when they were pioneering together. Missionaries of both groups have felt at home here ever since. A congregation of 3,000 meets here on Sundays, many of them walking the five miles out from Bangui. The missionaries here have the oversight of 50 daily meetings held throughout the Bangui area.

When we arrived at the hospital the next morning, the X-ray technician is waiting for us and has us drive right up the incline made for wheelchairs onto the veranda of the surgical building. I get scared stiff that I am going to go right through the glass doors. I don't know much about what happened inside, but after a while the surgeon passes by and goes into the X-ray room. Pretty soon they all come out—Miss Tyson almost walking alone without her cast—and everybody seems very happy, talking about a "perfect result."

From the hospital it is not far to the new site where the Brethren Mission is going to start working in Bangui, so we have dinner with the Balzers on the veranda of their trailer. It is located on "Missions Street," right between the Catholic cathedral and the Protestant temple, making three missions on the same street! It is a nice location, just outside the business part of the city, and we are sure our missionaries located there will have a great ministry for the Lord. (As the reader is aware from previous issues of the Herald, our work in Bangui is now in full swing, with Dr. and Mrs. Orville D. Jobson in charge.)

Our French Believers Speak---

(Editor's Note—Mention was made, on pages 504 and 505 of the Brethren Missionary Herald dated August 6, 1955, of the four persons who were baptized at the first baptismal service held by our workers in Lyon, France, on May 15, 1955. These four have written their personal testimonies concerning the work of the Saviour in their lives. We are sure that you will receive a blessing as you read these testimonies which follow.)

MADAME JEANINE KASAK, wife of the French evangelist working with us in Lyon, France, on a full-time basis, gives the story of her conversion—

The Lord has allowed me to have some blessed experiences in my life, but the greatest was my conversion. I was a worldly young girl and I wanted something out of life. I asked myself the question, "How can I enjoy life?" To answer this question for myself I tried many different things.

Being of a non-Christian family I had no knowledge of the Gospel, but the Lord is wonderful because He gave me a chance to know Him. When I was 16 years old I was a Girl Scout. The Lord was watching over me and led me to a Christian girl friend in the Scouts. I was envious of her joyous life. She loved souls and she talked to me of the Saviour. I went with her to a number of gospel meetings.

Little by little my heart became permeated with the things of God. I understood the futility of my efforts by which I was striving for a better life. Finally, on a Sunday in May 1944, in a small Methodist chapel while the pastor preached on the cross of Christ, I acknowledged my sins before the Lord and I accepted Jesus as my Saviour. My heart overflowed with thanksgiving and love for a God who wanted me to partake of the eternal glory. I had then found out the why and the purpose of my life. I thank the Lord yet today for that marvelous day and I will praise Him all my life.

I grew in the faith; I had other wonderful experiences, and the Master has called me to proclaim His name to those around me. Glory to His name! Pray for me that I might faithfully do His will in the work which He has entrusted to me.

MADAME ROSETTE MARGARON speaks of her joy in becoming a true Israelite—

It is with joy that I tell you about my new birth. I was born of Jewish parents, but I married a Catholic. By this marriage I had disobeyed the Mosaic Law; thus, I lived in fear of what the consequences would be. For a period of 15 years my life was filled with many difficulties, especially in trying to raise my five children. I had no one upon whom I could call to help and guide me.

Now God has come to help me and there is peace in my household. The change came when I heard the "good news" of the life that is in Jesus Christ. To me He is the Messiah who has made me a true Israelite. I simply laid my burdens at the foot of the cross and Christ washed away my sin with His precious blood. I hope this is true of all who may read this testimony.

YVETTE MARGARON, her daughter, writes—

I want to confess before men that I have accepted Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour, and since then the grace of God has been shed abroad in my heart. My sins have been washed away in the blood of Jesus, the Lamb sacrificed for me. I have found the peace that Jesus gives to those who come to Him.

ANDRE MALLET, who was first contacted through our gospel posters, tells of his joy in the Lord—

Since my father passed away when I was two years of age, my mother, though she tried, was not able to properly discipline her son. I was quite unruly and rejected the advice that others gave me. Thus my first years in this old world were lived without realizing the danger before me, much as an animal who only realizes danger after escaping.

During World War II I was in the army, and during

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 36

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. the German occupation of France I was a member of the French underground. Afterwards the return to civilian life and readjustment were difficult, for I still had this rebellious attitude and many memories of the war. I was even led one day by the Devil to speak openly against God. Having this attitude, I found many others agreeing with me.

However, one evening in March of 1953, on returning from my work, I saw a gospel poster. My curiosity led me to write in for the New Testament which was offered. From then on I was very desirous to know what the pages of this little book contained. After having read it through, I realized the wonderful message of the Father's love manifested in the person of His only begotten Son. At that time I abandoned my past life of baseness and of following "the god of this world." The true God, by whom all things were created, had personally protected and guided me through the years better than any human ever could.

From then on the light slowly became clearer to me. At first it was difficult to give in, for the love of this decayed world does not leave as easily as it comes. But having my faith in the precious and unconquerable Jesus of Nazareth, no satanic force could resist the power which comes from knowing and loving Christ, whom we have never seen.

I am spiritually separated from my own family and friends, but, on the other hand, I am attached to the great royal family by an indestructible bond—"neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." When one knows the truth and that all is forgiven, it is as if a heavy weight has been laid aside.

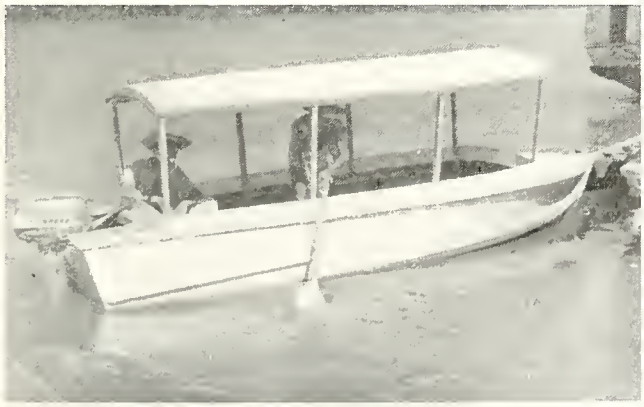
I feel led to say that the greatest crime any man can commit in his life is to deny or scorn Christ in view of the terrible scenes of the passion of Christ from the trials to the crucifixion. He suffered in our place or, to be more exact, in the place of Andre Mallet. The acceptance of this sacrifice is personal and that which naturally follows is an inward transformation.

I will conclude my testimony in insisting on the importance of the mission given us by the Author of our salvation—to make Him known in every possible way, on all occasions, and to all those around us regardless of race. In doing this we may have some reverses, but it is not in vain and my testimony is good proof.

Babies Are Sweet in Mexico, Too!

TRANSFORMED

There is a story told of a young woman—a relative of Ruskin—who had been given by a friend a most beautiful silk handkerchief. By accident she overturned the inkpot on it as it lay on the table, and soiled a good part of it. She wept until her heart literally ached when she thought of the gift, ruined by her own carelessness; and how she reproached herself!



About that time Ruskin came in and saw her distress as she held up the spoiled handkerchief. But he smilingly took it from her. Artist as well as poet, he went to his study and set to work upon that blot, drawing figures upon it; and then with delicate brushes he painted a beautiful picture and returned the handkerchief to her.

"Oh," she said, "that is not my handkerchief!"

"Yes; it is yours. I simply took the ugly blot and transformed it into a picture!" he replied.

And so God does with our failures and mistakes when we are truly repentant and yield them to Him.—Presbyterian of the South.

FROM MAZAGAO, BRAZIL—

"Our new boat . . . just what we need."

The work in Mazagao has been showing some growth during the last few months. Our big problem here in this field is a national worker. Raimundo Cardosa, from Icoraci, who attends Bible school during the school year, has been with us for the month of July and he spent a brief time at Mazagao. He believes there is a real future here if we only had a full-time worker.

Just recently we had a man and wife, each about 60 years of age, accept the Lord, and they are proving to be of real help in the work.

Our new boat with its new motor is just what we need to make the trip to Mazagao. We go every 15 days to hold a service there on a Tuesday night. If possible, I sometimes stay two nights. It is almost impossible for me to go over the weekends because of the work here in Macapa.—Edward D. Miller.

Not Green Bananas!

By Mrs. William J. Samarin, Bellevue, Africa

Foli had looked for Marc down by the river. He had even gone out to the manioc gardens, but he had searched in vain. Stopping in front of his friend's house, he asked the woman pounding grain: "Mama of Marc, where is my friend hiding?" "Why Foli, he's not hiding from you. His head hurts, so he is lying on his mat inside the house."

Foli was surprised to hear that his friend was sick. Was not Marc the one who could eat six green bananas and never have a stomach pain! Foli ducked his head through the door and searched the darkness for his friend. Lying on a mat in the corner was his friend Marc. Foli called: "Wake up, you lazy one, and let's go swimming." Marc's mumbled answer startled Foli. He peered down at his friend and was shocked to see signs of pain and illness. Running out the door he called: "Mama of Marc, I think your son is very ill." The woman nodded. "Perhaps he's been eating green bananas again." "No, Mama; this is not banana pains; I think March should go see the missionary nurse," answered Foli. "Then you two go see her," agreed the mother of Marc. But Marc could not rise, so Foli ran off to find Lefe, the native helper nurse. "Oh, he's eaten too many green bananas this time," said Lefe with a smile, "but I will have a look just to make sure." The smile left Lefe's face as he bent over the boy. Turning to Foli, he said: "Run, call the missionary; your friend is very sick."

Foli ran quickly through the village and across the road. Then he turned and ran down the mango-lined driveway and up on the missionary's porch. He stood by the door and coughed his loudest cough. The missionary lady came out and together they walked to the village. The missionary greeted Marc's mother and then went inside the hut. Foli watched her face as she knelt beside her friend. He saw it filled with a troubled frown. The missionary lady turned to her helper, Lefe, and said a word Foli did not understand—"meningitis."

As Foli watched, Marc was taken to the little house behind the dispensary. All the villagers were told to stay away. Only Marc's mother and father stayed with him.

As the sun set and the village fires began to fill the treetops with smoke, Foli heard the rumble of a truck. He ran to the road and saw the doctor from the post go inside the little house where they had taken his friend. Foli sat on a log near the road to wait for the doctor to come out. Darkness came quickly and mosquitoes buzzed through the warm night air. The owl in the great flowering tree called, "Bufu, bufu," but Foli heard only the distant voices of the government doctor and the missionary.

Lefe came out of the darkness and roused Foli from his thoughts. "Run to the chapel quickly; the missionary lady wants to see everyone in the village," he said. As he spoke, the missionary lady came out of the house with a lantern in her hand. She crossed the road in the direction of the chapel. Foli hurried with the rest of the villagers to the little grass-covered house that was their chapel. Everyone talked quietly of the other years when this illness that bent the back had started with one and then spread to many, killing hundreds before it was gone.

The missionary stood and quieted the group. She asked Foli's father to pray and then she gave out big white pills. "Everyone in the village must come to get pills twice a day," she explained. "If no one else gets sick in a week, the pills and our Heavenly Father have protected us and the danger will be past. You who are Christians must pray for Marc. The doctors says he will not live much longer, but our God is strong." Foli shivered at these words, although the night air was quite warm. He gulped down two big pills and then walked silently back to his house. Sleep did not come quickly that night. His parents sat for a long time by the fire, talking of this illness that they all feared. Foli listened to the whispered words and he asked God to make Marc well again.

The days of the week began to go slowly. Everyone counted the days and no one missed taking his pills. Each day Foli sat on a log and watched the house where Marc lay sick. The doctor came twice a day and the missionary lady seemed to be always there.

The third day Foli sat on his log as usual. A brilliant green chamelion walked slowly up and down the fallen branches, as if in full sympathy, while the red mango ants hurried about their unending tasks. Foli picked aimlessly at a termite hill, pushing a layer of dirt aside to watch the plump inhabitants scurry about their work. Then down the road Foli saw a cloud of red dust and he knew the doctor was coming. The doctor jumped from his truck and hurried into the "sick house." In a few minutes he and the missionary lady came out smiling or crying. White people did both with such enthusiasm that at this distance Foli was unable to tell

THE CONVERSION OF A NOTORIOUS ARGENTINE CRIMINAL

By Luis Siccardi, Almafuerte, Argentina

One day toward the end of winter in 1954, I had a surprise visit from a well-known ex-criminal. During the days in which he followed the paths of crime he was known as "Kid Avellaneda." This nickname was to distinguish him from and at the same time place him in the same class with another notorious Argentine criminal who was killed by the police a short time before "Kid Avellaneda" was captured. He was "Kid Cabeza," the leader of a murderous band. The story that follows is that of Sr. Jose Avellaneda, now a brother in Christ, as I learned it from his own lips.

It begins with the illicit romance of a priest and one of his parishioners. The child born to them is the unfortunate one whose life we are now describing. During his infancy and youth he was to know nothing but bitterness, despair, and cruelties. Passed from hand to hand, he never knew what it was to receive a comforting word, a kiss, or a mother's caress. Despised by everyone and hating everyone in turn, he grew up without any respect for society, considering it to be the cause of all his misery.

He lacked a legal name since neither of his parents would own him for fear of having the sin spread abroad. The name he bears today was given to him by a sympathetic judge at the time of his enrollment for military service.

Jose Avellaneda, like a ship without a rudder, grew up without any direction or destination. He was educated in the school of vice and of his own natural passions. Soon he was rushing down the precipitous slope of crime. Becoming the leader of a band of defrauders, he organized all kinds of crime against society. For 20 years he lived on the fringe of the law. Alternating between serving jail sentences and being free to commit more crimes, he was finally arrested on January 4, 1946, in the city of Cordoba in connection with a fraud amounting to a million and a half pesos in the sale of automobile tires. He soon began to serve a nine-year-and-nine-month sentence in different prisons of the country. While behind the bars of a prison in Rosario he received some tracts and a New Testament from a certain Christian who had heard about his case. A reading of these resulted in his coming to see his sinfulness, and he finally accepted Christ as his own Saviour from the sin that the Word had made him aware of. The human instrument that God used in this conversion was Sr. J. Vicente Lopez, a member of an evangelical group in the city.

From the time of his conversion, Avellaneda gave evidence of a remarkable change in his life. Behaving like one "born again," he not only tried to fulfill the duties given him, but also he sought to lead other prisoners to the same One who had given him pardon and peace. Many New Testaments and tracts were placed in the hands of men whose lives were dark with sin. Some responded to Christ's call; others will respond in the future because work done in Him is not in vain.

His unassailable conduct after his conversion brought Avellaneda to the attention of the prison authorities and he began to enjoy liberties denied to others. Transferred to Cordoba, he was given work as a stenographer in the prison office and was even allowed to be out on the streets during certain hours. He never abused this privilege and was always back at the stipulated hour. Such behavior proved clearly that he was a changed man and it eventually won him a pardon in 1952.

Today Jose Avellaneda is a man of good character who earns an honest living and enjoys the admiration and affection of all who know him. His greatest desire is to give testimony of the work Christ has done in him, especially to his old companions in crime, some of whom live and operate in towns and cities where our own Brethren churches are. Who knows—through our ministry some of these criminals may be saved and come to be our brethren in the Lord. Let us pray to that end.

May the Lord bless this life which He has so marvelously delivered and use it for His glory until He comes.

which. Soon he heard the smile in their voices and knew that Marc was better.

The villagers seemed happy now that Marc was better; yet the days of the week continued to go slowly. Finally the seventh day passed. On the morning of the eighth day all of the Christians gathered in the chapel. Foli's father began a song, "Ani mou merci na Nzapa" ("We Give Thanks to God") and everyone joined in with him. Foli, sitting on the front row, sang louder than anyone else.

We spent the afternoon visiting the big stores of Bangui, so I was pretty well loaded when we drove back out to "Kilometer 8" at 5 o'clock. I was scared every inch of the way because of the crowds of black people walking along both sides of the paving on their way home from work, with here and there bicycles scattered among them. Whenever we met another car I would honk and honk, hoping the people would get over enough so we could get past without running over anyone—then I shut my eyes while we did it.

Next morning Miss Tyson's leg was considerably swollen, so it was a bigger question whether she would be able to stand the trip than when we came the other direction. When we returned to Yaloke and she had finally walked into her house there, I breathed a deep sigh of relief, a sigh of satisfaction at the thought of a delicate job well done.

Yours for His service,

OPERATION DODGE.

Congo and the Bible

By Eugene A. Nida

Translation Secretary, American Bible Society

Among the different countries in Africa, the Belgian Congo has witnessed unparalleled progress. As all those who have revisited Congo after a period of some years, my wife and I are frankly amazed at the changes. But all these spectacular gains are commonplace to all those who live there and feel the quickening pulse of this transformation.

There are also certain fundamental changes in the life of Congo that seem to us to bear directly upon the future of Bible translation and distribution. These include: (1) the extension of industrialization and urban life, (2) the increase of education, (3) the growth of the church, and (4) the advance of indigenous leadership.

Leopoldville is such a different city that it seems as though we had never seen it before. It is estimated that the capital has more than tripled its size during the last six years, and what is true of Leopoldville is also true of numerous other centers, for example, Kindu, which has been transformed from a sleepy town into a bustling center of commerce and industry. This concentration of people in the urban centers, with its resultant detribalization, increased secularism, and awakened restlessness poses the greatest challenge to Protestant missions, whose work has for the most part been centered in the isolated mission stations, far removed from the large cities.

Not only has there been a great increase in mass education, of which the tempo is to be stepped up constantly, but there is an eagerness on the part of students which is not true of all parts of Africa. In the Sudan, students are still paid to go to school, and among many of the Nilotic peoples there is a pathetic indifference to the opportunities of the new, larger world which is dawning upon them. Once people are educated to the use of material possessions, they have an almost insatiable demand for things; and similarly when people are trained to think new thoughts, they acquire a corresponding craving for new ideas. New ideas will spread even faster than the use of bicycles.

Especially Blessed by the Gospel

Despite some disappointments and acute problems, the growth of the church in Congo has been remarkable. In the Vanga area of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society during the last 10 years the number of baptized believers in good standing has increased from less than 7,000 to more than 26,000, while more than 7,000 others are receiving further instruction in the Christian faith. Moreover, the churches give at the rate of 3,400,000 francs a year to support their entire church program. The outstanding advance of the church has resulted primarily from the work of an increasingly better qualified Congolese leadership.

Throughout Congo indigenous leadership has made its mark not only in business and industry, but especially in the church. For a number of years Congolese have borne a major responsibility in teaching and preaching, but now more and more of them are assuming administrative responsibilities. The Central Conference of the Methodist Church has appointed several Congolese district superintendents who have the responsibility for a number of churches in their respective areas, a task which it was formerly thought only missionaries could perform, but these men have demonstrated remarkable insight, executive ability, and resourcefulness.

There have been other changes in Congo which are less conspicuous, but which are more closely related to the program of the distribution of the Scriptures in this land. In the first place, there has been a great increase in the demand for the Scriptures. Not too long ago an edition of 5,000 New Testaments would last for years, but now first editions of New Testaments are usually 10,000 or more and are soon sold out.

In the second place, Congo has witnessed a phenomenal increase in the spread of trade languages. Industrialization and urbanization have brought people together from different tribal areas and have multiplied their contacts with whites. A common language has been an obvious need and an inevitable development. But as long as a trade language remained only the second language for the people, it ran the risk of dying out as economic and social patterns might change. Furthermore, a purely second language rarely becomes a very effective medium for communication. However, in the Congo, two languages, Congo Swahili and Kituba (also called Kikwango and Kibulamatadi, Commercial Kikongo, and Simplified Kikongo) which were once only second languages, have now become the only languages for many tens of thousands of people. Once a trade language has passed this crucial point of transition from a second to a first language, it immediately begins to develop with extraordinary rapidity, for people always find ways of talking about all their experiences, and the experiences of all people are amazingly diverse and complex. The four languages which are rapidly spreading in Congo as trade languages are Congo Swahili, Chiluba, Lingala, and Kituba, all of which are being constantly enriched by their use in describing the increasingly more numerous gadgets which fill the shops, and in talking about the newly acquired ideas which compete for the loyalty of the people.

The rapid increase of the trade languages has not, however, meant that the day of the tribal languages is passed. In fact, there has been a renewed appreciation of the importance of the tribal language, not only in evangelism, but also in all forms of communication. In the early days the emphasis was quite understandably on the tribal languages, for there was practically no such thing as a trade language, certainly not in the present sense of the term. However, with the rapid development of the trade languages there was a tendency for some people to say that tribal languages would soon die out. Accordingly, they reasoned that to reduce small tribal languages to writing or to translate the Scriptures into them, was only an obstacle to linguistic progress. But this has proved not to be the case. Tribal languages do not die out so quickly as some presumed, while for the religious life a trade language often remains a real obstacle to correct understanding and appreciation of the message of life. The unfamiliar form of the language only tends to confirm the African's impression that the Christian religion is a foreign invention. If religious experience is to be deeply rooted in the consciousness of people, it needs to come by a form of communication which speaks most intimately to their hearts and by means of which they in turn give expression to their inmost thoughts and feelings. If a person is to learn to pray, "Our Father who art . . .," he needs to know how to pray in the language which he would use in speaking to his own father.

This renewed appreciation of the tribal languages, especially in work with women and children, in teaching people to read and write (people should not have to learn a new language at the same time as they acquire the new skill of literacy), and in evangelism, has resulted in a more balanced language program. Not all languages require an entire New Testament, but a Gospel, a catechism, a hymnbook, and a Bible storybook will pay rich dividends in the growth of the spiritual life among people who have so much to learn if they are to make Christ truly Lord and Master of each and every phase of their daily lives.

A survey of significant developments concerning the Scriptures and their relationship to missionary work would not be complete without a proper consideration of certain new attitudes toward the Old Testament. In the past some missionaries have thought it was too risky to translate the Old Testament, since it contained the accounts of Old Testament saints who were polygamists, etc. However, such superficial views have proved to be utterly inadequate, and there is a newer and deeper appreciation of the breadth and scope of the entire revelation of God. Such a view does not overlook the difficulties in the Old Testament, but the church has found that the proper appreciation of the Old Testament is fundamental to its very life and ministry. This viewpoint is being reflected in the number of languages in Congo in which Old Testaments are now being translated, so that people may have a fuller appreciation of the revelation of God to man.

The Bible societies have always sought to serve the cause of missions, for it was primarily for this purpose that they arose and continue to exist. But they are now seeking more fully to bear their responsibility for the increased translation, publication, and distribution of the Word of God, and especially in Congo, a land of spectacular progress in the heart of an awakened continent.—From the Congo Mission News, January 1955.

A Poem for Boys and Girls:

Little Black Boy

Little black boy with dusty feet,
Skipping along the village street,
This land of grass and sun and sky
All are yours to wander by.

With your stick gripped in your hand,
You prowl the lions' grassy land;
'Tis just beyond the old mud hut
His regal heart you shall cut.

Crawling now by jug and pan,
'Cross the yard that's Mother's land,
Over the old and tumbled wall,
Careful now or you will fall.

Hear him growl in deepest tone—
'Tis so brave to hunt alone!
Thru the grass with bravest step;
'Twould be better if you crept.

See him now, thru grasses warring,
'Tis not lion like he's behaving!
'Tis the goat from Father's herd,
Black boy stalks on undisturbed.

He raised his stick in hunter's style
While creeping, creeping, all the while.
Then brown goat with disgusted stare
Leaves little hunter standing there.

DESPAIR IN SOUTHERN BRAZIL

BRAZIL—A cold wave has just passed over southern Brazil. [Our mission is in northern Brazil.—Ed.] Low temperatures, heavy frost and ice have killed millions of coffee plants in the Mato Grosso, Parana, and Sao Paulo areas.

Reports indicate that an attitude of despair prevails in the stricken areas which, economically, depend so much upon coffee, and a man known as a Communist leader in Mato Grosso has declared that there is no point in waiting for the presidential elections in October—now is the time for a revolution.—EFMA Missionary News Service.

We do not need to be preaching in public in order to carry Christ to others. The workshop, the warehouse, the college, and at home will yield us hearers, if our hearts are set on winning men to Christ.—Alexander Maclaren.

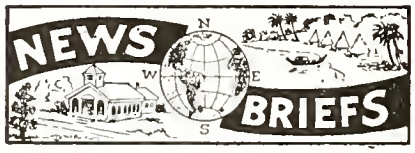
JENNINGS LODGE, OREG. Revival fires broke out at the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches conference on Sunday evening, August 14, and hundreds were on their knees until midnight in prayer and confession. Attendance at the morning worship service was 887. Thomas Hammers, pastor of the View Ridge Brethren Church, Seattle, Wash., was elected moderator, and Dr. Homer A. Kent, of Grace Seminary, was elected vice moderator.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Dr. Herman A. Hoyt, dean of Grace Seminary and College, was the 7 o'clock morning speaker, Tuesday through Saturday, Aug. 23-27, at the Winona Lake Bible Conference, and at the Hillside service Aug. 26-27.

LANSING, MICH. Donald Locke, student at Grace Seminary, is pastoring the Grace Brethren Church during the latter part of August and September. Rev. Herbert Bess, associate professor of Hebrew at Grace Seminary, pastored the church during the summer months while he was attending Michigan State University.



SEATTLE, WASH. The Lord has provided the first $38,000 needed for the construction of the new View Ridge Brethren Church. Thomas Hammers is pastor.

JENNINGS LODGE, OREG. Mrs. Robert McCormick, wife of the pastor of the Community Brethren Church, Los Angeles, Calif., was taken seriously ill in the closing days of the National Conference. Mrs. Bryson Fetters, Berne, Ind., fell and broke her ankle before leaving conference.

HOPEWELL, PA. Sheldon Snyder, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Yellow Creek, reports the different speakers in his church during the month of August: Dr. Irving Jensen, head of the Bible department of William Jennings Bryan University, Dayton, Tenn., Sunday evening, Aug. 7; Robert Salazar, student of Biola, Sunday evening, Aug. 14; Clifford Wilt, instructor in the Altoona Bible Institute, both services Aug. 21; and the young people of the church on Aug. 28. Miss Marilyn Steinberger, Everett, Pa., of Bryan University, was the speaker, and a native Filipino, Miss Asenero, was the guest soloist.

JENNINGS LODGE, OREG. The new Sisterhood of Mary and Martha officers are: Myra Connor, president; Amy Lou Bracker, vice president; Sandra Talbot, general secretary; Mary Hooks, treasurer; Marie Sackett, bandage secretary; Jean Pittman, literature secretary; Mrs. H. Leslie Moore, patroness; and Mrs. Russell Weber, assistant patroness.

TROY, OHIO. Francis Brill has resigned from the pastorate of the Grace Brethren Church as of August 4. Rev. Clarence Curley occupied the pulpit during the month of August.

WOOSTER, OHIO. A pertinent quip gleaned from the bulletin of the First Brethren Church: "This church is not air-conditioned, but it is PRAYER-conditioned."

WHITTIER, CALIF. Rev. and Mrs. Don Miller and family and Miss Estella Myers arrived in the States from Africa Aug. 15. The Miller family spent a short time visiting relatives in Iowa before coming to this area, where they will reside during furlough. Mail should be addressed to them at 422 S. Newlin.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Miss Estella Myers, who came to the States from Africa because of a critical health problem, went directly to the Methodist Hospital in Des Moines, Iowa, for further careful checkups and possible surgery. Her complete address at this printing is not known, but mail addressed to P. O. Box 588, Winona Lake, Ind., will be forwarded to her.

MINERSVILLE, PA. Rev. and Mrs. John W. Zielasko and family arrived in the States from Brazil on Aug. 21 and are at home during furlough at 29 S. Delaware Ave.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin L. Goodman, Sr., expect to sail on the Queen Elizabeth Sept. 14 on their journey back to India to resume their child evangelism ministry there. They expect to arrive in Bombay about October 15. Their address will be 2 Jubilee Rd., Poona 1, India. Please change Annual.

FILLMORE, CALIF. Word has been received that Rev. and Mrs. Maxwell Brenneman, First Brethren Church, have added to their collection of bells. This time it is "belle," Ruth Elaine, who arrived August 16, weighed 8 lbs., 10 oz., and was 21½ inches long.

RIO CUARTO, ARGENTINA. Rev. Lynn D. Schrock reports the new Brethren venture in radio is receiving widespread hearing at present, according to their radio mail. This new ministry is going into homes otherwise unreached by the Gospel. Fervent prayer is requested that many souls will be saved and come into the Brethren fellowship. Several have come out to the evening services as a result of this radio ministry.

SPECIAL. Deadline for all material for the 1955 Brethren Annual is September 15. All orders for the October - December Sunday - school quarterlies should be mailed next week to the Missionary Herald to insure prompt delivery.

CHICAGO, ILL. The second annual Mid-American Keswick Convention to promote victorious Christian living will be held in Moody Memorial Church Oct. 15-22, 1955.

PORTLAND, OREG. The new Brethren church bulletins were introduced to the Brethren pastors at the national conference ministerium. They are printed on 60-lb. paper and can be secured at 95c a hundred at the Missionary Herald. Samples will be sent on request.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Foundation walls have been poured for the new Brethren denominational building and the main floor joists are being laid.

WATERLOO, IOWA. Vernon W. Schrock, director of the Iowa Rural Bible Crusade and member of the Grace Brethren Church, was the 2 o'clock radio speaker at the Winona Lake (Ind.) Bible Conference Aug. 23 and 26.

CHICAGO, ILL. The twin national conventions of the National Sunday School Association will be held in Spokane, Wash., Oct. 5-7, and in Providence, R. I., Oct. 26-28.

Capital and Labor

The establishment of Labor Day was first suggested by Peter J. McGuire, a labor leader of New York City. In 1832 he proposed to the Central Labor Union in New York that labor should select a day for a parade to show the strength and spirit of trade and labor organizations. He reasoned that there were other holidays representing religious and military achievements, but none representative of the industrial spirit, the great vital force of the nation.

He recommended the first Monday in September as the most desirable date because it came approximately halfway between Independence Day and Thanksgiving Day. His proposal was adopted by the Central Labor Union and the first Labor Day celebration occurred on September 5, 1882, when the unions held a parade in the streets of New York. In 1894 the day had become a legal holiday in 30 states, and that year Congress voted its observance in the District of Columbia and the territories. It was not long afterward that it was recognized as a national holiday in all states.

Today we pay tribute to the worthiness of labor, the growth of labor organizations, and labor's achievements and aspirations. It is true that we should recognize that this is a day of great importance for all Americans—for management as well as labor. Oftentimes today the true significance of our American holidays are lost sight of in the eager desire for a weekend of rest. This should not be. All of us who produce in any capacity have a common interest in the continued welfare of our country. We all have a deep interest in the benefits made available to us because of our individual freedom and free enterprise. We all have a deep interest in the benefits made available to us because of our freedom. Labor and management alike have the same obligations to their fellow men, to their community, to their nation, and to the world—to protect and to promote our freedoms.

Some people would have us believe that hard work is the penalty placed upon the laborer by the capitalist. This is absolutely false, for the first man created by God was given the honorable position of being a gardener. He was not ashamed to till the soil for a living. Certainly this proves that God placed His divine sanction upon honest labor and there was no need for Adam to be ashamed of his God-given vocation.

By God's decree man labors for bread by the sweat of his brow, tilling the fields, creating and manning machines, and building homes. Thus by simple obedience to God and honest work with his neighbor, man himself makes his life worth while, providing that life is anchored upon the Rock Christ Jesus.

Christ, who is God, placed His approval upon labor by toiling as a carpenter for a number of years before His public ministry. Our blessed Lord could have been born in a palace, but God so willed that He first saw the light of day through a stable door. Joseph, his legal father (after the flesh), might have been some great nobleman, but by the decree of God he was a humble carpenter. It has been said that an ancient rabbinic work remarks that "Just as the Torah was given through a covenant, labor was given men through a covenant, as it is written, 'Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work; and on the seventh day is a sabbath unto the Lord thy God.'"

Even as God placed His mark of approval upon the laborer, so too Christ did likewise for capital, by calling laborers to work in His vineyard, paying to them their just hire. The Word of God tells us that Abraham was unusually wealthy in cattle, silver, and gold. His vast land possessions included all land from the Euphrates to the Nile. God in His marvelous grace bestowed on him two unusual titles, "Friend of God" and "Father of the Faithful." There is no doubt in the mind of the writer that in spite of his wealth he enjoyed fellowship with God, thus indicating that wealth properly under God's control and spirituality are not incompatible. The Word of God tells us that "the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof. The cattle upon a thousand hills are his, likewise the silver and gold."

Does God place His sanction upon a capitalist? Certainly, for He was one himself. In other words, the Word of God seems to indicate that capitalism and labor are related to poverty and wealth, and that God in His matchless grace looks with divine favor upon both. However, it must be admitted that one of the greatest problems in the world today is the utter inability of the leaders of our land to bring together these two disgruntled camps. Labor has the privilege and responsibility to expand its service and usefulness to mankind and to progress through proper channels. Capital too has its proper right to increase its usefulness to society through free enterprise, fair competition, and reasonable profits. Cardinal Spellman tells us that "if labor and capital are to strive and survive, they must serve as members of one social body, with singleness of purpose and diversity of function, united in the strong bond of service for the good of mankind, spirited by reverence and love of God"

Perhaps the best charge that could be voiced to both labor and capital this 73d Labor Day can be voiced in the words of James McGinlay in the book, "The Birthday of Souls": "To the representatives of both capital and labor, to the rich and to the poor, God in mercy cries, 'Be ye reconciled,' not to each other but to Christ. If and when individual opponents to each other fall in love with Jesus, all enmity is banished, and peace prevails." Matthew 11:28 tells us: "Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." The answer for capital and labor is found only in the Word of God. Will they accept it?

LABOR DAY, 1955

By Russell L. Williams
Pastor, First Brethren Church
Cheyenne, Wyo.

This year there has been, and probably will continue to be, an unusually high death toll on our highways. The reason is simple and easy to find. Most of our national holidays this year fall on Monday, giving people a three-day holiday. As a result, millions will be on our highways and many will be killed.

Yes; there will even be many Christian people who will desert the house of the Lord and desecrate His day simply because they have three whole days before they have to go back to work. These same people, who claim to love the Lord with all their heart and put Him first above everything else, would not think of taking a tenth of their time off from their job to serve the Lord; yet through this year they will take five out of 52 Sundays off from serving the Lord in their own place of responsibility, in addition to regular vacations and sickness, plus probably a couple of Sundays to go fishing and a couple more to go hunting; then wonder why the work of Christ does not advance.

While the Word of God has nothing to say about Labor Day, it does have some very specific instructions concerning the Christian and labor.

I. The Christian and Labor.

In II Thessalonians 3:10 we read this command from the Apostle Paul: "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat." Apparently the early church at Thessalonica had a communal system similar to that at Jerusalem and there were some who were taking advantage of it and living off the rest of the people. This ought to be sufficient evidence that communism will not work even in the best society, much less in one which is anti-God and anti-Christ.

Just how much spiritual nourishment would people receive if the principle were applied: "If any would not work, neither should he eat?" And yet, is this not a principle which is self-activating? The person who is working for the Lord is the one who is happy in the Lord, and the one who is feasting and never serving is suffering from spiritual malnutrition. Jesus said: "He that saveth his life shall lose it and he that loseth his life for my sake and the gospel, the same shall find it." Either we get in and get busy for the Lord or we become spiritually starved and whiney and critical and cold. First we begin to find fault with everything and everybody; then become peeved and quit coming to services and wonder what is wrong with everyone else.

In Ecclesiastes 9:10 we read the counsel: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and again in Colossians 3:17: "Whatsoever ye do in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto God and the Father by him." We believe it is the clear teaching of the Word of God that being a Christian ought to make an individual a better workman whether he is plowing a furrow, turning a lathe, teaching school, working at home, or preaching the Gospel.

Paul, in order to impress the Christians of His day with their obligation to labor, set the example in his own life even though he was traveling as a missionary. Note Acts 20:34-35: "Yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak, and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Again, in Acts 18:3 we read: "And because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought: for by their occupation they were tentmakers." At least one denomination today is using this method in a very effective way in the building of new churches. If they want to establish a church in a given city or area they invite families to move from other cities or areas and secure work there that they may become tentmakers for Christ. It does two things. It builds new testimonies for Christ and often gives new life to an old one. I believe we have Brethren who would accept a challenge like this.

II. Those Who Labor.

Let us look first at Ephesians 6:5: "Servants, be obedient unto them that are your masters according to the flesh, with fear and trembling, in singleness of your heart, as unto Christ; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart." The same principle is set forth in Colossians 3:22: "Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God."

Someone immediately says, "But I am no slave," and that is true. Nevertheless, the two principles set forth here are just as true as they were in the day that the Apostle Paul penned these words. First, do not your work in a show-off manner to please men, making it look nice on the surface, no matter how slipshod and careless the workmanship may be. A Christian ought to be a good workman, not because someone is going to check up on his workmanship, but simply because he is a Christian. The other principle is one we so often overlook; namely, no matter what a Christian may do, no matter who they may work for, they are not serving men but Christ. Soldier, how often does it occur to you that you are not working to please that tough top sergeant, but Christ? Workman, are you working to please the boss or Christ? Mother, as you work about the house are you doing it to please the family or Christ? Or perhaps you have a business of your own; are you running it to please yourself or Christ?

There is a natural reaction which might arise from the teaching of this truth, and it did apparently arise in Paul's day. Briefly stated, it is this: If I am working to please Christ, why bother with the boss? Then since some Christian servants had Christian masters, they apparently reasoned that since there was equality in Christ, their master was no better than they were and they came to despise their masters. Paul's reply to this is found in I Timothy 6:1-2: "Let as many servants as are under the yoke count their own masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God and his doctrine be not blasphemed. And they that have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are breth-

Eternity's Values in View

By Adam H. Rager, Pastor
Carson Avenue Brethren Church
Artesia, Calif.

"Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you" (John 6:27).

Who among us does not desire fruit and recognition for our sweat and calluses? Who is content to labor for naught? It was because of this concern that a day of dedication in honor of labor was instituted called "Labor Day." Being inaugurated as a holiday December 28, 1869, by the Knights of Labor, an organization formed in Philadelphia, Pa., it was officially declared so by act of Congress June 23, 1894. The Congress designated the first Monday in September a legal holiday for federal employees and for the District of Columbia. Now it is observed in every one of the 48 states. Thus a day of annual recognition for secular labor has been officially set. But what about that labor which is beyond the secular and has eternal value? Is there an accounting day—a day of recognition?

I. A "Day" Has Been Appointed.

According to Acts 17:31 the Word of God says: "He has appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man he hath ordained." "That man" is none other than God's Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the resurrected Lord before whom all men must stand. Those who desire recognition in God's sight must get it through "that man." No one can expect any hearing from God apart from Jesus Christ, for He himself said: "No man cometh unto the Father but by me." There must be recognition of Him here and now as personal Saviour and Lord if there is to be recognition of one's "labor" hereafter. Outside of Christ all stand condemned, and it is also true that "their works do follow them." If one is not in harmony with the will of God for his life, his accomplishments are also out of harmony. Both will be judged by "that man" on that day appointed. There must be an accounting "day."

II. A Christian "Labor Day" Has Been Declared.

The one who is in Christ, born again by the Holy Spirit, and become a "new creature," is assured of a "Labor Day" in which his efforts and accomplishments will be recognized. Writing to believers in Corinth, the Apostle Paul declared: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." As there will be "perfect" attendance of all unbelievers at the Great White Throne judgment, all believers must "appear before the judgment seat of Christ." This is the time and place when all labor as a child of God through faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour will be recognized. The blood-stained banner of the cross leads this procession and true patriotism in loyalty to the Saviour will be revealed. Recognition and reward will be without partiality. No one will get a "dirty deal." No child of God will be "left out." "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour" (I Cor. 3:8). All will receive the proper amount of attention in relation to the attention accorded the Judge while He is now their Saviour and Advocate. This is the Christian's "Labor Day."

III. Today Determines the Recognition of That Day.

Today is labor's day. Yesterday is gone, tomorrow is in the future. Whatever is accomplished must be done today. Procrastination is a very effective tool of the Devil in hindering the cause of Christ. It is too effective in keeping sinners from accepting the Lord and it is too often used in restraining saints from serving Him. As Christians our intentions are good. We intend to be dedicated and faithful to our Lord, but all too often it is tomorrow instead of today. The exhortation of I Corinthians 15:58 is needed now—"Be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord." It is the faithful service now that will count in that day.

But if our labor now is not to be in vain, it must be with "eternity's values in view." May this be our determination as we look forward to that day appointed of the Lord when we shall meet Him face to face.

With eternity's values in view, Lord,
With eternity's values in view.
May I do each day's work for Jesus
With eternity's values in view.

ren; but rather do them service, because they are faithful and beloved, partakers of the benefit."

One thing we always notice about the Word of God is that there is a divine balance on all subjects.

III. To the Employer.

Let us notice just two passages. The first is in Ephesians 6:9: "And, ye masters, do the same things unto them, forbearing threatening: knowing that your Master also is in heaven; neither is there respect of persons with him." The other is Colossians 4:1: "Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven."

There is probably no better illustration in the Word of God of the proper relationship between employee and employer than that of Boaz. In Ruth 2:4 we read: "And behold, Boaz came from Bethlehem, and said unto the reapers, The Lord be with you. And they answered him, The Lord bless thee." What a wonderful thing it would be if there were always this relationship between the employer and the workman, and there should be if both are Christians walking in harmony with the Word of God. Then Labor Day might take on new meaning and purpose for all.

LABOR TAKING INVENTORY

By Richard E. Grant
Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
Cedar Rapids, Iowa

Labor Day has been officially declared a legal holiday for labor in the United States and Canada. The day is marked by cessation from usual labor, and by parades, meetings, and addresses by prominent labor leaders. It is a day for labor to take inventory. It is a day for re-evaluating the failures and successes of the preceding year, and to plan for new advances in the future.

Looking Both Ways

It is surprisingly strange, but nonetheless true, that for every important experience in our physical world there is always a comparable spiritual experience. As we celebrate Labor Day, we become keenly aware of the fact that laboring men are looking both ways; looking discerningly backward to discover the gains and losses of the past year, and looking expectantly forward to determine what goals should be set for the coming year. In the spiritual realm the Apostle Paul makes a comparable observation when he writes: "Forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before" (Phil. 3:13).

How imperative it is that the church in her laboring for Christ take inventory concerning the failures and successes of past years, and recognize the urgency of completely consecrated lives for the paramount task of evangelizing a lost world. A perpetual encouragement to the child of God is found in that precious promise found in I Corinthians 15:58: "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord."

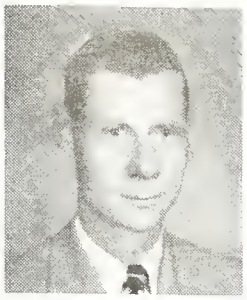
Looking Behind

The pathetic fact must be admitted that the most important business of the church has been sorely neglected. The church has been expending her energy in minor matters. The Great Commission, as intended by our blessed Lord, has been plainly ignored—ignored not only by the great professing church at large, but also ignored by our own beloved Brethren Church. In the past year, it is true, we have seen some spurts of revival, and a number of conversions have been recorded, but the surface has been merely scratched. What is the difficulty? The explanation is simply that there is no burden for souls.

Millions of souls are going out into eternity lost forever, dying eternally because no one has introduced them to Jesus Christ. And the church, as a whole, is not losing a minute's sleep about it. There is no great burden of souls upon the church. The obvious difficulty with the church is that it has been satisfied to be merely evangelical. It opens its doors and preaches the pure Gospel for people to come and hear, and if they do not come, no one loses any sleep over it. The church feels that it has fulfilled its obligation to a hell-deserving world by simply maintaining a gospel service.

But that has not proved to be a satisfactory solution to the problem. The church must not only be evangelical, not only fundamental, but it must be evangelistic. It must get out and bring the unsaved in. The evangelistic church is the church that not only has a saving message, but it takes that message to the unregenerate. This is of vital importance. The Scriptures tell us that Andrew not only had a message, but he took the message to his brother, Peter, and then personally brought Peter to Jesus.

Our past is black. The past is shamefully marked by an evident disregard for our personal responsibility toward the unsaved. The annual statistician's report bears mute testimony to the fact of apparent unconcern. The church of today seems to consider that the hiring of a minister is the satisfactory way to discharge personal responsibility. The church expects the minister to evangelize the community. It is his duty, and his alone, to bring men to Christ. Indeed, the church has pitifully neglected her responsibility in the past.



Looking Ahead

If you will turn to Paul's epistle to the Ephesians, the fourth chapter, verses 11 and 12, you will find that ministers and teachers were given to the church, not to be merely professional soul-winners, but rather were given for the perfecting of saints unto the work of ministering unto the building up of the body of Christ. That is to say, the Scriptural way to build up the body of Christ is by training members of the church to do the work of the church. The membership is responsible for evangelizing the community.

The churches of Korea have given an example of what can be done when the whole church gets in the soul-winning business. In Korea you will find the most remarkable history in all the record of modern missions. Multitudes have been brought to Christ in a comparatively short time. What is the explanation? It is this: when the missionaries first went to Korea, they decided to make a rule. It turned out to be a golden rule, and they stuck to it—that when anybody came and confessed Christ, before he could be received into full communion in the church, he must first go and bring someone else. How would that work in the Brethren Church? How many pastors would have the courage to tell a candidate for membership: "We want you to become a member of our church, but you must first bring someone else"?

Perhaps this is not the exact answer to our problem of unconcern for lost souls, but if our future is to be more than a spasmodic sort of evangelism, every last one of us must share equally the responsibility of winning lost souls for Jesus Christ. Let us look both ways. Forgetting the failures of the past, let us fully dedicate ourselves to the vital task of rescuing the perishing.

Labor Day and American Labor

By Glen Welborn
Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
Albany, Oreg.

"In the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken: for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return" (Gen. 3:19).

This is what God said to Adam after his sin brought down God's curse. God meant that man must work and toil for his livelihood here upon this sin-cursed earth. But even before man's fall and God's curse, God intended that man should work. He was not to be idle. After God had made Adam, the Bible says: "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it" (Gen. 2:15). However, there is nothing here said about sweating. In the Garden the work would be pleasant. There were no hindering thorns and thistles. But now man is on the outside of the Garden where there are thorns, thistles, and sweating. He likes none of them. Like them or not, he must toil and work if he is going to get somewhere. If he succeeds in life, it will not be without sweat.

A nation is made strong by God-fearing men who are not afraid of work and sweat. America's forefathers were men who worked hard. There was not a lazy bone in their bodies. They were industrious. They looked ahead. They planned and worked and sweat to build a nation for their posterity. They succeeded. We are their children and are enjoying the fruit of their success. But today danger lurks on America's horizon. America will not fall because of an enemy's strength, but because of her weakness. Many are the points of America's internal weakness, such as gross immorality, large-scale drunkenness, the rapid breakdown of homes, etc.

Back in May of 1951 America was administered a much-needed verbal spanking by Roger W. Babson. He attacked one of America's weaknesses. As a nation it may have come too late, but it may serve to awaken a few individuals. Read the following words carefully. Mr. Babson wrote: "I have just come from a trip through our great industrial cities. Here is what I heard over and over again from different business executives who are hiring thousands of youngsters every year: 'The young people today aren't reliable. They make the same kinds of mistakes over and over, and they don't seem to care . . . they lack industry. They aren't uncomfortable when idle. They give the impression that what they want most is a quick, easy buck. We have failed to teach them to follow a path successfully to the end—no matter how difficult the going gets. Graduates today give up too easily.'

"Our schools themselves have succumbed to a philosophy of mediocrity by passing children each year whether the quality of work is good or bad. The training in the schools that there can be reward without hard work has led to irresponsibility.

"In the last analysis, however, it is the parents who are at fault. The average parent today has great difficulty in trying to develop industrious children. He won't make his children mow the lawn or wash the car or put on the screens. Junior rebels because Joey down the street doesn't have to do these things, so why should he? The real ailment here, of course, is a lack on the part of the parents of moral courage which comes from religion. When hiring young men, employment managers should give some consideration to the applicants' parents."

Isn't that a stinging rebuke against America's new generation of adulthood, schools, and parents? And we must confess it is the sad truth.

God has something to say about laborers. There are at least three kinds described in His Word: the slothful, the selfish, and the servant.

The Slothful Worker. "Slothful" means sluggish, idle, lazy. "The desire of the slothful killeth him; for his hands refuse to labour" (Prov. 21:25). God says in II Thessalonians 3:10, that "if any would not work, neither should he eat." Our government relief agencies should take great care and refuse to hand out relief to people who could work but are too lazy to toil and sweat. Testimony upon testimony reveals that many so-called patriotic Americans drew big wages on war jobs during the war who didn't do an hour's worth of honest work a day. Such people should have seen drops of blood drop from those $20 bill while they tried to sleep at night. Labor unions also should take great care and never be found protecting a lazy employee. They should cooperate with the employers and see that every job is filled with a man who will do an honest day's work.

The Selfish Worker. A man was walking past a construction job. He stopped and asked a worker what he was doing. "I'm making $20 a day." He walked on and asked another worker what he was doing. "I'm building a building." "He that laboureth laboureth for himself; for his mouth craveth it of him" (Prov. 16:26). "All the labour of man is for his mouth, and yet the appetite is not filled" (Eccl. 6:7). These verses describe the first worker. He is not lazy. He works hard. But he works with only one motive—SELF. This worker is a thousand times better than the slothful man, but he is not the ideal worker.

The Servant. Here is the ideal worker. He is not slothful, nor is he selfish. He is like the man who said he was building a building. He accomplishes something that helps to build a nation. He wants his labor to be of service to his fellow man.

Jerusalem had been destroyed by Judah's enemy. The gates and the wall were burned. Years later a man by the name of Nehemiah led a company of Jews back to Jerusalem to rebuild. There were various forms of thorns and thistles opposing them, but they were not afraid to sweat. Nehemiah 4:6 says: "So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work." That is the way things get done. That is the way workers should work.

"Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it" (Ps. 127:1a). Jesus said: "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray for the expansion of the Navaho mission work and for the new personnel that have been added. Also pray for the school work that is just getting under way.

2. Pray for the early completion of a much-needed building program at Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

3. Pray for the Grandview, Wash., work started by Rev. Harold Painter, and for the new pastor, Rev. Robert Griffith and family who have recently assumed the leadership of the work.

4. Praise God for the dedication of the completed Jenners, Pa., church and pray for them as they plan to become a self-supporting church.

5. Pray for the development of many new opportunities for Brethren churches considered in the annual board meeting of the Home Missions Council.

6. Pray and give are two important words listed in the order of their importance at this home-mission season. Pray that the Thanksgiving offering will meet the need of the 1956 budget adopted at the annual board meeting this year.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Pray for Miss Estella Myers, who has returned to the United States on an emergency health furlough and has entered the Methodist Hospital in Des Moines, Iowa, and for the other missionaries who, while on furlough, will need medical and surgical care.

2. Pray for the men of our Mexico mission as they make an exploration trip, seeking to locate a Christian training school in Mexico; then pray for those who will prepare for national leadership.

3. Pray for at least two more national pastors for Argentina, and for many more who will train for this work in our Bible Institute.

4. Pray for the development of our Christian day schools in Brazil, as we plan to train many more of our Brazilian children.

5. Pray for a continuing supply of students for our Bible Institute in Africa that we may have sufficient trained leaders for our native church.

6. Pray for our believers in France and that many more of those capable of leadership may be discovered.

7. Pray for more missionaries—possibly a dozen more are badly needed—and pray that there will be funds to send them.

8. Pray for gifts of some $40,000 in addition to that which is now in prospect, for this amount will be greatly needed before the 1956 foreign-mission offering becomes available.

9. Pray for the believers in Hawaii as they make great strides, as they contact many new people for Christ, and as they are moving rapidly toward a fully self-supporting church, fully supporting their missionary pastor.

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Praise God for the way He continues to bless the school and to supply the needs from day to day.

2. Continue to pray for the financial needs of the school, both for monthly expenses and for the new building.

3. Pray for the many new students just coming in to school that they may become adjusted, find proper living quarters and the right kind of jobs.

4. Pray for the faculty and administration as they meet the problems of the new school year.

MISSIONARY HERALD—

1. Pray for the progress on the new denominational building, that all obstacles may quickly be overcome.

2. Continue to pray for the sale of the present Missionary Herald building.

3. Praise the Lord for the increased use of Brethren literature in all Brethren churches.

4. Pray for the direction of the Lord in the expansion of the printing program.

5. Pray for guidance in the handling of all mail orders.

WMC—

(Supplied by Beaver City, Nebr.)

1. Pray for our newly elected officers.

2. Pray for our mission fields.

3. Pray that each member might have a real burden for lost souls.

4. Praise God for the many blessings received the past year.

SMM—

1. Let us thank the Lord for the good year He has given the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha.

2. Pray for the newly elected officers as they take up their duties.

3. Pray for the program for the new year, that our girls might seek to "Do God's Will."

4. Pray for the writers of the material, that the Lord will guide them to write what is needful in our lives.

BYF—

1. Pray for our teen-agers, that they may learn the meaning of real consecration to the Lord.

2. Pray that Bible study clubs may be held for them in all our churches.

3. Pray that our young people may be led to choose our church schools and seminary for further training.

LABOR DAY AND AMERICAN LABOR

shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed" (John 6:27).

Only one life—'twill soon be past,
Only what's done for Christ will last.

This means God's children doing God's work. If you are not saved, you will perish and all your labor with you. You need Christ as your Saviour and Lord. If you are a Christian, your labor, to abide, must be for Jesus Christ. If you are in secular labor, your motive for making money should be for raising your family for Christ and for sending full-time laborers into the mission fields of the world, both home and abroad. There is no room in the life of the Christian for laziness and selfishness. God says in Romans 12: 11: "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord."

"AS UNTO THE LORD" Col. 3:23

"AS UNTO THE LORD" (Colossians 3:23)

By MRS. KENNETH ASHMAN

National WMC President's Message for National Conference, 1955

The theme, "As Unto the Lord," is another fine link in our chain of yearly themes, and ties in well with our last year's devotional theme, "Our Daily Walk." How much good is our daily walk, as there are many avenues and directions that we might go, if it is not "As Unto the Lord"? Let us read our theme verse, Colossians 3:23, together with the one following it: "And whatsoever ye do, do it as unto the Lord and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ." These are precious verses in that they not only present an admonition, but they indicate the reward offered to those that follow.

There are always three words connected with the request, and we wish to apply them to our theme—"Why?" "When?" and "How?"

First, Why should our labors and efforts be as unto the Lord? In the first four verses of Colossians 3 we find our answer. We are a new creature, risen with Christ, and have desires accordingly set upon heavenly and not earthly things. Someday we shall be with Him forever. If we are sincere in our Christian experience, we will want to seek those things pleasing unto the one making our blessings possible. True love causes one to forbear a lot, and do the things most pleasing to that beloved one. In a family united for peace and happiness, for example, we find a mother cooking the way that pleases the family and making her home a pleasant abiding place for her family; the father works to provide needs and bring security to the family; the children maintain a standard rewarding the parents with gratefulness for all they have done. We are children belonging to the family of the redeemed. Christ has done all to make our spiritual peace and happiness possible by going to Calvary, and He constantly pleases us by providing untold blessings day by day. We might ask ourselves: When did we last count our blessings, or thank the Lord for supplying financial need when we needed it; physical strength granted after illness; or for a helpful friend; for many answered prayers; not to mention the provision of our daily benefits which we take for granted? In Luke 20:38 we are told that our Heavenly Father is a God of the living. Likewise our Intercessor, Jesus Christ, died for the living (II Cor. 5:15). We, the living in Christ, are exhorted to seek those higher and richer things that we might have a unique, as well as challenging and purposeful, experience as we labor "as unto the Lord."

Second, When should we serve "as unto the Lord"? Now is the time that our day-by-day response challenges. The Lord doesn't put us off when we come for salvation, cleansing, or whatever the need may be. He is always ready and waiting. Did you ever notice how children imitate? If we are busy and say, "Wait a minute," to our children when they come with a need, it isn't long until they respond likewise to us. We ought to imitate our Heavenly Parent and give immediate response to His work. We should be ready and waiting for His call to us. Jesus spoke to the fishermen who gave up their nets and "straightway" followed Him. The lad gave his lunch at the spoken request of Jesus—and how that willingness was blessed! When Paul was converted, it was at once that he was submissive and followed the will of the Lord. Jesus does not like excuses. You'll remember how Jesus pointed out in the parable that those who made excuses were deprived of the blessings of the feast. How guilty we are of putting off our work for Him because we imagine "legitimate excuses." A life pleasing unto the Lord will mean that we are as ready for the monthly Day of Prayer as we may be ready for an outing, a day of shopping, or a time of neighborly visitation. When pressing things of our lives will allow these other pursuits they become excuses for neglecting the spiritual things. We are really living our lives as unto men and unto self, and not "as unto the Lord." Do we keep our one night a month free for our WMC meeting so we can be present to fill our place and fulfill our duties that the work as a whole might go forward more rapidly because we have faithfully and promptly done our part?

After we receive our new materials and return home from the inspiration of conference, we start with a new zeal, but we let it cool off so quickly. By the middle of the year, officers often become careless about details, committees forget to continue with their responsibilities. This is unto men and not "as unto the Lord." Suppose the Lord were as unstable in responding to our needs. We would not have security, but insecurity. Praise His name, He is ever faithful and steadfast. In our WMC work I would like to encourage our women to be consistent, persistent, and constant in doing our work "as unto the Lord." Whether officers or regular member, we must be mutually helpful, for one cannot work without the other.

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. Hoyt, vice president; William Schaffer, secretary; Ord Gehman, treasurer; Bryson Fetters, member-at-large to Executive Committee; Walter Lepp, S. W. Link, Mark Malles, Robert E. A. Miller, True Hunt, Thomas Hammers; Arnold R. Kriegbaum, ex officio.

Third, How can we serve "as unto the Lord"? Our spiritual life is the answer to this, a life maintained and sustained by His Word with Christ as the supreme object. Prayer is God's method of our speaking to Him and His speaking to us. In order to know the desires and thoughts of another, we must keep in contact with that person. Likewise, we must keep in contact with God, through Christ, to know His mind and will for us. Effective prayer is definite. We should know the needs of our organization, our church, and our missionary family, praying for them, as well as for one another. These prayer requests are regularly found in the Herald for our admonition and information. Prayer can be contagious. It is something we should be glad to "give" to another. Prayer is the avenue of power, a ministry that our women can uniquely fulfill "as unto the Lord."

Another way to efficiently serve the Lord is through good planning. We should acquaint ourselves with WMC work locally, in the district, and on the national level. We should also become well acquainted with all our missionaries. Our activities for the WMC work should be well balanced, including all members and not a select few, having vision and purpose. We cannot grow in knowledge by planning alone, but by the faithful performance of these plans. To know is to care. Many times we reveal insincerity in our work by a careless or indifferent attitude. The unfaithfulness of one officer or member not carrying out duties as promptly and efficiently as possible disrupts the whole program in spite of the best of planning. As we consecrate our efforts anew this year, shall we with a genuine depth of devotion execute our plans "as unto the Lord"?

The deeper the roots go downward, the higher the branches go upward. In planning our devotional programs let's make them something special. If we are given a part, let us prepare and give it as we would like to hear someone else present it. Much time should be spent in study and preparation, as well as in our own private devotions. In Colossians 3:16 we read: "Let the Word of God dwell in you richly in all wisdom." In this same verse we are also exhorted to "teach and admonish one another," which is all a part of good planning in our devotional programs. Note that the text also speaks of the use of music in our spiritual services. How often we are blessed with the gospel message in song or instrumental music. These should be planned and prepared as efficiently as any other portion of the program. Our devotional efforts are a direct manifestation of our own inner spiritual life.

"Learn something new, pray for it too, find something to do." Let us be practical. There should be a practical application for our service "as unto the Lord." Each year we challenge our women with Christian activity such as Sunday-school teaching, leading in children's work, Bible reading, promotion of projects, general assistance in the church work, remembering of our missionaries, and promotion of the local WMC and SMM endeavors. Have these come to be mere suggestions or do they become individual challenges as we enter the new year? In our local work do we support the various projects, the prayer groups, and regularly attend the meetings? Do we give financial and prayer support to our district and national works? Our leaders must maintain a high spiritual standard and be good examples, constantly striving to maintain the standard, readily receiving kind suggestions, as well as giving them.

Our personal qualifications include kindness, being merciful; gentleness, which means giving no intentional offense; humbleness of mind, meekness, which means taking no offense; longsuffering or patience, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another. The foundation of all this is true Christian love. We must be childlike in our service unto the Lord, "but not childish." Our rewards will eventually be in glory, but here we receive joy, peace, and satisfaction.

Our Christlike efforts joined together "as unto the Lord," remind one of a huge colorful bouquet. Let the flowers speak a lesson for us. They are also a creation of God, blending their colors and hues together, even as we blend our talents together in service for Him. They serve their purposes silently without murmuring and complaining. They complement each other, creating greater beauty. They permeate the air with fragrance which may be likened unto our work which bears fruit and brings results. One dead flower will spoil the appearance of the bouquet as one dead member will spoil the work and program of the group. We trust the vision of the WMC work is growing among our women. The farther we reach out, the greater our work will expand. As we come to another WMC year, challenged with the theme "as unto the Lord," let us join our efforts because we are redeemed, let us act immediately, and let us serve Christlike in all things.

Our Project

The month of September brings us once again to the beginning of another WMC year. Our projects of the past year have been completed and we are started out anew. Our major national offering is always for home missions. Our cover picture this month represents the sacrificial giving of our women over the past two years, when almost $6,000 was given for the erection of this much-needed schoolbuilding on our Navajo mission field. We are happy to know that the fall term will bring to our teachers there facilities of an adequate schoolbuilding.

And now we turn our thoughts and gifts to another needy project. For a number of years enthusiastic "Miss Evelyn" Fuqua has been doing a wonderful work among the young people of the hills of Kentucky. She has lived in the most primitive of surroundings and done it gladly for the Lord. However, the WMC has decided to do something about the matter and so we have taken as our project for this quarter the raising of $2,800 toward the building of a modern home for "Miss Evelyn." Let every council get busy and do its share to putting this offering over the top and providing this consecrated servant of the Lord with a few of the everyday comforts that we all accept as a matter of course.

NATIONAL WMC OBJECTIVES AND RECOMMENDATIONS

NATIONAL WMC OBJECTIVES (1955-56)

1. PERSONAL SPIRITUAL FOOD—For your daily Bible reading we suggest one of the following:
First choice—The entire Bible in 1955-56 (three chapters a day; five on Sunday).
Second choice — Genesis, Deuteronomy, Ruth, Daniel, Song of Solomon, Esther, Ecclesiastes, and Revelation.
Bible-reading markers will be provided.

2. FAMILY SPIRITUAL FOOD—We recommend the establishing of daily family devotions in every home in the local church. For promotion we recommend the tract, "Thoughts on the Christian Family Circle," Good News Publishers, 411 S. Wells St., Chicago 7, Ill.

3. PRAYER WARRIORS — Each council enlisting prayer warriors from the congregation, using the five-year Prayer Covenant Cards, adding a star each year at consecration service. For guidance in prayer continue the use of the prayer booklets and prayer pointers in the Herald.

4. SOUL-WINNING—Encourage individual witnessing by visitation and tract distribution. Urge each local tract chairman to keep a record of tracts used. For instruction in soul-winning, the following booklets are suggested:
"Soul-Winning Is Easy," by C. S. Lovett, price, $1.
"Winsome Witnessing," by Mary Terry.
"To Save a Soul From Death," by R. Paul Miller.
All of these booklets may be obtained from the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind.

5. MONTHLY MEETINGS—A minimum of 12 devotional meetings URGING the use of the Brethren WMC program packets.

6. DISTRICT PROJECTS AND RALLIES —Each council taking part in the district projects and stressing attendance at the rallies as a means of promoting individual growth and enthusiasm for WMC work. Also encouraging a banner of recognition to be given at district rallies for the largest percentage present from any one council.

7. NEWS ITEMS—Each local editor sending a post card with news items twice a year to the WMC editor.

8. MAJOR OFFERINGS—
(1) Sept., Oct., Nov.—HOME MISSIONS —$2,800; send before Dec. 10. Residence at Dryhill, Ky.
(2) Dec., Jan., Feb.—CHRISTIAN EDUCATION OFFERING—$2,800; send before March 10; two-thirds, Grace Seminary, pick-up truck and transcopy machine; one-third, Sunday School and Youth Boards, office equipment, literature and program material.
(3) March, April, May—FOREIGN MISSIONS—$2,800; send before June 10. Printing equipment and literature fund for the six fields.
(4) June, July, Aug.—GENERAL AND PUBLICATION FUND—$2,800; send before Sept. 10.
(5) THANK OFFERING for Brethren Jewish Missions, taken throughout the year and to be sent to the national financial secretary-treasurer by June 10. We urge the use of the synagogue banks for the penny-a-day-per-member offering. (Secure banks from the Home Missions Council.)
(6) BIRTHDAY OFERING to be received during the year for the support of WMC missionaries on a foreign field. Send this offering to the national financial secretary-treasurer by July 10.

DISTRICT WMC OBJECTIVES (1955-56)

1. Every district represented on the National Board at National Conference by the president or alternate, suggesting that expenses, wholly or in part, be paid by the district.

2. A four-minute written report to be given at National Board meeting and again on the conference floor. The retiring president to be responsible for a written report which will be read by the present presiding officer.

3. Each district to provide interesting material representing the work done in the past year for display at National Conference. An award will be presented to the district having the most outstanding display.

4. Each district to select a prayer chairman who will encourage the prayer life of the women, the use of the five-year Prayer Covenant Cards, and stimulate Bible study.

5. Promoting the organization of a WMC in every Brethren church in the district, the responsibility of directing the organization being placed in the hands of the district president.

6. Each district to sponsor at least one project—said project TO BE CLEARED THROUGH THE NATIONAL VICE PRESIDENT TO AVOID DUPLICATION. Each district has the privilege of keeping the project within the district.

7. Each district contribute an annual freewill offering to be used toward the furnishing and repair of the Foreign Missionary Residence. This offering to be sent to the national financial secretary-treasurer by July 10, and to be used as the committee in charge sees the need.

8. Each DISTRICT PRESIDENT to receive the local annual statistical reports and to compile the district statistical report and send to the NATIONAL recording secretary by July 31.

9. Each District President to stress the importance of using the BRETHREN WMC program packets in the local councils to foster unity among them.

10. SMM to be given time on the WMC district conference program to demonstrate Sisterhood activities.

NATIONAL WMC RECOMMENDATIONS (1955-56)

1. That a membership consecration service be held annually in each local council, using the original covenant card and star system; suggesting that this service be the feature of the September meeting to which prospects for membership are invited.

2. Each local president endeavoring to attend National Fellowship, her council aiding in expenses if at all possible.

3. That Mrs. Benjamin Hamilton be our editor.

4. That Mrs. Frank Lindower be our prayer chairman and that we continue to sponsor enthusiastically the day of prayer each month.

5. That we send good usable clothing to Taos, N. Mex., Rev. S. I. Horney, parcel post, or via express to Santa Fe, N. Mex.; to Indian Mission, Rev. Evan Adams, Brethren Navaho Mission (located at Counselor Post), Star Route, Cuba, N. Mex., c/o San Juan Basin Lines, Albuquerque, N. Mex., and that each council be responsible for their entire expense. That we discontinue sending clothing to Clayhole, Ky.

6. That officers in the local councils preferably be elected in June, installed in July, and take office at the August meeting, and have statistical reports compiled by the retiring president in the hands of the District President by July 15.

7. That each council promote the evangelization of children, urging the individual woman to assist in Sunday school, vacation Bible school, children's Bible classes, etc.

8. That the women in each council continue to show an increased interest in the Sisterhood in all possible ways—prayer, work projects, financial help (such as purchasing reading books and pennants), and a willingness to serve in an advisory capacity.

9. We continue to urge that all local and district councils show loyalty to their denomination by using Brethren talent and supporting Brethren works.

10. That a birthday remembrance be sent to foreign missionaries and their children.

11. That the local council purchase one or more of the suggested reading circle books. Order direct from the Brethren Missionary Herald Company, Winona Lake, Ind.

(1) Biography (of Arthur J. Bowen): "Fervent in Spirit," by Ezra A. Shaub, $2.50.
In this life story of Arthur J. Bowen, Ezra Shank has truly captured for his readers the fervency of spirit of the subject of his book. The reader almost finds himself catching his breath as he follows the recounting of this modern St. Paul. In this age of listless Christians this book is a tonic to stir the jaded spirits to greater exploits for our Lord.

(2) Missionary adventure: "Farther Into the Night," by Mrs. Gordon H. Smith, $2.50.
This book is especially interesting to women readers. Mrs. Smith recounts everyday missionary activity in a spicy style, giving vital information as to how the good news is spread in French Indochina. The trips via elephantback into the deep jungle, the friends along the way, the dangers encountered, make up thrilling adventures in this book. The heart-rending sights of diseased people, and the need on every hand together with their love for Christ drives these missionaries to give themselves more and more each day in service. However, weariness of body is hardly noticed. These servants are so absorbed in giving out the Gospel. The hair-raising account of the Smiths' young son as he emptied the shotgun, then the .22 rifle on a big cobra is more blood-chilling than any mystery. The answers to prayer, the rich faith of the missionaries and natives, and the dense jungle setting, the eerie moonlight nights—all weave into a challenging and worthwhile adventure in modern missionary adventure for Jesus Christ.

Africa, Iraq, India, and Hawaii are only a few of the many fascinating places to which Miss Moennich takes you in this account of her missionary journey.
It is much more than a travel book, however, as it brings firsthand, on-the-spot reports of what God and men are doing on over 32 mission fields of the world. It tells in a most interesting way what problems and trials confront the missionaries and what glorious blessings, challenges, and privileges are theirs. In this book you will find stories of success and stories of failure, but throughout all of it you will see the wonderful working of the Gospel—the power of God unto salvation—and you will be challenged by the great need to be more liberal in your giving, more fervent in prayer, and more faithful in intercession.

(4) Missionary to Zululand: "Tagati," by Allan Livingston Wilson, $2.50.
This is the story of a young missionary who returns to Zululand, the scene of his boyhood, only to find awakening unrest already deeply rooted. He quickly realizes that the spiritual development and Christian influence have not kept abreast of the surging tide of evil and overhanging cloud of witchcraft. The vivid struggle that transpires makes an exciting story, one of triumph, of faith in a God who is able to conquer Satan and all his hosts.

(5) "The Shepherdess," by Arthur Wentworth Hewitt, $2.
Being a shepherdess is a profession of highest order, for the pastor's wife is expected not only to do all the things any other Christian woman would do but to take a leading part in the activities of his church, to teach Sunday-school classes, preside over meetings, conduct study groups, organize social affairs, and in general to undertake any task which no one else has the skill or courage or time or consecration to do.
This book will help her meet her obligations. It is written for all shepherdesses, but especially for the young and inexperienced shepherdess. The bride who views the duties of the parsonage with fear and trepidation, the young mistress of the manse whose obligations are a puzzle and a burden will find here very present help. Dr. Hewitt takes up all sides of the shepherdess' work—first her more personal duties as a helpmeet to her husband and mistress of the home; then her professional duties—and tell her how to acquire the skills she needs. But he makes no technical mystery of it. He believes that any young woman who has love of God and a deep desire to do His work can be a successful shepherdess.
This book will also help the laywoman to better understand the wife of her pastor and to be of more assistance to her when needs arise. Its practicality, its common sense, and salty wisdom will commend this book.

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

We begin this month a new feature of our WMC Herald, a column dedicated to our national and district presidents. Each month we will seek to present a short inspirational message from the president of a different district in our WMC organization. She will also have an opportunity to give us some of the highlights of her own district, thereby giving all of us a better knowledge of what our sisters are doing in the other districts. The first article in the series comes to us from our newly reelected national president, Mrs. Harriet Ashman.—Ed.

OUR NATIONAL PRESIDENT SPEAKS

"I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." These words of Paul came to me as I received the word of being chosen your national WMC president for another year. It is with deep humility that I accept your expression of confidence, and trust that the efforts put forth "as unto the Lord" in the year to come will be worthy of this honor.

I want to publicly thank my fellow officers and express appreciation for their cooperation and fine spirit manifested in our work together. Especially do I want to thank our most capable vice president, Mrs. Taber, who so graciously and efficiently assumed my duties at the national WMC board meetings and at the WMC sessions of National Fellowship.

In accepting the office of national president I also realize anew there is a definite challenge for us. Truly we are thankful for the rich blessings of the past year such as our 13 newly organized councils, the increased birthday offering which enables us to have three WMC missionaries instead of two; the 107 newly established family altars; the fine project and Jewish offerings; the increased district work; and the many tracts distributed. Yes; we are truly grateful for the above blessings, but not completely satisfied.

As we reviewed our accomplishments of the past year and begin our new WMC year, the following became most significant to me: only one-fifth have completed the Bible readings; only about three-eighths of our councils have regular observance of the 15th day of prayer; only about one-half of our councils remembered our missionaries on their birthdays; about three-fourths of our councils have a consecration service; and our net membership gain was approximately 4½ percent. What does this reveal to you? Can it be we are losing sight of the fact that we are a devotional and missionary-minded group of women? It reveals to me that "our daily walk" has not been 100 percent "as unto the Lord" in our personal lives. We give of our substance but not of self, not of time for study of His Word and actual service.

Our new WMC year begins now. We have great potentialities as an organization. Let's see what can be accomplished by putting all of these forces to use. We seek the cooperation of every officer and member alike to liven up our work and become alive "as unto the Lord." Let us start to really produce results now and not wait until the end of the year to discover we have failed to complete our work. Let's increase our membership 100 percent by contacting very woman in the church to visit our WMC meetings. Let's make each meeting something especially planned and a real inspiration. Let's increase our next year's birthday offering to send out four WMC missionaries to the foreign fields. And let's have 100-percent WMC members completing Bible reading and 100 percent councils having a day of prayer each month. What a power we can be!

Now is the time for each WMC officer and member to start fulfilling responsibilities that our WMC work may go forward in a way never before experienced.

It has been a joy working in our WMC and I look forward with pleasure to another year of service. I do seek your prayers for guidance and wisdom, and I'll be praying for you. Let us ever be thankful for this blessed opportunity of worship and service, and mindful of the opportunities unlimited the Lord has in store for us if we but ask Him.

WMC Missionaries for 1955-56

Miriam Churchill
Argentina

Mary Emmert, Africa

Jean Zielasko
Brazil

It was with a great deal of joy and satisfaction that the WMC members assembled at National Fellowship could take on the support of a third WMC missionary. This additional step is the result of the ever-growing enthusiasm for our birthday offering project which finances our WMC missionaries.

A very lovely missionary service was held at one of the WMC sessions of conference, where "Happy Birthday" was sung to the missionaries present and letters of appreciation were read from both of our WMC missionaries of the past year, Miss Estella Myers and Mrs. Minnie Kennedy. Miss Myers has just returned from Africa quite seriously ill and is in the hospital at Des Moines, Iowa. Let's pray for her complete recovery and for her return to that land where she has spent so many years, if that is the Lord's will for her. Further details of the "birthday party" and the letters from Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Myers will appear in a later Herald.

It is our policy to change our designated WMC missionaries each year in order to pass the honor around among our many WMC members serving on foreign fields. The three missionaries chosen as our particular representatives this year are Miss Mary Emmert, returning to Africa after a number of years spent caring for her aged father; Mrs. Miriam Churchill, a second-generation missionary in the Argentine; and Mrs. Jean Zielasko, serving in our growing field of Brazil. Fuller information about them will appear in a later issue of the Herald.

THE TRAGIC BACKWARD LOOK

By MRS. ARNOLD R. KRIEGBAUM

(Second in a Series of Bible Women Studies)

"Sarah," called Abram, putting his head in the tent doorway, "quick; we have some heavenly guests. Would you make some cakes? I'll have one of the herdsmen dress a calf and roast it."

And he took butter, and milk, and the cakes, and meat and set it before his guests under a tree and they did eat. And they said unto him, "Where is Sarah, thy wife?" And Abram could say she was faithfully at home, in the tent.

What a beautiful setting for a peaceful, wholesome life flooded with rich contentment. There on the green hillside with God's handiwork so fresh and new each morning, with the song of the birds to serenade them; plenty of rich milk, butter, meat, cakes, and green for food; just a tent to keep in order; a noble man who was the friend of God to be her husband—what more could Sarah ask? She never once fretted for the city life; her only unsatisfied desire was for a child to complete their family circle. Yes; Sarah made mistakes and doubted the promise once, even took things into her own hands. But even though Sarah laughed to herself, when the Lord predicted she should have a son when she was 90 years old, God was faithful and rewarded Sarah for her faithfulness and gave her the son, Isaac, through whom all the nations of the world have been blessed.

Not far away from these peaceful plains of Mamre was the town of Sodom, where Mr. and Mrs. Lot lived. The same heavenly guests, two angels, came to Sodom at even, and Lot, seeing them, rose up to meet them. He invited them into his house, but Lot couldn't ask his wife to make any cakes, for she wasn't there. So Lot had to fix the meal himself. Before long, the house was surrounded with confusion, young and old knocking on the doors demanding of Lot that he let them see his visitors.

What a contrast to the quiet, satisfying meal enjoyed without interruption with Abram and Sarah. And Lot could have had that kind of life, but he chose a wife who fed on the rounds of gaiety of the city life of wicked Sodom.

"When the morning arose, then the angels hastened Lot, saying, Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here: lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city. And while he lingered, the men laid hold upon his hand, and upon the hand of his wife, and upon the hand of his two daughters; the Lord being merciful unto him: and they brought him forth, and set him without the city. And it came to pass, when they had brought them forth abroad, that he said, Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain: escape to the mountain, lest thou be consumed" (Gen. 19:15-17). Why did Lot linger? He was "saved yet so as by fire." But he was not serving God, and not one soul was saved through his knowledge of God.

But Lot's wife, who was following behind, looked back, and she became a pillar of salt (Gen. 19:26). Why did she look back? God's message was "Look not behind thee." But she was not used to heeding God's commandments. All her friends, her things, her whole life was set in Sodom, and her heart caused her to turn back to look at her treasures.

"Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed. In that day, he which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away; and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife" (Luke 17:28-32).

Luke here implies that she looked back, thinking of her stuff in the house. As a woman, you will naturally be occupied with material things, food, clothing, household necessities, and family comforts. But if these ever become an obsession and keep the Lord Jesus from His rightful place in your life, you will be uninteresting, deformed, and dull to those about you.

Lot's wife spared no time for her Creator, and God rained fire and brimstone on all her treasures. On her monument, the pillar of salt, God writes, "Remember Lot's wife." Is your time consumed with fashion books, jewelry, fads and fancies? Remember Lot's wife.

Just as He drew Lot and his wife and daughters out of Sodom, the Lord longs to draw you unto himself. Only One can deliver you from your own wretched selfish self. He is the Lord Jesus, who was willing to become poor, that we might be rich and live forever with Him in heavenly bliss.

The backward look left Lot's wife encrusted in a briny shrine. If we are delighting to do His desire, we shall press toward the mark for the prize of the upward calling of God in Christ Jesus. Where are your treasures?

IN A FOREIGN COUNTRY

By MRS. ROSE FOSTER

It seemed that the tail of the storm and the arrival of the Paris came simultaneously at the Plymouth Lighthouse. As I recall, sailing up the English Channel was comparatively smooth to the past days of sailing. But it seemed a long way before we reached the pier at Le Havre.

Talk about confusion! Friends looking for friends, others looking for the boat train going to Paris and other cities in the interior. We knew where we were going, but had not yet found the train to take us there. One yelled one thing, another something else. We understood none of them, until we heard "Train for Paris." Then we moved hand baggage and all. I tried to lug some of my stuff up the steps, but it seemed bigger than I. So there I hung, fearing to let go of the bags, unable to move. Suddenly someone gave me a push and there we were, all inside the car. Then we played "Hunt and Seek" until we found our compartment. At last everything was checked and we were off for Paris.

The scenery was interesting. The land was cut into little garden patches, some large and many smaller ones. The over-all picture was like Grandma's patchwork quilt. Everything was clean and orderly. The French people utilize everything. There was very little uncultivated soil.

If we had confusion before, we had a double dose when we arrived in Paris. We had to go through customs now, and find a place to stay. A taxi driver soon settled that for us after Mr. Jobson gave him the name of a hotel where he had stayed before. But because prices are too high in Paris, our two "scout agents" went to find a cheaper place to hang our name cards.

They found the Bible Institute, so we moved there for awhile. Later we secured rooms in a small hotel, where we were favored with a bedroom for each couple and a study room. This was our haven for about five months.

We went to school five mornings a week at 7:30, and ran four long blocks to catch the train. Thursday was the school's holiday. That day we usually went sightseeing or whatever was planned for the foreign students. These trips were very interesting.

There was a big department store only a few blocks from school where we bought our lunch and this was a good cooked meal. We learned to like French food there. One day Joe, my husband, was the last to be seated. When the waiter pushed his chair under him, the chair crashed and Joe fell to the floor. All the waiters came running, picked him up, and of all the apologies—each one asking louder than the other if he was hurt. Soon everything was calm and in order and we had our lunch. However, Joe had not caused enough of a rumpus to get his free!

Christmas came, and we wondered how we could have a real American Christmas dinner. We asked the owner of the hotel if he would roast a turkey for us if we bought it. "Oui, oui (yes, yes)," was his reply. So our husbands went out to buy a turkey. When they came home with it Christmas Eve and took it into the kitchen, the man threw up both his hands and exclaimed, "Messieurs, this is not a turkey; this is a beast." We do not know how he managed to roast all of the 25 pounds, but when he brought it up to our room, it was delicious. We had gotten potatoes, cole slaw, and a few other things, and enjoyed every bit of it. We had turkey until after New Year's Day.

Toward spring, Joe and I went to live in a pension (boarding house) out in the country where we would get more conversational French. It was a real homey home. But on cold days it felt like a refrigerator turned inside out. The husband, wife, and invalid daughter seemed to be perfectly comfortable at the table. One day we found the secret. Each had a nice footwarmer with a hot brick inside. As soon as they sat down to the table they stuck their feet in that nice warmer, and naturally each could act like a baby kangaroo in its warming jacket. The old houses are usually of stone, with large rooms and high ceilings and are cold in the winter.

France has plenty of rain and misty days, and an early spring. Just as soon as the birds begin to sing, the people bundle their little folk and go out to their parks. They do have beautiful boulevards with colorful foliage on the trees. It seems every little niche in France, indoors and outdoors, has a plant in it.

June brought the closing of school, when we packed all of our freight and luggage and headed for Belgium.

IT IS A WONDROUS THING

It is a solemn thought,
I, who am less than naught,
Was yet so loved by God
He cleansed me in the flood
Of His Son's precious blood,
 It is a solemn thought!

It is a blessed word
I had from my dear Lord,
That I need never be Alone or lost, for He
Will always walk with me.
 It is a blessed word.

It is a promise true
That any work I do
For Him, He will reward
Whose face is ever toward
His own. Thus saith the Lord;
 It is a promise true.

It is a wondrous thing
That some day I shall wing
My way thru shades of night,
And dwell in glorious light
Forever in His sight.
 It is a wondrous thing.

SUGGESTIONS

1. If names and addresses were not included in your statistical report of the new officers, please send them as soon as elected to the national general secretary, national president, and district president.
2. Please notice the new goals and recommendations that appear in this issue of the Missionary Herald.
3. Did you get your new material? Please write to your new literature secretary in your district for any material that you need. This is for the rest of the year.

DON'T BLAME EVE

By MRS. R. PAUL MILLER

Eve was made from a rib (Gen. 2:21-22) some believe close to Adam's heart, anyway God planned for Adam to love her very dearly; she was to take away his loneliness. be his helper, and the mother of the first family. This was a very great honor, but also a very great responsibility.

Don't you think Eve was very beautiful? Can't you just imagine how Adam felt when he beheld this lovely lady who was his bride. He had never seen another earthly person, let alone such a beautiful lady, clothed with truth and innocence, unashamed.

Now begins her responsibility, and she fails so disappointingly, not to Adam as much as to her Creator. They lived in the beautiful Garden of Eden, filled with all the wonders only our Father God could place there. Adam was to keep and manage this garden. He named all the beasts and fowls. They could eat of all the fruit of the trees except one. This was in the midst of the garden and was called the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

God came in the cool of the evening to walk and talk with this first couple. God enjoys fellowship with you, His children, and only sin ever destroys or mars this joy.

A very sad thing happened. The serpent, more subtle, more deceitful than any beast of the field, came to this lovely lady and said: "Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?" Eve answered him: "We may eat of the fruit of the trees of the garden: but of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die."

Can't you just see the serpent with an ugly grin on his face when he said to Eve, "Ye shall not surely die." He was sowing doubt and curiosity in her mind. Satan went on to tell her: "Don't you know, God doesn't want you to eat of this tree because you will be as gods and know good and evil."

When Eve looked again she was amazed at the beauty of the fruit, and before she knew it she had taken some of the fruit and was eating of it. That's the way of sin: you look, you handle, you partake. Sadder yet, you immediately go to your best friend or relative and tempt him. Many a girl is tempted to do evil because a chum tempted her. Eve gave Adam some of the fruit and he did eat and their eyes were open. They were no longer clothed with truth and innocence. Eve did not trust and obey God.

When God came that evening, Adam and Eve were hiding. God called several times, but they did not answer or want to see God. Adam said: "I heard thy voice, but I was afraid." Did you hide when you did something wrong? Were you happy to see your parents when they returned? Adam and Eve were ashamed, just like you feel when you disobey.

Adam blamed Eve, and Eve blamed the serpent for their sin. Adam knew he was sinning, but he did not want to be separated from her. In fact, he loved Eve more than he loved God. We don't like to believe that about ourselves, but it surely is so when we are tempted to do wrong.

God punishes sin, always. God made the serpent to crawl on his belly and eat dust all his days. God punished Eve, and all mothers who follow, with pain during childbirth. God punished Adam by cursing the ground and letting thorns, thistles, weeds, tormenting insects, etc., to make it hard to earn a living. No longer just a beautiful pleasant garden to live in with no cares; now Adam must work hard to have a home and family.

Because in the beautiful Garden of Eden was the tree of life, God had to send Adam and Eve somewhere else so all mankind wouldn't live forever in their sin. God put cherubim and a flaming sword at the east end of the garden to keep them from ever returning. God planned before the foundation of the world to send a Saviour to redeem them from their sin. God knew we would all need our loving Saviour, the Lord Jesus, to shed His blood and save us. Aren't you glad God loves us and forgives us?

THE HAND OF GOD ON THE LIFE OF—

Laura Larson Wagner

By Althea S. Miller

When more Christian mothers urge upon their children the claim of God upon their lives, more missionaries will be covering the face of this earth with the Gospel. The Brethren Church has a missionary in Argentina whose mother did this very thing. When Laura Larson struggled a little against the tug of God's Spirit as He called her to serve her Lord as a foreign missionary, Mrs. Larson pressed upon her daughter the claims and promises of Matthew 6:33. Laura answered yes to the Lord.

Nearly 25 years have passed into eternity since Mrs. Wagner left Manteca, Calif., for her work in Argentina. A home where Christ was honored and always put first played a large role in Laura's salvation early in life. She was born again in the Brethren church of Manteca, and born the first time in Upland, Nebr. From the day she knew what a schoolroom was like, Laura wanted to be a "schoolmarm." But when she finally surrendered her will to the Lord, our missionary knew she must get Bible training rather than go on to normal school. So after graduation she went to the Bible Institute in Los Angeles, where she learned to "rightly divide the word of truth."

Not too long after arriving on the field, Laura met a fine Christian young man who captured her fancy, and later her love. Theirs was largely a courtship by mail and the days between the postman's visits seemed an eternity. They put an end to this agony after a year and a half by becoming Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Wagner. Mr. Wagner became affiliated with the Brethren mission work in Argentina by becoming what is known as a national worker. Together this couple have given years of loving service to the Lord they love as they've told the Argentines of Jesus Christ. Four children have blessed this home, and as a family they have been a real asset to the testimony of Christ.

Mrs. Wagner says there is one way in which even the smallest girl or boy can further the testimony of Christ on foreign shores—it is through the avenue of prayer, As you pray God will enable the missionaries to win the lost to Christ, and as you pray you will become interested in missionary service. Let every Sisterhood girl become a prayer missionary!

13. That our personal project be to learn the Book of II Timothy and that the deadline be June 10.
14. That the national board meet the Saturday prior to conference 1956 and that each member receive $5 per working day present.
15. That the SMM give the WMC $200 now and $200 in January toward the Herald expenses, and have the general secretary write a letter of thanks to them.
16. That we give $100 to the National Youth Council in January.
17. That we accept the Guest Home at Taos, N. Mex., as our national project for 1955-56.
18. That each local SMM group ask the local WMC to provide an extra lady besides the assistant patroness to train for patroness. This lady is to be approved by the girls.
19. That girls be encouraged to do craft work and or discussion using suggested books in the Herald.
20. That Bobbette Osborne be appointed missionary reporter for a monthly missionary news item to be sent to each local patroness.

SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR OCTOBER

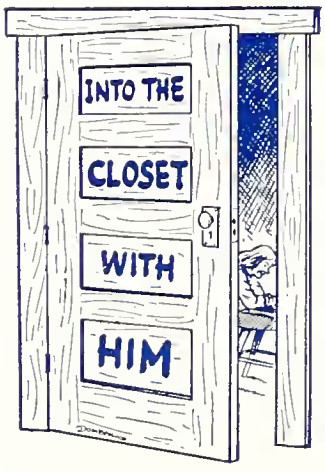
THEME SONG—Sing the new theme song, "My Desire, To Be Like Jesus."

SCRIPTURE—For something different, have each girl give her favorite memory verse.

PRAYER CIRCLE—Each girl should be willing to take part in this. Remember to refer to the requests in the Herald.

DEVOTIONAL TOPICS—Seniors and middlers study "The Tragic Backward Look," by Mrs. Kriegbaum. Juniors study "Don't Blame Eve," by Mrs. R. Paul Miller, and "In a Foreign Country," by Mrs. Foster.

SPECIAL NUMBER.



MISSIONARY BIOGRAPHY—Life of Mrs. Laura Larson Wagner, wife of one of our national pastors in Argentina.

CHORUSES OR FAVORITE HYMNS.

BUSINESS MEETING—Make sure you discuss the goals which are printed in this issue of the Herald.

SMM BENEDICTION.

PRAYER REQUESTS

Pray again for the national officers who were reelected, and also for the newly elected ones, that they may have the strength and wisdom needed to do the best job for the Lord in this way.

Pray for the problems that face the Sisterhood as a whole, that the articles in the Herald and the programs will prove to be the things that will truly "develop every girl to be a living testimony for her Master."

Pray for each girl in SMM, that she will do her best to make this year a successful one in the growth of her spiritual life.

Pray for our missionaries on the home and foreign fields, for they have many needs that only the Lord can meet.

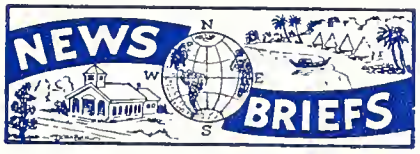
LONG BEACH, CALIF. Rev. Wayne Flory has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Stearns Street Brethren Church and will assume his duties shortly. Brother Flory was recently released from his duties as an Army chaplain.

ROANOKE, VA. Vernon Harris will be arriving shortly from Oregon to assume his duties as pastor of the Washington Heights Brethren Church.

SEATTLE, WASH. Ground was broken for the new View Ridge Brethren Church on Sunday, Aug. 28, with Dr. Paul R. Bauman as the speaker. The church will be located on 68th Street East, and 35th Avenue Northeast.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. The new address of Rev. Robert Griffith is 907 West Fifth St., Grandview, Wash. Telephone 2353.



WHEATON, ILL. Kenneth Teague has resigned as pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, effective Oct. 2. Brother Teague plans to enter the chaplaincy of the U. S. Army.

WINONA LAKE, IND. The Committee on Conference Minutes of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches would like to secure a copy of the Minutes of the General Conference of the Brethren Church for 1926 and Brethren Annual for 1927. If you have such a copy, please contact the Brethren Missionary Herald.

WHITTIER, CALIF. A men's prayer meeting is held every Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock at the Community Brethren Church. Ward Miller is pastor.

BECKLEY, W. VA. (E/P). A "converted jukebox" has been placed in the Youth for Christ Center, a gift from a local music firm. The machine plays only hymns and it has been rigged so that a coin is not needed to prime it.

CAMP DAVIS, PA. (E/P). Sixty Christians were swept to their death during the flash flood which devastated the Pocono Mountain area on Aug. 19. Thirty-eight were killed at Camp Davis, and the balance in the surrounding territory. Camp Davis is located immediately adjacent to Pinebrook Bible Conference, directed by Evangelist Percy Crawford. Over 600 were registered at Pinebrook, but not a single one was lost, as all were evacuated to higher ground long before the flood crested. Pinebrook lost half a dozen buildings and approximately 40 acres of farmland. Dr. Crawford left his bed, where he had been confined for an entire week following a severe heart attack, and personally directed the evacuation of Pinebrook.

PACIFIC PALISADE, CALIF. (E/P). J. Irwin Overholtzer, founder and director emeritus of International Child Evangelism Fellowship, was stricken with angina in his home here on Aug. 6 and went to be with the Lord.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. Don Moomaw, all-American football player for UCLA, was guest speaker on Aug. 14 at the North Long Beach Brethren Church. George Peek is pastor.

NEW YORK. A medical expedition by helicopter through central Africa, concentrated area for some of the world's most serious diseases, will start from Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, on Aug. 25, Lederle Laboratories Division, American Cyanamid Company announced recently. The expedition, jointly sponsored by Sikorsky Aircraft and Lederle Laboratories, will undertake the crossing of central Africa by helicopter. It will carry out on-the-spot medical surveys in the Belgian Congo, Ruanda-Urundi, Kenya, and Tanganyika, acting in cooperation with Christian missions in the area. "One of our main hopes," declared Dr. F. C. Ottati, director of foreign clinical research for Lederle, "is that this expedition will focus attention on the humanitarian efforts of mission medical personnel, who have worked wonders with scanty resources, and thus arouse greater support for their endeavors."

In Memoriam

Mrs. Frank L. Norton completed her earthly pilgrimage on Sunday, July 24, and is now in the presence of the Lord whom she served so enthusiastically during the years before bodily ailments overtook her. She and her husband were especially devoted to young people. Affectionately known as "Mom" and "Pop" by the young people of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, Calif., they served as advisors of the Young People's C. E. from 1933 to 1940. For several years Mrs. Norton's eyesight had been failing, and after being afflicted with a stroke she was unable to speak very coherently. Dr. Charles Mayes, pastor.

Mrs. May Williams went to be with the Lord in July (exact date unknown). She had made her public confession of Christ Dec. 1, 1953, under the ministry of Evangelist R. Paul Miller. Since that time she has been a member of the Grace Brethren Church of Berrien Springs, Mich. —Gilbert Hawkins, pastor.

Mr. Sherman E. Bradshawe departed to be with the Lord on Aug. 4. Mr. Bradshawe was formerly organist at the Fremont Avenue Brethren Church, South Pasadena, Calif. —Rev. Albert Flory, Minister of Education, First Brethren Church, Long Beach, Calif.

Five Minutes With Your Herald Editor

Thank You, Northwest!

By plane, train, bus, and automobile, the delegates arrived in Portland, Oreg., for the 66th annual conference of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, August 10-17. The fears of many were soon allayed with regard to attendance at the conference, for attendance proved to be on a par with those held at Winona Lake. In fact, we have seen many conferences at Winona Lake not as well attended as the one in Portland.

Not only was the attendance at the conference a reason for rejoicing, but the Lord is to be praised for the wonderful spirit that was evidenced throughout the conference. The spiritual atmosphere was the best we have experienced in a long time.

As they would say down south, the Northwest District did themselves up "right smart" in the manner in which they welcomed the conference. Each and every delegate to the conference is highly appreciative of the effort put forth by the churches of the Northwest to welcome the Brethren to their district. This was the first time the conference was ever held in this section of the United States, and so far as this editor is concerned, we hope it is not the last.

The next four years will see our National Fellowship being held at Winona Lake, in accordance with our code of regulations, but where the conference will be held in 1960, if our Lord tarries His coming, is a matter of speculation. Rev. Thomas Inman, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church of Denver, Colo., made a passing remark from the Portland pulpit that "when the conference comes to Denver in 1960 . . .," but as yet there has been no official invitation. Certainly Denver would be central for all of our churches, and the beauty of the Rockies would be enjoyed by all. So, it might be that the 1960 conference will be held in the mile-high city of Denver, Colo.

Thank You, Brethren!

Prior to our national conference, the suggestion was made several times through the pages of the Missionary Herald that each and every church of our brotherhood should make the effort to assist their pastor financially so he could make the trip to Portland. The response was wonderful! The Lord be praised that many, many of our churches gave their pastors and delegates fine offerings and love gifts to assist them in the cross-country trip to Portland.

The Lord has a blessing in store for the church that shows real love and interest in their pastor. The church that seeks to "kill" a preacher by "starving him out" will never know the blessing of the Lord, so long as that attitude persists. Further, it certainly does not show the spirit nor the mind of Christ. Each church ought to include on their budget an amount designated to be used to send the pastor to the national conference. Ultimately the church will receive the blessing for it. Attending the national conference is not a vacation for the preacher. For most of our faithful pastors it is work, sometimes until the morning hours, as they serve on national boards. It is hard work! But at the same time there is a spiritual refreshment through fellowship with the delegates, and vision is established as the plans are laid for another year of work. Through our national conference the brotherhood is united in the over-all program of the Brethren Church.

If your church was one of the few whose pastor was not able to attend because of the lack of financial assistance, we would like to suggest that even now effort be expended to see that next year your pastor will be at the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches when it convenes at Winona Lake in August.

New Missionary Herald Building

Progress on the new denominational office building is encouraging. We thank the Lord that the needed materials have in nowise slowed up the work to this point of construction. Although there has been a shortage of cement in this area, nevertheless, the Lord has been good, and all that we have needed or will need has been assured.

Your earnest prayers are needed during this period of construction. The leading of the Lord can literally save us hundreds and hundreds of dollars as the Holy Spirit guides in the many decisions.

In behalf of the board of trustees of the Brethren Missionary Herald, this opportunity is taken to express our sincere gratitude to all who have contributed to the publication offering during the months of June and July. Facing, as we are, one of the greatest financial needs in our history, assurance is given that every penny you gave will be used wisely for the glory of the Lord.

We are urging all churches to send in their offerings as soon as possible, for this will prove to be of great assistance to us at this particular time.

Bethany Camp

In view of the fact that this year there were two Bethany Camps, it will be of interest to our brotherhood to know that approximately 60 campers were in attendance at Bethany (Winona Lake) the week of August 22-28. When it is remembered that the camp in connection with conference was held August 10-17 at Portland, Oreg., there is reason for praise when we learn of the camp attendance at Winona Lake.

We should praise God for those who faithfully assume the responsibility of directing our youth program. The youth of our Brethren churches today will be the leaders of tomorrow. We dare not ignore the fact that our Brethren Church tomorrow will be no stronger, zealous, or active than our youth are trained to be today. The Lord should be praised daily for the fine Sunday-school program we have in the Brethren Church, and for the commendable work being done by the Brethren Youth Council. This council has already taken steps to give the boys of the Brethren Church a rejuvenated program that will result in a dynamic testimony for Christ.

LASTING HOME FOUNDATIONS

Introduction.

"Is he a Christian?" "I don't know; I never lived with him." How true! We soon discover the real spirituality of individuals when we dwell with them under the same roof. This is especially true of a man and a woman who live together as husband and wife. We may rest assured that if our lives are Christlike in the home, we will have a good testimony before the people of the world.

The Moody Monthly recently reported that seven out of eight children quit Sunday school before they are 15; the ordinary person spends eight times more hours in the movies than in church; 15,000,000 sex magazines are sold monthly, most of them to high-school students; there are three times as many criminals as college students in the land; we spend 750 times more for amusement than we contribute to the church; juvenile delinquency is almost out of hand, and the situation bids fair to grow much worse.

J. Edgar Hoover is quoted as saying: "Any hope for stopping the troubles of our country lies in the reestablishment of the family worship." Yes; the establishment of lasting home foundations is America's most-needed secret weapon against destruction at home and abroad.

In the ancient Hebrew economy, each household was a miniature temple. The father was the priest; the family made up his congregation. Even so should it be in the Christian homes today. The father should be the spiritual head, with the family members making up his obedient and spiritual congregation. This is the ideal—an ideal which is too infrequently realized in our time.

As a basis for the further remarks attention is drawn to several portions of God's Word.

"Now these are the commandments . . . which the Lord our God commanded to teach you . . . shall be in thine heart: and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children . . . write them upon the posts of thy house, and on thy gates . . . ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord . . . it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments" (Deut. 6:1, 6, 9-10, 25).

"Choose you this day whom ye will serve . . . as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord" (Josh. 24:15).

"But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned . . . and that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures . . . all scripture is given by inspiration . . . that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works" (II Tim. 3:14-17).

". . . But bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord" (Eph. 6:4b).

The crowning example of the application of the above exhortations is in Christ himself. When He conversed with the doctors in the temple, at the age of 12, these learned men were caused to marvel at His knowledge and wisdom—a wisdom gained from the faithfulness of His godly parents.

There should be a FAMILY ALTAR, a time of family worship in each and every Christian home. This is a sure and lasting foundation upon which the individual, the church, and the state can build. Not that such an observance, in itself, is productive of righteousness. But, the Christ thus presented will have opportunity to do His miracles of grace in the hearts of those participating.

I. WHY HAVE A FAMILY ALTAR?

It is essential that every Christian home have a family altar because of gratitude (Deut. 6:10-12), because of needs (Deut. 6:17-19), such as sickness, sadness, and separations.

An aged mother was dying. The children were all home for the first time in 19 years. The old father took the family Bible from the shelf and read as of former times. In the days of youth it had helped his children to meet every need. And now, in the time of death and separation, it gave strength and comfort to stand the test.

It is essential that every Christian home have a family altar because of influence (Deut. 6:6-9). There is a threefold influence to be desired in family worship; namely, (1) influence on the parents—"thine heart"; (2) influence on the children—"to thy children"; (3) influence on others—"our righteousness."

It is essential that every Christian home have a family altar because of learning—"ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall set you free." There are two ways to learn the truth: (1) by study—"study to show thyself approved," (2) by experience—"take my yoke upon you, and learn of me."

Concerning school we ask our children, "Are your lessons done?" Concerning physical health we ask, "Have you finished your milk?" Concerning their well-being we ask: "Do you have your boots on? Is your head covered?" BUT HOW MUCH CONCERN HAS THERE BEEN FOR THE SPIRITUAL WELFARE OF THESE CHILDREN? Can it be that we have been neglecting the most important of all? Alas, it is too often the case.

Why are there no altars of worship in our homes? Well, we are too busy. What makes us so busy. Analysis will reveal that we are "much troubled" about the lesser things. There is no sin in being busy—whoever had a busier life than the Lord? But there is a sin in being busy about the wrong things to the neglect of the right things.

Another reason there are no altars is because of our unconcern. Yes; we feed our babies when they are hungry; we rush them to the doctor when they are sick; we remonstrate with the teacher when they make no progress in school; we see that they have a place in society, being developed in culture—but do we make certain that they also know Christ, that they are dedicated unto Him, that they will become pillars of righteousness in the house of the Lord?

One parent has a foolhardy philosophy which says: "My parents nagged me about religion when I was a kid, and now I'm sick of the whole matter. I'll not make that mistake with my children." Look beneath all this cover-up. You'll discover two factors. There is something else in the life of that individual that keeps him away from the Lord; his parents' concern is only an excuse. And he isn't afraid he'll make the same mistake with his children, he is simply endeavoring to find some plausible excuse for his own sinful negligence.

Another parent will say: "I don't think it is right to influence a child in any direction on spiritual matters. It is a personal decision that must be made; it is an individual matter." But what is the real situation? That child, being uninfluenced toward the right by the parent, is left to contrary influences from others. Further, the very lack of a positive testimony leads the child to doubt that the parent is concerned at all. What would happen to our children if we would exercise the same attitude when they play with fire, attempt to drink poison, drive too fast, etc.? Sensible reflection concludes that such an attitude is indeed beneath the responsibility and dignity of one who has been permitted to bring children into the world.

II. HOW HAVE A FAMILY ALTAR?

1. Bible reading—the basis of family worship. Read the Bible: (a) for information (II Tim. 3:15); (b) for adoration (Col. 3:15-17); (c) for exhortation (Rom. 12:1-2).

Each home should be supplied with a box of Scripture cards to be used at mealtimes, a Scripture calendar for daily reminder of the goodness of God, a Bible-story book for the little tots, and a Bible for each member of the family old enough to read. Bible reading should be participated in by all. Our church here regularly will print in the weekly bulletin a schedule of Bible readings in keeping with the lessons of the various Bible-school classes.

2. Prayer—in which all should take part. Prayer includes: (1) praise (Ps. 150); (b) petition (Phil. 4:5-7); (c) pattern (Phil. 1:8-11).

Family prayers should be definite, brief, sincere. Long prayers, for many wants, should be uttered in the secret closet at a convenient time—not aired before the family circle, especially where there are restless little ones. The prayers before others should not be sermonettes against some member of the household, nor should they be vindications of one's own shortcomings. They should not be empty platitudes, quoted niceties, or meaningless repetitions. Family prayers should be the collective outpouring of the hearts of the home in praise and adoration to a loving Heavenly Father, concluding with a petition for home and outside needs.

Praying for others, before our families, increases our spiritual horizons and takes the attention off ourselves. Missionaries, pastors, church movements, students, people in want, and the unsaved should share a large place in family prayers.

3. Singing—"making melody in your hearts to the Lord" includes: (a) hymns—"Holy, Holy, Holy" (adoration); (b) gospel songs—"Brighten the Corner" (exhortation); (c) choruses—"Only To Be What He Wants Me To Be" (consecration).

Next to the Book of God, the hymnbook is important. Gathering the family about the piano (or without instrument) to sing the songs of redemption does wonders for the home. Sadness is forgotten, feelings are eased, problems melt away, and there is a unity of the Spirit obtainable in no other way. A good theme chorus for any home could well be, "Sing and Smile and Pray the Clouds Away."

III. WHAT ARE THE GOALS OF A FAMILY ALTAR.

Read II Timothy 3:16.

1. Doctrine—to develop right knowledge—preparations.

2. Reproof—to develop right values—impressions.

3. Correction—to develop right spirit—expression.

4. Instruction—to develop right life—manifestation.

Family altar periods are purposeful times of worship and instruction to cause each member of the home to know God's will, and to have the willingness to obey God's will.

IV. WHEN SHOULD WE HAVE FAMILY ALTAR?

"Evening and morning, and noon will I pray and cry aloud" (David).

1. Weekly—good, but not often enough.

2. Daily, but spasmodic, according to convenience—better, but not the best.

3. Daily, regularly—the ideal and most rewarding.

Here are some definite suggestions for family altar periods:

a. Set a definite time suitable to all the family.

b. Arrange a definite schedule of Bible readings.

c. Plan definitely to make the period a blessing to all.

d. Ask definite participation of everyone concerned.

Conclusion.

There are two lasting foundations for each home: (1) Christ—"other foundation can no man lay . . ."; the Bible—"thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee."

Hollins, Va.

It was a real joy to be associated with the Board of Evangelism. The Lord was gracious to us in all the churches we visited. The pastors were kind and cooperative. The people were gracious and hospitable. My teammates were all that could be desired. President Clyde Landrum and the members of the board were truly big brothers to us. We are grateful too to the faithful laymen who followed the team with their prayers and gifts, enabling us to carry on the work. Our relationship to the board was harmonious and perfectly satisfactory.

After much prayer, we were led to request the board to release us as evangelist of Team Two. This was a hard decision to make. However, we are convinced it was the will of the Lord. After two years on the road we had a longing to go back to our first love—the pastorate.

The Lord opened the door at Hollins, Va. We have been serving this church since June 12. We accepted the call for the summer. Now we have been led to accept the call of the church to remain with them.

We are happy to serve as pastor of the Patterson Memorial Brethren Church. The hand of the Lord has been upon the work. Many new records in attendance have been established in all departments of the Bible school and church.

During the last month there have been 11 first-time decisions and one rededication. We give to the Lord all the praise. We ask for special prayers for the work at Hollins. We are anxious to do a good job for our wonderful Saviour.—Archie L. Lynn.

BUILDING ON CHRIST

Moderator's Address—Michigan District Conference of Brethren Churches—New Troy, Mich.—By Earl Funderburg

In this third conference of the Michigan District Fellowship of Brethren Churches we are meeting under the theme, "Building on Christ," taken from I Peter 2:5. We have heard read the first five verses of I Peter 2 and from this background we would like to offer a subtitle, "Stone Upon Stone."

"Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ."

Having been founded as a district on the great Rock, Christ Jesus, we now face the future with unlimited possibilities. Michigan is a great state, with over 6,300,000 men, women, and children. According to the national average, well over 2,000,000 of these have seldom if ever darkened the door of any religious institution, let alone a Bible-believing church. Yet each of these is a prospective stone in the building of God.

Supposing that one out of every 100 of these could be reached with the message God has entrusted to us, we could have 40 congregations with 500 members each, or 80 congregations with 250 members each. Many states do not have even one Brethren testimony. Our home-mission field is great and white unto harvest. The United States is small both in area and population when compared with the area and population of the world. Christ has said: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." These are our possibilities. Just what is our responsibility? "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God?" (I Cor. 3:16). "Ye are God's building" (I Cor. 3:9). Christ is the Foundation Stone. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ" (I Cor. 3:11). We are built on Him. STONE UPON STONE. Living stone upon living stone. Every stone a soul redeemed by the blood of Christ from the world of sin.

At every breath someone is passing into hell. God's building must be built rapidly but well. God is the builder, but He must have our cooperation. Stones must be cut to fit. Stones must be put in their proper place. Stones must be put together with mortar that is not made weak with refuse or clay.

Satan is against reaching souls for Christ. Satan is against strong spiritual testimonies. So Satan hinders us. The way he hinders us is to make us misfits in God's building. He puts chips on our shoulder while we should allow God to chisel them off the corners of our disposition being fitted to plumbline of God. He twists our tongues into cutting words that damage our otherwise clear testimony for Jesus. He will tempt us to continue in some of the habits of the world so that our words fall only as sounding brass.

Satan will hinder us from being where God wants us both as to geography and vocation. Many pastors are pastors of the wrong congregations because of cliques in the congregation, or because of personal privileges or gain. Some congregations do not exist because of the failures of some pastor. He would not start the Bible class next door, he would not go or he would not stay. Some pastors are discouraged or on the shelf because some congregations are out of the will of God.

Because of the lack of self-discipline and spiritual preparation some are not willing to serve as deacons, Sunday-school superintendents, and other working capacities. Many Christians are blinded to the possibilities of reaching men and women through new mission lighthouses or relocation of a meeting house to reach more souls.

In our mortar we need a good mixture of full surrender, personal dedication of life and possessions, and a gospel measure of the love of Christ that will constrain us to reach souls at any cost. Certainly we all have room to do better than we have in the past. We will do better when more are willing to meet the challenge God has given us.

There is room in God's building for many stones. We have the right Foundation. We have the fundamentals of Christianity. We have plenty of good organization. But how many do we have who are really concerned about reaching the multitude for Christ? Who will help gather the stones for God's building?

Our eyes are dry because our hearts have no feeling. How many members would we have in the Brethren Church if God would send the actual judgment on us that Ezekiel saw in Ezekiel 9? Here was a people steeped in sin and ignoring God's will. Only a few were concerned to the point of tears. God sends His messenger to mark the heads of those that sigh and cry over the sin of the city. Five other messengers follow with only one message: the message of the sword and death. Men, women, and children died by the hundred that day—folks who did not care, folks that were satisfied to live a normal life, folks that had enjoyed the privileges of God's people, folks that had passed among others as belonging to God; yet folks that stood in the way of someone else's salvation. Another time unconcern for sin brought certain death. No longer would they stand in another's way. God knew their hearts. He knew the hearts of those that had the concern, and He knows you. Do you bear the mark of God's concerned ones?

In Ezekiel's vision the Lord said, "Begin at my sanctuary." That is where we must begin today, pastor, evangelist, deacon, Sunday-school worker, church board member!

When have you cried over a lost soul?

When have you given your all to see him or her saved from the ravages of sin?

Yes; we too can grow cold and unconcerned.

How many stones in God's building this year and next? It all depends.

How do you stack up with God?

Is building on Christ to be just our conference theme for a week or will building on Christ be our consistent practice—stone upon stone?

May God bless our Brethren Church this year to the greatest year we have ever had in reaching souls with eternal life through our precious Lord. Amen.

QUICK PAINT JOB AT FORT WAYNE, IND.

Everybody pitched in at the First Brethren Church to put a first coat of paint on the building which was purchased recently to house overflow Sunday-school crowds. Twenty members of the congregation swarmed over the two-story building and completed the job between 8:30 a. m. and 4:30 p. m.

Joel's Prophecy Again Fulfilled at National Conference

The Prophet Joel did not know that the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches would have its national conference in Portland, Oreg., in 1955. Neither did he know of the weight of prayer and supplication which would precede that conference. But, as Joel's prophecy in Acts 2:16 following was partially fulfilled at Pentecost, so was it again partially fulfilled at our national conference this year.

"And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh" (Acts 2:17). Joel's prophetic vision reached far into the future when the King of all the earth would consummate the ages and reign as sovereign dictator over all men. Then the Spirit of God will be poured out upon all flesh. But Joel's prophecy has had many partial fulfillments and the blessing of God through the Holy Spirit on the attendants at the Brethren conference this year was certainly such a fulfillment.

From the very first session of the conference there was spiritual warmth and power in each session. Often we hear attendants at church services say: "I could feel the power of the Spirit in that service." What they actually sensed was the movement of the Spirit in their own soul. This was true of our conference delegates.

By the fifth day of our conference on Sunday, the accumulation of spiritual power broke forth in tearful manifestations of confession of sin and passionate prayer for faithful witnessing and Christian living. The altar of the great conference auditorium was filled with preachers, their wives, laymen and their wives, and others as they streamed from their seats and knelt in humility and prayer before God. For more than two hours and past the midnight hour, hearts cried out to God in powerful prayer. Sometimes three or four would start praying at the same time. Revival fires were kindled in many hearts.

Prayer in confession of sin and then for holy Christian living and faithful witnessing seemed to be the keynote of all the prayers. There was no sham or professionalism. God's people became as little children and honestly faced their spiritual laxities and problems. Pride was absent and in its place a holy humility before a thrice-holy God. Concern was expressed for our missionary ministry at home and abroad. There seemed to be the strong impression that even though God has blessed in giving many new churches at home and more missionaries and fields abroad, this is simply the beginning of a greater blessing God desires to give providing His people will really humble themselves and pray and seek His face. Many were heard asking forgiveness for their lack of vision of fields white unto harvest and for their unwillingness to really sacrifice in reaching the lost with the Gospel. There seemed to be the conviction that God struck home to the Jews through the Prophet Haggai. Israel was more concerned with her own comfort and the people with building their own houses than they were with building the Lord's house. As a result, God dried up their fields and withered their crops. How easy it is to become supremely concerned with ourselves, our own comfort and well-being, and forget that the watchword of the child of God is "others."

Over and over again the fact was voiced: This is the work of God and not of man." Actually none expected such a manifestation of God's power. When it came, all were surprised and blessed. It was very evident that God had visited His children in special power from above. This revival was no more the work of man than the early Pentecost.

One man testified that he had not seen anything to parallel this in a Brethren conference for 50 years. Praise God that at least after 50 years the blessing came!

Why do we not have such a blessing every year and all the time? The answer is, it costs something! Too often believers are not willing to pay the price of revival and spiritual blessing.

The Old Testament formula is still basically God's way of begetting and bestowing revival. "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (II Chron. 7:14).

We need not wait 50 years again for such a blessing. If Brethren people who have as a motto, "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible," will just obey its precepts, we may have a constant revival. The growth

CHILDREN AID IN SEATTLE WASH., GROUND-BREAKING

Boys and girls of the Sunday school assist in the ground-breaking ceremony.

By THOMAS E. HAMMERS

Symbolizing their role in the future of the church, as well as their important place today, 20 Sunday-school children of the View Ridge Brethren Church of Seattle, Wash., helped break ground Sunday, August 28, at 3 p. m. for another new home-mission church. This will be the first church ever to be established by our denomination in this 103-year-old metropolis of more than 750,000 souls, and the base, we trust, from which a number of other Brethren churches may soon be started in this rapidly expanding mission field.

Leading the ground-breaking services was the Rev. Thomas E. Hammers, pastor, assisted by members of the building committee, R. J. McConahay, chairman, Peter L. Miller, and Don Bunch, these three being the first to break ground in the event which climaxed more than four years of prayer and planning, hoping and dreaming, giving and waiting.

Dr. Paul R. Bauman, president of the Brethren Home Missions Council, Inc., Winona Lake, Ind., was the special speaker for the Seattle ground-breaking.

Matching the enthusiasm of the building committee were the children who, unmindful of their "Sunday best" and the admonition of their mothers "not to get dirty," each, armed with a little red shovel, dug right in as if they meant to dig deep enough for the entire foundation.

Guest speaker was Dr. Paul R. Bauman, president of the Brethren Home Missions Council (sponsor of this new church) and vice president of Grace Theological Seminary. The Rev. E. A. Ballis led in the invocation and the Rev. Earl W. Roop pronounced the benediction. Appropriate special music was presented by Herman Haakenson, soloist, and a mixed trio, Mrs. Thomas E. Hammers, R. J. McConahay, and Robert Whited, to the accompaniment of an organ loaned by local organ builders, Balcom and Vaughan. A good-sized crowd of members and friends of the church attended the ceremony, while nearby neighbors could be seen listening and watching from their windows.

It had been just two weeks since, with tears of joy, the National Conference at Portland had heard the thrilling announcement by Dr. L. L. Grubb on Sunday night, August 4, that through one man God had made available to the newly organized Brethren Investment Foundation a $37,000 loan for the Seattle church. Said to be the largest single loan in Brethren home-mission history, it came as a real answer to prayer, for the loan appplication of the Seattle church had been turned down by some 30 different banks, insurance companies, and various other lending agencies, one of which declared their reasons being that the Brethren denomination was (1) too small, (2) not known, and (3) possessed too limited resources.

The new two-level structure will cost about $53,000 and will be located in one of the very finest residential sections of the city, just opposite a beautiful new branch library, already checking out as many as 1,000 books a day.

The building will provide a chapel-sanctuary seating 150 persons, two classrooms, baptistry, pastor's study, and Sunday-school office on the upper street level. The full-daylight lower level will provide a multipurpose area which can be used as four classrooms for 112 children, or as a social hall seating 185 at tables, or a meeting hall seating 270, in addition to a kitchen, nursery, and restrooms. The exterior will be a combination of roman brick and rough cedar.

The desire for a Brethren church has long been cherished by Brethren who had come to live in the Seattle area. At one time Rev. R. Paul Miller had conducted a tent meeting at Bremerton, across the sound from Seattle. The late Dr. J. C. Beal and other of the Brethren had paid visits to this area. However, not until almost five years ago, under the leadership of the Rev. Russell Williams, then pastor of the Grace Brethren Church of Yakima, was a definite work started. For some time a Bible class met regularly at the downtown YMCA.

Dr. and Mrs. A. J. McClain, while attending the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches in Portland, Oreg., visited Seattle, Wash., and are seen looking over the sketch of the proposed new church building.

It was, however, the splendid response to the Minute Man appeal of the Brethren Home Missions Council which made it possible for a full-time pastor to enter Seattle. Once the location for the "first" church had been definitely established, services were started in the home of the pastor. For more than two and one-half years now, these services have continued, with God blessing in many ways. Real growth and development, however, have been greatly limited by the continuation of services in the home. We praise God that at last a building is in the near future.

It might be said that so long had been the period of "waiting," and so many the "disappointments" in our attempts to finance construction of our building, that some of our friends doubted that we would ever be able to build. Needless to say, the good news that God had provided a loan brought great rejoicing among not only those within the church, but to the many friends and neighbors as well. It has been a real testimony to the faithfulness and power of our God, and like the psalmist of old we can say: "The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad."

God, we know, will reward the faithfulness of those across our nation who have prayed with and for us, of those who have given generously, of those who have made investment loans, and of those in Seattle who have so faithfully stood by the work since its very beginning.

Pray that as the actual construction of the building now gets under way the church will also enter a real time of revival and soul-winning, this being our only justification for erecting another church building in this great city.

Denver, Colo., Sunday School Wins First Contest Trophy

(L. to r.) Mr. Russell West, Sunday-school superintendent; Mrs. Thomas Inman, Pastor Thomas Inman, Mrs. M. J. West, and Mr. M. J. West.

The Sunday school of the Grace Brethren Church, Denver, Colo, won the trophy for the largest increase in attendance during the nine-month period of the national Sunday-school contest. The winner was announced on the closing day of the National Sunday School Convention in the first such contest sponsored by our own National Sunday School Board. It was as much of a surprise to Mr. Russell West, Sunday-school superintendent, and Rev. Thomas Inman, pastor, as it was to the rest of the people at the convention. The beautiful new trophy is to be retained by the winner for one year, unless they can show a greater increase than any other church in the new contest to start October 2.

We are proud of the fine record of this home-mission church and offer our congratulations to the Sunday-school superintendent, the pastor, and all the people who worked to win the trophy. Many other home-mission churches were in the contest and won the banner from month to month. Some were winners in their particular division for the year. All in all the home-mission churches made a good showing in the contest for the first year and they will be in the new contest trying to bring the trophy to their churches and at the same time helping the National Sunday School Board reach their goal of 60,000 by 1960.

REACHING AND TEACHING THE NAVAJO

Reaching the Navajo for Christ is the prime objective for the missionary program of our Brethren Church among these people. It is a difficult job and many means are used to obtain that end. One of these is meeting the physical need of the Navajo. The Navajo for the most part is uneducated. He lives under very unsanitary conditions due to his poverty and ignorance. He lives in an atmosphere and surrounding of heathen customs. His physical need is great and requires much time.

Teaching the Navajo is much more difficult than any other person in our land. First he can neither read his own language nor the English. Therefore, he must be taught to read. His native language is difficult for the white man to read, and the English is difficult for the Navajo. Rev. Adams has learned the Navajo language and is now able to teach them to read their own. Portions of the Bible have been translated into Navajo which will help the Navajo Christians to take the Gospel to their own people. Pray for the mission staff and for the Navajos they are trying to reach and teach.

Pastors Called to Home-Mission Fields; New Director Elected

Returned Chaplain Accepts Pastorate

Chaplain Wayne Flory of the U. S. Army is now Pastor Wayne Flory of the Stearns Street Brethren Church, Los Altos, Calif. We believe Brother Flory has been released by the U. S. Government to fill this vacancy in the home-mission field. Brother Flory, upon his graduation from Grace Seminary, entered the pastorate and, after serving a term as chaplain, is returning to the pastorate. He is entering a field where there is a need for an immediate building program. A Christian day school is already in operation, and the facilities are used by the church. But the facilities are limited for both the church and the school. Pray for the pastor and needs of the field.

Father and Son Embark on Home-Mission Work

Dr. Charles H. Ashman, Sr., well known to the Brethren Church as a Bible teacher, accepted the call and challenge of the West Covina, Calif., home-mission church. Brother Ashman began his ministry on July 1, when the former pastor, Marvin L. Goodman, Jr., returned to the foreign-mission field. Brother Ashman is beginning at the very beginning with only a group of people, a temporary meeting place, and a location for a church. A building committee has been appointed and plans are under way to get a building program started at the earliest possible date. Brother Ashman is located in the church area and says the opportunity is excellent for a thriving new home-mission church.

Soon after Charles H. Ashman, Sr., accepted the challenge at West Covina, Charles H. Ashman, Jr., felt led of the Lord to accept a call to the First Brethren Church of Phoenix, Ariz. So Brother Ashman, Jr., will be completing his ministry at Rittman, Ohio, and arriving in Phoenix approximately October 1, 1955. Phoenix already has a new building and it looks like the senior member has the biggest job although the junior member of the family is the biggest (in stature). There should be somewhat of a competitive spirit in this father-and-son addition to the home-mission family, and it will be interesting to watch the work of the Holy Spirit as He leads in these two churches.

Robert Griffith Goes to Grandview, Wash.

Rev. Robert Griffith, the former pastor at Lake Odessa, Mich., is now on the new home-mission field at Grandview, Wash. This new field was opened by Pastor Harold Painter and the First Brethren Church, Sunnyside, Wash. Brother Griffith is the first pastor called by this newly organized work, and it may be necessary for him to work part time at secular work.

The new Grandview church is an example of what can be done when a pastor is looking for new opportunities, when a church is willing to cooperate with its pastor in seeking new fields, and when young men are willing to pioneer a new work at any cost.

Portland Pastor Accepts Roanoke Call

Rev. Vernon J. Harris, former pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Portland, Oreg., has accepted a call to serve the Lord in the Washington Heights Brethren Church, Roanoke, Va. Rev. Harris terminated his ministry in Portland September 1 and will be taking up his new work about September 15. The relocating of the Portland work and the building of the new church was accomplished during the ministry of Brother Harris in Portland.

Rev. W. Carl Miller, the first pastor for the Washington Heights Brethren Church, resigned August 1 to enroll in Grace Theological Seminary. A new building was erected by the Brethren Construction Company during Brother Miller's ministry and the Lord has blessed in the work with a very substantial growth from the beginning.

New Director Chosen for Home Missions

Rev. Lewis C. Hohenstein, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Whittier, Calif., was elected to the Board of Directors for the Brethren Home Missions Council to serve a three-year term. The election took place during the corporation meeting held annually in conjunction with the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, and fills the vacancy left by the resignation of Rev. Robert A. Ashman, Winona Lake, Ind. The other directors re-elected to the board were Mr. Charles Croker, Mr. Edison Yoder, and Rev. Gordon Bracker.

we could experience throughout our entire fellowship structure would be phenomenal.

Humility, prayer, seeking God's face—which means pleasing Him in every way—turning from our wicked way, is still the price of revival. In the measure that we practice these divine injunctions we have the blessing of God. But the pride even of a believing heart is so evident in many of our churches. By their own admission hundreds of member of Brethren churches are prayerless. Instead of seeking God's face many children of God are seeking their own welfare and comfort. It never seems to occur to some of the Lord's people that wickedness in the life will grieve the Spirit of God and cause them to be shorn of their spiritual power. Do we want continual revival power in our pulpits and in our church constituency? Then we must pay the price!

Revival at national conference will do us little good unless the challenge and power of that revival are carried back to our churches. Several pastors have already reported that upon giving the challenge to their people many have responded to the invitation and rededicated their lives to Christ. Delegates to national conference should go back to their churches with a prayer that God will enable them to stir the church through the power of the Holy Spirit.

If the fires of God's power burn in our churches over this land throughout the year as they did at conference, we shall indeed see the greatest year of growth and blessing in all of our history. Lord, let it be so!

Why should we not begin to pray now that next year's conference at Winona Lake shall be a great spiritual fountain of blessing. Hundreds who missed the blessings of this year's conference should be planning to be in the 1956 conference.

REACHING BEYOND OUR SPANISH-AMERICAN V. B. S.

John 11:16—"And other sheep I have"

Nestled high in the Sangro de Cristo Mountains, 8,000 feet, and about 10 miles from Taos is a little village called Pot Creek, poppulation 125. Pot Creek is kept busy all year by the large sawmills there. Many of the people have come to Taos from Arkansas. Some have lived here for five years or longer, working in the mills.

Since the population of Taos is 90 percent Spanish (5 percent Indian and 5 percent Anglo), our missions in the Taos area minister to the Spanish people. Your missionary, Sam Horney, was burdened for these Anglo people, and although a missionary to the Spanish, he realized there are "other sheep." These other sheep in this case happen to be the folks from Arkansas. With a staff of five workers, the Bible school was well received, with an enrollment of 70. A goodly number of these yellow, white, and black children received Jesus as their Saviour after hearing the Gospel.

Brethren, pray for your Spanish missionary at Taos as he ministers to these "other sheep."

JENNERS BRETHREN CHURCH DEDICATED

The Jenners Brethren Church, Jenners, Pa., was dedicated on Sunday, September 4, 1955, with Rev. Lester E. Pifer as the dedication speaker. The church building has been finished and furnished in recent months. It was formerly a basement unit only and has been completed under the leadership of Pastor Victor Rogers. Read all about it in the October Home Mission Number.

HOME MISSIONS PAID IN PORTLAND

By Mrs. Verna Polzel

We are truly thankful for the way the Lord has blessed our family since we found the Grace Brethren Church, Portland, Oreg.

I thought I had accepted Jesus as my Saviour before, but the teachings of the Brethren Church really brought out the full meaning of what I believed. Now my children both have Jesus in their hearts, and between the three of us we led my husband to the Lord. He never had any desire to attend church until he saw a good reason for it.

Now we all attend Sunday school and church together. This is really wonderful. It's what I've always wanted. My husband enjoys it as much as I do now, and we are learning much about God's Word.

I am glad I am a Christian because I can associate with Christian people who really are an inspiration to me. They are good people. They are happy people. They are what I need to give me courage, love, and a real reason for living. Because I was associated with the wrong churches which neglected their teachings of the Bible, there was no opportunity for spiritual growth. Through our study of the Book of Revelation we are learning what a wonderful place heaven is and it fills us with joy to know we are going there to be with our Lord forever.

We pray that our faith may be strengthened so that we may be always ready for that day when He comes for us.

It seems like a miracle the way the Lord guided us to this community where there is a Brethren church. He certainly opened the way for us to find the thing we needed.

How our hearts long to be able to tell our families about the Lord. We ask that the way will be opened for us to witness to them.

We pray for all our Brethren churches and for their stand on the truth. We pray for their pastors, teachers, missionaries, and all their leaders. Bless them in their good work.

It thrills me to hear my children say their prayers. It makes me realize that God's plan is so simple that even a young child can understand it and know what he is believing. And yet people make it so difficult for themselves by resisting God's Word and twisting it into an untruth.

It is wonderful to know that God is great beyond all comprehension and yet He cares for insignificant beings such as we and is always there for us to commune with and that He loves us and accepts us as we are.

I like to read and study God's Word because I like to read facts. He uses plain language and has no mysteries or secrets. His plan is all there for everyone to read. Whenever I see proud, boastful people I think of the verse in James 4:6: "God resisteth the proud but giveth grace unto the humble."

By Marion Thomas, Sunday School Superintendent

It was on March 26, 1951, that the first meeting of Brethren people was held in Findlay, Ohio. Meetings were held for several months on Sunday afternoon, with preaching services only. Then on July 1, 1951, a Sunday school was organized and met from 7 to 8 o'clock on Sunday evenings.

On June 15, 1952, the group moved into an old abandoned school building and held morning Bible school at 9:30, preaching at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. How we did praise the Lord for this great step forward.

Then on the second Sunday of December of 1953 we moved into our own new church building. Our attendance was up to around 60 at that time. Since then we have been going forward steadily. Our attendance a week ago was 103 and last Sunday was 107 on that very hot summer day. Our enrollment is now over 180. Our goal is for 150 in Sunday school by fall and for 250 by next Easter, when our spring revival and evangelistic campaign will be held.

Last May 22 our national Sunday-school director, Rev. Harold Etling, held an all-day Bible-school conference in our church. The afternoon meeting was for the call-

ISRAEL CALLS!

BAR MITZVA—WHAT IS IT?

By Bruce L. Button

When a Jewish boy reaches the age of 13 years according to the Jewish calendar he becomes Bar Mitzva, son of, that is, bound by the Law. In other words, it is that period in his life when he becomes responsible for himself spiritually and takes his place in the congregation of Israel as one who has attained religious full age. At this time Jewish mothers and fathers desire to have their son participate in a Bar Mitzva service in the synagogue. Here the young man participates in the religious service of the day, the most important part of this being when he is called upon to pronounce the benediction before the reading of the Sabbath portion; then be the real Baal Kore for the day, reading the portion for that Sabbath. The young man delivers a brief message on the whole section of the Law for the week, together with comments on the prophetic lesson.

Not long ago we had the pleasure of attending the Bar Mitzva service of the young son of one of the Jewish families in the district. I thought it might be interesting to the readers of the Israel Calls section to learn what a Jewish lad would say as he attained his religious standing in the synagogue. Following is the message which this 13-year-old boy brought before an audience of some 200 people:

> Worthy Rabbi, Dear Parents, Grandparents, Relatives and Friends:
> With your permission I wish to deliver a brief talk on today's portion of the Law. In this Torah reading the people worship the golden calf. In the Haftorah, chapter 18, in the Book of Kings, centuries later in the time of King Ahab, the Jews are wavering between God and the Canaanite idol, Baal. Ahab was a generous ruler, but of weak character and dominated by his Phoenician wife, Queen Jezebel. She pursued the Jewish prophets and teachers with great cruelty. It became high treason to proclaim the God of Israel. Against this dark picture the figure of Elijah stands out in all its greatness. He meets and confronts the king and queen and fearlessly pronounces the doom that will follow their treachery to the people and their outrage of justice. On Mount Carmel, though he is alone and defenseless, his personality dominates the multitude at that historic scene. He brings the people back to their faith. They cry out with fervor, "The Lord—He is God."
> This has become Israel's watchword. Elijah the prophet has remained immortal in the annals of Jewish history; the champion of purity of worship of God and of justice to the fellow man.
> A weak-hearted king, a wicked foreign queen, a confused and wavering people—it seemed that the country was nearing disintegration, but a fearless and mighty man of God, Elijah, with his youthful patriotic followers, brought the nation back to their ancient way of life. Likewise in our days we have witnessed the return of many thousands of Jews to the land of Israel, thanks to the heroic efforts of those who kept alive the spark of Jewish living throughout the centuries, the rabbis, the teachers, and the Jewish pioneers.
> I am indeed happy to live in this generation and to enjoy the satisfaction and the pride of belonging to a people that brought to a realization a 2,000-year dream in the face of insurmountable obstacles.
> May Israel become the beacon of light to the world as it had been in the time when the prophets walked this earth. Amen.
> Now I wish to conclude my talk with thanks to my dear father and mother for giving me this opportunity to stand in a synagogue and enjoy the experience of being Bar Mitzva. Thank you for your love and patience. I shall try to be a good son. I wish you all to live in peace and prosperity. Amen.

Certainly this message, even though it is an excellent message for a 13-year-old, could not be called profound. Nor could one detect Messiah or salvation references, even remotely. However, to me there is evidence of a hunger for spiritual truth even in the message of this 13-year-old boy. Be praying that as we deal with his mother and father and grandmother that we shall be able to lead them and him into the knowledge of their own Jesus, Messiah and Saviour, the God of heaven incarnate in human flesh.

ing of more Sunday-school workers into active service for Christ.

On this same Sunday our new Sunday-school bus started its weekly route of picking up children for our rapidly growing Sunday school. We also have junior church for these children now with the Sunday-school superintendent in charge while the pastor brings the Word of God to the adults in the upper auditorium.

Scores of new homes are continually going up in our section of the city. Our superintendent of public schools, for whom I work, said: "It is true that Findlay is now the problem city of Ohio and will likely double in size in the next 10 years." We must therefore greatly increase our efforts to expand in this city. Due to a plentiful water supply here, new factories are coming in and bringing many new families. We must provide the Water of Life for their thirsty souls.

We now have in the southeast section of the city several families of children that we pick up with our new Sunday-school bus, but this is four miles from our church and makes a long drive. There is no church in that great growing area. We must get a branch Sunday school organized there so that before long we can have another Brethren church in that needy field. Pray that the Lord of the harvest will bless in all these activities in the rapidly growing city. The opportunity is great!

DURANT, FLA. (ERA). W. E. Emmanuel, writing in Evangel (Aug. 14), warns that Christians should be careful of their use of adjectives in reporting results of revival campaigns because God counts noses, too (Ps. 87:6)! His observation (in part): "There can be no objection to the use of descriptive adjectives in the proper place. But surely we are would think from the reports over the air, and from the platform, that ordinary preachers do not exist any more. Constantly we hear this evangelist and the other described as 'great,' 'outstanding,' 'brilliant,' 'dynamic,' 'miracle man,' etc. The meetings, too, are 'wonderful,' 'glorious,' 'marvelous,' 'miraculous,' and 'great.' Ordinary meetings where plain preachers preach to ordinary crowds "seem to be nonexistent It is quite probably that some preachers will be in for a rude shock when they compare their list of converts with the Lord's, and find that so few of their sheep made it to Glory."

THE ERRORS OF

Seventh-Day Adventism

Founded on Error

Seventh-Day Adventism had its beginning when a farmer by the name of William Miller, although not versed in the fundamentals of the Scriptures, became enthralled with prophecies of Daniel and Revelation and began to make predictions of things to come. In 1831 he predicted that Christ would return in 1843. Mr. Miller based this prediction on Daniel 8:14 by stating, without Scriptural basis, that the 2,300 days actually meant that number of years until Christ's return to cleanse the sanctuary. Thousands of people sold their property and abandoned their usual occupations to wait for the Lord. When 1843 passed without his prediction being fulfilled, Miller announced that his calculations had been in error, and set the date of October 22, 1844, as the correct time.

When his second date setting attempt failed, William Miller realized his mistake. He, as many others, learned that our Lord's declaration still stands: "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons" (Acts 1:7). Although Miller abandoned his erroneous theory, a young girl of 17, who was to become Mrs. Ellen White, stated that she had received visions and revelations from the Lord which showed Miller's theory to be correct. She said that the only mistake was in considering the sanctuary to be on earth when it was actually in heaven. The heavenly sanctuary, corresponding to the earthly, has a holy place and a holy of holies. Mrs. White stated that until 1844 Christ had been in the holy place of the sanctuary, and at that time He came into the holy of holies. In attempting to defend Miller's original error, Mrs. White compounded error upon error by expounding this sanctuary doctrine with its erroneous conception of the atonement.

Error Concerning Atonement

Seventh-Day Adventists state: "We dissent from the view that atonement was made upon the cross, as is generally held." According to Mrs. White, Christ remained in the holy place of the heavenly sanctuary for 1,800 years after His ascension, pleading for sinners who repented. Not until 1844 did Christ enter the holy of holies to complete the atonement by cleansing the sanctuary from sin. Mrs. White declares in her writings: "All who would have their names retained in the book of life, should now, in the few remaining days of their probation, afflict their souls before God by sorrow for sin and true repentance Now, while our great High Priest is making the atonement for us, we should seek to become perfect in Christ." According to the teachings of Seventh-Day Adventism, the atonement is still being made by Christ and our cooperation and efforts are necessary to ensure its final attainment.

The message of God's Word is that the ransom has been paid and that the Christian has already been redeemed and reconciled to God. Christ "through his own blood entered in once for all into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption" (Heb. 9:12, ASV). One may also compare such Scriptures as II Corinthians 5:18, Romans 5:11, Galatians 3:13, and all other passages which speak of our salvation as an accomplished fact through the sufficient sacrifice of "the lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

Error Concerning the Sabbath

The Seventh-Day Adventist's approach to a Christian is almost always through the Sabbath question. This error is of grave importance, but it must be recognized that there are many others of equal importance —the attempt to reinstitute the Sabbath to bring the Christian back to at least a partial observance of the law. Romans 7:7 is proof that the Ten Commandments are an integral part of the law and the command to observe the Sabbath is one of the 10. The epistle to the Galatians refutes all attempts to bring Christians back under any part of the law. Paul writes: "How turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements, whereunto ye desire again to be in bondage? Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years" (Gal. 4:9-10). To Paul it was inconceivable that the Galatians should turn again to keeping days (the Sabbath) and other ritual of the law.

The first day of the week was observed from the time of our Lord's resurrection as the Lord's Day. This is borne out from the account of the Word itself and from other historical sources. In the Book of Acts, the only account which names a day upon which the Christians gathered for worship states that it was "upon the first day of the week" (Acts 20:7). Wherever the Sabbath is mentioned in the Acts, Christians are using it as a day to testify to Jews in their synagogues, not as their worship day. The great facts upon which the church is founded took place on the first day of the week: our Lord's resurrection, the fellowship of the resurrected Lord with the disciples (John 20), Holy Spirit's descent at Pentecost, and the revelation of Christ and things to come on Patmos to John.

TRAFFIC RULES

FROM

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

By DR. JAMES DeFOREST MURCH
Editor, United Evangelical Action

IT WAS A dangerous intersection. Three cars were involved. Had it not been for the coolheadedness and consideration of one driver there would have been terrible tragedy. That driver was a Christian. Afterward he remarked: "I guess the Lord must have been in the back seat and I took orders."

The fact is that Christians should be the best drivers. Conduct on the highways, as well as everywhere else, is based on character. Character is based on morals. Morals are based on religion. As Goethe once put it: There is no outward sign of true character that does not rest on moral foundation."

The open road offers one of the best opportunities in our day and time for men and women to apply their Christian principles in practical matters. If we will drive like Christians, our highways will be safe and the world will be a better place in which to live.

There are many books of traffic rules, but I have never seen one based on the Word of Life. Of course the Bible was written long before automobiles were thought of. Jehu is the only Bible character who might qualify as a modern traffic hazard. Though thousands of years have passed since this king of Israel drove like mad, we will say of speeders, "He drove like Jehu." But Bible truth and Bible principles have a strange relevance to man's doings regardless of the times in which he lives. Automobile traffic rules are no exception. Someone ought to compile a set of traffic rules from the Book of Books. With this thought in mind I sat down with the Bible the other day and came up with these:

1. TAKE GOD INTO CONSIDERATION.

[God] giveth to all life, and breath, and all things . . . in him we live, and move, and have our being.—Acts 17:25, 28.

In all thy ways acknowledge him, and he shall direct thy paths.—Prov. 3:6.

2. PRAY FOR HELP.

The hand of our God is upon all them for good that seek him.—Ezra 8:22.

Let thine hand help me; for I have chosen thy precepts. Let my soul live, and it shall praise thee; and let thy judgments help me.—Ps. 119: 173, 175.

The fear of the Lord is the instruction of wisdom.—Prov. 15:33.

Pray without ceasing.—I Thess. 5:17.

3. OBEY THE LAW.

Whoso keepeth the law is a wise son.—Prov. 28:7.

Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake.—I Pet. 2:13.

4. STOP, LOOK, AND LISTEN.

The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them . . . wait on the Lord and he shall save thee.—Prov. 20:12, 22.

5. KEEP YOUR MIND ON YOUR BUSINESS.

He that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed A double minded man is unstable in all his ways.—James 1:6, 8.

6. BE RESPONSIBLE.

To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.—James 4:17.

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.—Rom. 15:1.

7. SET A GOOD EXAMPLE.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 5:16.

Let every one of us please his neighbour for his good to edification. —Rom. 15:2.

Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus. —Col. 3:17.

8. LOOK OUT FOR OTHERS.

Let no man seek his own, but each his neighbor's good.—I Cor. 10:24 (ASV).

Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ.—Gal. 6:2.

9. BE COURTEOUS AND KIND.

Be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another . . . be courteous.—I Pet. 3:8.

Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others.—Phil. 2:3-4.

All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them.—Matt. 7:12.

Be ye kind one to another.—Eph. 4:32.

As we therefore have opportunity, let us do good unto all men.—Gal. 6:10.

Have compassion on the ignorant,

REBELLION

IS IT A SIN?

"Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins" (Ps. 19:13).

Yes; rebellion against God is always sin. The very structure of the universe, as well as the nature of man, requires a sovereign ruler to be in command. Since God is such a Sovereign, and since He is both holy and wise, there can be nothing good that lies outside, nor nothing bad that lies inside, of His all-wise providence. The person who knows the will of his Sovereign and presumes to violate that will, not only is guilty of sin, but will have to stand before his Sovereign in judgment.

"If a man should commit treason, and wantonly and wickedly raise the standard of revolt, should renounce the rightful sovereign of this land in the strongest and most abominable language, should seek to entice the loyal subjects of this country from their allegiance, and should draw some of them astray, to the hurt and injury of the common weal, I can suppose that because he has willfully, knowingly, maliciously, and wickedly raised the standard of revolt, he would receive the highest punishment which the law could demand. Because he dared to defy his sovereign, and to defy the law of the land, every one would consent to the justice of his severe punishment" (Spurgeon).

In light of the views held by all enlightened persons on the subject of treason against a sovereign state, who could raise a question against the severity of God's judgment upon all rebels who violate His greater sovereignty?

The Source of Rebellion

"An evil man seeketh only rebellion: therefore a cruel messenger shall be sent against him" (Prov. 17:11).

Rebellion has its source in the hearts of evil men. The hallmark of the race is to say of God, and of His Christ: "We will not have this man to reign over us." All sin is, in some form, rebellion against God. This was true in the Garden of Eden, and it was true eons before, when Lucifer made insurrection in heaven and sought to establish his own sovereignty at the expense of God's sovereignty (see Isa. 14).

The "cruel messenger" sent against the rebel is the executioner of the sovereign's wrath. The moment the rebel "gets away" with his rebellion, the king is no longer sovereign. If man can get away with his rebellion against God, then evil becomes sovereign, God is dethroned, and the entire moral universe is thrown into chaos.

When Adonijah tried to take the kingdom from Solomon, the rightful king, David's great general and trusted servant, Joab, joined the rebellion. Learning too late his mistake, he "fled into the tabernacle of the Lord and caught hold on the horns of the altar." The king, learning of this, immediately sent his servant, Benaiah, to "fall upon" Joab, and then to take him out and bury him. With the death of Joab came also the end of the conspiracy. The rebellion was quelled and the rightful king retained his sovereignty (see I Kings 2:26-31).

The Character of Rebellion

"For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry. Because thou has rejected the word of the Lord, he hath also rejected thee from being king" (I Sam. 15:23). In this moral situation we have a case of "birds of a feather." Saul acknowledged the sin of witchcraft. He was 100 percent against idolatry. But he was guilty of a companion sin—the sin of rebellion. He flatly rejected the word of the Lord. He thought he could disobey God with impunity. He supposed that a sacrifice of the spoils of battle (an afterthought, incidentally) would be as acceptable to God as complete obedience. It was necessary that God should dethrone this rebel in order to retain His own sovereignty and the authority of His Word.

There is no truth more in need of application in the church today—the Brethren Church—than the truth of the finality of the Word of God. We acclaim boldly our "whole Bible" slogan, and then proceed to be a law unto ourselves by rejecting such portions of the Word of God as we may choose. These rejections may be as casual and unheralded as was Saul's, but they are as real and as iniquitous as was the rebellion of this ancient king. Many who would raise the strongest protest against witchcraft and idolatry, practice, without a semblance of shame, friendship with the world, a prayerless and a passionless life, lack of love for the brethren, and a host of other sins in disobedience to God's Word, and then go to church and sing lustily, "Calvary Covers It All."

The Course of Rebellion

"Our fathers . . . refused to obey . . . but hardened their necks, and in their rebellion appointed a captain to return to their bondage" (Neh. 9:16-17).

Isn't that an awful picture? Rebellion against God is always a backward course. No man can reject God's way and devise a better one. Progress is always in the direction of God's supreme will for each life. Bondage is always at the end of the road in the opposite direction. God may feed His own for 40 years in a

"WITH THIS RING I THEE WED"

BY REV. KENNETH B. ASHMAN, WOOSTER, OHIO

Introduction—

When two young people stand before the pastor to be united as husband and wife, they repeat certain vows and pledges. Then the pastor asks: "What token do you give that you will faithfully perform these marriage vows?" The answer, accompanied with the presentation of the wedding band, is, "This ring." Then follows the placing of the ring upon the third finger of the left hand, with the statement of this vow: "With this ring I thee wed, and with all my heart's affections I thee endow. In the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit."

The exchanging of rings on the part of those being married is not a matter for show or sentimentality. This is a pledged testimony of the promised faithfulness, each to the other.

I. THE RING.

1. Mark of Agreement. The ring, through the Bible, has always been a mark of agreement between two parties. See Esther 3:10. In the wedding ceremony it signifies a sacred agreement between the husband and the wife to be.

2. Mark of Love. When the prodigal came home (Luke 15:22) the father demonstrated his faithful love unto the son by putting the family ring back upon his finger. When groom and bride present and receive rings from each other, they are demonstrating their vows of love, each to the other.

3. Mark of Acceptance. The acceptance of a ring from the groom, or the bride, is an act of will on the part of the lover, in which act he declares, I take this one for my life's companion. I desire none other. I will faithfully abide by the solemn vows of this ceremony. It is a lifelong commitment of oneself to another.

II. THE RING SYMBOLIZES.

1. The Triune Godhead. When the groom answers, "This ring," the band of metal takes a brief, but significant, journey. It goes from the groom to the pastor to the bride and back to the groom. This triangular journey symbolizes the triune Godhead, in whose love all earthly loves have their basis and meaning. The triune God is set forth in John 14:16: "I [Christ] will pray the Father [God], and he shall give you another Comforter [Holy Spirit], that he may abide with you forever." Every good gift comes from this Godhead. The joys of marriage are included in these good gifts.

a. The Father is the source of every blessing, the Giver.

b. The Son is the substance of every blessing, the Gift.

c. The Spirit is the servant of every blessing, the Getter.

2. The Complete Union. The ring is a completed circle, a closed band. It is unending. As such it beautifully symbolizes the completeness and the unending nature of the marriage vows. "Till death do us part" is a sacred covenant, not to be broken apart from the will of God. When men and women accept wedding rings from each other, they are assuming large responsibilities and committing themselves to a lifelong relationship. This is serious and should be fully considered before standing before the pastor to do so.

Conclusion—

There be some who frown upon the wearing of any type of wedding band, declaring such to have a heathen origin and worldly appeal. Of course, this could be said concerning many things we use for sacred symbolism. However, we feel that Christians may readily wear these bands. They must, however, wear them for the significant purposes presented above. These are not to be ornaments or matters of vain display. These are sacred tokens of sacred loves.

The ring is the symbol of love. Love, someone has said, is God's gift to understanding hearts. It is love that enlightens the soul of man, lifts the burden, smooths the path of life and causes minds to be blended into perfect unity. This is symbolized by the ring, an unbroken circle.

Like a plant, love demands care. Love must be nourished, guarded, and protected. Nothing must be permitted to stunt or hinder its growth and development. The vows taken at the altar must continue in every plan of life and as love was manifested through flowers, candy, words of love before the marriage vows, so they should continue after the wedding ceremony is over.

A PRAYER FOR TRUE LOVERS

We ask Thee, God of Love, to guard
These lovers on their way;
Be pleased to hear the harmony
They sing at break of day.
Their love is a beatitude
By God made strong and pure;
Beneath Thy benediction make it
Deathless and secure.
No disenchantment of the year
Shall quench its glowing light;
No tyranny of cheaper joy
Shall cancel love's birthright.
God grant them patience for the growth
Or dreams love shall fulfill
And tenderness through clouded days
If these are in Thy will.
For all the joys of new-born love
We thank Thee, and we pray
That guardian angels now may guide
These lovers on their way.

CONTEST WINNERS ANNOUNCED

The first Brethren Sunday School Contest came to a climax Wednesday night, August 10, when winners in each division were announced. Interest and enthusiasm rose high as pastors and superintendents of these churches were brought to the large platform of Jennings Lodge Auditorium and one by one received the beautiful plaques indicating that they had won divisional contests.

The crowd broke into enthusiastic applause as Pastor Inman and Mr. West, Sunday-school superintendent of Denver, Colo., Grace Brethren Church were called to the platform to receive the large trophy indicating that Denver had won first place for all divisions in this first contest. Divisional winners were: Division A, North Long Beach; Division B, Ashland, Ohio; Division C, Canton, Ohio; Division D, Norwalk, Calif.; Division E, Washington Heights, Roanoke, Va.; and Division F, Denver, Colo. Englewood, Ohio, was announced as winner of the Sunday schools newly formed. While no representative was present at the convention from Englewood, a plaque will be sent directly to the church.

These seven winners alone showed an average increase of 614 persons per Sunday, which we feel is in itself well worth every bit of effort put forth. We are sure that the pastors and superintendents of each of these churches would say, "Amen." It meant 614 opportunities were given to teachers and pastors to present the good news of the Gospel. These 614 persons, if gathered together in one Sunday school, would be a Sunday school larger than all but two of the present Sunday schools in our Brethren churches. We praise the Lord for every victory won!

NEW CONTEST IS ANNOUNCED

With the close of the first contest the announcement was made concerning the second. Letters have already gone into the mail asking the wholehearted cooperation and support of every Sunday school in the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. The new contest will be based upon average attendances for each Sunday on an over-all picture of the average attendance from July 1, 1954, to June 30, 1955. The divisions will be as follows: Division A, Sunday schools with average attendance of 400 and over; Division B, 300 to 399; Division C, 200 to 299; Division D, 150 to 199; Division E, 100 to 149; Division F, 50 to 99; Division G, 1 to 49; Division N, new Sunday schools.

A monthly banner will be presented to the church in each division which shows the greatest average percentage of increase for its division. The reports to be included must be postmarked not later than the Tuesday following the close of the last Sunday of the month. If the report is late, they cannot be considered for the monthly award. To be included for the annual award the church shall report each month regularly. Any church may be continued in the annual contest if they report each month with the exception of any one month; however, if no report comes that one month it will be considered zero and the average, of course will be brought down by that failure. A maximum of two late reports will be permitted in the inclusion of the yearly awards.

So it behooves every pastor and Sunday-school superintendent to see that his school is reported on time every month. The contest will begin with the first Sunday in October and run through the last Sunday of June. July, August, and September will be used to catch up and make plans for the new contest each year. Every Brethren Sunday-school member ought to be anxious to see that his Sunday school wins the 1956 awards. "60,000 by 1960" is our goal!

"THE WHOLE FAMILY FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL AND SUNDAY SCHOOL FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY"

With the beginning of a new Sunday-school year your National Sunday School Board, in an attempt to reach 60,000 by 1960 through our Sunday schools, is planning its 1955-56 program around the theme, "The Whole Family for Sunday School and Sunday School for the Whole Family." Emphasis will be laid upon cradle roll, extension department, men's Bible classes and, of course, family life. There is an old Sunday-school song which says: "You win the one next to you, and I'll win the one next to me; in no time at all we'll have them all, so win them one by one." We should like to modernize it just a little bit and say it like this: "You win the family next to you and I'll win the family next to me," and in short order we will reach 60,000 by 1960. But not only will we win them, we will conserve those that we win, for it is still true that if we can get dads and mothers coming to our Sunday schools we will not be losing our young people. Watch your Sunday School Promoter and the pages of the Herald for detailed plans on this program.

in a state of "silence, inactivity, and entire unconsciousness." This error is definitely refuted by such passages as Philippians 1:23-24, II Corinthians 5:6-8, and Luke 16:19-31.

Another erroneous doctrine is the belief in the annihilation of the wicked. But despite their attempts to make words mean other than what they actually say, the words of our Lord in such passages as Matthew 13:41-42; 25:46; Mark 3:29; 9:47-48 stand as a warning to flee the wrath of God against sin and unreconciled sinners which shall not be satisfied throughout eternity.

Mrs. White, in order to have proof for her theories (which certainly cannot be found in the Bible), claimed inspiration for all her own writings and visions. Like others who have made such claims, she had to revise and correct her "inspired" writings. These writings are the foundation upon which Seventh-Day Adventism was built. How much better to trust in the sure Word of God which has stood the test of time. The Bible does not say that there will be new revelations from God in the last days, but many are the warnings to beware of false teachers who will depart from the faith.

Some Seventh-Day Adventists will say that they no longer accept all the erroneous teachings of Mrs. White. Let us pray that this emergence from error may be completed by their return to the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints."

REBELLION—IS IT A SIN?

wilderness on manna from heaven and water from a rock, but He will bring them in His own time into victory in the Land of Promise. Why pay the price of rebellion—bondage?

The Cure for Rebellion

"Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee. For I know thy rebellion, and thy stiff neck: behold, while I am yet alive with you this day, ye have been rebellious against the Lord; and how much more after my death?" (Deut. 31:26-27).

The Word of God reveals the will of God. This word believed and obeyed is the only cure for rebellion. It must be to every believer "a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."

God's sovereignty in the ecumenical church is being seriously challenged today by the wanton and reckless manner in which the liberals abandon the Bible as the inerrant Word of God. Likewise His sovereignty is challenged by those who hold the orthodox view of Christian faith, but who "spot check" the Bible for what they want to accept and follow, but recklessly disregard the rest. Thus there are rebels within the visible church. There are fifth-columnists within the sphere of Christian profession. Rebellion is sin, and all sin will be judged by the sinless and "only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords."

A Little Fellow Follows Me

A careful man I ought to be;
A little fellow follows me.
I do not dare to go astray
For fear he'll go the self-same way.

Not once can I escape his eyes;
Whate'er he sees me do he tries.
Like me he says he's going to be—
That little chap who follows me.

He thinks that I am good and fine,
Believes in every word of mine;
The base in me he must not see,
That little chap who follows me.

I must remember as I go
Thru summer sun and winter snow;
I'm building for the years to be
That little chap who follows me.

When I look back upon life's way
What joy 'twill be if I can say,
I've led him in the path I've trod,
A way that leads to heaven and God.

and on them that are out of the way; for that [ye yourselves] also [are] compassed with infirmity.—Heb. 5:2.

10. PUT LOVE INTO ACTION.

Let us not love in word, neither in tongue; but in deed and in truth.—I John 3:18.

Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.—Matt. 19:19.

Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works.—Heb. 10:24.

Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you.—Matt. 5:44.

11. SHUN STRONG DRINK.

Who hath woe? who hath sorrow? . . . who hath wounds without cause? They that tarry long at the wine Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.—Prov. 23:29-32.

The Lord will not spare him [the drunkard], but then the anger of the Lord and his jealousy shall smoke against that man, and all the curses that are written in this book shall lie upon him, and the Lord shall blot out his name from under heaven.—Deut. 29:20.

12. THOU SHALT NOT KILL.

Thou shalt not kill.—Exod. 20:13.

Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man.—Gen. 9:6.

These . . . things doth the Lord hate: . . . a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood.—Prov. 6:16-17.

What? No God?

Because of their belief, faith, and trust in God, our forefathers braved the perils of the sea and the unknown world to establish a new nation of freedom and worship. Now we are blessed to enjoy that freedom. We must therefore recognize the reality of God. The United States of America is a wonderful nation—in fact, the greatest nation on earth, for it was founded on faith in God. How fortunate we are to have a President that believes in prayer so much that he offers a prayer of his very own at his inaugural address, and still asks God's help to guide the affairs of our government.

We also note that the Congress of the U. S. has its chaplain, also our armed forces. Why? Because our nation as a nation believes in God.

This is the fundamental difference between the United States of America and communistic nations. Communism cannot exist where people believe in God, for it denies God, ridicules His Holy Word, and the freedom it gives. Therefore we are forced to admit that the denunciation of God is the foundation on which communism is built. This does not infer that all who do not believe in God are Communists, for there were those who did not believe in God long before communism existed. But it is true that no Communist believes there is a God.

Now I believe, because of the great faith and trust in God of the great majority of the people of the United States and by their prayers, God has not allowed a blow to be struck on the mainland of our nation. But should we slip and forget God, His goodness and blessings, I am convinced God will do as He did with the rebelling Jews, and we may expect an invasion of some kind. But rest assured, God will preserve us if we will but honor, love, and obey Him.

If this beautiful nation will wholly accept God and follow Him, we never need fear communism, for where God is, communism dies.

May we fervently, reverently worship God and enjoy His wonderful divine joy and protection.

Grace College Grows

September 6 was registration day at Grace College, and on the next day classes were immediately under way. The first week, however, was not all one of work for the college students. Each evening brought some new program for the new students in particular. Friday was initiation day for the freshmen and was brought to a climax in an evening of fun in which students and faculty both took part. At the end of the first week 59 new students had enrolled in the college division of the school. These, together with the 73 returning students, brought the total enrollment in the college division to 132. Three more were scheduled to enter late. One hundred nine students were registered in the college last year. Thus, Grace College's enrollment has again increased. This is an occasion for praise to the Lord.

Brethren Students in Grace College

Of the 59 new students in Grace College all but 15 have come from Brethren churches. A glance at the records reveals that these new students come from churches scattered almost from coast to coast. From Pennsylvania, the Waynesboro, Harrisburg, Martinsburg, Leamersville, Johnstown (Riverside), Kittanning, and North Buffalo churches are represented. Hagerstown, Md., and Martinsburg, W. Va., each have contributed a new student. From Ohio, Canton, Akron, Wooster, Mansfield First, Mansfield Second, Covington, and Clayton, one or more have entered. The Alto, Lake Odessa, and New Troy churches in Michigan have each sent students. Indiana is represented by Fort Wayne, Winona Lake, and Osceola. Waterloo, Iowa, has two new students. One has come from Portis, Kans., this year. From California new enrollees have come from Beaumont, Temple City, Long Beach, Inglewood, and Glendale. Our mission in Argentina, South America, now has a student. Non-Brethren new students come from such widely separated places as Sunbury, Erie, and Greensburg, Pa., Greenville, Ohio, Three Rivers, Mich., Griffith and Winona Lake, Ind., and Anchorage, Alaska.

Worthy of Special Mention

"Honor to whom honor is due!" One Brethren church certainly deserves special mention for its support of Grace College through the sending of students. That church is our Harrisburg, Pa., congregation, of which Rev. Conard Sandy is pastor. Brother Sandy was formerly a member of the Grace Seminary faculty. We deeply appreciate his confidence and that of his church in sending six new students to the college division this year. The Harrisburg church is also represented in the seminary by one student.

Grace Seminary Registration

As the material for the Educational Number of the Herald goes to the printer (Monday, September 12), the new and returning students are registering at Grace Seminary. The latest statistics that can now be given show that 40 new students and 84 returning students registered on the first day of school, making a total of 124 in the seminary division. A more complete record of enrollment will appear in the October Educational Number of the Herald.

As the School Grows

As Grace Seminary and College grows, certain needs also grow. The students need an interest in your prayers. They face new tests and major decisions spiritually. They are confronted with a new challenge intellectually. Many will experience real testing financially. Pray for them regulary.

The faculty needs an interest in your prayers. The responsibility under God for directing the work of the school, training and molding spiritually the lives of nearly 300 students, is tremendous. Pray for the faculty regularly.

The financial program needs an interest in your prayers. The offerings for the month of August amounted to $2,506.22, the lowest in many months. This is far short of $6,000, the average amount needed in the general fund to operate the school. Please remember that the responsibility for the youth of our church is not that of Grace Seminary and College alone. It is OUR responsibility! Ask God to give us many regular contributors through the Monthly Finance Plan. Will you join in praying regularly for the financial needs of the school?

Your editor desires this month to pass along to you one of the many beautiful scenes it was his privilege to witness on his recent trip to Alaska as a guest of the United States Department of Defense. A report of the two retreats for chaplains is given elsewhere in this magazine. The cover picture of Cook's Inlet and surrounding mountains was provided by the U. S. Air Force. This was just one of the gorgeous scenes which it was your editor's privilege to witness. The presence, however, of thousands of men under arms amidst such mountain grandeur was a sad reminder of the fact that we live in a world "where every prospect pleases, and only man is vile."

The Marriage of the King

AN EXPOSITION OF PSALM FORTY-FIVE

BY PROF. HOMER A. KENT, JR.

A few years ago the wedding of a famous couple took place in a land across the sea. One million people thronged the route of the procession. Three thousand guests witnessed the ceremony. Five kings and six queens were among those at the royal breakfast. The official wedding cake stood six feet three inches high and weighed 600 pounds. Princess Elizabeth of England and Lt. Philip Mountbatten, Duke of Edinburgh, were being married.

A wedding always calls forth expressions of praise and best wishes for the future, especially the marriage of a king. Psalm 45 has as its historical setting just such an occasion. The king is being married, and the psalmist produces an ode for this joyous occasion.

Who was this mighty monarch whose memory is preserved today within these pages of Scripture? Was it Solomon, whose court was a scene of splendor and luxury like that described in the psalm? Some have suggested the names of Arab, who had an ivory palace and married a foreign princess, or Jehoram and his marriage with Athaliah, or Jeroboam II. But the most likely answer is Solomon, the glory of whose reign attracted the attention and imagination of many psalm writers. Though it may be objected that Solomon was a man of peace, and not a martial hero as the psalm indicates, yet it must be remembered that this ode gives expression to expectations for the future, and heroic deeds are always associated in poetry with great kings.

But as we read this poetry we find certain portions which cannot be limited to any earthly king—to Solomon or any other. One of the reasons for the failure of attempts at identification is that the language is too wide for the best of Jewish kings. The psalm has its roots in a historical situation, but it obviously goes beyond it. The Messianic nature of this psalm is definitely settled by the writer of Hebrews in chapter 1, verses 8 and 9. Here he quotes a passage from our psalm and relates it to the eternal Son of God.

THE FRESHMAN CLASS

Grace College freshmen pose for camera in the chapel.

Psalm 45 is one of a group of psalms which are indirectly Messianic. The reason is this: God's people had been promised a redeemer. They knew their redeemer would also be their king. Ever since the time of David, the Jewish hopes for their Messiah were centered upon the royal line. Every king was a potential Messiah. Consequently, the poems and the songs which reflected the thoughts and hopes of a nation expressed their longings for the Messiah who might possibly be the king who then occupied the throne. But as time went on, it became evident that the ruler fell far short of the hopes of his people. So the predictions of what the coming redeemer and Messiah would do went unfulfilled. Rather, they became a prophecy of what would take place when God would send his Redeemer. It remained for Christ to come that the promises of the Messiah should find fulfillment.

With these ideas in mind we shall approach this passage, not forgetting its historical occasion, but ever mindful that the language refers to the Great Messiah. Psalm 45 means more to us today than it did to its writer, for we are the possessors of a completed revelation in God's Word. The psalmist considers in this song the King Himself (1-4), the King and His Kingdom (5-8), the King and His Bride (9-15), and the King and His Family (16-17).

I. THE KING HIMSELF (1-4).

He is described as fair in appearance, gracious in speech, blessed of God, and mighty in deeds. Though all these traits may have been present to some extent in the historical king, each one appeared most signally in Jesus Christ. Even though Christ's glory was largely veiled during his earthly ministry (compare the description of the Suffering Servant of Isaiah 53), at times it was allowed to burst forth. At the Mount of Transfiguration "his face did shine as the sun and his garments became white as the light." The graciousness of Christ's speech was recognized by all, from the children and the common people, who heard him gladly, to the temple officers who came to arrest him (John 7:46). The approval of God rested upon Jesus as upon no one else, for the heavens opened to express that approval. Many of the mighty deeds of Christ will yet be seen as He assumes His kingdom and rules the nations with a rod of iron (Ps. 2:9).

II. THE KING AND HIS KINGDOM (5-8).

The kingdom which is the possession of Messiah is described a victorious, everlasting, righteous, and prosperous. When Christ comes again, He will establish His kingdom on the earth and will crush other human governments (cf. Dan. 2:44). And it will last forever. The 1,000 years of special rule are just the opening phase.

It will be a righteous kingdom. There will be no need of investigations within the government, for there will be no scandals there. Inscribed over the portals of the United States Supreme Court are the words, "Equal Justice Under Law." What a noble ideal! Yet how often we fall short. But Christ will rule with a righteous scepter. Small wonder that prosperity will occur in such a kingdom.

III. THE KING AND HIS BRIDE (9-15).

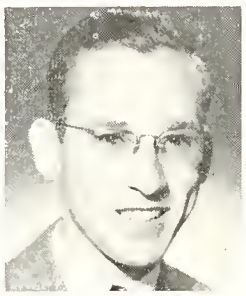
Her position is indicated at the right hand of the king, the place of highest honor. Who is Messiah's bride? The New Testament reveals her to be the church, the spiritual body of true Christian believers (Rev. 21:9; Eph. 5:23-27; Rev. 19:7). We who have responded in faith to Christ's love for us belong to the bride. Her position of honor is our position, and at His coming shall be entered into completely.

Being the king's bride brings responsibility. Here it is twofold. She is told to forget the past and to worship the King who is her Lord. The Christian has this responsibility. He is to cast off the shackles of the old life and give all his allegiance to Christ. Though the relationship of Christ and the believer is one of infinite love, the believer must never forget that Christ is his Lord and expects worship.

The glory of the bride is then sketched. She presents a magnificent appearance in her glorious garments. Christ has provided garments for His bride. Revelation 19:8 speaks of the Lamb's wife that "to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."

IV. THE KING AND HIS FAMILY (16-17).

Historically, these verses probably meant that though Solomon could not boast of a long line of kingly ancestors (only one, his father David), he would be famous instead for his distinguished descendants. The Messianic interpretation is veiled, but I believe it is there. We are given a hint of the spiritual descendants of Messiah in Isaiah 53:11, where we read of the "travail of his soul." Hebrews 2:10 tells of his "bringing many sons into glory." These spiritual descendants of Messiah, who owe their spiritual birth to His death at Calvary, are called "kings and priests and they shall reign upon the earth" (Rev. 5:10).



Are you living as becomes a child of the King? The story is told that during the awful days of the French Revolution, the royal family fell into the murderous hands of the revolutionists. Execution was prescribed for all except the little prince, the Dauphin, who was heir to the throne. Rather than end his life with his parents at the guillotine, his captors decided upon a plan far worse than death. They plotted to degrade him, to defile him with sin, to erase forever the traces of royalty from his innocent, youthful soul. And so they sought in the underworld of Paris for the wickedest woman they could find, and gave the little Dauphin to her to train. They took away his fine clothes and dressed him in rags. They planned to corrupt his cultured speech and courtly manners by subjecting his ears to the vilest language of the street. They placed before him food unfit for dogs and demanded that he eat it. But the little Dauphin would close his eyes and cry: "No, no; I won't touch those filthy things, for I was born to be a king!"

By faith in Jesus Christ we are born with royal blood. May we always live as children of the King.

HERE AND THERE WITH THE FACULTY

New Staff Member at Grace

Grace College is pleased to announce that in addition to other staff members added to the teaching personnel for the 1955-56 school year, J. Worl Stuber, of Peru, Ind., has also been added. Mr. Stuber is a lifelong resident of Peru and a member of the Brethren church of that city, where his parents have been members through the years.

J. W. Stuber

Mr. Stuber took his undergraduate work at Wheaton College, graduating with the A. B. degree in 1949. In 1950 the M. A. degree in the field of Philosophy was received from Northwestern University, after which he returned to Wheaton College, where he served two years on the staff, teaching Bible Doctrine and Philosophy, and at the same time taking graduate work in the field of Theology.

Residence work for the Ph.D. degree in Philosophy at Edinburgh, Scotland, has been completed and the doctor's dissertation is in process for the degree which will be conferred in December. He also took graduate work in Theology while in Edinburgh, but now returns to his own denominational seminary where he will complete requirements for the Bachelor of Divinity degree, at the same time serving as instructor in Philosophy at Grace College.

His scholastic record bespeaks his competency and efficiency as a teacher, and his Christian testimony more than qualifies him for a place on the staff of the college and a warm welcome into the college and seminary family.

Faculty Attends School

Three members of the Grace Seminary and College faculty once more became students during the summer and spent a portion of the vacation period at work on advanced degrees.

Mrs. Ben Hamilton attended two semesters of the summer session at Manchester College. She completed two courses designed for teaching in our department of education. The one was a course in Library Reference, and the other a course in Children's Literature. Work of this kind makes possible the constant enlargement and improvement in the teachers' training courses.

Prof. Jesse Humberd was enrolled at the summer session in Ohio State University, where he began work toward a doctor's degree in Mathematics-Education. This, too, is a part of the plan to strengthen the course-work offered at Grace in the field of education, now approved by the State of Indiana.

Prof. Herbert Bess, of the seminary's Hebrew and Old Testament department, attended the University of Michigan's summer session, where he is continuing his work toward the Ph.D. in the field of Near Eastern Studies. His training in this field will not only add to the quality of the regular seminary course of study, but it will also make further study available to men who desire to continue at Grace for more advanced degrees.

An Alaskan Retreat

By Paul R. Bauman, Vice President

Several months ago an invitation came to me from the Chief of Air Force Chaplains in Washington, D. C., Maj. Gen. Charles I. Carpenter, to participate in two Spiritual Life Retreats which would include all the Protestant chaplains in Alaska. The retreats, sponsored by the Chaplain Board of the Department of Defense, were conducted over two three-day intervals between the dates of August 16-25 at Anchorage and Fairbanks, with further opportunities for service at chapels, churches, missions, and schools during the remaining days. Dr. Joseph M. Ewing, minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Barbara, Calif., shared the time with me as the other Retreat Master. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Tunis S. Cordell, Deputy Chaplain of the Alaska Air Command, was designated project officer and escorted us on our tour of the military installations. Never in all my travels have I been more graciously received or more hospitably treated.

The first of the retreats was held August 16-18 at Moose Run Lodge in the Anchorage area, and was attended for the most part by chaplains stations or working out from Elmendorf Air Force Base or Camp Richardson. The second group met at a mountain lodge in the Fairbanks area and was composed of men who are stationed nearer to the Ladd and Eilson Air Force Bases or Big Delta Army Camp. Every Protestant chaplain in Alaska (about 40 in all) attended one or the other of the group meetings.

The retreats were conducted for the purpose of providing the chaplains with fellowship, spiritual refreshment, challenge, and inspiration. Some of these men are assigned to isolated areas in the far north and seldom have an opportunity to attend a service which they do not conduct themselves. Complete freedom in the choice of material was given to the retreat masters, and such a choice is not easy when one realizes that such a group of chaplains represents a number of denominations and all shades of opinion theologically. After prayerful consideration I decided to offer the men an illustrated message dealing with archaeology and fulfilled prophecy as an evidence of the divine inspiration of the Bible. I was prepared to use another series of studies if it did not prove wise to present the natural-color pictures of Bible lands.

However, the response to the first lecture was so very enthusiastic that I felt led to continue the series and devoted most of the retreat sessions at both places to these studies. That the men were greatly interested was evidenced by the many questions they asked at periods devoted to discussion and in the conversations I was privileged to have with them between sessions. Many had never seen or heard anything like it before, and several asked where they could secure books on the subject. It was a wonderful opportunity to give an answer to every man that asked a reason concerning the hope that was mine (see II Peter 3:15). Dr. Ewing, my associate, gave a very profitable series of studies on the church. I commend this subject to every pastor in these days when men and women are so quick to criticize, ridicule, and almost literally wipe their feet on the church. We need to remember that Jesus said: "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18). We are also told that "Christ also loved the church and gave himself for it" (Eph. 5:25). He is therefore very jealous for the church. It is the instrument through which He carries on His work in the world. How we do need to keep this truth in mind!

In both areas it was my privilege to meet the generals in command of the armed forces. I ate with them, talked with them, and listened carefully as they spoke at the fellowship dinners which were arranged for the chaplains and their wives. In every case they appeared to sense a great need among the men in the service—a need for spiritual counsel and help. They also seem to realize that if the spiritual forces of America fail our nation is doomed—it will never be saved by the power of armed might! These men and the chaplains working with them need a greater share of our interest and prayers. Many of us complain about the sad spiritual conditions of our country and its leaders, but how many of us are faithful in obeying such commands as those given in I Timothy 2:1-2?

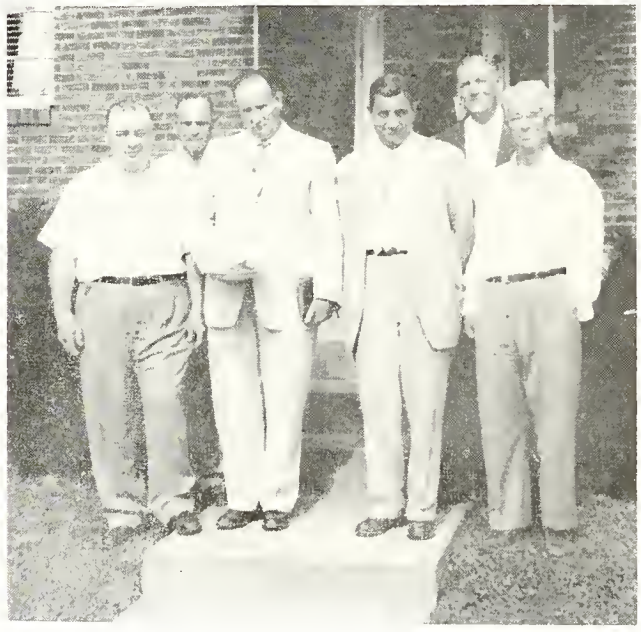
There were other opportunities for service during the period of our stay in Alaska. On Sunday, August 21, I spoke at the double services held in the beautiful new Fort Richardson chapel. The two identical services had a combined attendance of about 1,000 servicemen and families. I was grateful for this opportunity to present the Gospel. That evening I spoke at the Church of the Open Door in Anchorage, where a former student of mine, Rev. John M. Gillespie, is pastor. Also, there was another happy surprise waiting for me at Anchorage when I found two more former students of mine, Chaplain (Lt.) and Mrs. John Charlton, at the Elmendorf Air Force Base.

Few people realize the tremendous growth in population Alaska has seen during the past few years. For example, 20 years ago the population of Anchorage was about 2,000; today the city itself has a population of 55,000. The army and air force personnel and their families number an additional 45,000, giving the greater Anchorage area a total population of about 100,000 people. It is a typical frontier city where vice and sin of all kinds run rampant. Where there are about 40 churches in the city, few of them are really preaching the Gospel, and such heresies as extreme pentecostalism, Jehovah's Witnesses, etc., flourish.



Portage Glacier, near Seward, Alaska.

Farther north, Fairbanks is known as the "Golden Heart of Alaska." This is truly a descriptive term for this modern bustling city in the heart of Alaska's great gold-mining region, and near the geographic center of the territory. Its population, apart from the military installations, is about 30,000. The city, like Anchorage, is desperately in need of more thoroughgoing gospel testimony.

For some months our government has seriously been considering the advisability of making Alaska the 49th State. As our church expands its borders, is it time to consider if the moment has arrived for the beginning of a Brethren testimony in Alaska? It is worth thinking and praying about. Perhaps the Lord will lay that field upon the heart of some young man who is willing to be a real pioneer for Christ.

MORTGAGE-BURNING AT KITTANNING

Another milestone was reached by the First Brethren Church of Kittanning, Pa., on July 31 when a happy group of people gathered at an afternoon service to rejoice over the completion of another project. The final payment had been made on the parsonage adjoining the church building. During the service, Pastor Schaffer and the church trustees joined in the mortgage-burning ceremony. In the accompanying picture, taken on the parsonage steps, are (left to right) Milton Yount, Chauncey Hooks, Theodore Kerr (holding ashes of mortgage), Charles Moyer, Pastor William Schaffer, and Doyle Shick.

Plans are now under way for a new Sunday-school addition to the Kittanning church. The new unit will join the present structure at the rear and will add much-needed space to their growing Sunday school.—Paul R. Bauman.

THE GENESIS FLOOD

By John W. Whitcomb, Jr.
Associate Professor in Old Testament

(PART II)

In the first article of this series (which will appear once a month in the Educational Number of the Herald), we saw that some Christians, due to the objections raised by geologists and anthropologists, have attempted to explain the Genesis Flood account phenomenally. That is to say, they would make the Flood to be only as extensive as Noah's knowledge and vision.

The Rule of Context

In support of this interpretation, an appeal is made to the fact that the words "all," "whole," and "every" ("all the high mountains that were under the whole heaven were covered" and "every living thing was destroyed—(Gen. 7:19, 23) must be understood in the light of their context. For example, we find this statement in Genesis 41:57: "And all countries came unto Egypt to Joseph to buy grain, because the famine was sore in all the earth." Now since no one would think of interpreting the phrase "all countries" to include North and South America, so no one need interpret "all the high mountains" in Genesis 7 to include those of North and South America!

In reply to this type of argument, we would like to say two things: (1) The context of Genesis 6-9 is entirely different from the context of Genesis 41. The first 11 chapters of Genesis deal with universal history, while chapters 12-50 narrow down our attention to the family of Abraham and to those people with whom they had immediate contact. (2) The physical situation in Genesis 6-9 is entirely different from that of Genesis 41. For while it would be entirely possible for a seven-year famine to be in the Near East and not in South America, it would not be possible for flood waters to cover the high mountains of the Near East for six months and leave South America untouched! So we will agree that the words "all" and "every" must be understood in the light of their context; but so far from disproving the universality of the Flood, this rule helps to establish it!

The Destruction of Mankind

There are only a very few evangelical scholars who would be so bold as to say that the Flood affected only a portion of the human race. Since the Bible is quite emphatic in teaching the unity of the race (Acts 17:26; Rom. 5:12; I Cor. 15:22), and since the principal purpose of the Flood was to wipe out a totally corrupted race (Gen. 6:5-8) in order to make a new beginning with Noah, it is inconceivable that such a purpose could have been accomplished if people living in other parts of the world escaped these waters of judgment.

But this consideration poses a tremendous problem for those who, while admitting that the Flood must have destroyed the entire race outside of the Ark, nevertheless insist that the Flood was limited to the Near East! For it is rather difficult to imagine the human race as being confined still to the Near East after an absolute minimum of 1,600 years of migration and multiplication; to say nothing of the popular notion (in some evangelical circles) that mankind is of vast antiquity, with skulls and skeletons from Java and China that date back "several hundred thousand years" ("Modern Science and Christian Faith," 2d ed., Van Kampen Press, 1950, p. 183).

God's command to Adam and his descendants is recorded in Genesis 1:28: "Be fruitful and multiply, and fill the earth"; and even after the Fall, longevity and large families seemed to be the distinctive characteristic of the antediluvian world (Gen. 4 and 5). This being the case, the Flood would of necessity have had to reach far beyond the confines of the Near East in order to accomplish its God-appointed task of annihilating humanity. There are some, however, who, not yet willing to give up the local Flood theory, suggest that God brought everyone back to the Near East in order to be destroyed by this local Flood! The reader must decide for himself whether such reasoning does justice to the Genesis account or to the demands of simple logic.

The Importance of the Flood

If we may judge the importance of an event in the Bible by the number of times it is mentioned or referred to, the Flood must have been tremendously important. In the early chapters of Genesis, more attention is given to the Flood than to the Creation and the Fall. Outside of Genesis, Noah and the Flood are spoken of in Isaiah 54:9; Ezekiel 14:14, 20; Matthew 24:37-39; Luke 17:26-27; Hebrews 11:7; I Peter 3:20; II Peter 2:5; 3:4-7; by Old Testament prophets, by New Testament apostles, and by our Lord himself! It shall be our purpose, in next month's article, to consider the problem of the magnitude of the Flood in the light of the New Testament.

STUDENT PASTORS' FELLOWSHIP

"Lunch and learn" are the words which characterize the fellowship for student pastors which meets once each week at the noon lunch hour. Here a sizable group of young pastors meet to discuss the problems which characterize pastoral work, many of which are new to them and some of which cannot be anticipated in any classroom. It is a profitable laboratory of experience for the men who sometimes in a matter of months will be thrust forth into the harvest fields.

POLIO STRIKES INTO THREE GRACE FAMILIES

In various parts of the country during the past several weeks the dreaded disease of polio has struck seven times. Three families of students or recent graduates have been affected. The earnest prayers of God's people are requested for all of these.

The most severely affected is Rev. Arthur E. Gordon, who was stricken with three of his children. Brother Gordon graduated from Grace Seminary in 1954. He served as pastor of the Salem Community Church, near Wilmot, Ind., during student days and until July 4, when the family moved to Williamsburg, Ohio, near Cincinnati, where he was called as pastor of a Baptist church. A portion of a letter written by Mrs. Gordon describes the condition of Brother Gordon and the three children:

Rev. Arthur Gordon

"On Monday night (August 15) we brought Jackie, 6, and Joyce, 2, to the hospital with polio. Jack has bulbar type and was in critical condition. He's still in the hospital but a little better. He still doesn't talk too plainly, nor swallow much. Just little sips of liquids are all he takes. He is fed through a tube in the nose now; intravenously for quite awhile at first. He has trouble with the back of his neck and can't sit up yet. Also his legs and arms are stiff in the joints.

"Joyce had the upper spinal type which left her left upper arm and shoulder weak. She is much better now and is in the Children's Convalescent Home here in the city (Cincinnati, Ohio).

"On the Sunday (August 21) following their coming to the General Hospital, we brought Arthur in. That evening he had to go into an iron lung. His breathing is very bad. They are trying to take him out a little bit, but the doctor says he hopes he will be out in two or three more weeks. That will make five weeks in the iron lung. Both arms and both legs are paralyzed. He aches so badly he can hardly lie there, yet he is completely helpless. It is so hard to see him in such a condition.

"At the same time Arthur took sick, Jimmy, 3½, was sick, too, but didn't get bad like the others. He has a little defect in walking. I had him examined and there is definitely a muscle weakness and the doctor says he had a light case. He may require treatments yet; we are not sure.

"We can't understand why all this has happened, but believe the Lord has some purpose in it. The trials are so great. We need your prayers so much right now. Also pray for the church work."

A letter written from Needham Heights, Mass., by Darwin Jones, tells something of his recent experience with polio. Darwin is a member of the First Brethren Church of Johnstown, Pa., and completed his first year of work in the seminary last May. In a letter written September 6 he says:

Darwin Jones

"The Lord has decided to lay me on the shelf awhile. I contracted polio August 15th and just got out of the hospital Saturday. My left leg is paralyzed, and I have a lot of weakness in my right one. The doctor says I won't walk normally for a year to a year and a half. Within three months I can use crutches, however. This means I will have to miss this year of school. Our God knows best, although we don't understand it at times My sister also has polio, although it is a mild case, praise the Lord! She is in Johnstown in the hospital You and the school will constantly be in my prayers."

In a third family, Ronald Jutton, son of Colin Jutton, seminary middler, was affected, but his case was a mild one and he is suffering few ill effects from the disease. Let us praise God for answered prayer in his case and pray for the complete restoration of those more seriously affected.

THE STUDENT COUNCIL

Last year, when school spirits were high, the student treasury was low. But Nathan Meyer, Student Council president, had an idea. He called together his 13-member council, composed of representatives from the combined student bodies of the college and seminary, and unburdened his heart. He proposed that the student body investigate their pockets and "put muscle" into their prayers for the school. For a month, once-a-week offerings piled up to $1,060 for the school's needs. Beyond that the council assisted in setting up an athletic program and laid a substantial foundation for an action-packed year. As a result, the students enjoyed the finest and most wholesome recreational programs in the history of the school.

A TESTIMONY

"He keepeth the paths of judgment, and preserveth the way of his saints." What a marvelous promise is given here in Proverbs 2:8! Since asking the Lord to guide in the choice of a Christian college, I've proved again and again that "He preserves the way of his saints." Probably the greatest instance is the fact that my own mind was made up to go to another college. In fact, every preparation had been made for it except the application. However, for two months "something" held back that application. Then I found that it might be possible to attend Grace, and my heart now praises Him continually that He preserved my paths and led me to Grace College!—Jeanette Turner.

Another New Modern Speech Version of the Gospels

By Dr. Herman A. Hoyt, Dean

The first half of the 20th century has witnessed more modern speech versions of the Bible than perhaps any equal period of time during the Christian era. Some of them are merely interesting. Others are startling. Some leave the reader aghast. And some are attractive, appealing, fascinating. The difficulty with most of them lies in the fact that they are prepared by one or few men, and display such a marked tendency to loose phraseology, better known as paraphrase, that they come nearer to being interpretation than translation.

Another one has just appeared from the pen of J. B. Phillips, who is also the translator of the book entitled, "Letters to Young Churches," a translation of the New Testament epistles. This one is called, "The Gospels Translated Into Modern English." Frankly, it is fascinating, but follows the pattern of the rest in the rather free method of rendering the original into English. Here is one paragraph:

"At the beginning God expressed Himself. The personal expression was with God, and He existed with God from the beginning. All creation took place through Him, and none took place without Him. In Him appeared Life and this Life was the Light of mankind. The Light still shines in the darkness, and the darkness has never put it out" (John 1:1-5).

The writer of this article could point out a whole series of interesting things about this translation. But he merely suggests that the reader compare this translation with the reading in the King James Version of 1611 and with the American Standard Version of 1901, and consider it in the light of some reliable commentary. He will be amazed in how many places he will differ with the translator, Mr. Phillips.

FRESHMEN RECEIVE GREEN CAPS

NEW, BUT NOT FRESHMEN!

HOW TO GAIN VICTORY

All growth in the spiritual life is connected with the clearer insight into what Jesus is to us. The more we realize that Christ must be all to us and in us, the more we shall learn to live the real life of faith, which, dying to self, lives wholly in Christ. The Christian life is no longer the vain struggle to live right, but the resting in Christ and finding strength in Him as our life, to fight the fight and gain the victory.—Andrew Murray.

OUR AMERICAN HERITAGE

By R. WM. MARKLEY

Pastor, Commonwealth Avenue Brethren Church

Alexandria, Va.

LIVING as we are in the first of the original 13 colonies, Old Virginia, we are made to realize in a new way what a rich heritage we Americans have. Our history books are replete with details of our American heritage. The Bible, especially the Old Testament, describes the inheritance of the house of Israel and more perfectly in the New Testament, the patrimony of the saints.

Let us return in thought to July 4, 1776, when a handful of American people defied not only the king of England but also the whole British army. Being the victors, this handful of people then turned to one of their own rank who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen" to be the first President of the United States of America.

Almost 200 years removed from this scene, we wonder how General Washington would compare with our leading men of today. Let us take a glance at the general at Valley Forge. There he chose to suffer with his men in their need for fuel, food, blankets, and clothing. Some of the bloodstains in the snow may have been from his own shoeless feet. His own money was spent for the needs of his men when he could have gone to warm quarters, loaded tables, and less suffering. We believe that General Washington would rank in comparison with any of our contemporary statesmen who believe in right and do the right as God gives them to see the right.

From General Washington let us take heart in fulfilling the Lord's command through the Apostle Paul in Ephesians 6:11: "Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil." Our life today is easy compared with that of our forefathers; let us therefore stand.

Reminisce with me into the ages past when God called Abraham to leave his home and his parents and get into a land which He would show him. We enjoy our freedom of worship in America today because Abraham was faithful. By historians Abraham is credited with the beginning of monotheism—better known to us as the worship of the one true God.

God gave the land to Abraham for simply going in and possessing it, and that right of ownership continues to this day. Ages later, when Abraham's descendants were making their exodus from Egypt, God confirmed to them His promise to Abraham: "And I will bring you in unto the land, concerning the which I did swear to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it to you for an heritage: I am the Lord" (Exod. 6:8).

Having chosen for himself a representative people through whom He should reveal himself, God gave unto them His oracles and statutes. Because they were obedient in writing these words down, the Word of God is part of our heritage. Let us thank God today that we were brought out of heathendom. Abraham could have stayed at home in Ur of Chaldee and you and I could still be praying to gods of stick and stone. Rich heritage, ours, with the example of another man who deemed it more important to obey God in faith than to amass a fortune, but in obeying also amassed a fortune.

Let us go on in our thoughts to another man who enriched our heritage: the one in whom dwelt the fullness of the Godhead bodily. As in the case of Washington and Abraham He was not compelled to give His life for us. He chose the pathway of obedience to the Father. "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient,unto death, even the death of the cross" (Phil. 2:6-8). He took upon Him the form of a servant! How much we owe this great Servant for the final revelation of God. How our hearts ought to burn within us at the full realization of His sovereign power.

The Jews did not kill Him, nor did the Roman soldiers. His words to His disciples were: "No man taketh it [my life] from me, but I lay it down of myself. I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it again" (John 10:18). He could have escaped His captors, but His hour was come to "lay down his life for his friends." "Greater love hath no

WALKING IN TRUTH

(II JOHN 4)

Moderator's Address—East Fellowship of Brethren Churches—Conemaugh, Pa., July 19, 1955—By Clair Gartland

Recognizing God's sovereign goodness and grace, we are privileged to assemble in these closing days of grace in this 17th annual East Fellowship of Brethren Churches. May our fellowship be sweet around His Word. And may His richest blessing be upon us as a church, as we plan the work of our blessed Lord by His wisdom and the power of the Holy Spirit.

May I say at this time I am grateful to the Lord and His people for the high privilege that is mine to be chosen to the high office of moderator. We trust that the Holy Spirit will direct us in all our activities for Him during these days. And we trust God will direct us to His man to fill this office for Him in the coming year, should the Lord tarry His coming.

I personally feel there never was a time in the history of the world that the conference theme was more appropriate—"Walking in Truth." America today is a nation of many priceless treasures. We are proud of our great technical skills, our vast food-producing areas, our high standard of living. We are proud of the giant ships which plow the seas, and the speedy airplanes that cross and recross the country. We are glad for our freedom, which has made America the land of the free and the home of the brave. Today this heritage of liberty stands as a priceless possession, to be protected, cherished, and loved. Twenty-five years from now millions of American parents may rue the day when they, backsliding from God and the Bible and its truth, have produced a generation of pagans.

Many are asking the question in confusion that Pilate asked Jesus Christ as He stood before Him, "What is truth?" (John 18:38). Jesus Christ gave the answer to a lost and dying world in John 17:17: "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." Jesus said in John 14:6: "I am the way, the truth, and the life."

We as a denomination have prided ourselves that we are a group of people that have for their motto, "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible," but I am wondering just how much we really believe this. Are we really walking in truth? In the Book of Acts we have the story of early-day Christianity. This book gives us a great many principles that should guide us in our Christian efforts. We are reminded of the words of the Lord to Moses when He commanded him to build a tabernacle "Look that thou make them after their pattern, which was shewed thee in the mount" (Exod. 25:40). God has given us in the Book of Acts a pattern of Christian testimony, missionary effort, world evangelism, and building of Christian churches—a pattern we would do well to follow. Certainly we can be assured of this: the closer we come to ordering all things according to this holy pattern, the greater blessing will attend our efforts.

In the first chapter of this book I want you to notice the order of the verbs here: "of all that Jesus began to do and teach." Doing should always come before teaching. There will be no more power in our message than in our lives. It is as we live for God that we are fitted to speak for God. Do you know why there is so much powerless preaching today? Because there is so little walking in obedience to the Word of God. A holy minister is a tremendous weapon in the hand of God. An unholy minister is a disgrace to the Lord Jesus Christ. Our blessed Saviour has set us the perfect example. He came to do and then to teach. The first 30 years of His life were filled with doing His Father's will.

We will lose that which has been precious to us all these years by raising our young people without a knowledge of God and His Word. Russia doesn't have to attack, she only needs to wait for the harvest of these years, unless we wake up as a nation and turn back to God and a Bible faith. We need to begin in the home. Say what you will, there is a direct connection between what a child is taught and how he acts. "Train up a child," the wise man said, "in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it" (Porv. 22:6). Why has crime increased? Is there not a connection between the conduct of our young people and the kind of training they receive in our homes, churches, and schools? Make no mistake about it: adult attitudes are part of the juvenile picture in North America today. When we see Mom and Pop converted, or revived, we shall see a change in the young people. Parents Magazine said recently that this is the children's age. Four million babies are born each year. What will we do about it. The business world is making a bid for the revenue to be derived from them—bubble gum, Hopalong Cassidy, Davy Crockett. "If you want to be like Hoppy, you have to eat like Hoppy."

What are we doing about the most important part—their soul? America spends seven times as much for aspirin as for all religious purposes. More to relieve headache than prevent heartache. What a missionary challenge this presents to us! According to the Word of God it is the parents' duty to train them. We teach a dog to do tricks, a horse to obey, a cow to go to her stall, and a rose to grow the way we want it to grow, and then some believe that we ought to let our children grow up like Uncle Tom's Topsy. 1. We are to use the rod of correction. Children have no respect for authority in the home, in the school, in society, or anywhere. There is still hope if we revive the old-fashioned woodshed method of handling disobedient children.

2. God-fearing parents. You cannot teach your child something you don't know yourself. If there ever was a time when you needed to know the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord of your life, when you needed the wisdom that only God can give, it is now.

3. A revival of old-fashioned family worship.

4. Try to win them to Christ in the home. Someone has given in these words a recipe for trouble: "Take one generation of young people, add one education from which God and the Bible have been removed, season liberally with materialism, allow to harden into adults." The wonder is not that so many kids get into trouble, but that a whole lot more of them don't.

Unbelief stalks abroad today, not only in the land but in the church. It is nothing for respected church leaders to deny the Virgin Birth, to make fun of verbal inspiration. The man that believes that the Bible is in deed and in truth the Word of God, believes in the Virgin Birth. These seem to be the days described by Paul in II Timothy 3:7—"Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth." Is the Bible our final rule of faith and practice? More and more we are coming to realize that man, the height of God's creation, is the world's sickest creature. Many know there is something wrong, and as a result they turn to a lot of quack remedies, sedatives, sins, etc. Pleasures, materialism cannot satisfy a soul that was made to enjoy the treasure of heaven. We use a lot of false standards, and discard God's standards, and rename it treatment.

There is recorded in God's Word a very familiar story in John 5:2-8, where we find the story of the pool of Bethesda, where lay a great multitude of impotent folk. I believe they are a picture of the spiritually sick. I love the blessed old Bible because it is never necessary for me to look in vain for myself among the Biblical crowd, especially if there is something wrong with them. I want you to look at some of these folks today and see which one represents you and me.

Some were blind. What is wrong with a blind man? Nothing, except he cannot see. What do you see? Do you see men and women all around you without God and without hope? Do you see your own husband, your own children? Do you see the heathen in the swamps and jungles of India, Africa, China, and South America, without a ray of light to guide them to heaven? If you can see them, what are you doing about them? When did you speak last to a soul about Christ? How much have you prayed for their salvation?

Have you given a tract, or given so that the Gospel might go forth? Is there something wrong with our spiritual vision? If only our church members could see as they say they do, and would be about their Father's business from Monday until Saturday, and on the Lord's Day, the windows of heaven would be opened and a blessing would pour down upon our consecrated endeavors that would bring about a Holy Ghost, heaven-sent revival. Our prayer for many must continually be: Lord, open their eyes that they may see.

The second class described here are the lame. They walked with a limp. When as Christians we gather in the house of God on the Lord's Day or at prayer meeting, we apparently are in good shape, but it doesn't mean a thing. The true character of our Christian life may be concealed in church on Sunday, but must be revealed to the world on Monday. Sinners are not all fools. They can tell whether we are the genuine "McCoy" or not. You may fool the preacher, but you can't fool the world. Ah, dear people, it has been truly said the world needs only the Gospel according to you and me. My, what ugly-natured, bad-tempered Christians we have in our churches. We say it is natural, which may be true, but not spiritual. We say it is the Irish in us, but God is able to make the Irishman behave like a Christian. Whereas the church of God once leaped, it now limps.

The next case—some were impotent, which means not able, we want to be nothing. May God help us to push the battle to the gates and make us like Jacob, a sharp threshing instrument.

The last-mentioned in this story was—some were withered, means dried up. Too many Christians talk about the good old days of Moody and Finney. We may talk about the good rain we had five years ago, but God have mercy on us if we don't get some now in our day. Moody and Finney's God is ours, and He is still alive. It is still possible to have a shower from heaven. "For there shall be showers of blessing." Oh, may we hear the Saviour say, "Wilt thou be made whole?" Get your eyes off the rest of God's children; look to God's Son and search God's Book and discover for yourself how far short you have fallen. Oh, how much we need to realize that just as we were born alone and die alone from the cradle to the grave we live alone. No man can be saved for us, no man can confess sin for us, no man can die for us, and no man can take our place at the judgment seat of Christ.

I like the way the Lord Jesus dismisses the mass and deals with the unit. He singled out a poor soul at the pool who had been a cripple for 38 years. May the Lord Jesus look us in the face and may we hear Him say: "Wilt thou be made whole?" Shall we answer one and all—

"Lord Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole;
I want Thee forever to dwell in my soul;
Break down every idol, cast out every foe;
Now wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

God grant that we may never be the same again, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

NOTICE TO ALL MINISTERS WITH AN INTEREST IN GRACE THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY AND COLLEGE

The first 1955-56 edition of the Grace Sounding Board will be published September 23. This college-seminary newspaper contains the happenings and events that make the news at Grace. If you would like a periodic glance down the halls of Grace—a listen-in on social and sports events—a really closer touch with faculty and students alike—we urge you to subscribe immediately to the Sounding Board.

The subscription rate is $1.00 for the school year. This fee will help to cover the cost of publishing, handling, and mailing each edition—it is, without a doubt, a bargain rate.

The above offer, with the exception of the rate, is also being made available to those persons, not in the ministry, who are desirous of receiving these bimonthly editions of the Grace Sounding Board. The latter rate is $1.25 for the current school year.

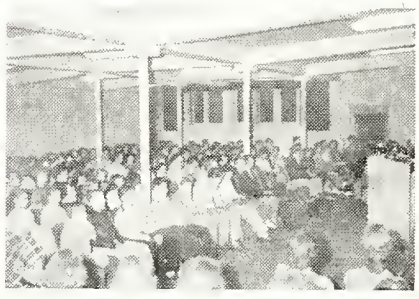
THE PLACE FOR RECREATIONAL FACILITIES IN THE CHURCH



By RALPH COLBURN

Pastor, Grace Brethren Church Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Not too long ago I visited a church of a large denomination where they had recently dedicated a $350,000 addition to their building. Being interested in church building in general, I went through it. It was a four-story recreational building, with a beautiful swimming pool in the basement, plus dressing rooms and showers, a gymnasium above, taking two full floors, and a social hall adequate for parties, dances, plays, etc., on the top level. In addition, there were a few offices and a couple of hobby rooms. Very little of the building was usable for anything but recreation. The church was employing a full-time "minister of recreation." It was a tremendous building, but I couldn't help but think of ten or a dozen new home-mission churches, when I looked at it, or a dozen new missionary families on the field, with their support assured for an indefinite period. That's one extreme.

But on another occasion I was looking at some proposed plans for a Brethren church. The building was to cost about $35,000, and had many fine features. But there was no provision in the church whatever—no room big enough (except the sanctuary—for a party, a banquet, or any kind of a social function. (By the way, those plans were changed!) That's the other extreme.

Does the church need recreation facilities? My answer is yes. I do not believe it needs the kind of arrangement I described at the beginning of this article, unless its primary mission is to serve the recreational needs of its people. And I hope no Brethren people would subscribe to that idea! But man is a social creature, and has definite social needs. If the church makes no provision for meeting these, it may fail to meet man's greater spiritual needs. For especially in youth and in young Christians, discernment between man's various needs may not be sharp. The church must keep first things first, but not neglect second, third, and fourth things either.

A Southern California Youth Rally

What recreational possibilities should be considered by the average church? I am convinced that every church building should have a multipurpose room, large enough, and convenient enough to a kitchen, that it can be used for parties, banquets, fellowship dinners, etc. It should not be dingy or lacking in ventilation and heat. Old-fashioned parties, well planned, can be barrels of fun, but homes are often inadequate for them. This room should be usable to every age group in the church.

Recreational equipment is the next logical consideration. And, fortunately, it need not be very expensive or extensive. But a good ping-pong table or two, and, if room permits, a shuffleboard court, are not necessarily luxury items. If homemade, they may be quite reasonable. And there are lots of homemade games (your local library or 4-H club will have ideas on these) that are lots of fun, and easily constructed and played. With a little such equipment, you can frequently have an "open house" night, when different age groups in the church can, in turn, use this equipment (under some supervision, of course) and have a wonderful time, without a whole lot of planning.

Don't neglect the outdoor area of your church property when thinking of recreational facilities. If you can arrange room, a volleyball court, badminton court, and possibly even a basketball court can be provided. And don't forget the younger set, too. They like dodgeball, and tetherball, which can use some of the same equipment and area.

Beyond that, in many communities it is possible and practical to organ-

Daily in the classroom are found object lessons for the Christian. Kindergartners are adults in miniature. In them a panorama of life unfolds with all its shaded degrees from success to failure. We see the heights to the depths of all levels of life.

Children of high intellectuality and of low ability meet there. The sad, the joyful, the sickly, the healthy, the rich, poor, bilingual, and the democratic America; the overfed, the undernourished, the well-dressed, the quaint or ragged, the polished idol and the dirt-crusted urchin mingle together. The "s'mother-loved" one, the neglected, the aggressive, the shy, and the well-adjusted child are all in the same classroom on the average.

The potential giant of success and the child with criminal background and beginnings are there. Read in any edition of a newspaper today with its wide variety of life in achievement, failure, thrill, tragedy, and crime. Then look at a class and see everything in counterpart, wrapped up in the little people.

With funds available for equipment and environment, with emphasis on increased training for teachers, and new philosophies, we face a far more hopeful situation for many small people. But realizing the increasing darkness and Satan's power just before the dawn of our Lord's coming, we can only hope that these children will receive the new life, help, and inspiration of a Christ-filled life.

God, in His letter to the Philippians, has given the perfect prescription for poise to the Christian teacher in chapter 4:6-7. Courage for the responsibility lies in verse 13. Abilities and background are found in verse 19, while daily life in the classroom furnishes the object lessons from which we see the prophecies of the Word in fulfillment.

PREMILLENNIALISM OR AMILLENNIALISM? By Charles Feinberg. Dunham Publishing Co. 1954. Cloth, 351 pp. $4 (postage 12c).

Showing that the premillenial viewpoint is consistent with the entire theological scope of the New Testament, Dr. Feinberg effectively establishes his conclusions upon the absolute authority of the Holy Scriptures. A complete survey is made of eschatology in which the doctrine of the Kingdom is analyzed in its relationship to the subject at hand. The author then presents the amillennial argument as presented by recognized authorities, after which he proceeds to answer the contentions from the premillennial position which he believes the Word of God to teach. He shows the doctrine of grace to be the key to a consistent interpretation of the Scriptures.

WORKABLE PRAYER MEETING PROGRAMS. By Theodore W. Engstrom. Zondervan Publishing Co. 1955. Cloth, 150 pp. $2 (postage 8c).

A book of workable programs for leaders of prayer meetings, with suggestions that will make for variety. Song suggestions, poems, brief meditations, simple outlines, and abundant Scripture references are provided

HIGHLIGHTS OF ARCHAEOLOGY IN BIBLE LANDS. By Fred H. Wight. Moody Press. 1955. Cloth, 243 pp. $3.95 (postage 12c).

Answering the critics' objections, the author shows how the Bible is confirmed by recent archaelogical discoveries. A fully documented book, with 28 illustrations, makes it a book every well-informed Christian should own.

SKETCHES ON SERMONS ON THE PARABLES AND MIRACLES. By Jabez Burns. Zondervan Publishing House. 1954 reprint edition. Cloth, 316 pp. $2.95 (8c postage).

Being a genius in outlining, the author presents sermon outlines that are simple and easily adapted to everyday life. Dr. Burns merely gives the 500 outlines in detail, to which must be added the sermonic material.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MYTH. By Walter Martin and Norman Klann. Bible Truth Publishing Society. 1954. Cloth, 184 pp. $3 (8c postage).

The teaching of the cult of Christian Science is carefully scrutinized beginning with the life of the founder, Mary Baker Eddy, and the growth and teaching of the Christian Science Church in the light of the Bible. The purpose of the book is to present historical and Biblical evidence which demonstrates the error of the teaching.

THE LIFE OF DAVID. By Alexander Maclaren. Baker Book House. 1955. Cloth, 261 pp. $3 (postage 8c).

This book vividly portrays the life of David from the days as a shepherd boy on through adulthood, with its sorrows, wanderings, triumphs, sin, and remorse. Typical of the writings of Maclaren, the book is dramatic in presentation, affording a devotional and inspirational background to the man David as reflected in the Psalms.

ETERNAL LIFE IN ACTION. By J. C. Massee. The Higley Press. Cloth, 192 pp. $2.25 (postage 8c).

The work affords an illustrated exposition of the First Epistle of John. Dr. Massee suggests that eternal life will manifest itself in the daily life of the believer as a result of regeneration. Demonstrating that the epistle was written to teach Christians how to live in a godless world, the author presents the truth that an intimate relationship must exist between Christ and the believer. Contending that the Christian life is more than a mere creed, the author seeks to show the necessity for fruit, the evidence of the new birth. This is eternal life in action.

TO EVERY MAN AN ANSWER. By Richard H. Bube. Moody Press. 1955. Cloth, 510 pp. $5.95 (12c postage).

Employing the technique he uses in his profession, the author, a research physicist, presents a logical study of the great doctrines of the Word of God. He analytically classifies the Scripture passages under each distinct doctrine in his 23 chapters of the book. The author comes short in that particular chapter which deals with "The Lord's Supper," in that he assumes the bread and the cup to be the supper. The author suggests a relationship between the scientist's laws of nature and the Scriptural doctrines of the Bible. The last chapter includes a catechism for young people which is practical.

man than this." Love was His compelling force, sending Him to Calvary as my substitute. Because He died for us on the cross at Calvary we can become children of God by simply believing on Him. "And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ . . ." (Rom. 8:17). Heirs to all that the Father possesses! In Him we have the promise: "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly" (Ps. 84:11) for this life and the promise of pleasures at His right hand for evermore (Ps. 16:11).

Because the early Colonists were God-fearing people, the Bible is still proclaimed from the pulpits of America today. We are free because the Son hath made us free indeed. We are free because we know the truth.

Our American heritage—we are proud that it contains the rights for which great statesmen have fought and died; that it recognizes the one true God of the universe; that it is built on the foundation of faith in Jesus Christ.

Look to the future for a moment, dear reader. Will your grandchildren be able to tell their children of this great American heritage? If it was worth fighting to get, it is worth fighting to preserve. Our grandchildren's heritage is contingent upon our earnestly contending for "the faith which was once delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3).

ize church teams in basketball and softball leagues. This is good IF And I'd like to suggest four big "IF'S" which should be hurdled, lest this program become the tail that wags the dog. IF the league does not become a drain on church finances—for uniforms, equipment, and entrance fees are sometimes expensive; IF the schedule of games does not conflict with regular church activities—it's better to default than to play on prayer-meeting night; IF your team has good management—and I mean a spiritual, sensible leader; and IF your eligibility rules for team members are such that your team truly represents Christ, and your church; such teams can be a real asset to your church's testimony and total program. But let's always remember—FIRST THINGS FIRST!

The schools and the world are bidding high for the social and recreational interests of our youth and adults. And what they offer is too frequently damaging to dedicated Christian living. It is not our business to compete with the world, but it is our business to bring the whole man into right relationship with Christ, and to meet his total need insofar as possible. And youth, who feel this need keenest, ought to find the fellowship, activities, and recreation that will satisfy in connection with the total church program. Right recreation can be a tool for building. "Wreckreation" can be a destructive enemy. Choose wisely, follow through carefully, and build well!

Given to Hospitality

By W. CARL MILLER
Junior, Grace Theological Seminary

Hospitality, clearly the Scriptural obligation of every Christian, appears to be a waning virtue in these days of speed, complexity, and love of ease. Those who have done much entertaining will readily admit that it involves old-fashioned toil and thrift. However, any inconvenience is found to be far outweighed by the usual refreshment of Christian fellowship. As always, obedience to God's Word results in rich blessing.

Only four times does the word "hospitality" appear in the King James Version of the Bible; namely, Romans 12:13, I Timothy 3:2, Titus 1:8, and I Peter 4:9. The way in which it is used seems to allow for a rather broad application. The word itself reaches beyond the thought of being "fond of guests" to include the "entertainment of strangers." To be sure, Christian hospitality was a virtual necessity during the early Christian era. This may give us a hint as to why Paul and Peter were directed by the Holy Spirit to include in several of their epistles the reminder to show hospitality.

Let us consider the duty of hospitality from three apects. We want to look at it as a common, pious, and prophetic duty.

Though allowances are necessary for the varying conditions of time and customs, the principle of the duty itself is unmistakably clear. In the light of man's general obligation to his fellow creatures, hospitality may be considered apart from all Christian sanctions. It may spring entirely from a natural feeling of kindness and compassion. The expressions of kindness in this sense are given over wholly to the natural, or common, instincts of the heart. In summation of this thought on hospitality as a common duty we learn that all such deeds of love, however beautiful and useful in themselves, may be performed quite devoid of any relation to God and eternity. In this respect we see a loving-kindness limited to human and present interests.

With the Christian, however, there is no such thing as a duty contained in itself. All of our duties regard God's will and pleasure. They reach beyond the mortal and temporal scene. We may at times distinguish between God-ward and man-ward duties for the sake of emphasis, but that which pleases God will benefit man and that which benefits man will please God. We ought to love our fellow man, not merely as a member of human society, but as one who possesses certain relations to God. Hence he is to be loved and helped for God's sake. We turn to Abraham, the type of the believer, for an excellent example of hospitality in the Christian spirit. With this attitude the form of hospitality is changed from a mere virtue into a Christian grace and the mere purpose of doing good into a blessing; the motive never loses sight of the pleasure and will of God; and the fruit of it appears at length with all of its fragrance and beauty. Abraham's conduct in Genesis 18:1-8 was marked by love and its attending graces. He graciously entertained of the best that he had. Abraham made certain that hospitality was a household affair. He exemplified great courtesy, and the lowliness of his bearing toward those whose superiority must have impressed him should not go unnoticed. Indeed, hospitality becomes a pious duty to the Christian.

Last of all, we wish to consider hospitality as a prophetic duty, prophetic in the sense of reaching beyond itself. All of our actions as believers assume a new significance and sublimity in the light of God's eternal relation to our souls. We see then that the smallest deeds take on a wide importance when done for Christ's sake. A New Testament illustration of this truth may be noted in Mary's simple, but devoted, act when she broke a box of costly ointment and poured it on Jesus' head. Little, if at all, did she comprehend its prophetic content at the time, but our Lord revealed it when He answered: "She is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying" (Mark 14:8).

Let us return to the Abraham experience and note the beautiful progression. First, he entertained men on principles of common hospitality. He welcomed his three visitors as guests of distinction and yet as men (3-8). Second, he entertained angels. He soon came to recognize their heavenly origin. It is quite probable that this is the very occasion referred to by the writer of Hebrews in respect to some who had "entertained angels unaware" (Heb. 13:2). Third, he entertained the Lord. How rich is the lesson! In receiving strangers he had unknowingly included the Lord himself. His actions ultimately touched God. Our Lord said of kind deeds done for the needy in His name, "Ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25:40). The Christian's deeds of love, though done for the good of men, are nevertheless rendered to God. Brethren, when we open our hearts and homes to Christian workers, familiar or foreign, we serve our Lord in true obedience and get the blessing, too!

Things You'll Want to Know

In the last Foreign Mission Number of the Missionary Herald we mentioned concerning the very blessed refreshing that came to us from the Holy Spirit in our Portland conference and annual meeting time. We are back home now, and our prayer is that this blessed refreshing from the Holy Spirit may become the part and portion of every member of the Brethren Church at home and in foreign lands. Our desire is to serve faithfully under the superintendency of the blessed Holy Spirit, that as He granted to us that rich refreshing during the Portland conference He may continue those blessings new every morning. We now present an up-to-date report of activities and items relating to all phases of our foreign missionary work.

GENERAL

Who was elected—Our Society trustee elections are conducted by ballot by mail. Each one of the approximately 7,000 members of our Society receives a ballot. The election report indicated that Brethren Charles W. Mayes, Alva J. McClain, and Glenn F. O'Neal were elected as trustees for the term 1955-1958.

At the annual meeting the list of nominees is completed for the election during the following year. By Society action the nominees for next year's election are Brethren Kenneth B. Ashman, Herman W. Koontz, Ward A. Miller, Conard K. Sandy, and Richard P. DeArmey. Three of these are to be elected and ballots will be mailed at the proper time.

The executive officers of the Board and Society are chosen annually and by our plan of organization the officers of the Board become the officers of the Society. These officers are elected by ballot without nomination, and the election this year resulted as follows: President, Charles W. Mayes; Vice President, Bernard N. Schneider; Treasurer, Homer A. Kent, Sr.; Recording Secretary, Kenneth B. Ashman.

The staff—Our administrative staff will be the same: General Secretary, Russell D. Barnard; Assistant to the General Secretary, Clyde K. Landrum; Financial Secretary, Miss Ruth E. Reddick; Office Secretary, Miss Marcia Lowe; Eastern Representative, Charles H. Croker; and Western Representative, J. Keith Altig.

The Publicity Committee—This committee serves throughout the year and has to do with the preparation and authorization of materials used in foreign-mission publicity. The committee is as follows: Brethren Clyde K. Landrum, Kenneth B. Ashman, Bernard N. Schneider, and Russell D. Barnard as an ex officio member. This committee will be very happy for any suggestions for publicity that any member of the Society may care to present.

The Missionary Residence Committee—This committee is concerned with everything having to do with the Brethren Missionary Residence at Winona Lake. The committee is composed of Clyde K. Landrum (chairman), Herman W. Koontz, Homer A. Kent, Sr., and Mrs. Russell D. Barnard. Again, this committee will be very happy for any suggestions that you may have with respect to the Missionary Residence.

Furlough rent allowance—It is not possible for the Missionary Residence to care for all of our missionaries home on furlough, so the Board for some years has had an arrangement for rent allowance for missionaries on furlough not living in the Residence. The amount was $20 per adult plus an additional $10 for a family unit when there were two children or more. That has not been sufficient and so the rent allowance is being increased to $25 per adult plus $5 additional for each child, with a ceiling of $75 for any one family. This rent allowance, of course, is to be paid only when it is considered by the Board and the missionary as necessary to secure the proper living quarters during the year of furlough.

Magazines for missionaries—The Board of Trustees again approved the plan by which each missionary family is allowed $10 per year for mazagine subscriptions of their choice, aside from The Brethren Missionary Herald, which is provided from other sources. This would be an excellent project for some group of people who might care to assume a part or all of this very greatly appreciated ministry.

Insurance for Missionaries—For some years our Board of Trustees has carried the amount of $1,000 of life insurance on each missionary through the Board on Ministerial Relief of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. If the individual missionary cares to pay the premiums, then the insurance policy is a part of his estate; otherwise the Society pays the premiums and the policy is a part of Foreign Missionary Society assets.

Missionary rallies—The plan for foreign-missionary rallies during the four so-called foreign-missionary months of February, March, April, and May, so successful last year, is being continued again this year. The rally plan will begin in the Northwest on February 5 and then proceed from district to district, concluding during the latter part of May. We are asking that you pray and plan for even greater success for these excellent missionary rallies.

Pension and retirement—For some years a committee has been working on the matter of pension and retirement as it relates to our missionary personnel. Very distinct progress was made during the last year and it now seems very possible that plans may be ready for full operation during some part of the ensuing year.

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 40

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. Hoyt, vice president; William Schaffer, secretary; Ord Gehman, treasurer; Bryson Fetters, member-at-large to Executive Committee; Walter Lepp, S. W. Link, Mark Malles, Robert E. A. Miller, True Hunt, Thomas Hammers; Arnold R. Kriegbaum, ex officio.

. . . Brethren Foreign Missions

Authorization for new missionaries—For the first time in many years no new missionary candidates were presented and approved at the annual meeting of our Society. There was action taken, however, by the Society authorizing the Board of Trustees to send out missionaries during the ensuing year at such time as the Board may feel advisable. In spite of the fact that there was an increase of some $21,000 in our income this year over last year, the actual increase needed was about $60,000, so we will be badly in need of funds before next year's foreign-mission offering becomes available. The Board of Trustees will probably not authorize new missionary candidates to go to the field until our current income is sufficient to care for our current needs.

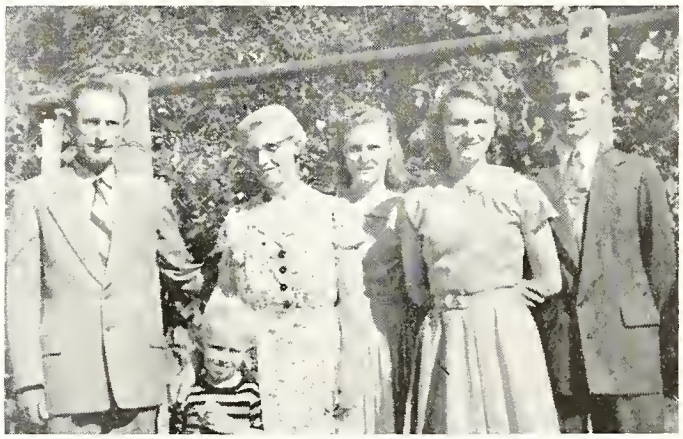
AFRICA

For some of our fields, and this is especially true in relation to Africa, the greater unit of business is done at the midyear meeting of our Board. Such actions were reported to you six months ago. This is especially true of Africa because the annual Field Council meeting is in December or January each year, and from this meeting comes a great number of recommendations which are dealt with by our Board in the midyear meeting. However, there were very important items with respect to Africa this year at our annual meeting.

The Field Superintendent—Bro. Orville D. Jobson, who has for many years served effectively and efficiently in this place of responsibility, was asked to continue as field superintendent.

A Witch Doctor Brews Strong Medicine

Bylaw amendments—Because of the very rapid growth of our field and missionary personnel in Africa, the Field Council believed certain changes in the bylaws with respect to the administration of the field were advisable and recommended these to our Board. In a word, these have to do with expanding the base of our responsibility of administration. Every member of the Field Council will have a specific and definite responsibility. After several months of prayerful consideration our Board approved these amendments.



More missionary pastors—Our Board recognizes the very urgent need for more missionary pastors for our work in Africa and has asked the General Secretary to continue in the presentation of this need, and also to present the challenge of sufficient funds to care for those who might offer themselves and be approved.

Additional French school family—The Board also recognizes the need for one additional family to work in our French schools in Africa, which are really Christian day schools. The General Secretary is asked to continue in the presentation of this need as well as the challenge for sufficient funds to care for such a family.

Our medical program in Africa—For many years we have had a series of dispensaries in Africa. These are not hospitals but, rather, treatment centers. For a long time there has been recognition of the need for a medical center which would be of hospital proportions. As recommended to the Board at the last Field Council meeting, this has been under careful consideration for the last six months and now the Board has approved the plan for one adequately equipped medical center for our work in Africa. One of the great purposes of this medical center will be the training of native nurses and assistants to carry the program of evangelization through the ministry of healing out into the bush sections of our field. The total cost for the establishment of this medical center will be very considerable, possibly as much as $15,000 or $20,000 before it is completed. The first unit, which we would hope could be done within the next few months, will cost between $7,000 and $8,000. The challenging situation is that there are not at the present time sufficient available funds in the General Fund to proceed with this building program. We are asking that you pray concerning this. Possibly there are those who would like to present large memorial gifts in memory of those children of God who have served the Lord faithfully and have been called into His presence. We think it should be said that our medical program in Africa is almost completely self-supporting as far as the supplying of medicines and the employment of native nurses are concerned. Gifts, therefore, toward this one medical center would be used to assist the medical program in those parts of the program which the natives themselves cannot supply.

Approval for return—The Board approved for return to the field, subject to satisfactory medical examinations,

TWO VETERAN ARGENTINE PASTORS AND THEIR FAMILIES

The Ricardo Wagner Family

The Luis Siccardi Family

the following families: Rev. and Mrs. Harold L. Dunning, Rev. and Mrs. William J. Samarin, Miss Ruth Kent, Miss Marie Mishler, and Miss Elizabeth Tyson. Similar authorization was given at a prior meeting for the return of Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Kliever, Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Sheldon, and Miss Marybeth Munn. The approval for return of other missionaries now in this country who were not in the States in time to be at our annual meeting will be considered at the midyear meeting of the Board. It is a source of continual joy to us in our foreign-missionary program that the general attitude on the part of our missionaries is: "I want to go back to the field—that's my home and I'm so very greatly needed there."

Printing equipment—The authorization for this was given at the midyear meeting and quite a bit in the way of funds has been designated for this purpose, but the actual purchase has not yet been made. We all want to be sure of the type of equipment best suited to our needs before that purchase is made, and we believe the decision will be reached in the not-far-distant future.

ARGENTINA

President of the Field Council—Bro. Lynn D. Schrock, who has served as the president of the Field Council for some years, has been asked to continue in that responsibility. We appreciate his excellent ministry in this respect.

Returning soon—Brother and Sister Jack B. Churchill, and family and Sister Loree Sickel will be leaving New York City on September 29, returning to the field in Argentina. The place where they will locate will probably be decided upon after they arrive in Argentina.

Approval for return—Brother and Sister James Marshall and family were approved for return to Argentina, of course subject to satisfactory medical examinations.

New property purchase—We have an arrangement with the National Brethren Church in Argentina by which, when they are ready to assume the responsibility for the building of a church building, we will supply the lot or lots on which the building is to be erected. In line with this policy we have just purchased a very lovely piece of property in a section of the city of Rio Cuarto where the second Brethren church of Rio Cuarto, we trust, will soon be located. Rio Cuarto is a city of about 75,000 people.

Radio broadcast—That which a year or two ago was considered absolutely impossible has come to pass. For some two or three months now we have had a regular weekly broadcast over the radio station in Rio Cuarto, Argentina. The results in new families contacting our missionary efforts in Argentina are most encouraging. We trust to expand this radio program as rapidly as there are funds to care for it and the opportunities present themselves.

Workers needed—We believe there are abundant opportunities for the expansion of our work in Argentina in very effective ways and at very strategic centers. But there can be no further expansion until there are more workers and until funds are sufficient to care for the additional workers and the expansion.

BRAZIL

We have just two families in Brazil at the present time, the third family being in the States on furlough. These families are located 200 miles apart, the one on the one side of the Amazon River system and the other on the other side.

Christian day schools—Our Christian day school plan in Brazil is enjoying the very great blessing of the Lord. We have a Christian day school established in connection with each of our stations. National Brazilian Christian young women are the teachers in these schools. We have some 100 to 120 children enrolled—we could have five to ten times that many if we had the facilities and funds to care for the program. We believe these Christian day schools are one of our best sources for future Brazilian leaders in the church there.

Additional lots at Macapa—We have authorized the purchase of two strategically needed lots in connection with our Macapa work. We now own the property on three of the four corners at the street intersection where the Macapa church and day school are located. Some additional building will be needed here, part of which will house the printing equipment being sent down from this country. An additional building cannot be undertaken until there are funds available.

A Fine Sunday School—Macapa, Brazil

Additional rooms in Icoraci—In order that there may be room for the church and the day school along with an apartment for a missionary family, we have authorized the building of some additional rooms in connection with the large older building at Icoraci. This does not have to do with the new residence recently completed for which we are very greatly indebted to the National Women's Missionary Council.

Expansion—Our missionaries have outlined a very excellent and sensible plan for expansion of our work in the Amazon area in Brazil. The Board has approved that proposed plan. Of course there can be no undertaking with respect to this expansion until there are more missionaries and more funds to care for the program.

FRANCE

Most of the business with respect to France was conducted at the midyear meeting following the visit of the General Secretary to France. We did, however, have excellent and enlightening conferences with Brother and Sister Fred Fogle, and they were authorized to return to the field in France following a short furlough. They will probably return soon after the beginning of the new year of 1956.

Partable tabernacle in use—You will remember our mentioning in these pages the completion of the portable tabernacle to be used in the Lyon area. The building was completed before the Fogles returned to the States on furlough but was dismantled and stored looking toward their return. However, the opportunity was so great that Bro. George Cone, Jr., who carries the responsibility of the field during the absence of Brother Fogle, with Bro. Andre Kasak, our national French evangelist, decided to erect the tabernacle and start services. This was done in the Villeurbanne section of the city where so much visitation and invitation have been done during the last two years. The meetings started in this little portable tabernacle on September 1 and are still continuing as we prepare this copy for the Missionary Herald. Early reports are most encouraging, and we shall be so very happy for any favorable results which the Lord grants in response to this special undertaking.

Missionaries studying in France—The Marvin Goodman, Jr., family and Miss Mary Emmert, who will study in France for a period of up to three months, and Miss Rosella Cochran, who has been in France for approximately one year, will be proceeding to the field in Africa about the first of November. Will you pray for them and for other workers who may be traveling to their fields of service at about that time. The George Cone, Jr., family will proceed to Africa, the field of their choice, for service just as soon as the Fogles return from furlough.

Another family needed—We so very desperately need at least one more missionary family in France. Of course we can use many more, but one family is desperately needed. Will you pray for us and with us that this family, which might offer and be approved, may be found and that the funds sufficient to care for their going forth may be guaranteed?

HAWAII

We were very greatly pleased with the reports from our work in Hawaii, where Rev. and Mrs. Foster Tresise serve as our missionaries. It should be remembered that our work in Hawaii is a self-supporting program. The Tresises earn their own livelihood and the believers pay their own expenses. Our foreign-mission responsibilities have been limited to items of transportation and automobile allowance. We were greatly encouraged recently when the believers themselves decided that they should assume additional responsibility looking toward the support of their own missionary pastor. They are now making very sizable monthly contributions toward this goal.

MEXICO

All of Mexico—We now officially recognize the entire field of Mexico as our sphere of missionary endeavor, and will now purpose to refer to this field as "Mexico" rather than "Baja California."

Interior Training School—We favor and are planning for a Bible institute or training school, and we believe it will be more effective down in the interior of Mexico. We are looking to the Lord to supply the needed leadership for this school.

Typical Family—San Ignacio, Mexico

Trip of Exploration—To best know the possibilities for this training school and our future work in Mexico, a trip of exploration and investigation will be made during the month of October, leaving Laredo about October 5. The three missionary men, Brethren Haag, Howard, and Edmiston, and the General Secretary, Brother Barnard, will make the trip.

Mexican Home Mission Fund—Looking toward the expansion of our Brethren testimony in Mexico, we are asking our missionaries to arrange for the establishment of a Mexican Home Mission Fund, and that all Mexican believers be urged to contribute regularly to this fund.

Present Responsibilities—We are asking our missionaries to continue in their present responsibilities and at their present locations until the plans are more complete for greater activity in the interior areas.

Note—On other pages of this Herald additional information and statistics are presented relating to all six of our fields.

PIONEERS NEEDED

There is a great story to the effect that a certain society in South Africa once wrote to David Livingstone: "Have you found a good road to where you are? If so, we want to know how to send other men to join you." Livingstone replied: "If you have men who will come only if they know there is a good road, I don't want them. I want men who will come if there is no road at all."—The Church Herald.

Burdens and Burden-Bearers

By William J. Samarin

It is very easy out here in Africa to understand the truth that Jesus bears our burdens, which, although not stated in so many words, is implied throughout Scripture (see Ps. 55:22). For a number of reasons this simple but wonderful truth is not sufficiently appreciated in the States. Perhaps part of the reason is that the word "burden" is used now in American English in only a limited sense. One says: "Having to care for his mother, too, is an awful burden on him." But a husband does not say to his wife: "Here, honey, let me carry those burdens." He would most likely say: "Let me carry those things." Notice that he does not even use the word "bear."

What does our Lord Jesus do? He himself carries everything that is cumbersome or burdensome to us. A Gbea, or in fact any African in our territory, understands the significance of this truth perhaps more clearly than does the average American. This passage would be translated in such a way that the image of Jesus carrying our loads would be vivid. There is a word in most of our languages which means "anything belonging to a person which he must carry to move." It would translate every use of our word "baggage." But it is more often translatable by just the word "things," as in these sentences: Look at all those things he has in his room; get those things out of the truck.

One has a little more difficulty in translating the word "bear"; that is, "carry," for there are various ways to carry things—usually with a special verb for each type of action—on one's shoulders, on one's back, or in one's arms or hands. The people of M'Baiki carry things in a basket on their backs supported by a belt around their foreheads. But it is on their heads that the grassland peoples carry things, even though it may be a little thing. So ingrained is this habit that, even when one's hands are free, one—especially among the women—will carry a book or a bottle on top of one's head. So the fact that the women of Jesus' day bore jars of water on their heads makes the African feel slightly akin to them.

In addition to the fact that the African can get a better understanding of the burdens that Christ carries, he can better appreciate the work involved. In our part of Africa there are, as yet, hardly any ways in which an African can transport things. Whether he wants to go 50 yards or 50 miles he has to carry his belongings by himself. Anyone who has carried a load of groceries from the supermarket to the car, parked too far away, will understand how something can get heavier with every step. Yet the American hardly knows anything about carrying things. In most supermarkets there are nice boys to carry the groceries, or they may even use little carts, and put them in the car, and off one goes!

Not so in Africa. The African has to carry on his head every drop of water he uses (and which you get from the tap), every piece of wood (while you get gas piped to the range), and every pound of grain from the far-off gardens. So he—and especially she—can really appreciate a helping hand, or rather a helping head!

Helping one carry a load is a vivid sign of friendliness and courtesy not too often seen among these people, for, in the first place, no one really likes to carry loads and, in the second place, it is usually the work of a person with little prestige. One always tries to find one with less prestige—often a child or a woman—to do the work. That is why one will never see a canton chief carry anything but perhaps some sign of his authority. If an important person happens to be carrying something, someone who respects him will immediately offer to carry it for him. That happened to me and, in fact, the incident started me thinking about this whole subject.

I was returning from the church, where I had just delivered a message during a Bible conference, and was on my way to the camp when I heard someone running up behind me. I turned around to see the arms of a young man outstretched and at the same time hear him offer to take my brief case, heavy with books. So I began to think and say to myself: "Here is a person who thinks that I am too important to have to be carrying something; yet Jesus, my Lord, stoops to carry all those things that encumber me. He wants me to cast all my cares upon Him, for He cares for me."

Fifteen miles yet to market with his burden of baskets.

Surely our hearts should be filled with a bit of shame that One so exalted should humble himself to be our servant and yet we should accept with joy and thanksgiving because we are not able to carry the burdens of life alone.

God Is Working . . .

A REPORT FROM GRACE CHAPEL, HONOLULU

(Editor's Note—The information which follows is taken from the most recent letter received in our Foreign Mission Office from Brother and Sister Foster Tresise, missionaries in Honolulu, Hawaii.)

How we praise the Lord for what He has done and is doing here. I wish you could see with your own eyes and hear with your ears the testimonies of life and lip that we experience. I am weak and sometimes I feel the ministry is so lacking, but God is doing that which is impossible for man to do. We have a small nucleus of folks who really love the Lord and who are feeding on His Word and really growing in the things of the Spirit. And this group is growing in number, too.

There is a private study of the Word that thrills our hearts. A week ago we heard of a certain family and were told that the husband was more spiritual than the wife. Last night we called in the home and the wife told us how the husband rises early in the morning to read the Word of God. The Lord willing, we are looking for them to attend the prayer meeting tonight, this service for the first, and perhaps the Lord will permit us to answer some of their problems and to encourage them in the Lord. Recently we have had several encouragements of this nature. Last Sunday night one of our new converts, a man, took me aside, asking questions which revealed private devotion and real individual thought.

Without Him we could do nothing. But humanly speaking, I attribute much of our recent growth to the conversion and witnessing of a Hawaiian mother. Her testimony is fresh, living, and vital. I have seen her more than once testifying with tears in her eyes of the blessings received and of her determination to go on with the Lord. It is through her that many other homes are being opened to us. This mother's character is of excellent nature; she is well thought of in the community, and her children are a real testimony, too. She is 100 percent for the Lord and the work in every way, and she is now teaching the beginners in our Sunday school.

Some Sunday-School Joy—Honolulu Hawaii

We are not free from hindrances of one kind or another. There are always the hindrances of carelessness, indifference, the flesh, and such. But above all we believe God. The Hawaiian lady referred to above faces very great opposition within her own family, but it is bringing her closer to Him. She just recently has had her long hair cut, which to her is a mark of spirituality. She herself testifies: "Now everyone knows I will never dance the hula any more."

Each year there is a turnover of population in this community as different military personnel are transferred or discharged, and this naturally means a turnover in attendance at Grace Chapel. This is most discouraging at times. Just recently we have lost some of the most faithful adherents to the Word and work that God has privileged us to know and our prayers and hearts are continually with them. I believe the Lord has really led some faithful servants from these shores to other areas to serve Him in one way or another.

There is no curtailment in the ministry of the Word here at all and that ministry is the joy of our hearts. God is blessing in souls being saved almost weekly through some avenue of service, and He has given a fellowship that is sweet to behold. To God goes all the credit.

WHO WOULDN'T?

Who wouldn't like to receive a substantial check every six months for the rest of his life?

Who wouldn't desire the assurance that when the journey on this earth has been completed his money and properties left behind would continue to serve the Lord?

Who wouldn't want to know that even for the remaining years of this life the possessions God has entrusted to him will go on year after year winning the lost in distant lands to Christ?

Foreign-missions annuity investments are the answer.

They pay up to 8 percent on a scale graduated according to age and are computed semiannally. While you live and after you have gone to be with the Lord your money invested in foreign missions annuities continues to preach the Gospel in foreign lands. With foreign-mission annuity investments you can be assured that your money will not be lost to the Lord's work after your homegoing.

Ask for a personal visit from some member of the Board of Trustees of the Foreign Missionary Society or from some member of the office staff in order that the details may be explained to you. Write the Brethren Foreign Mission Office, Box 588, Winona Lake, Ind., for full particulars.

OPPORTUNITIES . . .

Such opportunities for advancement in our various fields as have probably never been our portion up to the present time are facing us now. Yet we are almost stymied by the lack of trained missionary volunteers and trained national and native workers. Of course, back of all this stands the ever-challenging need for funds.

We so very greatly appreciate the increase of over $21,000 in this year's offering above the amount for the corresponding time last year. But we are still $60,000 short of our actual needs for the year ahead if we are to even expand in the necessary way to use our present missionary forces to the very best advantage. Our needs for this year were announced as $272,000, and those are actual needs. The amount of $272,000 is not a padded goal. To date during this year we have received about $212,000. In other words, there is every indication that before the foreign-mission offering comes in next year we will need at least $60,000 over and above that which we have received up to the present time this year.

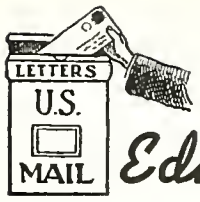
It would be of very great help to us if each congregation would follow the plan of reporting to our office on a monthly basis. Many folks give to foreign missions each month through their home churches. If the financial officers in each church could forward to us such gifts, with the names and addresses of donors, as soon as possible after the end of each month, we would certainly appreciate it.

Will we be able to claim these tremendous opportunities which are before us?

Yes; providing we accept our great mutual—

RESPONSIBILITIES.

A REAL ANSWER TO PRAYER



There was grave concern when word reached us that Miss Estella Myers, pioneer missionary to Africa, was to come home on an emergency medical furlough for possible surgery. United prayer on her behalf went up to God both here and around the world. Special prayer sessions were held at National Conference, asking God to touch her body with physical healing.

God heard and answered marvelously. No surgery was necessary and definite progress was shown almost immediately in her physical condition. There is now every evidence that her recovery will be complete in a few months. She is happily situated at the home of her sister-in-law in Iowa and commutes back and forth to see the doctor. Praise the Lord for His goodness in hearing and answering prayer on her behalf!

A DUMMY CHRISTIAN

At a meeting in the city of Nanking some years ago a Chinese rose and began to cry for mercy with groans and tears.

When at length he was able to speak, he prayed: "O God, forgive me. I have been a dummy Christian. When I was converted the Devil came to me and said: 'There are preachers to do the preaching. You need not bother about it.' I listened to the Devil's lie, and all these years I have been a dummy Christian, living at ease while souls have been lost."—Dawn (Eng.).

Editor's Mail Box

Bertha Abel writes from Rio Cuarto, Argentina—

"A goodly number of new folks have been coming to the Sunday-night services as a result of the radio program. Several weeks ago, when Brother Schrock showed a roll of Moody scientific pictures on astronomy—he had announced it over the radio the day before—we had between 20 and 25 completely new folks in the meeting. At the service the last Sunday night in August a woman and her daughter, who have been coming every Sunday night for about six weeks as a result of the radio program, accepted the Lord as their Saviour. The radio ministry is really proving to be a great blessing and we praise the Lord for it. We're thinking about having another program on Tuesday evenings, but it isn't definite yet. Please pray for this phase of the Lord's work, as well as for the others."

Encouraging news from the Maconaghys in Jose Marmol, Argentina—

"We had a good meeting last night (the last Sunday evening in August). We've been praying for the Lord to lead in more men, and last night there was a goodly number. One man came for the first time. Hill talked with him after the meeting and he said that Hill had given him a tract that same afternoon. He read it and said to himself, "This is what I want." It had the stamp on with our address and the time of meeting, so he came —the first time he ever heard the Gospel. Hill dealt with him and he made a decision. Time will tell if it was real —we trust and pray that it was. He lives just four blocks from here, is married, and has two children. Pray for him and his family.

TAPES, SLIDES, AND FILMSTRIPS NOW AVAILABLE

Many pastors have been asking for tapes and visual aids on foreign-mission subjects. We are glad to announce that the following are available to those requesting them: (1) "God's Way Is the Best Way," a tape of about 23 minutes with an accompanying set of colored slides, presenting the story of the Marvin Goodman family during the illness of little Anne, resulting finally in their return to Africa. (2) A 40-frame filmstrip (with accompanying script) entitled, "Brazilian River," depicting life on the mighty Amazon River as seen by our Brethren missionaries to Brazil. (3) "I Want to Go Back," a 13-minute tape recording with colored slides to synchronize, expressing Miss Mary Emmert's joy upon her return to Africa after nine years in the homeland.

We have a limited number of each of these and will send them out on a first-come-first-served basis. It is hoped that every church will use one or more of these in the near future. Address your inquiries to the Brethren Foreign Mission Office, P. O. Box 588, Winona Lake, Ind.

NEWS

NORWALK, CALIF. The Christian day school of the Norwalk Brethren Church has 148 enrolled in the first five grades and kindergarten. Henry Rempel is pastor.

ANKENYTOWN, OHIO. The laymen's rally of the Northern Ohio District was held at the First Brethren Church on Sept. 16, with Dr. Bernard Schneider as the speaker. The Ankenytown church observed homecoming on Sept. 25, with Fred Fogle, missionary on furlough from France, as the guest speaker. Brother Fogle was a former pastor of this church. Neil Beery is pastor.

MASSILLON, OHIO. Milo Williams has resigned as the pastor of the Grace Brethren Church here. The resignation is effective Oct. 30.

WINONA LAKE, IND. The Brethren Missionary Herald would appreciate if notice would be sent at once when orders are improperly filled. Our churches deserve the best of service, but mistakes can only be corrected when we are notified immediately. Do not write other firms when they make mistakes; contact the Missionary Herald and the problem will be cared for immediately.

HANOVER, PA. The Atlantic District laymen's retreat was held at Penn Grove Sept. 23.

LISTIE, PA. The fall rally of the East District WMC will be held at the Listie Brethren Church Oct. 6.

CHEYENNE, WYO. An extension department has been instituted at the First Brethren Church, Russell Williams, pastor. A regular home study course has been incorporated for those unable to attend because of distance.

WOOSTER, OHIO. The churches of the Eastern States are invited to a Sunday-school rally to be held here Oct. 10-12 under the auspices of the National Sunday School Board. Rev. Kenneth Ashman will be host pastor.

ISRAEL (EP). A group of Israeli teen-agers have organized themselves into the Israeli Christian Youth Group whose aim and purpose is to witness for Christ to the inhabitants of this land. Advertisements in local newspapers have resulted in as many as 240 replies from a single advertisement. To all those replying a New Testament is sent.

SEATTLE, WASH. The contract for the new church building has been signed and actual construction is underway. Thomas Hammers is pastor.

ASHLAND, OHIO. The softball team of the West Tenth Street Brethren Church has finished an undefeated second round in their local league. Rev. Miles Taber is pastor.

ISRAEL (EP). The State of Israel, enjoying a highly profitable tourist season, has acted to assure more of the same. Red tape has been eliminated so that American citizens no longer need apply for an Israel Visitors' Visa; they now need only have their passports stamped at their port of entry into Israel.

GOSHEN, IND. The Grace Brethren Church will dedicate their new building on Oct. 2, with Dr. A. J. McClain as the dedication speaker. Herman Hein is pastor.

FORT WAYNE, IND. Tom Julien, a middler in Grace Seminary, has been called by the First Brethren Church as an assistant to the pastor. The prayer meetings here averaged 100 during the summer months. Two Sunday-school departments have moved into the newly acquired Sunday-school annex. Mark Malles, pastor of the church, has recovered completely from the recent surgery on his throat.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Brethren church bulletin No. 5 is ready for distribution. Orders should be sent to the Missionary Herald. Number 5 is a two-color bulletin, selling at $1.20 a hundred. Bulletins 1-4 are 95c per hundred. The Missionary Herald sincerely appreciates the many fine compliments on these bulletins. Samples will be mailed on request.

NOTICE. There will be no regular Missionary Herald on Oct. 29, but the special issue known as The Brethren Annual.

WINONA LAKE, IND. The new Brethren Sunday School Contest, sponsored by the National Sunday School Board, begins Oct. 2. The Grace Brethren Church of Denver won the contest this last year. For full details, contact Harold Etling, national director, Box 718.

SPECIAL. Inasmuch as several announcements of evangelistic meetings arrived too late to be included in the "Pray for These Meetings" column, they are being listed as follows: Cuyahoga Falls, William Steffler, evangelist, closes Oct. 2; Hagerstown, Md. (Calvary), Dean Fetterhoff, evangelist, closes Oct. 2; Hagerstown, Md. (Grace), Nathan Meyer, evangelist, begins Oct. 2; Clayhole, Ky., Charles Kiloski, evangelist, begins Oct. 3.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Archie Lynn concluded a week of evangelistic meetings at the Winona Lake Brethren Church on Sept. 25. Prayer meeting attendance for the two weeks prior to the meetings was 225 and 250. Dr. Herman Koontz is pastor.

JAPAN (EP). There is "grave danger" that the government will stop Christian pastors from visiting prisons. A new ruling restores the prewar system of full-time chaplains, appointed by the wardens, who would restore mostly Buddhists. During the past two years about 300 pastors have been engaged in prison evangelism. These now face the possibility of being denied admittance to all jails.

OWENSBORO, KY. Jack Keely, city building inspector, was forced to turn to the Bible to interpret some instructions written on a specification plan for a new General Electric plant. Written on a section of the specification that concerned some grading on a hilly area of the land was the notation, "Isaiah 40:4."

THIS ACCIDENT CLAIMED FIVE LIVES

LET'S FACE IT

By Edward Jackson

Patrolman, Ohio State Patrol
Piqua, Ohio

Consistency in our Christian life is our testimony to the world. We, as Christians, would not think of going out and deliberately damaging someone's property or endangering their life, and surely we would not attempt to steal from our neighbor. As a matter of fact, we object very sincerely to anyone who disregards the rights of others.

This reasoning sounds very logical and we would all have to agree that to respect the rights of others is Biblical. Let us survey the situation as it is and not from a theoretical view. Christians have an obligation and duty to perform. The traffic laws of our United States are written for the same purpose as the laws for governing the protection of life and property. We rise up in horror at the crimes being committed and the juvenile delinquency, but we fail to remember that as we drive our automobile we sometimes commit just as serious a crime and then at times are inclined to boast about our daring exploits such as how we outran that police officer.

Headlines on the front page of a large midwestern city read as follows: "Local Minister Arrested for Racing With Another Vehicle." This minister is known personally by the writer. In this case one might bring up the argument that this minister hurt no one and that there was no accident; therefore, why is a minister any different from any other person on that road that might be tempted to race with some "cowboy" who has no better judgment. The fact is that the world today realizes that Christians have a testimony to live even if they are not aware of this fact.

It is true that no one was injured physically by this act of racing, but what about the young people of the pastor's church? If at some time in the future one of the young persons of the church, or even one of the older persons for that matter, followed this example and were not fortunate enough to avoid an accident or be stopped before the accident occurs, where does the responsibility lie? The Scripture states very clearly in Romans 13:13 that we are not to be STUMBLING BLOCKS"; therefore, our responsibility as Christians is quite clear. However, these laws do not pertain only to ministers. The law is written for all.

A few years ago a Christian layman, well known in Christian circles and known in the city, was observed by the writer passing a truck over a double yellow line, which is an unlawful act. The writer immediately turned his cruiser around and gave pursuit. The violator observed the cruiser turning around, so, after passing the crest of a hill out of sight of the pursuing officer, he pulled into a used-car lot and attempted to conceal his identity as the person who passed over the yellow line.

When the offender was located and asked why he pulled into the lot, he stated that he was looking for an automobile. Further investigation revealed that the offender never left his automobile while in the lot. He merely sat in his automobile waiting and hoping that the officer would lose him. This man not only broke the law but attempted to cover his sin by lying and hiding from its consequences. From the start of time this seems to be man's way out. At the time of this incident, this man had a number of passengers in his car. Were they influenced? I'll let the readers draw their own conclusions.

The two previously mentioned examples are not isolated cases, but just two of many with which the writer has had experience.

Christians, let's become serious about this problem of safety and traffic-law enforcement. Let's face the fact. Does your driving reflect the fact that you are a Christian? It can, you know. Or do you fall into the category of those people on the highways who pass everything because they are in a hurry to save souls? I will grant that we are to be zealous in the Lord and our main goal is to save souls, but in I Peter 2:13-18 the Scripture also states that we are all subject to every ordinance of man. This is not the only reference that could be made. There are many.

The question is, who gives people the authority to violate the law because they are in a hurry to save souls? What these people fail to remember is that in their hurry to save souls they possibly will lose their own life and cut their soul-winning short many years, and even worse, in their haste they might take the life of some innocent person who was

THE LAST-DAY SIGNS

The Prophetiscope

God has provided a prophetiscope for us. It is the prophetiscope of prophecy, the scope of prophecy. The microscope enables us to see small objects. The telescope brings distant objects close. If we want to be informed about the past, we study history. If we want to know about present-day events, we read the news. But there is but one source of truth about the future, the prophetiscope of the Bible. "No man knoweth what the morrow will bring forth." But the Lord knows the end from the beginning. God's prophetiscope is infallible in its divine precision. II Peter 1:19 declares: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts." The word of prophecy is this sure light for this age of darkness in which God's children move as lights. We are not the children of darkness, but of light.

The Rapture

What does the prophetiscope reveal? The one magnetic, supreme event that stands out in the boldest outline is the Rapture! Some seek to penetrate into the future to satisfy morbid curiosity. But God's children who really love the Lord are looking for His appearance. The supreme quest of our hearts is "When will the Lord Jesus Christ come?" The Scriptures teach that the Revelation of Christ to the whole world when every eye shall see Him, comes after the Rapture. The Bible teaches that the Tribulation period, divided into two parts, comes between the two mountain peaks of prophecy, between the Rapture and the Revelation. Other related events, such as the appearance of the Antichrist, the Judgment of the Nations, the establishment of the Kingdom of God with the 1000-year reign of Christ as King of Kings, and other related events and conditions will unfold after the Rapture. The starting point, the beginning of the consummation, the pivotal point of prophecy is the Rapture. When will Jesus Christ appear in the Rapture?

I Thessalonians 4:13-18

When will I Thessalonians 4:13-18 be fulfilled? When will the mysterious disappearance of all saved people take place? When will the secret, silent, swift, startling, dateless event, the Rapture—that sudden, instantaneous, invisible, snatching away of the Bride to meet the Bridegroom in the air—come? When will this greatest air meeting of history come? From the Rapture on, throughout all eternity, the present invisible Christ will be visible to us. "So shall we ever be with the Lord." We will be face to face with Christ our Saviour. From the Rapture on, the victory over death and the grave will be eternally celebrated. When, oh when, will my Lord appear? When will I be raptured? When will that eternal, rapturous delight of the soul, the calling, catching unto Christ, the claiming of the blood-washed saints of the ages by the Bridegroom, come to pass? This is the treasure truth of our search in this message.

Turning Point of History!

This event, the Rapture, will be the second turning point of history. The first advent of Christ was the first one. Everything preceding Christ's first coming has become B. C. and everything following this, A. D. Even so, the Rapture will be the date of reckoning in the future. Doubtless the world will change its calendar again to mark that event. From then on, the earth-dwellers, those left behind to enter into the Tribulation, will say: "Before the mysterious disappearance of the millions." This dateless event, the Rapture, will become the date of mystery to those left behind. When will this come? When will we hear the shout (Bridegroom's call), the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God? Are there signs indicating when this cataclysmic event will come? In Matthew 24:3 the disciples asked Christ, "What will be the sign of thy coming?" Not signs, but the sign! They also asked, "When shall the consummation of the age come?" In this message we are not seeking the signs of the consummation of the age, but the sign of His coming. Our hearts long to see Him, to meet Him, to be with Him. We are not so much interested in the things, the events, the conditions, the Antichrist, the King of the North, the King of the South, the Kings of the East, nor the formation of the ten-kingdom confederacy, nor the invasion of Israel land, or other events, but we are consumed with longing to know if that magnet of prophecy, the Rapture, is near. Oh, that it were today! "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," and come quickly.

Horror of Date-Setting

I have an actual horror of date-setting. I hate it! This setting of dates of the Rapture has done more damage to the doctrine than any other one thing. But, on the other hand, I desire to avoid allowing my horror of date-setting to blind my heart to the discernment of signs given in the Bible indicating that "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." In Matthew 24:32-33 Christ gave the illustration of the budding of the fig tree, a sure sign in that country of the nearness of summer. Then He said: "So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors." What would be near? The coming of Christ? Is it near now! Have "all these things" come to pass?

of the LORD'S COMING

No Contradiction

There is no contradiction between Christ's teaching that we may know when the Rapture is near and what He said to the disciples in Acts 1:7, when He declared to them: "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons." No; it was not for them to know the times or the seasons. They were standing at the threshold of this church age. Their responsibility was to begin the program of world evangelism. But, we believe, we are standing at the close of this church age, in the last days of the last time, and we need to discern the signs, the seasons of His coming!

World Signs

In Matthew, chapter 24, Christ gave certain world signs. Since the Rapture precedes the consummation, these are of related interest to it. Christ gave eight world signs, describing world conditions which will prevail as we approach the end of the age. These eight are: (1) World Wars, (2) Great Famines, (3) Great Plagues, (4) Great Earthquakes, (5) Exceptional Persecution of Christians, (6) The Rise and Growth and Popularity of False Religions, (7) Abounding Iniquity, (8) Promotion of World Evangelization Testimony. Christ made a division between the first four and the last four of these signs. After giving the first four, He said: "All these are the beginnings of sorrows"; namely, wars, famines, plagues, and earthquakes. Then He said: "Then shall there be persecution, false religions, abounding iniquity, and evangelization testimony." Let us get a bird's-eye view of history relative to these eight signs.

First—Beginning with World War I, 1914-1918, the world has been in a state of world war continually. The threat of, preparation for, probability of, fear of world war is daily intensifying, in spite of conferences and agreements. The first world war cost 270 billions of dollars, caused 37 million casualties, and put 50 million men under arms.

Second—In 1920, the world's worst famine came in Russia and China; 50,000 died daily over an extended period.

Third—Then came the world's worst plague, Spanish Influenza, taking a far greater toll than the world war. One-half million died of it in the U. S. alone. It was without parallel in the history of diseases.

Fourth—In 1920 great earthquakes, the greatest in history, came in China and two years later in Japan; 300,000 lives were lost in these. Now were these four, greatest of their kind in history, the beginnings of sorrows?

Fifth—Since then, unusual persecution of God's children over the whole earth has prevailed. There are far more deadly ways of persecution in these days than burning at the stake or imprisoning. The Devil is becoming more subtle in these last days in his methods. Even in the U. S. A., with all our religious freedom, the church is being discriminated against and real persecution is increasing and intensifying.

Sixth—False religions, cults, isms, delusions of the Devil, are growing in an appalling manner. These counterfeits and substitutes of Satan appear to be more powerful with many than the truth of Christianity, genuine, Biblical Christianity. A delusion believed in wholeheartedly, and promoted with great zeal, has more power than the truth, believed in halfheartedly, adulterated with compromises, and promoted indifferently.

Seventh—Surely iniquity, lawlessness, is abounding. The discoveries and inventions of modern science, rapid transit and communication, have made possible certain indulgences without fear of reaping a corresponding harvest of physical consequences.

Eighth—Programs of world evangelization, the spreading of the Gospel, taking advantage of inventions of travel and communication, are seeking to evangelize the world in this generation. You ask, "What Gospel?" There is but one Gospel! "If any man preach any other gospel . . . let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:9). We conclude on the eight world signs of Matthew, chapter 24, that we find at least a partial fulfillment of these in recent history, indicating that the consummation of the age is drawing near. Since the Rapture precedes the consummation, these indicate that the coming of the Lord draweth nigh, it is even at the doors!

Nuclear Energy Sign

In II Peter, chapter 3, we find the nuclear energy sign. The background for it is the rise of a special class of scoffers—scientific scoffers—denying the prophetic accuracy of the Scriptures. The apostles and prophets had foretold their appearance before. The term employed by the Spirit to describe them is found, in this form, in no other place in the Bible. It means, "childish triflers." Scientists, boasting of superior intellect and knowledge, described as "childish triflers." Then follows the prophecy of the time and manner in which God will employ nuclear energy as the element in the refining furnace into which the creation will be cast for purifying, preparatory to the eternal state. Now the question we ask is: "Is the discovery of nuclear energy and the inventions by man whereby this divine power can be harnessed of prophetic significance as a sign? Of this we are certain: it has made possible a war in comparison with which all preceding wars sink into insignificance. It has also brought a state foretold in Luke 21:25-26: "Upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity . . . men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Nuclear energy, harnessed by man, brings us closer to the terrors of the Tribulation period. The unlocking of the secrets of nuclear energy has enabled us to grasp in understanding (having already received them by faith) the nature of the judgments foretold in the Book of Revelation.

How is this related to the Rapture? In Luke 21:36 our Lord promised protection to a certain class of persons from that time of destruction, almost complete annihilation, which will come upon the earth-dwellers, by means of nuclear energy. Christ promises protection by exclusion. In verse 34, He exhorts us to "take heed to yourselves," concerning outstanding sins of the day, in order to escape the judgments which "as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth." Then Christ said: "Watch ye therefore and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." How can this thing be? There is but one worthiness on the basis of which escape is possible, the worthiness in Christ! There is but one hiding place from the destruction which will come upon the whole earth. "No place to hide!" One place only! That place is exclusion, not to be where the destruction is. Where is that? "Standing before (with) the Son of man!" Since the Rapture alone will bring this to pass, we see how the closer the world comes in the preparation to nuclear energy destruction, the closer we come to the upward calling, snatching away, of the redeemed in the Rapture. This then is the time to take heed to II Peter 3:11-14.

Many Other Signs

There are many other signs, such as the Times of the Gentiles, the Fullness of the Gentiles, Israel and her land, political, commercial, ecclesiastical, industrial signs, and others. Although we are not unaware of these and are deeply interested in them, we pass them by for the outstanding sign, which is of the keenest interest to Christians.

The Apostasy

The twofold apostasy sign, doctrinal and experiential backsliding, ought to be of the greatest interest to the church. It hits at the very heart of the church. The Scriptures foretell a falling away from Biblical doctrines and Scriptural standards of conduct on the part of professed Christians. Revelation will be denied and ideals of Christian conversation and conduct will be cast aside, not by the world, but by those professing to believe the revelation and to love their Lord. This is the church sign. The twofold apostasy!

This is vital! Purity is a condition of power! A church must be clean to be conquering, disciplined to be daring, holy to be happy. A church must be true to the Bible in doctrine and life to be peaceable, powerful, and progressive. Remember Ananias and Sapphira? The Holy Spirit struck apostasy with the penalty of death. The sin of lying, deceiving, hypocrisy, brought swift judgment. Many church members do much worse than these today and are exalted to high offices with the certain knowledge that they do them. Such are rejected of God, dead but not carried out! Suppose the Lord would do thus today? What would take place in many churches, if at the beginning of the Protestant morning mass, the Lord would strike with death all apostates? There would be no need of any duplicate service to accommodate the crowd. In fact, the ambulances and trucks of the community would be necessary to clear away the corpses—not ushers but undertakers would be needed.

Scriptures

There are numerous Scriptures foretelling and describing this apostasy (I Tim. 4:1-2; II Tim. 4:3-4; 3:13; II Thess. 2:3; II Pet. 2:1-2). In these and other Scriptures, seven denials are foretold: (1) Denial of "the faith once for all delivered to the saints"; (2) denial of sound doctrine, refusal to tolerate it; (3) denial of the essential humanity of Christ as the Son of man. (4) denial of blood atonement; (5) denial of the source of power of godliness (Holy Spirit); (6) denial of separation from the world; (7) denial of different types of authority, thus creating a reign of lawlessness. Then the Scriptures forecast that following the "turning away" from these, there will be a "turning to" counterfeits, substitutes of Satan; a turning to soothing-syrup teachers, soft-pedaling leaders, palaverers, religious racketeers.

The Fountainhead of the Apostasy

The fountain source of the apostasy is denial of the inspiration of the Bible! The Roman Catholic Church is an apostate church now! It denies the supreme authority of the Bible. In one of its paid ads in the American Magazine, in answering the question, "What is the difference between the Catholic and the Protestant Church?" it declared that the Protestant Church believes that the Bible is the supreme authority, but the Catholic Church believes that the church (Catholic of course) is the supreme authority. In another ad entitled, "No . . . The Bible Is Not Our Sole Guide," it states: "The Bible is not and was not intended to be the sole guide or the sole source of Christian teaching and belief." Calling itself the "Mother of the Bible," this apostate church claims to speak with authority superseding the Bible. But the Protestant Church no longer believes the Bible to be the supreme and sole source of authority either. It ignores, rejects, denies, has apostatized from essential doctrines and set aside Biblical standards of conduct as well.

Brethren Apostasy

The word "apostasy" means "falling away from." There are degrees of apostasy, a process of apostasy, a climax of apostasy. It can be partial, gradual, and climactic. Has the Brethren Church apostatized? Not in denial of the inspiration of the Bible! Not in rejection of those doctrines, commonly called "essentials." But we have fallen and are falling away from beliefs and practices believed by us to be taught in the Bible and practiced by us for years. May I suggest a couple of these in loving admonition?

Office of Deacon

The first church officers, after the apostles, were deacons. Acts 6 gives the record of the need, the choosing, and the ordaining of seven deacons. The church had developed growing pains. Race relationship problems had arisen between the Grecians and the Hebrews. Social service problems had developed. The collectivism of the voluntary Christian community had created grave situations. But the apostles would not be turned aside from their prime mission, the ministry "of prayer and the Word." In order to care for these problems, the church chose seven deacons. They were ordained, set aside, in exactly the same manner as elders were.

In the Brethren Church, in recent years, a new interpretation of the meaning of the office of deacon has been introduced. This teaches that the term does not refer to a distinct office but to all who serve in any office or capacity. This is surely a definite departure from the historic interpretation which has prevailed in the church. If this new interpretation is true to the Bible, we must accept it as a church. Our motto of the Bible demands acceptance. If it is Biblical, we must believe and practice it. Now if we accept this new interpretation, where are we? I Timothy 3:12 declares that a deacon can be the husband of only one living wife. Yet the practice is increasing rapidly in our churches of putting in office those who have been divorced and remarried, husbands of more than one living wife. If the term "deacon" means anyone who serves, then when a church chooses and puts in office anyone in any capacity in any part of the church life one who has been divorced and remarried, having more than one living wife, we have apostatized from the Bible. One of two things must be true—either this new interpretation is a falling away or the choosing of those who are living in open violation of the Bible in any office of the church or auxiliary organization of the church is a far more serious apostasy.

Nonresistance

The Brethren Church from her origin has believed in Biblical nonresistance. Hundreds of resolutions, reaffirming our faith in this belief, have been passed by national conferences, district conferences, and local churches. Officially before the world and on record in Washington, D. C., we have proclaimed our faith in this Scriptural doctrine. Officially we still maintain this testimony, but practically we are repudiating it. There are elders in our church who have openly repudiated the doctrine. We are ordaining elders frequently who declare in their examination that they do not believe in this teaching. We seldom teach it to our membership any more. As pastors we are expected to honor those choosing actual combatant military service. Both positively and negatively we have apostatized from this doctrine. I challenge us to either officially repudiate the doctrine, ceasing to act the hypocrite before the world, or demand belief in it before ordination to the eldership and begin teaching it as if we really believed it.

Biblical Baptism

The leaven of dual and triple membership is beginning to permeate the meal of the Biblical doctrine of water baptism, triune immersion. This is dangerous. "A little leaven leaveneth the lump." To adopt any form of membership in the Brethren Church other than by the door of Biblical baptism will produce an adulterated church membership which will eventually produce confusion and result in more problems than it purposes to solve.

Shall He Find Faith?

When the Lord comes in the Rapture, shall He find faith, "the faith," the full faith of the Bible, the whole Bible, nothing but the Bible, in the Brethren Church? The apostasy, we believe, is the sign of the Rapture. But let us beware, beloved Brethren, lest we make any contribution to it.

LET'S FACE IT

not prepared to go. This is something to consider. What right have we? It is not given to us by Christ.

Let us refer back to the Old Testament, specifically in Exodus 20. We are all familiar with these passages of Scripture, I am sure. The Scripture says that thou shalt not kill. How then shall we escape, if through our negligence, we do kill? The writer realizes as much as any person can that we serve a gracious God, but just how long can we continue to break the law and still say we serve a gracious God?

The law says that no person shall operate a vehicle without due regard for the safety and rights of pedestrians and drivers, and occupants of all other vehicles so as to endanger the life, limb, or property of any person while in lawful use of the streets or highway. This law is based directly on the Ten Commandments and Christ's teaching. How can we, as Christians, disobey the law and still feel that we are consistent in our Christian living.

Remember, it has been wisely said that we, as Christians, are the only Bible some of our friends read.

Let's face it, Christian; consistency means obeying ALL laws to the best of our ability. This does not mean just the laws that are convenient, BUT ALL LAWS. Remember, the Bible says that we are to obey all ordinances of man for the Lord's sake.

Prayer Pointers

By Mrs. Frank Lindower
Uniontown, Ohio

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray for the newly established Sunday-school calling program in Johnson City, Tenn., and that many of the contacts will result in souls saved.

2. Pray that the Lord will provide the financing for the first unit of the West Covina, Calif., church. Praise Him for providing the loans for property improvement needed before a building permit could be obtained.

3. Praise the Lord for the completion of the upper auditorium at Denver, Colo., and pray for the dedication plans at Thanksgiving time.

4. Praise the Lord for the rededication of lives since national conference and for the spirit of revival to continue in Mansfield, Ohio, Second Grace Brethren Church.

5. Pray for the new personnel, Miss Janice Baer and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Metzger, who joined the Navaho Mission staff, that they may work into the program of expansion in that needy field. Also pray for the superintendent of the mission, Rev. Evan Adams, and the gospel-team work that is now being done by Navahos under his supervision.

6. Continue steadfast in prayer for the Thanksgiving Home Mission Offering. Fifty or more points will be looking to us for help. The answer will depend on your prayers and gifts!

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Praise God for the many new students He has brought into our college and seminary, that each may be able to adjust to the routine of the school.

2. Pray for wisdom for the administrative committee and the deans as they meet the many problems that arise in a fast-growing school.

3. Pray that the new dormitory arrangements may function smoothly and satisfactorily for all concerned.

4. Pray for the financial needs of the school, both for the monthly current expenses and also necessary funds for a new building.

5. Pray that God will lay the school and its needs more deeply upon the hearts of the entire brotherhood.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Praise the Lord for the definite answer to prayer in the great health improvement of Miss Estella Myers.

2. Pray for the Don Hockings, who are now busy purchasing and packing their outfit in preparation for missionary service in Africa. Pray also that visas will be forthcoming.

3. Praise the Lord for definite blessing on the work in Hawaii and pray for much-needed additional Sunday-school space.

4. Praise the Lord for His hand of blessing on the recently started radio program in Argentina, and pray that this marvelous opportunity shall never be denied our workers in that land.

5. Pray for the exploration trip deep into Mexico in this month of October by Brethren Haag, Howard, Edmiston, and General Secretary R. D. Barnard.

6. Pray for students in training for all types of Christian service on all of our mission fields.

7. Pray for a conserving of results obtained in the first meetings in France in the portable tabernacle, and pray for its future ministry.

8. Pray for the situation in Brazil where we have only one missionary family on each station, due to one family being on furlough.

9. Current needs will exhaust our current income before next year's offering is received. Pray for wisdom in the administration of this great work.

MISSIONARY HERALD—

1. Pray that the Lord might supply some scarce materials that will be needed in the construction of the new denominational office building.

2. Pray that the Lord might send a buyer for our present building.

3. Pray for the writers of the Sunday-school quarterlies, and the entire Herald staff as they perform their faithful ministry unto the Lord.

WMC—

1. Pray for wisdom and understanding for all our new WMC officers and committees.

2. That each member of WMC may yield their selves as a present unto the Lord to be used for His glory!

3. That each officer and member may be faithful in their duties and that they may be performed cheerfully and ungrudgingly.

SMM—

1. Pray for the girls in each local church who do not attend SMM.

2. Pray that every girl will be a living testimony in school or at work.

3. Keep praying for the National Project Offering. The Bethany Guest Home will be a great help to the Horneys in Taos, N. Mex.

4. Pray for Miss Evelyn Fuqua and the work in Kentucky as they begin building a house in that community.

5. Pray for a national youth director to guide and give counsel to all young people in colleges and in our churches.

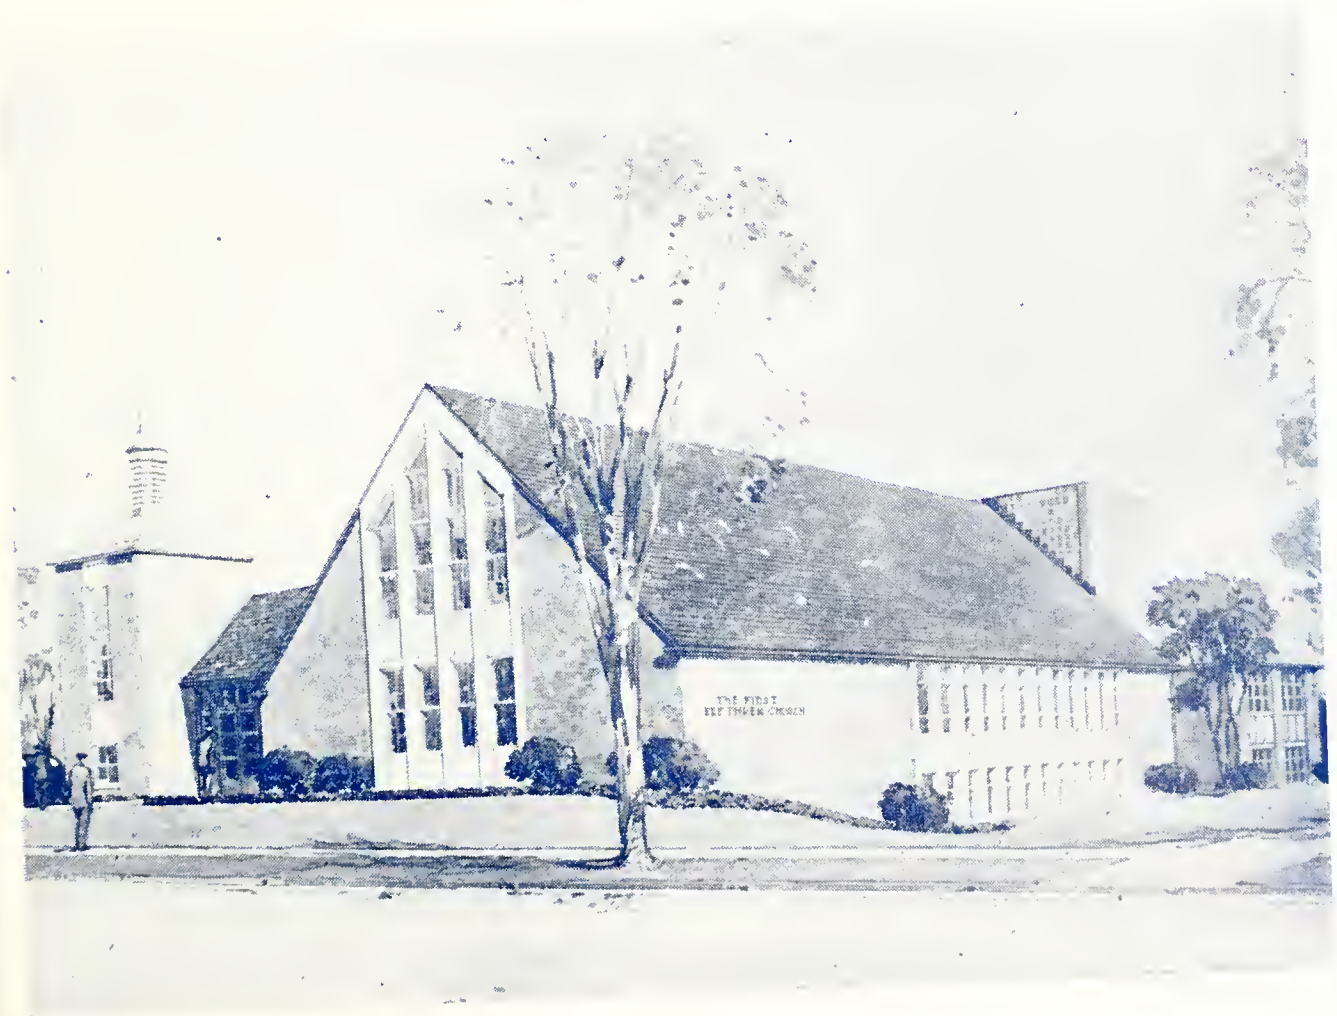
BYF—

1. Thank the Lord for the dozens of victories at our summer camps and our national Camp Bethany at Portland and Winona Lake.

2. Seek the Lord's guidance as program writers and promotional materials are prepared for the coming year.

3. Pray that the Lord will lead the committee appointed by the national conference to present a challenging program for Brethren young men.

4. Pray that God will lay the need of a youth director on the heart of someone qualified to do the work!



SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD—

Pray for strength and wisdom for the director, and for vision, passion, and enthusiasm for souls in each of our Brethren Sunday schools.

"AS UNTO THE LORD" Col. 3:23

AS UNTO THE LORD IN THE HOME

By Mrs. Gerald Polman

My husband and I approached the polite typist to record a few vital statistics before a routine chest X-ray. Name? Address? Occupation? "Housewife," I replied, using tone and inflection which implied that it was the poorest and most insignificant occupation I could have imagined.

As she finished the card, I silently reprimanded myself for falling in line with a thought common to many of like occupation. The privilege of daily caring for one's family and home is indeed a blessing and a high calling.

God's Word gives assurance that wives and mothers are to be "keepers at home" (Titus 2:5). The virtuous woman of Proverbs 31 "looketh well to the ways of her household." (This is not intended as a rebuke to those of our sisters who must of necessity work outside the home. Your labor we know is double.)

Convinced that our occupation is an important one, should we not do all in our power to live up to this high calling? Why should not we who are Christians have the whitest wash, the neatest house, and a generally well-ordered household? We are ambassadors for Christ in all that we do, not just in leisure hours.

When the dishes are stacked high, the mending is even higher, and the living room is cluttered with last night's paper and forgotten toys, let's make this our refrain: "Do it heartily, as unto the Lord."

Often I think of a Christian teacher who remarked that she didn't want the Lord to come and find her beds unmade and dirty dishes left undone. Our homemaking and these daily chores ought all to be done "as unto the Lord."

The early Christians who were so on fire for the Lord and who won so many converts did not forget the importance of the home in their zeal. Acts 5:42 says: "Daily . . . in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." Are you using your influence to institute the family altar in your homes? Perhaps your main duty is to see that nothing comes up to usurp the time reserved for the family altar.

When guests drop into your home, do you advertise or hide the fact that you are a child of God? Is there a Bible prominent, or a verse of Scripture on the wall? Are there some things absent from your home (certain books, magazines, etc.) which also testify loudly as to what you are?

Do you have tracts in an easily accessible place to give to the person who rings your doorbell for one reason or another?

Would you be willing for a visitor to hear some of the conversation in your home? How is your dress around the home? Is your dark and silent house at church hours a neighborhood witness that a Christian is faithful to the services of the church?

We should not only be prepared to give a witness to those who happen to come into our homes, but what a privilege we have in inviting others in for the glory of the Lord. That new couple who has come to your church a few times would feel so much more at home there after a visit in your home. How much more receptive to the Word they would be over the dinner table or a cup of coffee in your Christian home!

Your home might be a haven for the Sisterhood girls or the Boys Club. It may be the ideal spot for the young folks from the church to gather. The children in the block could be reached by a weekday Bible class in your home.

Happy the family whose home is dedicated to the Lord. Take a look about you today and see how you may use your home "as unto the Lord."

Spurgeon said: "Home is the grandest of all institutions." Let's live up to our high calling as mistress of the home. "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ" (Col. 3:23-24).

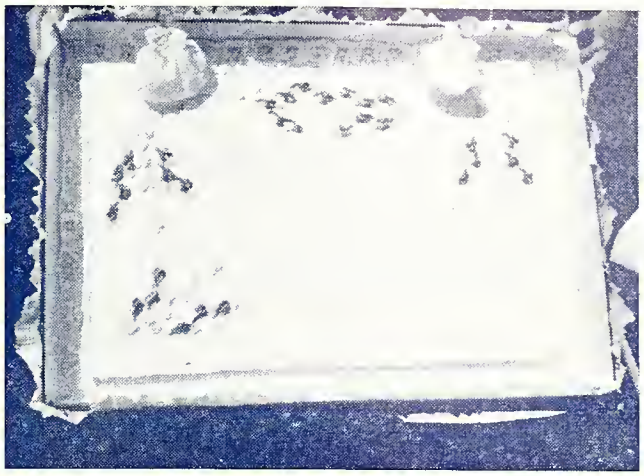
THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 41

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. Hoyt, vice president; William Schaffer, secretary; Ord Gehman, treasurer; Bryson Fetters, member-at-large to Executive Committee; Walter Lepp, S. W. Link, Mark Malles, Robert E. A. Miller, True Hunt, Thomas Hammers; Arnold R. Kriegbaum, ex officio.



BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

One of the highlights of our annual WMC conference this year was the "Happy Birthday" on Saturday morning.

Mrs. Loree Sickel, the first missionary to be supported by the birthday offering, expressed her gratefulness and appreciation to the group. She then read letters from Mrs. Minnie Kennedy and Miss Estella Myers, the two missionaries who were supported by the birthday offering in 1955.

The Northwest District presented Mrs. Sickel with a large, beautifully decorated birthday cake and "Happy Birthday, Dear Missionaries" was sung by the group. The cake was shared at the noon meal by all the missionaries present on the grounds.

On the cake were miniature figures representing Mrs. Kennedy and Miss Myers. The amount of $3,432.11 was written on the cake. This offering will support three missionaries in 1956—Miss Mary Emmert, Africa; Mrs. Jack Zielasko, Brazil; and Mrs. Jack Churchill, Argentina.

Surely our hearts are glad and we praise God for this continued increase in the birthday offerings.

Letters From WMC Birthday Missionaries Read at Conference

Dear Sisters in Christ:

Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. We give thanks to God always for you all, remembering your work of faith and labor of love and steadfastness of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ.

Mrs. Minnie Kennedy

Yes; we are very thankful that we belong to a church whose women have given their lives to the furtherance of the Gospel. I'm reminded of what Paul said in II Corinthians 8:5: "First, they gave themselves unto the Lord, and to us by the will of God." And because of this, what is done is done as to the Lord. Therefore the Lord is blessing your efforts exceeding abundantly. We know that only what is done as unto the Lord brings lasting results. We have found in our work out here that it isn't in the MUCH doing that we accomplish the most for the Lord. It is doing His will and His way that brings the blessing.

Your theme reminds me of an incident I heard about some years ago. A certain person was trying to do everything possible to get the Gospel to the lost. But to some folks it looked as though it was done for self-glory, so they accosted the person about it. When I heard that I searched my own heart and life to make sure that I was doing my work as unto the Lord and not for self-glory or trying to win them to myself alone. I do feel, too, that we need to guard against unkind criticism, because we can't see the heart.

I do appreciate having the privilege of being your birthday missionary for this year. We know we are supported by the whole church, but to be someone's special missionary for a time gives an added boost. Every year is a busy year, but this year is busier than ever. One reason is that I have had to be gone several times already this year and the end is not yet. Then there are several extra jobs that must be done this year, so time doesn't drag ever. We sometimes wish the days were twice as long as they are.

This year has brought another special blessing in the person of a grandson. The Lord marvelously undertook and blessed in a very definite way. There were serious complications, but He overruled them all. We know it was all in answer to prayer, and we do thank and praise Him for all His goodness to us.

The wife of one of our native preachers is very ill, so we have to go and bring her in to the hospital. It isn't very far away, but the nature of her illness forbids her being carried in. They put them in a big wicker basket and sling the basket on a pole. Then two men carry it on their heads or shoulders. It swings back and forth enough to make one seasick.

Later we got the woman here safely and she is receiving the best care. The Lord is able and answers prayer.

Since I have been away so much this year I don't know just how the WMC here is coming along. The last time I visited they were doing nicely. Next week is time for the regular meeting. We have some fine women in the church here.

Thank you all again for your faithfulness and kindness to us. Your in Him.—Minnie Kennedy.

Dear Brethren Women:

I greet you all in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, who gave His life while on earth that we might be saved, and He has given us the privilege of telling this precious story to the unsaved. Whether we preach His Word or support and pray for those who go to the lost, the Lord keeps an account of it all, for He knows it is all for Him. We shall rejoice together some day when we see the number from Africa in heaven because we obeyed His command to evangelize the heathen on the earth. I thank all of you women for your prayers and kindness to us.

The Devil continues his deceiving ways and tries to gain the redeemed ones. There have been times when it seemed he was gaining and our hearts were sad. We know he is a conquered foe, but why the indifference in the Christians and the laziness in the native leaders and teachers? And why the devilish customs of the tribes more manifested in the villages than ever before? For days they danced and beat the drums after drinking. The crowds grew larger, it seemed, as they came from far villages.

Miss Estella Myers

We admitted that something was wrong. What could be done? The Christians at Nzoro started to build a brick church and became weary. It was hard for the catechist to get them to work. We knew then, better than ever before, that only prayer would change things. We decided that every afternoon at 2 o'clock we would meet for a season of prayer. Only three of us missionaries, but we took His promise that He would be with us. We brought our longing to Him, asking His power to work in the hearts of the people. It was not long until we saw a change.

The catechist took courage. The Christians wanted to see their building finished and came to help. Our Sunday school began to take new life and people came forward. The more we saw God answering prayers the more we prayed and realized the strength there was in prayer. Our hearts were burdened and we placed the burden on Him. The more we had to do the more we had to pray. Then Bible school started, with 42 families attending. The women knew so little about reading. How were they all to be taught? Some women from the village who knew how to read volunteered to help teach them. Classes for the men took from 7:30 until noon. A catechist was willing to help and our native nurse was willing to teach writing so every class had a teacher, either black or white. The women spent two hours a day in classes.

Now we are praising the Lord for answered prayer and asking more of Him, for this is His work. He is more concerned than we can ever be and we place it all on Him, asking Him to make of us effective instruments in His hands.

I notice that some of you say you are 100 years old on your birthday. Well, you beat me a bit. I am wondering just how long the Lord wants me to live out here. It will be a sweet and blessed event in God's own time to go home to be with Jesus. This good "fight of faith" will be done and I shall enter into the "joy of the Lord." We wish to glorify God by our life here as long as He pleases, even though it be in the midst of toil, conflict, and suffering, and leave Him to say when it is enough. He knows I cannot do as much as I used to, but I can pray. My traveling in the villages with a "push" in all kinds of weather, and living in all kinds of huts at night, seem to be over, but there are many people near who do not know the Lord. My great sorrow is that I have never won a Moslem to the Lord. How I have tried! Will you not pray with me for them. We have them at the dispensary every day.

The translation work in Pana continues, even though for only a little time a day. So many hours are taken up in teaching. I hope to finish Hebrews this month. Pray for me in this work. I need His strength and wisdom. We know you pray for us. Thanks again for taking us (almost 100 years old) as your missionary this year. May God continue to keep and bless you many more years. Yours in the Blessed Hope.—Estella Myers.

PENNY-A-DAY JEWISH THANK OFFERING

The generosity of the Home Missions Council and our Jewish missionaries has made available to all our women special little Jewish synagogue banks in which to keep our offering. We believe that these little Jewish synagogues will remind us to be faithful in this offering and if kept in a prominent place may prove a topic of conversation through which we can give a testimony to some neighbor. We hope that every president or treasurer will send immediately to the Brethren Home Missions Council, Winona Lake, Ind., and get enough banks for every woman in your council. They will be sent to you free of charge.

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Presenting this month—

MRS. LENORA BOONE

President of the Indiana District

The month of September has passed, and our WMC councils have had their consecration services, rededicating themselves "unto the Lord," with renewed energy to any service that they may be called to do for Him "that in all things he might have the glory."

The Indiana District is small, consisting of only 16 councils, but I might say all of the groups are very active—always looking forward to doing something new and different. Several items that could be included in this article will appear in a later issue of the Herald, when district reports are given, so at this time I would like to pass along a few ideas that the Lord has given us, to challenge our other sister councils.

"Where there is no vision the people perish" (Prov. 29:18). Never let it be said that the vision of our work be lost! Therefore, we continually need to seek the Lord's guidance for future work.

WHAT ABOUT PRAYER?—Have you ever thought of your local WMC group starting a weekly cottage prayer meeting; then climaxing these with the Day of Prayer at the church? A time of prayer in the forenoon, recessing toward noon for sack lunches, or covered dish lunch; then setting aside a later hour in the day for prayer, thus giving those who are employed in the business world an opportunity to join in the Day of Prayer, urging the men of the church to participate as well.

WHAT ABOUT BIBLE READING? — Have you thought of presenting an award or trophy to the council having the most women reading through the Bible within a year? This award could be perpetual and presented at the fall rally.

WHAT ABOUT NEW MEMBERS?—Considering the fact that there are ladies in our churches who are not yet affiliated with the WMC, may I suggest that the local president urge each active member to be responsible for at least one new member. This alone would almost double our membership immediately!

WHAT ABOUT PRESIDENTS' MEETINGS?—The presidents' meetings are beginning to spread into most of the districts and this has proved a splendid idea. Has the thought of having a special speaker for these meetings come to your mind? There are times the presiding officers need refreshing also. Why not invite the national president as speaker, if she is available. I'm sure she would be happy to meet with you and give an encouraging pep talk. Should the national president not be in your vicinity, I'm sure some past president in your locality would be available.

With these ideas in mind, "All things are possible to him that believeth" (Mark 9:23). Might each of us, this year, strive to serve "as unto the Lord" in all ways. I feel confident that in another year we shall see more participants in the Day of Prayer, more women reading the entire Bible, a rapidity in the growth of membership, and new enthusiasm at president's meetings.

GOOD FORM AND YOUR CHILDREN

Whoever heard of a child being born with manners? The foundation of good manners is laws which are as ageless as the stars. There's the law of kindness, which puts the needs of others above his own. It's a selfless sort of thing. Then there's the law of thoughtfulness, which never knowingly or willingly causes anxiety to a brother. It doesn't trample others' feelings in order to gain its own ends. The law of love is that which "in honor prefers one another." This is an all-inclusive law which lifts the load of life and points men to Christ. It is terribly lacking in conservative Christian groups. Perhaps it is lacking in your home.

Mrs. Althea Miller

Everyone knows that good form is necessary in both games and work if one is to succeed. Your children's form will be no better, no higher than their parents. If Father gruffly demands rather than commands as a king who loves his own, how can you expect to find his sons with princely bearing? If Mother whines and pouts as her means of getting attention, will you find daughters who will not stoop to subterfuge to gain their ends?

The laws of kindness, thoughtfulness, and love must be put into operation first by and in the lives of Mother and Dad if they are to "rub off" on the children. When Mother demands kindness from Father, but selfishly fails to give it to him, the children are not blinded to the lack of good form. If Father's thoughtlessness overlooks Mother's selfless ministrations toward him and the family; when rarely a word of appreciation which all can hear, or a gentle kiss from lover to sweetheart (a reassurance to offspring that Daddy and Mother still love each other), who would expect Brother to be thoughtful of Sister, or children to think selflessly of parents?

Having begun with parents, good form, which is plain, everyday manners, if you please, will be taught by lip and life to the children even before they are born. Then the commands to "come back and shut the door"; "say 'please, may I?' "; "I didn't hear you say 'thank you' "; "no; you may not leave the table until you ask to be excused" will not come as a shock, or be resented as unnecessary restrictions on the developing personalities of growing children.

Nor dare we minimize that law of love which envelops the entire sphere of good manners and gives good form to all God's children who allow it unrestrained course in the life. Of course you want your children to know which fork to use; when to lift their hats; how to escort a lady to or from the car; to arise when a lady enters the

ANNUAL REPORT—NATIONAL PROJECT CHAIRMAN

By Mrs. Virden Taber

How often have we heard the words "unfinished business." As we look back over the year are we able to put "no" in front of "unfinished business"? Have the projects we started out to complete been finished? Let's forget any failures of the past and press on toward reaching new goals for Christ this year in our project work.

In looking over this year's accomplishments, aside from our national projects, we are aware that much has been accomplished in the name of the Lord. The school in Africa for our missionaries' children was given linens and equipment, and Miss Mary Cripe was equipped with a French typewriter.

Looking to Argentina, over $300 was given for the Scardi girl who had polio. Also a gift of money was given for a film library.

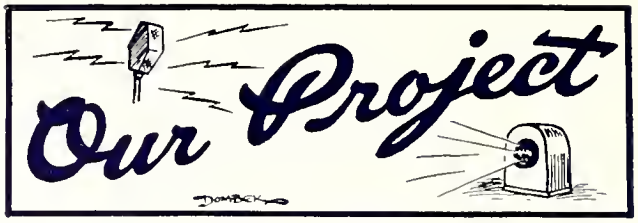
Now in viewing Brazil, we see money given for the printing of "Bible Truths" in the Portuguese language. France received money for literature, slides, and screen.

Hawaii was not forgotten, for hymnbooks were sent to them. Coming a little closer home, across the border into Mexico, we find a Spanish typewriter for the Haags' use.

Now for our home-mission points. Dryhill, Ky., received money toward a deep freeze, songbooks, and coat-racks. A gift of $50 was given for the work at Clayhole, Ky.

The Spanish work in New Mexico received clothing and money for daily vacation Bible school supplies. Celina Mares was given a gift of money to assist on her hospital bill.

The Navajo work in Cuba, N. Mex., received clothing, a large electric mixer, Little Golden Books, toys, candy, etc.



A number of home- and district-mission churches received gifts of money and articles. Donald Sheldon, son of Rev. and Mrs. Chauncey Sheldon, missionaries to Africa, was encouraged in his schoolwork at Westmont College by a gift of money. The missionary residence at Winona Lake, Ind., in addition to the July district offerings was blessed with a new hot-water heater. Some of the district camps were given more convenient and helpful equipment. Many local kitchens are in much better condition and have added equipment because of the WMC. Needy families have also been made happier by gifts and tokens of love.

In addition to these, the SMM girls have been encouraged with help on their bandages, having pennants supplied, birthday parties given for them, etc.

Revelation 22:12 reminds us of rewards for faithful service, and in Hebrews 6:10 we read: "For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love."

WANTED!

Your editor would like to devote a column in the near future to hints on various ways of taking the Missionary Birthday Offering. Will councils who have used some novel way of taking this offering please write to the editor about the plan. Anything that offers good-natured competition among different groups in the council, such as the plan used at North Long Beach, Calif., will result in larger offerings and more WMC missionaries.

TO ALL WMC LADIES!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift,
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle, face it; 'tis God's gift. Be strong!

Certainly we can all say the ladies of our WMC have not been playing, dreaming, or drifting. They have been doing the work to be done, and the loads have been lifted. They have not shunned the struggle, but faced it, and I'm sure they have realized "'tis God's gift"!

Surely all were thrilled as I was as I sat and studied the picture cover of the new schoolbuilding for our Navajo children. What a great work our ladies have done! Not only this past year but in many, many years previous great things have been accomplished for the Lord! What loads have been lifted from the weary workers! And who knows better than "Mother" that one cannot work well with many inconveniences, dull tools, and no equipment!

To realize that hundreds of women's willing, working hands will be underneath the load to help lift my burdens this year causes me to realize the great responsibility placed upon me. As you lift the load together may each one of you remember to "lift up" in prayer the worker God has placed here in the work.

I like to think of heaven as the land of "no more"—no more death, no more crying, no more sorrow, no more pain, no more sin! When I think of getting a house for our work, I realize it will be a time of "no more"—no more pumping water, no more carrying water, no more heating wash water outside, no more chopping wood (that is, trying to), no more doing without baths, no more Lifebuoy, no more outside bathroom. I can honestly say I'm looking forward to the time of "no more"!

It should be fun building a new house for the Lord's work, and it will be fun if we do it "as unto the Lord." Wouldn't it be interesting if different churches would choose a certain room or part of the house to build? One could take the living room, one the kitchen, one the

HANNAH'S HORN OF PLENTY (I SAM. 1-2:21)

By Mrs. Arnold R. Kriegbaum

In the ancient city of Ramah or, as it is called in the Bible, Arimathea, lived a certain man named Elkanah. He had two wives; the name of the one was Hannah, and the name of the other Peninnah. Plural marriages were not uncommon in those days. But they never resulted in happy homes filled with peace and harmony. Elkanah's home was no exception.

Hannah Persecuted

Each year Elkanah journeyed with his family to Shiloh to attend the solemn feasts and to worship the Lord. He gave gifts to Peninnah and her children. "But unto Hannah he gave a worthy portion; for he loved Hannah: but the Lord had shut up her womb." Peninnah provoked her sore, to make Hannah fret because the Lord had not given her any children. Therefore, Hannah wept, and could not eat. Elkanah did his best to comfort Hannah and asked her why she was grieved; was he not better than ten sons? But Hannah was not seeking that kind of comfort.

Hannah Praying

What a wonderful example Hannah is! She arose from the table in bitterness of soul and prayed unto the Lord, and wept sore. Hannah went to the only true source of comfort and power, the great Jehovah. She was so earnest in the spirit that she prayed in her heart, but no sound came from her moving lips. Eli, standing close by, observed her and thought she must be drunken. But Hannah answered and said: "No, my Lord, I am a woman of a sorrowful spirit: I have drunk neither wine nor strong drink, but have poured out my soul before the Lord."

Hannah was praying in the spirit; she was completely controlled by God's Spirit. She was not making a noisy spectacle of herself. Nor did she use the occasion to tell Eli of the trouble she had with Peninnah. Hannah had higher, nobler sights than to show peevishness and try to gain sympathy. What was Hannah's chief desire? A son. And she told the Lord if He would give her a son, she would give him back to serve the Lord as long as he should live. Before Hannah left the place of prayer she heard God's servant say: "Go in peace: and the God of Israel grant thee thy petition that thou hast asked of him."

Because Hannah had delighted herself in the Lord, she was to receive the desire of her heart. Hannah was patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer; now rejoicing in hope. That is just what God tells us to be in Romans 12:12.

Hannah Praising

"My heart rejoiceth in the Lord, mine horn is exalted in the Lord: my mouth is enlarged over mine enemies; because I rejoice in thy salvation." Hannah's spirit of heaviness was exchanged for a garment of praise! The Lord gave Hannah a son; and she was true to her vow and took Samuel to the house of the Lord as soon as she had weaned him. God always does exceeding abundantly more than we ask or think. He gave Hannah three sons and two daughters.

When you are sorely tempted to despair; when the trials at home or work or school seem more than you can bear; keep your purposes high by delighting yourself in the Lord. He will fill your thanksgiving horn to overflowing with joy unspeakable and full of glory.

PROGRAM GUIDE FOR NOVEMBER

THEME SONG—Sing the theme song, "My Desire To Be Like Jesus," and have an opening word of prayer.

PRAYER CIRCLE—"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you." Let us have a conscious communion with Christ in our prayer time and He will give us our desires.

DEVOTIONAL TOPIC—Seniors and Middlers study "Hannah's Horn of Plenty," by Mrs. Arnold Kriegbaum; Juniors study "Gentile Bride," by Mrs. R. Paul Miller.

SPECIAL NUMBER—Have an instrumental or vocal number.

MISSIONARY BIOGRAPHY—There's a challenging article about Mrs. Robert Hill for the Middlers and Seniors and there is also an interesting story for the Juniors, written by Mrs. Foster.

NEW EXPERIENCES

By Mrs. Rose A. Foster

We were happy to leave France, even though we had enjoyed the months spent there. We had met some lovely people and made some real friends. But Africa was calling us, and we were anxious to reach our adopted country, and to begin serving our Lord and Saviour in that dark land.

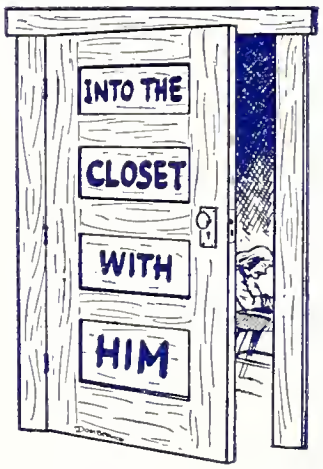
Mrs. Rose Foster

The latter part of July found us arriving in Belgium. There we had a home with a widow lady and her son, who were faithful Christians. We also met Mr. and Mrs. Norton, founders of the Belgium Gospel Mission in Brussels. There we made some much-needed purchases to complete our outfit and were kept so busy that the time to sail, September 1, came all too soon.

The morning of our departure we called two taxis. Into the one they packed all our hand baggage. Among it there was one large bag full of ammunition. The taxi drivers observed no speed limit those days, and really made time. All of a sudden the taxi door flew open and out flew the ammunition bag. We watched from the other taxi, holding our breath, wondering what would happen. It hit those cobblestones with a bang! The driver jumped out, picked it up, threw it back into the taxi, and was off again at full speed ahead. What a relief there was no explosion!

The Belgian ship Elizabethville, running from Antwerp to Matadi, Africa, was scheduled to make its first record nonstop run. This we greatly regretted, because we had anticipated seeing some of the African coast towns where the ships habitually stopped to load and unload cargo. But from Antwerp our ship plowed a straight course until it reached Banana, and we saw the coastline only occasionally. One morning a passenger called, "The Peak, the Peak." We were just passing the Canary Islands, and above the clouds we saw the summit of their highest peak.

We had quite a number of missionaries on board, 16 in fact. There were plenty of deck games to play, and time passed quickly. Before we realized it we were crossing the Equator. That day was a big fete, playing tricks on those who had not crossed the Equator before, followed with a feast and plenty of drinks.



Our first stop, Banana, is the place they take on natives who go on to Matadi to unload the cargo. This was our first view of Africa and the Africans. As soon as the boat stopped, natives began to climb aboard. Some took to the ladders, others the ropes, others anything they could get hold of. What a conglomeration of men. Their dress was the oddest we had ever seen. One man had on a high silk hat and nothing else. Another was sporting a red silk tie, another a cane, still another a shirt; one had an old pair of canvas shoes, and so on. They made a peculiar sight. Here was our first congregation, and we could not tell them the story of our Saviour.

Banana is at the mouth of the Congo. We stayed there just long enough to load the needed help, and then went on to Boma. There we were entertained by the missionaries who serve there. The same day we left for Matadi and arrived before evening.

At last we were on African soil at a place called a hotel, but it was not worthy of the name.

The good ship Elizabethville had safely brought us. Just so safely will the Lord Jesus lead us day by day during the days of our traveling here, if we give ourselves into His loving care.

PRAYER REQUESTS

Pray that this year each individual girl will strive to be a "living testimony for her Master."

Pray that the Lord will bless the new projects and goals for this year.

Pray for each of our missionaries, of both the home- and foreign-mission fields.

Pray that this year's theme, "His Desire, Our Delight," might be a real inspiration to every SMM girl.

Pray for each of the newly elected officers — local, district, and national, that their endeavor might be backed up by every member's cooperation.

SISTERHOOD NEWS FROM WINONA LAKE

From the halls and classrooms of Grace Seminary and College, and from the surrounding vicinity, here is a special news item which will be of interest to all of you.

Many local Sisterhoods, as well as district groups, are represented in the school. The following local groups are represented: Fort Wayne, Ind.; Covington, Ohio; Portis, Kans.; Wooster, Ohio; Johnstown, Pa.; Harrisburg, Pa.; Hagerstown, Md.; Mansfield, Ohio; Temple City, Calif.; Akron, Ohio; Martinsburg, Pa.; Osceola, Ind.; Albany, Oreg.

A large number of the girls were local officers. We also have a district president attending college, as well as several bandage secretaries and general secretaries. The national treasurer and last year's national general secretary and literature secretary are also students in Grace.

Last spring, effort was put forth to organize a Sisterhood for college girls to attend. Under the direction of Miss Ruth E. Reddick, financial secretary of the Foreign Missionary Society, who is the patroness, several meetings were held. It was altogether disbanded during the summer months, due to the fact that most of the girls left the Winona Lake area after the end of college. Plans are now being made to get the Sisterhood organized, and we're trusting that many and wonderful things will be accomplished for the Lord this year among the girls in Winona Lake.

The Hand of God on the Life of—

MARY HARRIS HILL

By Althea S. Miller

The theme song of the Robert Hill family is "Girls, Girls, Everywhere Girls." They specialize in daughters, you know, and are thrilled with all five of them. Keep an eye on this family. Some of those precious daughters will be following the footsteps of their parents and be missionaries in the future if the Lord Jesus tarries His coming.

The mother of these girls never dreamed when she accepted Christ as her Saviour at the age of 12 that she'd be a missionary in the heart of Africa one day. But God called her and she gladly answered yes. Mrs. Hill does not remember a time when she did not want to serve the Lord. Early in her life she vaguely thought of being a missionary somewhere in the mountains in these United States. She was reared in a Christian home where Christ was truly honored and His claims upon the life placed first. Mary is very thankful for her wonderful parents.

Mrs. Robert Hill

When our missionary was a child, she doesn't remember ever causing too much trouble by being mischievous. But she does have one regret—she was very saucy to her mother. Mrs. Hill said: "Tell the girls if they don't want to have regrets when they are grown and gone from the home, to love and respect their parents now."

On the field in Africa Mary Hill's chief job as a missionary is teaching the women. She says it's a real thrill to see the illiterate women begin to read words unassisted. When the native women try to see that it is not impossible for them to learn, they take a real interest in studying. Then when they pass on what they've learned to their friends, the missionary's cup of joy is full.

Training and maintaining the boys who help with the household work is another story. They have to be watched with eagle eye and then they often do things their own way, to the dismay of the missionaries. When one has been accustomed to doing her own work, it is harder to tell others what and how than it is to do it herself. However, the missionaries must have native help because they must conserve their time and strength for the task which sent them to Africa, that of being a missionary.

If there is one message which Mary Hill would give to Brethren Sisterhood girls it is this: Get the very best education you can, though it takes you more years than you like. Those years of preparation will never be wasted, and no matter where or what God calls you to do for Him either in full- or part-time capacity, you will be ready for action. And be sure you know how to study the Bible for your own edification and the challenging of others.

1. START NOW! Yes; another year will roll around in no time, so start working now on those personal goals. All three awards—ruby, diamond, and emerald—can be earned. It's really not hard, but start working on them NOW!

2. HIDDEN TALENTS—We want to discover some of your hidden talents in the ability of writing. Each contestant in the writing contest will receive either an SMM pin or SMM stationery. You may select from the following: four-stanza poem, 10-minute skit, or 300-word story concerning SMM. Be sure and send your entry to the National Patroness by January 31, 1956.

3. NO MATERIAL? Please notify your district literature secretary if you don't have sufficient material. You may order all of your supplies from her now.

4. LOOKING FOR A RICH SPIRITUAL BLESSING? Start memorizing the Book of II TIMOTHY. It's shorter than Colossians, so lots more of you ought to participate in this project. It must be said to both the patroness and pastor—all of it at one time. You may have your selection of the following awards: $7.50 toward Bethany Camp, $7.50 of material from the Missionary Herald Co., SMM green or white sweater, or SMM key necklace.

NATIONAL PROJECT 1955-56—

Our National Project this year is the Bethany Guest Home in Taos, N. Mex. Our goal is $1,700. As you recall, it was at the home of Mary and Martha in Bethany that our Lord and Saviour was a guest. This leaves us with a great responsibility of providing this guest home for Taos.

ASENATH—GENTILE BRIDE

(Read Genesis 41:44-53) By Mrs. R. Paul Miller

Now girls be honest, aren't you interested in a bride? Asenath is a very unusual bride. She became the bride of a very famous Jewish man. Guess who? Yes; Joseph. He was the second greatest man in Egypt; only Pharaoh the king, was greater.

Joseph became great because he believed and feared God. Pharaoh gave him a queer name, Zaphnath-paaneah, an Egyptian name meaning "the man to whom secrets are revealed." Joseph, by God's help, could tell what the king's dreams meant. Asenath's name in the Egyptian language means, "she who is consecrated." She was a princess because her father was the prince-priest Poti-phera of On. When Pharaoh gave her to be the bride of Joseph, the Jews gave her a Hebrew name, Bi-thi-ah, which means, "daughter of Jehovah."

Together the two names Bi-thi-ah and Joseph mean "storehouse." Joseph stored up all the grain so when the famine came there was plenty of food. Even Joseph's brothers came to buy grain. God revealed to Joseph ahead of time there would be a famine, and then let him be the great earthly provider during the famine.

I am sure Mrs. Billy Graham never dreamed when she was your age that she would be the bride of the famous evangelist. It is very important for you girls to be kind and obedient, so when God calls, you will be ready and willing for a high position—like Asenath, who was called to be the great ruler Joseph's wife.

God blessed Joseph and Asenath with two boys. Joseph named the first one Manasseh, which means, "For God hath made me to forget all my toil and all my father's house." Their second son Joseph named Ephraim, which means, "For God hath caused me to be fruitful in the land of my affliction."

While these names are important, they are not to be compared with the "new name written down in glory" when you accept Christ as your Saviour. Maybe your new name will mean something you did for Jesus' sake. So, girls, be careful to read God's Word and pray so you will be ready to become the bride of some famous person, if God so plans.

THE LOVE OF A MOTHER

By Maryheth Holden

Sisterhood Girl, of Modesto, Calif.

M-O-T-H-E-R,
A name in the heart of a child
Which means love and security
With voice soft and mild.

She gets up at sunrise
And works all the day;
There seems to be no end
To her work without pay.

She teaches her children
Of the Saviour so dear,
Who, when He is needed,
Will always be near.

She shows that she loves them
By action and word,
And stays up the night-hours,
Her light unblurred.

So, Mothers, today,
If you would be loved,
Tell your children
Of the Saviour above

And show them the love
They like to see,
And you forever
Loved will be.

room; to defer to their elders; to graciously accept a compliment. These are important; they are graces every Christian should covet. But the acquisition of these without the accompanying graces of love, kindness, and thoughtfulness, will be as "sounding brass."

Good form is yours for the asking, and your children's for the teaching if you give yourself wholly over to the control of Him who encouraged His believing children to say: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me" (Phil. 4:13).

This column is purposed for your use. If you have problems or questions you'd like discussed regarding relationships of parents-children, husbands-wives, children and worldly affairs, jot them on a slip of paper and mail to Mrs. Robert E. A. Miller, 1511 Maiden Lane SW., Roanoke 15, Va. All letters will be kept confidential and no names used in the Herald. But no questions will be answered in the Herald if the name of the sender is not on the letter. Next month, Lord willing, we'll discuss the question: What do you think of Christian girls wearing bluejeans and shorts? Do they have any place in the Christian girl's wardrobe?

closets, etc. You could make a clever small model of the room to have at each meeting, and this would increase the interest and the offering. At National Conference each could bring their room for all to enjoy, and the house would be completed then. If I can help you with any ideas or suggestions please feel free to write me at any time.

Words cannot tell you how thrilled I am that you have taken the house as your project this year. You put your willing, working hands to work there, and I'll put mine to work here in actually building it. I, too, can say:

I'm not here to play, to dream, to drift,
I have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
I must not shun the struggle, I must face it; 'tis God's gift; I'll be strong!

LONG BEACH, CALIF. Enrollment in the Christian day schools operated by the First Brethren Church is: Brethren High School, 324; Brethren Elementary School, 222; Stearns Street School, 21. This makes a total enrollment of 571. Three missionaries, teaching in the field of Bible and missions, are on the high-school teaching staff—Rev. and Mrs. Harold Dunning and Rev. Robert Hill. The new chapel building, with a seating capacity of 700, five classrooms, kitchen, and cafeteria, is now in use, providing approximately 10,000 square feet of additional floor space. Back of the chapel is a parking lot that will care for 150 cars. Dedication of this new building will take place this fall. Dr. Charles Mayes is pastor and Rev. Albert Flory is minister of education and principal of the high school.

FORT WAYNE, IND. Rev. James Hammer is now serving as campaign coordinator and promotional director in the field of citywide evangelism for several of America's leading evangelists. He will be associated with T. W. Wilson, Oct. 30 through Nov. 13, in Colorado Springs, Colo. His address is Box 592, Fort Wayne.

BOCA RATON, FLA. The third winter conference of Youth for Christ International will be held at the Boca Raton Bible Conference Grounds Mar. 5-11.

KITTANNING, PA. William A. Byers, a graduate of Bob Jones University, has been called to be the assistant pastor and director of music for the First Brethren Church. William H. Schaffer is pastor. The church has authorized the purchase of property adjoining the church for expansion.

CLAYTON, OHIO. Rev. James Cook, assistant pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Mansfield, Ohio, will be the guest speaker at the homecoming service of the First Brethren Church Oct. 16. Clair Brickel is pastor.

WINCHESTER, VA. The Sunday-school attendance average for the past year at the First Brethren Church was 210, or an average increase of 17 per Sunday. Paul Dick is pastor.

INDIA. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Goodman, Sr., arrived back in Poona, India, to reassume their duties as superintendents of the Child Evangelism Fellowship. They sailed from New York on Sept. 14 on the Queen Elizabeth. They spent a few days in England and France on their return.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Elizabeth Merritt, long-time Bible woman at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, went to be with the Lord on Sept. 9. Dr. Charles Fuller officiated at the funeral service.

WINONA LAKE, IND. On Sept. 24 the trailer of Gene Stees, student in Grace College, burned as a result of a defective refrigerator. Damage was estimated at $800, which was covered by insurance. Mr. Stees is a son-in-law of Miles Taber, pastor of the West Tenth Street Brethren Church, Ashland, Ohio.

BEAUMONT, CALIF. Thirteen young people from the Cherry Valley Brethren Church are attending Christian colleges. Gene Farrell is pastor.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Brethren church bulletin No. 6 can be secured from the Missionary Herald. This is the most attractive of all that have been printed, and contains a message by Ord Gehman, pastor of the Bethel Brethren Church, Berne, Ind. This is a two-color bulletin, and can be purchased for $1.20 per hundred. One-color bulletins are 95 cents a hundred. Samples will be sent upon request. All bulletins are printed on high-grade paper.

PHILADELPHIA. (EP). There is not now and never has been religious freedom in the USSR since the beginning of the Communist regime. This charge was made by L. Zabko-Potapovich, editor of the Ukrainian Baptist Magazine, at the ninth annual convention of Ukrainian Baptists meeting here. Editor Potapovich scoffed at the recent Soviet exchange of clergymen with the West and said that in reality religious freedom in the USSR "is only on paper." He charged that the worship services shown to the visiting preachers were "nothing but a show. Yet even these shows speak to us. In Moscow in a congregation of 1,000, there were only older men and older women. There are no young people. There are no Bibles, no hymnbooks, There are no Sunday schools. There are no conferences." The editor further declared that during the Baptist World Conference in London this year, delegates from the Soviet Union were followed by special agents continually.

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN (EP). Christian life in Sweden, according to a Gallup poll, is "less and less regarded as the normal Swedish life." In this city only 16 percent of the mothers try to give their children a Christian education. Fifty-two percent of the Swedish mothers teach their children evening prayers, but only 46 percent in the youngest age group. Regular family worship takes place in only 3 percent of the homes, and no percent at all among the youngest group of mothers. Dr. Billy Graham declared that the Scandinavian youth seemed to be less interested in spiritual things than the youth in other countries.

WOOSTER, OHIO. The members of the First Brethren Church availed themselves of a rich opportunity at the Wayne County Fair, and distributed thousands of tracts and Scripture portions, balloons, and pencils bearing the gospel message. Kenneth Ashman is pastor.

BRETHREN YOUTH Look to the Future

By KENNETH ASHMAN

Bethany Campers—Winona Lake, 1955

THERE WAS a new note of challenge in the National Brethren Youth Camps this year, both at Portland and Winona Lake. A new day is dawning for our young people. This past year, since we had no youth director, we marked time a great deal. Now, however, the order is forward. Bro. Ralph Colburn, assisted by many helpers, has laid a good foundation. Upon that foundation an enlarged and forward-looking program is being built. Pictures on these pages reflect some of the activities at our Bethany Camps just completed. These young people told their leaders what they want and how they want it. And the program is being prepared to meet those needs and desires.

The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha looks toward a better year than ever before. Consideration will be given to the development of a far-reaching program, especially challenging to the older young women. A fuller report of their past accomplishments and future plans will be found in their portion of the Herald.

The Brethren Boys Club movement will be promoted, but mainly for boys up to 14 years of age. A challenging program for the older fellows will be prepared by a special committee appointed by National Conference. Such things as definite Bible study, practical service, personal witnessing, and competitive pursuits will be included in this new setup. Pastors and youth leaders should be on the lookout for further information.

The Brethren Youth Fellowship needs a spiritual "shot in the arm." And we think we have just what the doctor has prescribed. Your program packets will again come regularly. Some new and different materials are in the making. The WMC has made available funds whereby we can secure the best in writers and promotion. Competitive events, between churches in the districts, will culminate with finals in our next national camp period. Present plans call for a twofold promotional movement, one for the Senior BYF and the other for the Junior BYF.

A long-range program is being studied. The SMM, the BYF, BBC, and whatever movement develops for the older fellows will be asked to arrange a five-year schedule of studies, events, promotions, etc. These will be correlated with the National Brethren Sunday School series. Included will be a complete manual of studies and course to be suggested for the district camps. When completed, it is hoped that each Brethren young person may be presented with a "Brethren Youth Handbook," listing all information that pertains to this branch of our Brethren denominational efforts. It's a forward-looking program that will require the cooperation of all pastors and churches.

Currently, the National Sunday School Board and the National Youth Council are sharing the same office, using jointly owned equipment, and are being served by the same office secretary. In addition, Director Harold Etling, of the Sunday School Board, will be doubling, where possible, as a youth promotional agent. Pastors are asked to keep this in mind as they plan their schedules. All mail pertaining to Brethren youth should be addressed to the National Brethren Youth Council, P. O. Box 617, Winona Lake, Ind. Please indicate whether the correspondence deals with SMM, BBC, or BYF. Remember, all kinds of materials are available from the youth office including filmstrips, slides, program packets, camp emblems, T-shirts, membership cards, covenant cards, etc. Shortly, each pastor will receive a list of supplies available. Feel free to call upon your youth office for assistance at any time.

Our greatest need at the moment is for a National Brethren Youth Director. Please pray with others that the Lord will raise up the right man for the job that needs to be done. Regional youth directors are also being appointed to assist in their own areas. Brethren youth are on the march. Help them keep in step with your prayers and interested support.

Evangelism, Revival, and the Layman

By DEAN FETTERHOFF
Evangelist, Crusade Team No. 2

During the past 10 years this nation and the world have seen the greatest religious movement ever seen in modern times. Church leaders boast that a greater number of people belong to church in America than ever before; books on religion are becoming best sellers; popular songs about God and the Bible are hitting a new high on the "hit parade"; and many of the popular methods of evangelism have turned old-fashioned repentance into a simple believism that everyone is doing.

In spite of all the glowing reports, as one feels the spiritual pulse of God's people everywhere, it can be sensed that in the great religious boom now being experienced all that glitters is not gold, and there is a deep hungering in the heart of God's people that is not being satisfied. These are days in which the books and sermons of such men as Moody, Spurgeon, Finney, McCheyne, Edwards, and Torrey are being republished and sold at an all-time high. There is a thirst for something that is absent today.

Why is it that in the midst of the greatest return to religion of modern times there is such a hunger? The answer is not hard to find. As someone has said: "The kingdom of God is not going to be advanced by our churches becoming filled with men, but by men in our churches becoming filled with God." In spite of the great emphasis upon religion today, there has never been a time when there has been a greater need for revival among God's own people than there is today. We live in a day when, in spite of the fact that church attendance is at an all-time high, immorality, worldliness, and unholy living are at an all-time low. We need revival that will bring repentance and holiness in the lives of God's people.

Let me come a bit closer home to the readers of this paper. Some months ago in a church where I was conducting an evangelistic meeting, the pastor asked one of his deacons: "How long has it been since you spoke to a man about his soul?" Back came the reply: "That's what we're paying you for, preacher!" Such an attitude may surprise you; yet this incident took place in a Brethren church. Although our lips would deny it, I wonder if our lives do not loudly testify that this is the heart attitude of seven out of ten Brethren people today.

Black-and-white statistics make us face up to facts that we do not like to admit. The 1954 Brethren Annual reports that there was either no gain or loss in membership in over 40 percent of Brethren churches in the preceding year—and this is among people whose motto is "The Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible"! May God grant that this year's report may not be so tragic. We say that we believe the Gospel is "the power of God unto salvation"; yet the world sees little demonstration of that power.

It's time we sit down in front of a mirror, look ourselves squarely in the face, and ask: "What's wrong? Where is the power of God in my life?" Is it that our theology is wrong? No; thank God, we still love and believe the Old Book. Is it that we are not sufficiently organized? No; we are far better organized than the first-century church ever was. Is it that the hearts of the unsaved are too hard? Although we often flee to this excuse, the Word of God plainly testifies that the powerlessness of God's people is never because Satan and his forces are too strong. As we search the Scriptures, we see the accusing finger of the Holy Spirit as He points directly at us.

Never has there been a time of such opportunity for the Brethren Church as there is today! The minds of men have turned toward religion in the last 10 years because they have failed to find peace and security in this world of chaos. We must be prepared to meet this need. We must be filled with the Holy Spirit and be ready, like David, to do battle for the Lord against the Goliaths of sin. Instead I fear lest we go forth like Samson shorn of his locks! If ever intercessory prayer for revival was needed in the Brethren Church, it is needed now!

We read of the early church upon the persecution of Stephen: "They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word" (Acts 8:4). If God permitted America and the people of the Brethren Church to undergo persecution, I wonder if we who boast of our orthodoxy would go everywhere preaching the Gospel! Let your own spiritual life answer the question for you!

May God send us revival that will cause laymen, laywomen, pastors, and missionaries of the Brethern Church to surrender to Jesus Christ not only as our Saviour but as our Lord! May God cause us to realize that since we have been redeemed, we are first of all called to be the servants of Jesus Christ, whether we are a farmer, barber, housewife, grocer, pastor, mailman, or missionary.

Recently I was speaking to a friend of mine who had just returned from a tour of some of the mission fields in South America and Mexico being supported by the church of which he is associate pastor. He told of attending a church service in Mexico in which there were nearly a thousand in attendance. He asked the missionary: "How many of these people here today a r e without Christ?" The missionary quickly replied: "Oh, none of these are without Christ. The unsaved never come to the services; they are won to Christ by these people and then are brought to the services."

Here is real New Testament evangelism in action. We must see a revival which will bring this about or the opportunity which is now ours will be gone, and the Brethren Church will stand guilty before God! Let us pray for revival among the members of the Brethren Church that will bring holiness of life, sacrifice of soul and substance, and the demonstration of the power of God in salvation before a perishing world.

"Perishing, perishing! Thou was not willing;
Master, forgive, and inspire us anew;
Banish our worldliness, help us to ever
Live with eternity's values in view."

A Neighbor's-Eye View

On a sunny Thursday morning in early August a neighbor reported the following activities at the nearby parsonage. At an early hour sheets began to appear on the line, two at a time, until 15 waved a cheery greeting to the sun. Fifteen sheets! This must be the day of the week when the 10 beds are changed. Looks like a hotel wash waving in the breeze.

After some odds and ends of family clothing were dried, there appeared 16 shirts of assorted lengths and girths. Ten whites and six colored gave eloquent testimony to the fact that five boys and one daddy are a vital part of that household. Next came turkish towels, at least 20 of them with accompanying washcloths. Some waved a brisk hello to the sun; others definitely had seen their best days. Bluejeans soon made an appearance in sizes large, medium, small, and very small. At last the wash was finished.

But no! Look at those blankets. Eight of them—none very goodlooking. They must be the camp blankets. Come to think of it, things were real quiet around the parsonage last week. No bellowing voices from the older boys; no screams from near-teen-ager girls being teased and bossed by both older and younger brothers. Yes; last week was camp. While so many were away and there were not too many to get in the way, Mother painted the kitchen furniture and used the back porch for a temporary kitchen. Daddy was at camp, too, and meals didn't have to be on the dot—a perfect time to paint.

A story of some of the family's activities, and the work involved in the rearing of nine children told from a washline. Never a dull moment, and not a chance for the mother to be lazy if she would. If Edgar A. Guest was correct when he wrote: "It takes a heap of living to make a house a home," that parsonage is truly a home. Under that roof is almost limitless variety of personality, problems, programming. No two children are alike. There are times when the mother looks exhausted and a resigned air envelops her. Daddy appears glad to be able to leave the harrowing excitement of the house. At other times Mother romps with the little ones on the lawn as though she has not a care in the world, and Daddy takes an occasional afternoon walk with the small fry.

For all the work and responsibilities, heartaches, and headaches, there is something that parsonage family has I wish I had. I can't seem to find what you have in my way of living. There's a way of getting along together; the method and results of disciplining children (and some of these parsonage children need disciplining) which makes me know you have something the world can't produce nor books inspire. What is it?

The answer is simple, dear neighbor. The answer is not a method, or program, or man-made ability. The answer is a PERSON—Jesus Christ, God's Son, my Saviour. It is He who transforms a house into a Christ-honoring home; He takes the ordinary and makes it extraordinary so that He will receive the honor and praise; He it is who takes common clay, the flesh which has nothing of righteousness to recommend it to God, and makes it into a vessel of honor for His glory. He will do the same for you if you'll allow Him. He'll save your soul and then make your life count for something beyond this vale of tears. He'll make your home a little foretaste of heaven, where both joy and tears will have a purpose.

Jesus Christ knows your need. The Bible tells us: "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10). "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). Will you confess Him now as your own Saviour from sin, dear neighbor? Wherever you are reading these words, let Him save you now. You have no tomorrow. "Now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (II Cor. 6:2).

"WE READ IT IN THE BOOK"

"Clouds are tiny drops of water gathered together in the sky. If the clouds get too heavy, rain falls down." Jan, the five-year-old, spoke this large mouthful of wisdom to the surprise of the teacher.

"If it is warm, it is rain, but if it is cold, it might be snow," so said twin brother Jim.

The eyes of 28 children riveted on the twins while faces registered the awe with which they considered this information. Both teacher and class knew what answer the twins would give when asked.

"How did you know?"

"We read it in the book," was their ever-ready answer.

The class had been watching and discussing the beautiful cloud formation. But regardless of subject the twins always volunteered information. There had been the frog, the moth, the ants, and many other interest centers. "We read it in the book" was their stock answer for the information they so calmly dispatched.

Now the twins could not read the printed word. "Picture reading" was practiced as a step toward readiness. Besides, such a fund of wisdom in kindergarten was rare. The teacher decided to call in the home. The parents were Swiss dairy people with little education, but had a strong desire for their children's education. When questioned about "the book" the mother went to a glass-enclosed shelf and carefully removed a copy of an encyclopedia which the teacher recognized at once as an extremely usable one with all ages of children.

The mother explained they had obtained the books for the older children, but that the twins were allowed to look at the books when they sat quietly with washed hands. Such reverence for books is not found often in this day of radio, TV, and comic books. The twins "read" the pictures and the family answered their questions. In this way they had acquired a background of knowledge envied by adults.

What a lesson for Christians! Colossians 3:16 says: "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in ALL wisdom." Psalm 119:42 assures the Christian of the "wherewith to answer him that reproacheth." Color, background, foundation, security, poise, and many other results are rewards from reading "The Book." Reverence for the Book, plus reading the Book, assures every Christian of "an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear" (I Pet. 3:15).

Churches IN THE News

Dayton, Ohio

The cover picture, and the accompanying photographs are views of the ground-breaking service of the First Brethren Church of Dayton, which were conducted on June 26. The new church is being erected at Philadelphia and Earlham Drives in a fast-growing community with a need for a true gospel church, since no other is ministering in this vicinity. The Dayton church is using the "Broadway Plan," whereby the church issues bonds bearing interest at the rate of 5 percent annually. Rev. William Steffler is pastor.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dolores Smith, 14-year-old member of the new church in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., set a record in the Sunday school there by completing a Bible memory course, originally designed for 12 months, in 12 consecutive weeks.

James Snyder, Sunday-school superintendent, is shown presenting her with a lovely zipper Bible, the prize for each one who completes the course, along with a book of missionary biographies which was a bonus for her being the first to complete the course.

There were 125 verses of Scripture plus the books of the Bible and a few other Bible facts in the course. Several other juniors and intermediates have begun the course, and a number of primaries are busy with a slightly simplified version of the plan, reports Ralph Colburn, pastor.

52 Million Babies!

This is a lot of babies in any language!

We are told that in the 10 years since World War II 37.4 million babies have been born to American families. Perhaps on this basis in the 10 years ahead 42 million more babies will be born. By 1975 births will total about 52 million. Don't forget—these babies live longer than they used to.

This is one of the greatest challenges the true church has ever had to face. These 52 million babies are and will be a direct responsibility for evangelization by Bible-believing churches.

Each time a new generation arrives on the scene of human life a whole new field for evangelization appears before the church. So, if it could ever be said that the church had completely evangelized the world, this would be true only until the next generation arrived. The job then would have to be started all over again with this new segment of humanity.

Those who seem to erroneously feel that America has been completely evangelized even in this or any other generation must face the issue of 52 million babies. What a staggering mission field! These babies will become young people in a few short years and face worse temptations and more ways to sin than their forefathers. There is certain to be a constantly increased rate of crime in these ranks unless the church sees and grasps her opportunity.

The world is interested in the business challenge and potential of this "new" business. Merchants rightfully figure that with 4.1 million new babies annually some new baby clothes are needed. This also means an increase in population as births run 2.8 million a year over deaths. Barring unforeseen circumstances business looks excellent for many years to come.

Does the church see that this should mean more than "business as usual"? How many churches are setting up and expanding a good cradle roll system? How many Sunday schools are making contact with each mother in the city or country where there is a new arrival? How many churches through their youth auxiliaries are planning youth programs, new buildings, things to reach young people for Christ? How many Sunday schools are using the same old systems which are completely outdated and will never touch this avalanche of youth which is upon us? These and many more questions should stir our thinking and planning and praying and giving to touch these young, precious souls with the Gospel.

Each Brethren church in America will have its opportunity to capitalize in gain in souls, in membership, in giving potential, in witnessing effectiveness. Here is the opportunity of the centuries for our NFBC. New churches should be started by the thousands and we are dealing in twos and threes because funds are not available to reach out into new areas.

Fifty-two million babies! They are your responsibility and mine to win for Christ.

New Organization at Dryhill

Old Dame Rumor is eternal and always busy! Her latest story is to suggest that the Brethren Home Missions Council plans to close the work at Dryhill, Ky., where Miss Evelyn Fuqua is our missionary. How many people she has informed along this line we do not know, but the story is entirely new to the directors of the Brethren Home Missions Council who really should know something about it if the mission is to be closed.

So far from even thinking of closing the work a new Brethren church has just been organized at Dryhill. Information elsewhere in this magazine will inform our readers of this fact. We are just really started at Dryhill and expect that future years will show even a greater increase in souls born again, young people going into Christian service, and new witnessing efforts toward the people in Kentucky.

If Old Dame Rumor tries to pawn off any other story on you, tell her you heard differently!

Another Christ—the Priest

A subtle step at a time the Roman Catholic Church has increased its dogmas and suggested creed until the Roman Catholic people have actually largely lost sight of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Recently a western paper ran a picture of Christ on the cross with hand outstretched. Before the cross stood a robed Catholic priest offering the sacrifice of the Mass. The caption of the picture was "Another Christ—the Priest." Certainly I know that the R. C. Church will have an explanation and they will plead that this does not mean what it seems to mean. Often we have dealt

God Wrought a Miracle In Jenners

By Pastor Victor S. Rogers

Those who have seen God bless the work in Jenners can bear testimony to His faithfulness in the direction and establishment of the church. The church stands as a miracle to what God can do for a people who have vision and faith to move ahead for His glory.

I. The church has grown from a small group of believers to a self-supporting work.

The beginning of a church is a result of vision on the part of some to see God establish a testimony to the saving grace of Christ. Jenners was direly in need of a gospel testimony at the time God opened the doors to the Brethren Church. There was a group of faithful women who were meeting regularly and praying that God would give them a church. These women remained together as a faithful group from 1936, when their church was destroyed by fire, until the Lord opened up the door for a new church to be established. God has honored their faith, and they are rejoicing today in what He has done.

It was about nine years ago when Rev. Phillip Simmons, who was then pastor of the Listie church, was called to preach the funeral of the last man numbered among the faithful group. Through this incident Brother Simmons found that the people were ready and willing to have the Brethren Church come and help establish a work. The Lord has led since that day, and in spite of discouragements the people had faith that God would bless.

Various meeting places characterized the early days of the work. They met in the town recreational building, homes, and in the public school building until seven years ago when a basement church was constructed. The church held services in the basement during this time.

In the two years previous to the building, Brother Simmons was able to get a Bible class under way which later developed into the church. Two men served as part-time pastors in these early days: Rev. James Hammer and Rev. Richard DeArmey. We thank God for those who had vision to begin this work for the Lord. In 1948 Rev. W. Wayne Baker was called as the first full-time pastor and served until 1952. The present pastor, Victor S. Rogers, came on the field the first of October 1952.

We have seen the Lord bless from the beginning of the work, and now are happy to announce that the building is completed and we have become a self-supporting church. Our hearts rejoice in what the Lord has done for us. Truly we have seen many miracles in the establishment of the church. Dedication day was the happiest day in the history of the church when we were able to move into our upper auditorium.

II. The church has seen God's blessing and leading in the construction and completion of the house of the Lord.

The basement was built under the leadership of Pastor W. Wayne Baker in 1948. Two or three years later the blocks were laid and the permanent roof structure finished. Under the direction of the present pastor, in the last three years, the building has been completed. We have seen God supplying our needs as we have stepped out in faith. When we began decorating the basement, God marvelously supplied and and we were encouraged to move ahead. God continued to lead as we finished one job after another, and then made it possible for us to borrow enough money for the completion of the building.

Indeed, the church is finished beautifully on both the outside and inside. The church is brick veneered, and is completed on the outside with front porch, steps, walks, and curbing in the front and side facing the parking lot. The auditorium is decorated with light green walls, a white acoustical tile ceiling, fluorescent direct and indirect lighting, a cedar color asphalt tile on the floor, and birch doors with oak trim throughout. The building contains a platform, choir loft, baptistry, pastor's study, secretarial room, storage rooms, nursery, classrooms, vestibule, cloakroom, and, in the basement, restrooms and space for classes. The upper auditorium is furnished with silver gray pews and pulpit, and has a seating capacity of 170 besides extra seating room in choir and overflow rooms in the back. The actual size of the structure is 41 by 65 feet. It is worth approximately $45,000, but has been finished completely and furnished for about $30,000.

The church building has been made possible through countless hours of donated labor from members and friends of the congregation, and through careful management in the buying of materials and supplies. We want to thank the many who helped in the building of the house of the Lord.

III. The church has seen many precious souls come to Christ.

As we look back over the years our hearts have thrilled in what God has done. Souls have been saved from the depths of sin and have been brought into the glorious light of the Gospel. Wives have been saved and later their husbands have come to Christ. Complete homes have been transformed, and now Christ is the head.

The work of the Lord in hearts has had great influence in the town of Jenners. Even the local schoolteachers have remarked about the difference in the attitude of the children in school. Catholics have observed that there is a difference between our church and theirs, and that somehow God's blessing is upon us. People have noticed the wonderful power of God in the liberation of men from the curse of drink. In general, the public is amazed that we have a congregation of respected men and women of the community.

We thank the Lord for the many who have received Christ as Saviour since the foundation of the church. Those who are already in the church have been won to Christ through the church. This is truly a missionary field where many need to be won to the Lord.

IV. The church has been an answer to prayer.

God has answered prayer over and over again for our people. It's wonderful to see how God honors the faith of those who trust Him for their needs. Many have testified, in the matter of the completion of the building, that there was never a time when the need arose that God did not supply. We have learned the truth of Philippians 4:19: "But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Prayer has been the secret of our success as a church.

We want to thank the Lord for the District Mission Board of the East Fellowship who prayed and supported the work in Jenners. The Lord used the district board to get the work under way, and to help during the years of its establishment. Also we want to thank the Brethren Home Missions Council who cooperated with the district when there was a real need for help. The Council has stood by the church financially and spiritually since the construction of the upper part of the building over the last four or five years. Without the help of the district board and the Council, we would not have the church that stands in Jenners today. We appreciate the fine work which is being done in building Brethren churches. As a congregation we are going to pray for those whom the Lord is using in this great work.

V. The church has been dedicated to the Lord for service.

September 4, 1955, is a date that will go down in history as a great day of victory in the Jenners Brethren Church. There were 290 people who attended the dedicatory service. All available pews were in use besides many extra chairs to accommodate the crowd. Thirteen ministers were present in the service and took part in the program or greetings. The churches of the East Fellowship were well represented at the service.

Rev. Lester E. Pifer was the dedicatory speaker. He spoke on "The Threefold Dimensional Power of the Word of God." He described the Word as having "drawing power, developing power, and distinguishing power." Rev. William Schaffer gave the invocation, Rev. Clair Gartland read the Scripture, Rev. Homer Lingenfelter led in the congregation prayer, and Rev. Leslie Moore offered the dedicatory prayer.

The total offering received for the day was $776.11. A special prededicatory offering was received the last Sunday of June, which amounted to $691.04, and at this time many gave part of their regular dedication offering. Another amount given was $52.75, which was not included in the offering but was given in the form of a bulletin board and tract rack combined and a sign painted for the outside of the church. We praise the Lord for a total of $1,519.90 to climax our building program. We can all shout together: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." We want to thank Miss Hazel Shively, of Los Angeles, Calif., in advance for a beautiful baptistry painting which will be placed above our baptistry in the front of the church. This gift was mentioned on dedication day.

Bro. Lester Pifer held a week of meetings along with dedication which brought a great challenge to the church. He gave heart-searching messages on prayer and soul-winning which we believe will spur us on to do great things for our Lord. Pray that God will bless in our future work for Him.

HALLELUJAH AND AMEN!

By faith, in our wonderful Saviour,
Our church stands completed today.
We prayed by faith, labored by faith;
Gave by faith all the way.

By faith, God led some women
To go on in a labor of love.
Then He spoke to some pastors and laymen
And they answered the call from above.

"But how shall we build a church?" we asked.
"Our number is so few."
And God said: "Except I build the house
They labor in vain who do."

As we behold this structure
We know God has answered prayer,
For all His born-again children
Who humbly trust in His care.

Oh, how we praise God for His goodness!
He has on us His blessing bestowed.
For we in our finite being
Could never have carried this load.

Within these walls God is building
An house not made with hands.
Eternal, in the heavens,
With Him it forever stands.

Therefore, my beloved brethren,
May we always abound in the Lord.
Boldly taking the shield of faith,
Armed with His two-edged sword.

And may it pierce each Christian's heart
To make us live for Him,
And bring the lost ones to the fold
Cleansed from all their sin.

Now may the God of peace,
The Great Shepherd of the sheep,
Make us willing to do His will
And all His commandments keep.

So let us rejoice, beloved!
Till Jesus comes again;
And all the people shouted,
"Hallelujah and amen!"

FAITHFUL WITNESSING FINALLY WON ME

By S. E. Darr

I praise God for the faithfulness of the few ladies who loved their Lord enough to keep His commandment to "go and preach" that others in their community might share God's grace.

It was through their faithfulness that I came to know Christ as my Saviour, including my two children. It was unfortunate that I had no church background; however, this was no one's fault but my own. One of these faithful ladies invited me to attend the services from the beginning, nearly nine years ago, in her home and in the schoolhouse. But it wasn't until December 1952 that I attended my first Sunday-school class (31 years old).

From that day conviction fell upon me and within a few days I made my peace with my Lord, through faith in Jesus Christ. However, it wasn't until about three months later that I took my stand publicly.

This peace with my Lord was so perfect that my fellow workers started calling me "Preacher" within two or three days after my decision. What makes this sound so strange? My work is some 20 miles from my home and church and no one could possibly have known that I had ever been in Sunday school. Since that time I have been studying His Word, and from the first I found how far man has fallen short in serving a perfect Master.

BRETHREN PREACH THE WORD

By Mrs. Shimer Darr

I want to thank the Jenners Brethren Church for all the blessings I have received in the last three years since I have been a member there. I had been a member of another church for 13 years, but I have learned more about the Bible in these three short years than I did in those 13. I am truly thankful that I am in a Bible-preaching church. Another thing I have found in all Brethren churches that I had not found in any other church is the friendliness and warmth in which they welcome you to their church. I want to thank all those who had a small part in leading me to my Lord and Saviour that I may know that I have eternal life through Him.

JENNERS, A TESTIMONY TO FAITHFULNESS

By Mrs. Jesse Engle

During the past nine years, since the Brethren Church has been established in Jenners, the Lord has blessed and saved many precious souls. Since our church building was destroyed by fire in 1936, a few of us women are thankful that we were faithful and the Lord used us to keep His work going here in Jenners. It is a joy to know Christ and to serve Him in the Brethren Church. We praise God for answered prayer, and with His help we shall continue to labor for Him.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord" (I Cor. 15:58).

BUILT—BUT STILL BUILDING

By Warren F. Baith, Sunday School Superintendent

Our dedication day is history, but the greater building job is still ahead—that of building the Jenners portion of the body of Christ. First, we thank our wonderful Lord for His help; then we remember the Brethren Home Missions Council and the East District Mission Board. Surely for such times as we faced in the years of construction were these organizations of God prepared. Now our aim is to so present the Lord Jesus Christ in our community that lost souls will be drawn to Him, and saved sinners will grow in the grace and knowledge of Him.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED AT GOSHEN, IND.

The new Grace Brethren Church, Goshen, Ind., was dedicated on Sunday, October 2, 1955. Dr. A. J. McClain, president of Grace Theological Seminary, was the dedication speaker. The church was built by the Brethren Construction Company. Herman H. Hein, Jr., is the pastor. Complete details will be found in the November Home Mission Number of the Brethren Missionary Herald.

The Seed Takes Root in Barren Navajo Land

By Evan M. Adams

From the time the work was first started by Dorothy Dunbar, some six years ago, until the present time, the Lord has blessed the ministry of His Word among the Navajo people. The evidence of the power of God's Word to transform lives and to enlighten those in total darkness is seen in some of the lives touched by the mission in the short years of its work. The work of the school has now entered its fifth year with a large increase in enrollment, a new school building, additional members of the staff. Young people have been given the opportunity to receive an academic education, guided and tempered by the spiritual guidance of the Book of Life. Already young people from the school are being used in the work of telling the "Good News" to their people. Other Navajo Christians are now regularly going into the areas of the Navajo's land and sharing the truth and salvation they have found in the Lord Jesus Christ. Nellie Sala, a 16-year-old Navajo young woman, one of the first converts of the mission, tells in her own words some of the transformations made in her own life after hearing the Word through the Brethren Navajo Mission.

"When I was a little girl I used to live in a hogan way out near Star Lake, N. Mex. There were no trees, just sagebrush and dust like the desert. With my cousin, Bessie, I would herd the sheep and goats every day. Sometimes we would ride the old goats. One time Bessie hit the goat and I fell into the cactus. Playing in the desert we would kill the rattlesnakes and lizards. My mother always fixed me a good supper of fry-bread when I came home with the flocks in the evening.

"My mother taught me how to cook and to make a dress. She would tell me the right things to do. In the evening I would go out with my mother to worship the sun. We had corn pollen which we threw to the rising sun and the setting sun. Sometimes we used corn meal for our worship. We worshiped the sun so he would give us the rain for our corn gardens. My people told me that the coyote made everything. He made the earth and the sky above. I was always afraid of the 'Navajo Wolf.' At night the 'Navajo Wolf' stole our sheep. One time when I was sick a gray-haired man sang all night over me to drive the evil spirits away from me.

"As a small girl I didn't want to go to school. My mother sent me to Pueblo Pintade School, near Chaco Canyon, and I ran back to my people. Everything at the school was different from my home. I was glad to get back to sleep on my sheepskin by the fire of my mother's hogan. My mother told me to go back to school to learn to write letters. She scolded me but she didn't spank me.

"When I was older, we moved near to Jim Counselor's trading store. There we heard some people telling us the Word of God and singing songs to us that had good words. But I had never heard that and I couldn't understand what they were talking about. I went to Colorado to pick potatoes for a while and earned some money, but I missed my school. When I came back, I lived near the Brethren Navajo Mission. I wanted to learn more about God's Word and also to read my language. Then I would think about what my people used to tell me and what the Word of God said. Soon I began to think very hard about Christian life. My heart told me that God's Word was true. Also my heart told me that I had much sin too. But I was glad to know Jesus died for my sin. Then I had new life too. Jesus Christ was a Saviour for me. Now I have been a Christian for three years. Now my mother, my sister, Mary, and my brother, Peter, all are Christian together. Remember Jesus said: 'I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the father, but by me.' Thank you for telling us the words of life so that we might not die in our sin."

This is just one of the many tokens of the grace of God shed abroad in the hearts of the Navajo people. Remember there are many thousands more still living like this young woman described her life, without hope, in constant fear, no knowledge of God's grace through the Lord Jesus Christ. The Gospel of Christ is still the power of God unto salvation.

GOOD NEWS FROM FREMONT, OHIO

Fremont, Ohio, Group of Colored People

Good news came soon after our return from the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches' conference in Portland, Oreg., that the long-sought-for lots in Fremont, Ohio, were available for our colored work. The group has had a temporary building in "moth balls" for almost two years, waiting for the location to be secured. We believe prayer has been answered in making the location available, and a continued interest in your prayers is asked for this work.

with Romans Catholics, including priests, and found this to be true. But it is this plain English the church wants the people to read and receive. It would certainly suit the policy of the church to place the priest on a par with Christ. Posters with this blasphemous picture were circulated and posted throughout this western area.

Roman Catholic people need light. They need information concerning the truth of God's Word. Unless Christian people rise to the challenge and provide such truth, Roman Catholic influence will continue to increase and perhaps result in the curtailment of some liberties Protestants enjoy now.

One of the finest tracts on this subject we have ever seen is "Romanism in the Light of the Bible," by Stephen E. Slocum. It is available from the Tract Club of America, 411 S. Wells, Chicago 7, Ill.

Hell for Certain Has Heard the Gospel

SO MANY UNSAVED!

By Miss Evelyn Fuqua

After visiting every afternoon up the creeks and hollers during our evangelistic meeting, Rev. Dean Fetterhoff made the statement: "I've never been in a place where there were more unsaved."

During the two weeks of the meetings, a visit was made to every family in the community. Brother Fetterhoff dealt personally with many souls, and almost everyone admitted being unsaved. Our people wept when spoken to. Many were at the very door of salvation, even with their hand on the doorknob, but still did not yield to the Saviour.

The services were well attended, with over 100 on Tuesday night. Each evening the service was started with our young people singing "Cleanse Me." Brother Fetterhoff's messages were heart-searching for Christians, and full of love and concern for the lost. There were 20 decisions in all, nine who acknowledged Christ as their Saviour, and 11 Christians who rededicated their lives to the Lord. Sunday afternoon six were baptized at a service by the river which included five adults and one child. Over 90 people gathered to watch and listen.

Approximately 600 people gathered each Saturday morning we held street meetings at the Hyden courthouse. Brother Fetterhoff preached and Truymond Haddix helped with the music. Others gave testimonies, and we passed out tracts to the great crowd of people. One evening there were 32 young people at a wiener bake, where they heard a challenging message. They stayed as a group for the evening service.

We truly believe Brother Fetterhoff was God's man for our revival meetings. Remarks were heard from many others in the community that indicated they felt the same way and were pleased because of his interest in them.

Our community has been warned of God's judgment to come. Many seem to have awakened to their need of Christ. Pray with us for their salvation.

By Dean Fetterhoff

We thank the Lord for the two wonderful weeks which my wife, baby, and I had the privilege of spending at the Brethren Chapel in Hell for Certain, Ky. We were pleasantly surprised as we arrived to see the beautiful little chapel which was erected by Brethren laymen about two years ago and to see the fine work being done by Miss Evelyn Fuqua. This was a new experience, for never before had we had the privilege of going deep back into the "hills and hollers" to preach the Gospel.

We certainly praise the Lord for His blessing in the meeting both in the souls who came to know Christ as their personal Saviour and in those Christians who came back into fellowship with their Lord. It was a real blessing to my own heart to see many of those people walk as far as two miles down the mountain paths, through the creeks, etc., to get to the services each night. We praise the Lord again for His blessing upon the meeting in Hell for Certain and pray that the Lord will strengthen Miss Evelyn for the great responsibility which is upon her in the work there, and that many of those who are right on the verge of salvation but yet unsaved may soon come to know our Lord.

A BIG GIRL TOO SMALL

Evelyn Begley

I'm a big girl now! My Mommy is a charter member of the Brethren Chapel of Hell for Certain, Ky. I wasn't very big when they dedicated the chapel in October 1953. We were so happy to have this church house where we live. When Miss Evelyn came to Hell for Certain in July 1950, the Sunday school met in the little schoolhouse across the river. When the flood washed the bridge away, meetings were held in a little house way up on a hillside. One Sunday there were 72 people in a little room 12 x 24. Now we have such a pretty place for Sunday school.

The church was organized July 10, 1955, by Rev. Harold Etling. The charter membership is still open, and already we have 12 members.

I wish I was big enough to be a charter member. I haven't missed a single Sunday this year, and just as soon as they'll let me, my name, Evelyn Begley, will be on the church roll too.

ISRAEL CALLS!

SOWING THE SEED

By Isobel Fraser

Standing on God's promise that "in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Gal 6:9), I would like to share some experiences of sowing the seed among Israel.

One day Mrs. Button told me of a conversation with a young man from one of the downtown missions who had been calling in our neighborhood. He told her of a very interesting conversation he had with the mother of the lady who lived across the street from Buttons. She, however, was interested in Christian Science, and Mrs. Button hoped to find an opportunity to speak with her. Since she was only baby-sitting for her daughter, the opportunity did not come, but we did remember her in prayer.

Then one day in my door-to-door calling in an area south of the mission, an elderly lady answered my knock. She just came to the side window. I offered her the Mediator and explained what it was. Almost the first thing she said to me was: "When you pray, do you talk to yourself? I can't tell you why, but I want to know." My reply was that I talked to God; sometimes I prayed audibly and sometimes silently, for God even knows our thoughts. She said she did believe in Jesus as Messiah, but something didn't seem right. Then she invited me to come in and we had a good talk. Finally I learned that she was a believer in Christian Science. Really, I never have talked with anyone who was as steeped in this teaching as she. She was continually repeating Christian Science "statements" and that led her to ask the one about prayer. I then spoke to her and showed her Scriptures about sin and the need of a sacrifice and the deity of Messiah. When I told her of our meetings she said she would come that evening. So, after a word of prayer, I left.

She did attend that evening, and on the way over she mentioned that her daughter lived on Kings Road. It wasn't long before we discovered that she was the mother we had so recently prayed for. After our Bible study she entered into a Biblical discussion and asked questions. This time Brother Button had the opportunity to present Scriptures on the deity of Christ. Since that time I have been in her home several times, and on each occasion had an opportunity to witness to her. She does have a Bible and I have tried to encourage her to read it and not the works of men.

Another morning I had a short conversation with a Jewish man who said he was interested in these things and had attended such meetings. He worked nights, but while on the job he and a fellow Negro worker were reading and discussing the New Testament. He accepted the prophecy edition of the New Testament that I offered him and said he would be glad to read it.

I had a strange feeling on one occasion when the gentleman I was talking to about Messiah walked away from the door without saying a word. However, in a moment he was back and to my amazement in his hand was a New Testament. I asked him if he believed it was the Word of God or was just investigating it. No; he didn't believe in it but left it out on the coffee table that those who visited them might read it. He closed the conversation by saying he had to go to work, but I pray that future contacts here may be fruitful.

Coming to another home, an elderly couple and a man were sitting on the steps talking. After offering them the Mediator, the way opened for a real discussion, especially with the younger man, who was the son-in-law. His wife joined us too. We talked on almost every subject relative to Messiah and Jesus. The younger man had been brought up in a gentile community, attended several churches, and even read a library copy of the New Testament—just out of curiosity. He accepted a prophecy edition of the New Testament and would have attended our meeting that night but for previous plans. The younger couple was leaving the next day for Canada, where they live. But he said they come to California each winter and so we trust that perhaps next year they can again be contacted.

The father said that he came from an Orthodox home, but because his father never gave him an explanation to his questions on their faith, he gave it up. He also asked that ever-popular question: "If there is a God, why does He permit the world to be in such a mess?" I gave him the Biblical explanation of sin and its consequences, and to some extent it did satisfy him. The wife, who is the religious one of the family, and hardly understands English, was quite pleasant until I told her in Hebrew that I believed Jesus is Messiah. Even after the younger couple left I had a good talk with the father. I had no other New Testaments with me, but he did accept a Yiddish Matthew. Later, from the next house where I called, I could see him sitting on the step reading it.

Recently I had another interesting discussion with a Jewess, who at first didn't want to accept the Mediator, saying, "I'm Jewish." She too voiced that question: "If there is a God, why all the problems and troubles?" We discussed sin, and she did admit that all were sinners. She confessed that she did not have peace of mind and that all her problems caused her to doubt God. I told her where she could find this peace and the answer to her need and gave her the Scriptures. She said that she was not free to talk any longer but would like me to call back. She was going to move soon and gave me her name and the new address. Considering the beginning of our conversation, this is an encouragement that the Lord used some of the testimony to touch her heart.

We covet your prayers that the giving forth of the Gospel to these Jews may bear fruit unto salvation.

BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS

By DEAN RISSER
Pastor, Johnson City Brethren Church
Johnson City, Tenn.

The problem of peace is as old as Cain and Abel, and as complex as it can be made by the hearts of men, whose thoughts are evil continually. We find that one of the characteristics of mankind in general is his natural tendency to get himself at odds, more or less, with other people. We are just not made to keep peaceable relations with each other, and this is evident from the wranglings of the United Nations all the way down to the disappointed wail of baby sister, whose brother has grabbed the lollipop from her mouth and run behind the garage with it. Peaceableness is not one of the notable characteristics of the human race.

When we multiply the rebellion of an individual human heart by the countless and increasing billions of people in the world, the job of making peace on this earth would resemble the task of working a crossword puzzle of a billion pieces, where every piece is made and contributed by each of a billion individuals. Although the making of a perfect, or even workable peace is humanly impossible, no sensible person would say that we should not try. Just because the United Nations has failed in keeping the world entirely free of war and strife does not mean that they have been unable to accomplish some significant works of making peace. A man named Ralph Bunche was given the Nobel Peace Prize for restoring the cool breeze of peace to that eternal hotspot, Palestine—imperfect, yes; but certainly of some value if you count human lives valuable.

The fact of human inadequacy in making peace bears out the teaching of Scripture, for it declares in Isaiah 45:7, "I [Jehovah] make peace," and again in Psalm 29:11 we find, "Jehovah will bless his people with peace" (ASV). Add to these references the numerous occurrences in the New Testament where we read, "Grace and peace from God the Father." Although the source and beginning of peace is God the Father, that does not relieve us of the responsibility of being His instruments in the actual making of peace, and here the passage in Matthew 5:9 bears directly on the point: "Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God."

God's Word states that those who work at peacemaking will be recognized as the "children of God," or as the Revised Version more accurately puts it, "sons of God." Not everyone who gathers around the peace table is known for being a son of God, but at least we all recognize that they have gifts and mental capacities beyond the ordinary if they are successful. We do not let just anybody represent our country at the U. N., but only those whom we believe are mentally equipped to at least partly succeed. Because of their superior minds and abilities, which of course are the gift of God, we might possibly call successful diplomats "sons of God," but only in a very limited sense.

For, however important may be the matter of peace in this world, there is another kind of peace that dwarfs it in comparison. The peace of which I speak is, of course, that of the individual soul with God. Blessed indeed is a peacemaker where the two persons involved are a Holy God and an offending, sinful man; he would of necessity be a "son of God." I believe that this is the basic peace, without which all other settlements of peace are incomplete and unstable. Men cannot continue very long in peace where rebellion and trucebreaking are a part of their natures, so the beginnings of a perfect peace is in the changing of the hearts of men, which God says is "deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked."

It is surprising how comparatively few men and women are working at the business of making peace between God and men, especially since it is so vital. The Bible tells us plainly it is needed—"There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked" (Isa. 57:21). Just whose job is it, anyway, to try to patch up things between God and fallen mankind? Did God ever assign the task to anyone? "All things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation . . . and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation" (II Cor. 5:18-19). The enmity of the offended party, the Holy God, is gone. God has nothing whatever against sinful mankind now, for His Word declares that He is "not imputing their trespasses unto them."

Our sins were paid for at Calvary, and where once man had been hopelessly alienated from God, he has now been "made nigh by the blood of his cross." It is the heaven-granted privilege of every son of God to tell this good news to those who need to be reconciled to God, and to try to persuade them in the power of the Holy Spirit to accept the gracious terms that God is offering. This message is important enough and joyful enough to cause the angels to want to tell it, but God has seen fit to entrust it only to twice-born men and women.

"Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (II Cor. 5:20). True as this is, we still find some Christians playing the part of troublemakers. Their tongue is a fire, and not for God. It causes not peace, but dissension; it is not used to boldly proclaim a free salvation, but to bring about a mistrust and a driving from God. The untamed tongue is a curse to the cause of Christ, but a person who uses his tongue in the ministry of reconciliation is a blessing, and is duly recognized as a son of God.

The Towel in the Master's Hand

Some people argue that Jesus ate the Passover with His disciples the night He was in the upper room. First, consider that there are two different words used in these verses: "passover" and "supper."

If Jesus ate the Passover with the disciples in John 13, He was guilty of breaking the Law, for He said: "I came not to destroy [or break] the law: but to fulfill." No one could find a single charge against Him at His trial, so even the Jews knew He had not broken any part of the Law in any respect. (Note, the Passover was to be eaten in the night part of the 15th day—Exod. 12:8).

Immediately someone will point you to Luke 22:11, where Jesus says: "Where is the guestchamber where I shall eat the passover with my disciples?" The Jewish day began at sundown and the preparation for the Passover began at once. All leaven was taken out of the houses and unleavened bread baked. No doubt Jesus did eat the unleavened bread in anticipation of the Passover, but He could not have eaten the lamb, as it was not killed until the latter part of that day (read Exod. 12:6: evening of the 14th day). The lamb, according to Exodus 12:8, was to be eaten that night, so it would be the night part of the 15th day. If Jesus did eat the Passover, He ate it 24 hours too soon, and thus broke the Law, as above stated. And if He ate the Passover that night, then Luke 22:16 is not true, for He said: "I will not eat thereof ["any more" not in the ASV] until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God."

Argument Regarding Feetwashing

Some say this was a Jewish custom. If this was so, and Peter did not know it, he must have been a very ignorant Jew! For an illustration: suppose that I go up and shake hands with you (a custom among American folk) and you would say, "Why, Dr. Beal, wilt thou shake hands with me?" And then I would say: "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." Do you see how foolish that would look? And yet it is no more foolish than for people to try to tell us that Peter would not have recognized a Jewish custom, had that been what Jesus was doing.

Surely if there is a time when a man would go the "limit" of customary hospitality, it would be when he was entertaining the Lord himself. And yet in Genesis 18:4 we see Abraham providing water for the three men to wash their own feet. No hint that he even offered to do it for them. Again in Genesis 24:32 we find no hint that the host washed the feet of the company. In Luke 7:36-44 Jesus calls the attention of Simon to the fact that he had failed to provide water to wash His feet as He entered the house. The Jewish custom was to provide the water at the door and let the guests wash their own feet—similar to our providing water, soap, and towels for our guests.

Others say their feet were dusty from travel. Read John 18:18 and note that the weather was cold! In Palestine people wear shoes much like the Indian moccasins in cold weather, so it is not likely that their feet were dusty from travel. (These shoes were made of sheepskin with the wool turned inside and laced around the ankle.) This puts a question mark after the idea of sandals and dust.

Did Judas have his feet washed along with the other disciples? (Read verses 5-12.) Of course he did. So if it was a matter of dust, Jesus would not have said in verses 10-11 what he did—that Judas was unclean.

Some argue that this was to teach humility. They say that Luke 22:24-27 fits in here, and as the disciples had been quarreling about who should be the greatest in the kingdom, so Jesus taught them to be humble. Jesus gave His rebuke in verses 25-27, which settled that, and furthermore, this strife came after the feetwashing, so it does not fit into this idea. If this was to teach the disciples humility, it would have taken place after the strife, not before.

Humility is a fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:23) and therefore is not a result of teaching, but it is a direct result of the indwelling Holy Spirit —only born-again ones are truly humble. Humble people observe this ordinance, but observing it does not make one humble. It is done because born-again ones are humble—not in order to get that way.

Still others say it should be done just once for all—like baptism. We believe it was a NEW THING to be observed by the church as a means of growth in grace! (God never asks us to do things to make it hard for us, but to cause us to grow in grace.)

A New Thing!

Kindly remember that not all things are recorded which Jesus did while here on earth. (Read John 20:30-31; 21:25.) Now before He gave the Great Commission (a very new thing) He had to recognize that He himself had been given power (Matt. 28:16-20). Up until the time of His resurrection He had no message to the gentiles (Matt. 10:1-10). Now He gives this "new thing"—we call it the Great Commission—and He instructs His disciples to go into all the world and disciple all nations (Jew and gentile).

If you will read John 13:3: "Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands," you will note that it sounds much like Matthew 28:18: "All power was given him." Yes; He is here giving a new thing and so emphasizes His authority to do so.

Note that Jesus in John 13:10-11 could not have been referring to an outer cleansing because Judas had had his feet washed just as the other disciples, and yet Jesus said that Judas was not clean. He must have been referring to an inner cleansing. In verses 12-17 we have a definite command supplemented by an example.

A farmer went away for the day, but before going he gave his son some instructions as to the work of the day. He took the son to the field and showed the son how he wanted the field plowed by plowing a few rows as an example. When he returned at the end of the day, he found the horses rested, no sign of work, and on going to the field found that no plowing had been done. On asking his son what it all meant the son replied: "Oh, I didn't think it made any difference if I plowed or not." How do you suppose the father felt? Surely our Lord has a right to expect obedience to a command.

Was this done by the early church? Unless this was practiced in the early church, why would widows have been expected to wash any saints' feet (I Tim. 5:10)?

The early church used bread and wine (I Cor. 10:16). That is why so many churches use it now.

There was an organization in the early church especially to take care of the widows. There are definite restrictions placed on widows: she must be 60 years of age; wife of one man; well reported of for good works; brought up children; lodged strangers; if she had washed the saints' feet; relieved the afflicted; if she hath diligently followed every good work." Surely this is evidence that feetwashing was done in the early church.

Therefore, we contend that the real significance of this is to give us an object lesson of the past, present, and future ministry of Christ. All churches observe the bread and wine (though there is no definite command to do so, such as there is for feetwashing), and this is the thing which points us back to the past ministry of Christ. The bread and wine are symbols of this past ministry.

If you will read Ephesians 5:25-27 and I John 2:1-2 you will find there is a present ministry of Christ. That has to do with His interceding for us —His advocacy. Sins of saints break their fellowship with God, and so we have to take advantage of the promise of I John 1:9 and we by way of confessing our sins are cleansed. But why? Because Jesus is our advocate with the Father and thus makes possible our daily cleansing in our defiled walk through life. Now what is the symbol of this present ministry? We believe the feetwashing service is that symbol. Can you tell me of one single thing that any other church observes which symbolizes this present ministry of Christ?

It is important that saved individuals be kept constantly reminded of the past work of Christ which made possible their salvation—but listen! Now that you are saved, it is just as important that you keep in fellowship with God, and we need also to be reminded constantly that Christ's present ministry in heaven provides for this very thing. Are you enjoying real fellowship with your Father in heaven? If not, there is something wrong. But be not discouraged, for the Father has provided a way to make it right—"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

Again I say that the feetwashing service in the church is the only symbol that points to His present ministry. We believe there is also a future ministry of Christ. Read Luke 12:37 and note that at the marriage supper of the Lamb Christ will serve us. And so, the meal which we eat, the real Lord's Supper (no one has any right to call the bread and the wine the Lord's Supper—that is the Eucharist) is the symbol of the future ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, the Brethren Church has a complete picture of the complete work of our Lord ever before them.

The Towel in the Master's Hand—Its Significance

The thing that the Lord Jesus Christ did on the night before His crucifixion was not a Jewish custom, neither was it intended to teach the act of humility, nor because of the dust on the disciples' feet. We do not count it a matter of salvation. but it is the work of saved folk. Since it is none of these things, then it must be something new—something which has not been done before. If it was something new, then it must have had a peculiar significance. What is this significance. Read John 13:1-17.

If you are going to get the real significance, you must keep in mind that the Bible teaches a threefold ministry of Christ—past, present, future. The Jews could only see one thing and that was that Jesus was to set up His kingdom. They failed to see the suffering Messiah. Today many can see only the sacrificial work of the Lord Jesus Christ and fail to see that He will set up the kingdom in the future.

The past ministry of Christ is His death on the cross. The present ministry is clearly taught in the Word. We should be concerned about this. I John 2:1-12 speaks of Christ as our advocate. The all-important thing for the saved is fellowship with God. Some do not know that the Word emphasizes fellowship. Salvation makes you a babe in Christ, and if your experience is what it should be, there is something more than being saved. We have to grow in grace. Only fellowship with God will make this growth possible. God has in store for those who love Him things beyond the thought of man, and we will experience these things and enjoy them throughout eternity only as we have learned to appreciate such things now.

Suppose you were out on an ocean and wanted water. You dip a vessel into the ocean and bring it up full, but the amount of water you got out of the ocean did not depend upon the amount in the ocean. It all depended upon the size of the vessel with which you dipped. If you used a pint—you got a pint-full, et cetera. So the matter of our fellowship with God now will determine our capacity for, or our degree of, enjoyment in heaven.

There is something necessary for this fellowship. The man whose life is not clean cannot have the right fellowship. The man whose heart is filled with lust cannot have true fellowship with God, and the Word of God designates this person as a carnal Christian. Sin breaks fellowship with God.

The necessary thing is the matter of cleansing. Read Ephesians 5:26-27. This is the present ministry of Christ. His present purpose is to cleanse daily. But note what He uses to do the cleansing—the Word! Not vain speculation. Never can there be too much emphasis on a knowledge of the Word of God. How can the Word cleanse me if I know nothing about it? I John 1:9 states the condition in which it is possible to enter into fellowship and have this cleansing take place. We must confess our sins in order to get back into fellowship, and how can a person know this unless he knows the Word of God?

The future ministry is stated in Luke 12:35-37. When He comes, those who are His children go with Him (1 Thess. 4:13-18) and there takes place the marriage supper of the Lamb. The Bible teaches that these divine truths are symbolized so that we can get hold of them. The Passover Lamb was the object lesson that the people might learn that the blood is back of all safety and security. Every time we use the bread and wine we get the great object lesson of the sacrifice of the Lamb on the cross. Now what is there in the Word that symbolizes this present ministry? It is the significance of the towel in the Master's hand. John 13 is a symbol of the present ministry of Christ.

What is the symbol of His future ministry? The meal that He ate with His disciples which symbolized the supper of the marriage of the Lamb. In Philippians 2:1-11 we have the humiliation of the Lord; in John 17:5 we have the glorification of Him; in Acts 7:55-56 Stephen sees Him seated at the right hand of the Father.

In Philippians 2:5-11 we have a picture of Christ's incarnation. Laying aside the glory which He had with the Father, He took on human form and then made the wonderful sacrifice. After this work was accomplished, He went back to the Father and received a name that is above every name and thus experienced the answer of John 17:5.

Under the Law the high priest was to clothe himself in the linen garments only on the Day of Atonement, and then make atonement for himself and the people. This high priest was just a fore-picture of the true High Priest—Jesus Christ. Keep in mind how he was to dress—in linen—before He offered the atonement, and the linen garment was to be worn next to the skin (Exod. 28; Lev. 16:4-16).

In John 13:1-3 we read that Christ laid aside His garments. In Philippians it tells us that He laid aside His glory. In John it tells us that He took a towel and girded himself. In the original language the word used for "towel" is lenion (linen). Yes; He girded himself with linen, just as the high priests did in the Old Testament, and before He could make atonement for the people. Then He took a vessel and poured water into it. Read Psalm 22 and we see here a symbol of the "pouring out of his life like water." Jesus had been telling the disciples of His experience in Jerusalem, and here symbolizes the pouring out of His life like water. Then He cleansed them and washed their feet with the towel with which He was girded. Then in verse 12 we read that He takes His garment again and puts it on.

What was the Lord's prayer in John 17:5? "And now, O Father, glorify thou me in thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was." And in Philippians 2:9-11: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." And after this He sat down. The Lord Jesus is now on His Father's throne in heaven. The communion service which is observed by the Brethren Church is the picture—the object lesson—of the very thing which the Holy Spirit later develops in Philippians 2.

No one could tell the disciples these things because they could not understand. But He said that when the Holy Spirit would come, He would make it plain to them (John 14:26). Why do we observe the cleansing first? Before Christ's sacrifice could be made, He must lay aside His glory.

The question now arises: Ought we to do it? Is it the thing which saved folk should observe? We speak of the bread and wine. Wonderful, but remember the sacrificial work of Christ could never have taken place if Christ had not first of all laid aside His glory. John 13 carries the whole picture of His sacrificial death. The Word says we "ought" (vss. 13-15).

We consider this word "ought" very binding in other connections; why not here? "So ought men to love their wives" (Eph. 5:28). "Ye ought to walk and to please God" (1 Thess. 4:1). "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed" (Heb. 2:1). "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be" (Jas. 3:10). "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself so to walk" (I John 2:6). Yes; we should consider the "ought" of John 13 just as binding as the other "oughts."

The individual who waits for a definite "you must" is not the one who is living in close fellowship with God. Children of God are always entreated to please the Father, and not be forced to do things. It is a matter of doing God's will out of a heart of love. And the very fact that Jesus supplemented His statement with an example surely makes this very binding.

If ye know these things, happy [or blessed] are ye if ye do them" (John 13:17).

HE SAT

WHERE WE SIT

By C. S. ZIMMERMAN, Pastor
Patterson Park Brethren Church
Dayton, Ohio

Man, in his extremity, realizes the distance between God and himself, and the need of someone to bring God to him, and him to God. Praise our God, He has made this provision. "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings . . . Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil" (Heb. 2:9, 10, 14).

Here we see God the Son entering into the human family to bring many sons to glory by reconciling them unto God, taking away the penalty of sin, suffering its penalty; that is, death, for the family of men. He became the mediator between God and man. To do this God the Son must also become man, taking part of both to bring God and man together.

The humanity of Christ is shown in many ways. Paul said: "For there is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (I Tim. 2:5). Here He is called man. Our Lord was called "the Son of man" 77 times, and applies the same to himself when He said: "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost" (Luke 19:10).

He had a human ancestry. Mary "brought forth her firstborn son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn" (Luke 2:7). Paul, speaking of this, writes: "But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law" (Gal. 4:4). David was overwhelmed by the promise of God, which was confirmed by an oath, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ, to sit on his throne (Acts 2:30). Again and again Jesus is referred to as the son of David, the seed of David, made according to the flesh.

In fact, the Apostle John makes the humanity of Jesus Christ the test of the orthodoxy of our faith. He says, in I John 4:2-3: "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now already is it in the world."

He was subject to the laws of human development in body and soul. He grew (Luke 2:40); He asked questions (Luke 2:46), which is a normal functioning of a mind that is unfolding; He increased in wisdom (Luke 2:52); He learned obedience (Heb. 5:8); He became acquainted with suffering through experience (Heb. 2:18); He was made perfect through suffering (Heb. 2:10). This development made it possible for Him to sympathize with and help those who are His.

He was motivated by the instinctive principles and exercised the active powers that belong to normal human beings. He hungered (Matt. 4:2); He thirsted (John 19:28); He became weary (John 4:6); He slept (Matt. 8:24); He loved (Mark 10:21); He had compassion (Matt. 9:36); He was angry and grieved (Mark 3:5); He manifested reverential trust (Heb. 5:7); He groaned (John 11:33); He wept (John 11:35); He prayed (Mark 14:23). These are all normal functions of man that we experience daily. These were all included in the daily experiences of our Lord.

Thus we see that He entered into the daily activities, experiences, relations of man. He became one with us, apart from sin. Truly He knoweth our frame, and remembereth that we are but dust. All of these moved Him toward that great event for which He came—the sacrifice for sin, which must be accomplished by death.

Jesus suffered and died. Both of these are common to man. So intense was His suffering His blood oozed through the pores of His skin (Luke 22:44). After this event He was suspended between heaven and earth on the cross. He again entered into intense suffering, the like of which no one can know. It is true that men have been crucified, but none ever bore the sin of the world, and the wrath of God at the same time, as He did. That He died there on the cross is shown by the blood and water that flowed from His side after the spear thrust of the soldier. "When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost" (John 19:30). This means doubtless that He experienced a suspension of the personal union between His soul and His body. The evidence of His death is real. Thus he passed through the realm of human experience as a human—as the Son of man.

He arose from the dead. Of Stephen, in death, it is said: "But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God, and said, Behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:55-56). This indicates that Jesus still possesses His human body in heaven.

Truly He sat where we sit, that in His time we may sit with Him in glory, with bodies fashioned like unto His glorious body, beholding Him as He is. "Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin" (Heb. 4:14-15).

The Danger of Delay

There is no greater lamentation or woe that could possibly come upon the heart and mind of a human being than those recorded in Jeremiah 8:20: "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." Year after year a great host of people are like Felix to whom Paul "reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come," although he was terrified in his heart because of his many sins, yet said to Paul: "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

It is doubtful if there is a better way to lull the awakened conscience to sleep than by a half-honest promise to attend to the soul's need at some future time. It is nothing more than giving a sop to the conscience to stop its barking. Procrastination is both "the thief of time" and the great harvest gatherer of lost souls. Unbelief has slain its thousands, procrastination its ten thousands. A "convenient season" to repent of sin and return to God will never come. Repentance is a bitter cup to all. To love what one has hated, and hate what one has loved, will never become convenient. Repentance is going counter to all the strong currents of human nature. If one does not have resolution and strength for this today, he will have less inclination and strength for the distasteful service tomorrow. The means of salvation, when resisted, lose more and more of their power, till finally they cease to have any influence. The Word of God ceases to alarm. The voice of conscience is hushed. The tender heart is gone. The Lord's Day and the Lord's house lose their charm. The striving Spirit is grieved away.

By A. D. CASHMAN

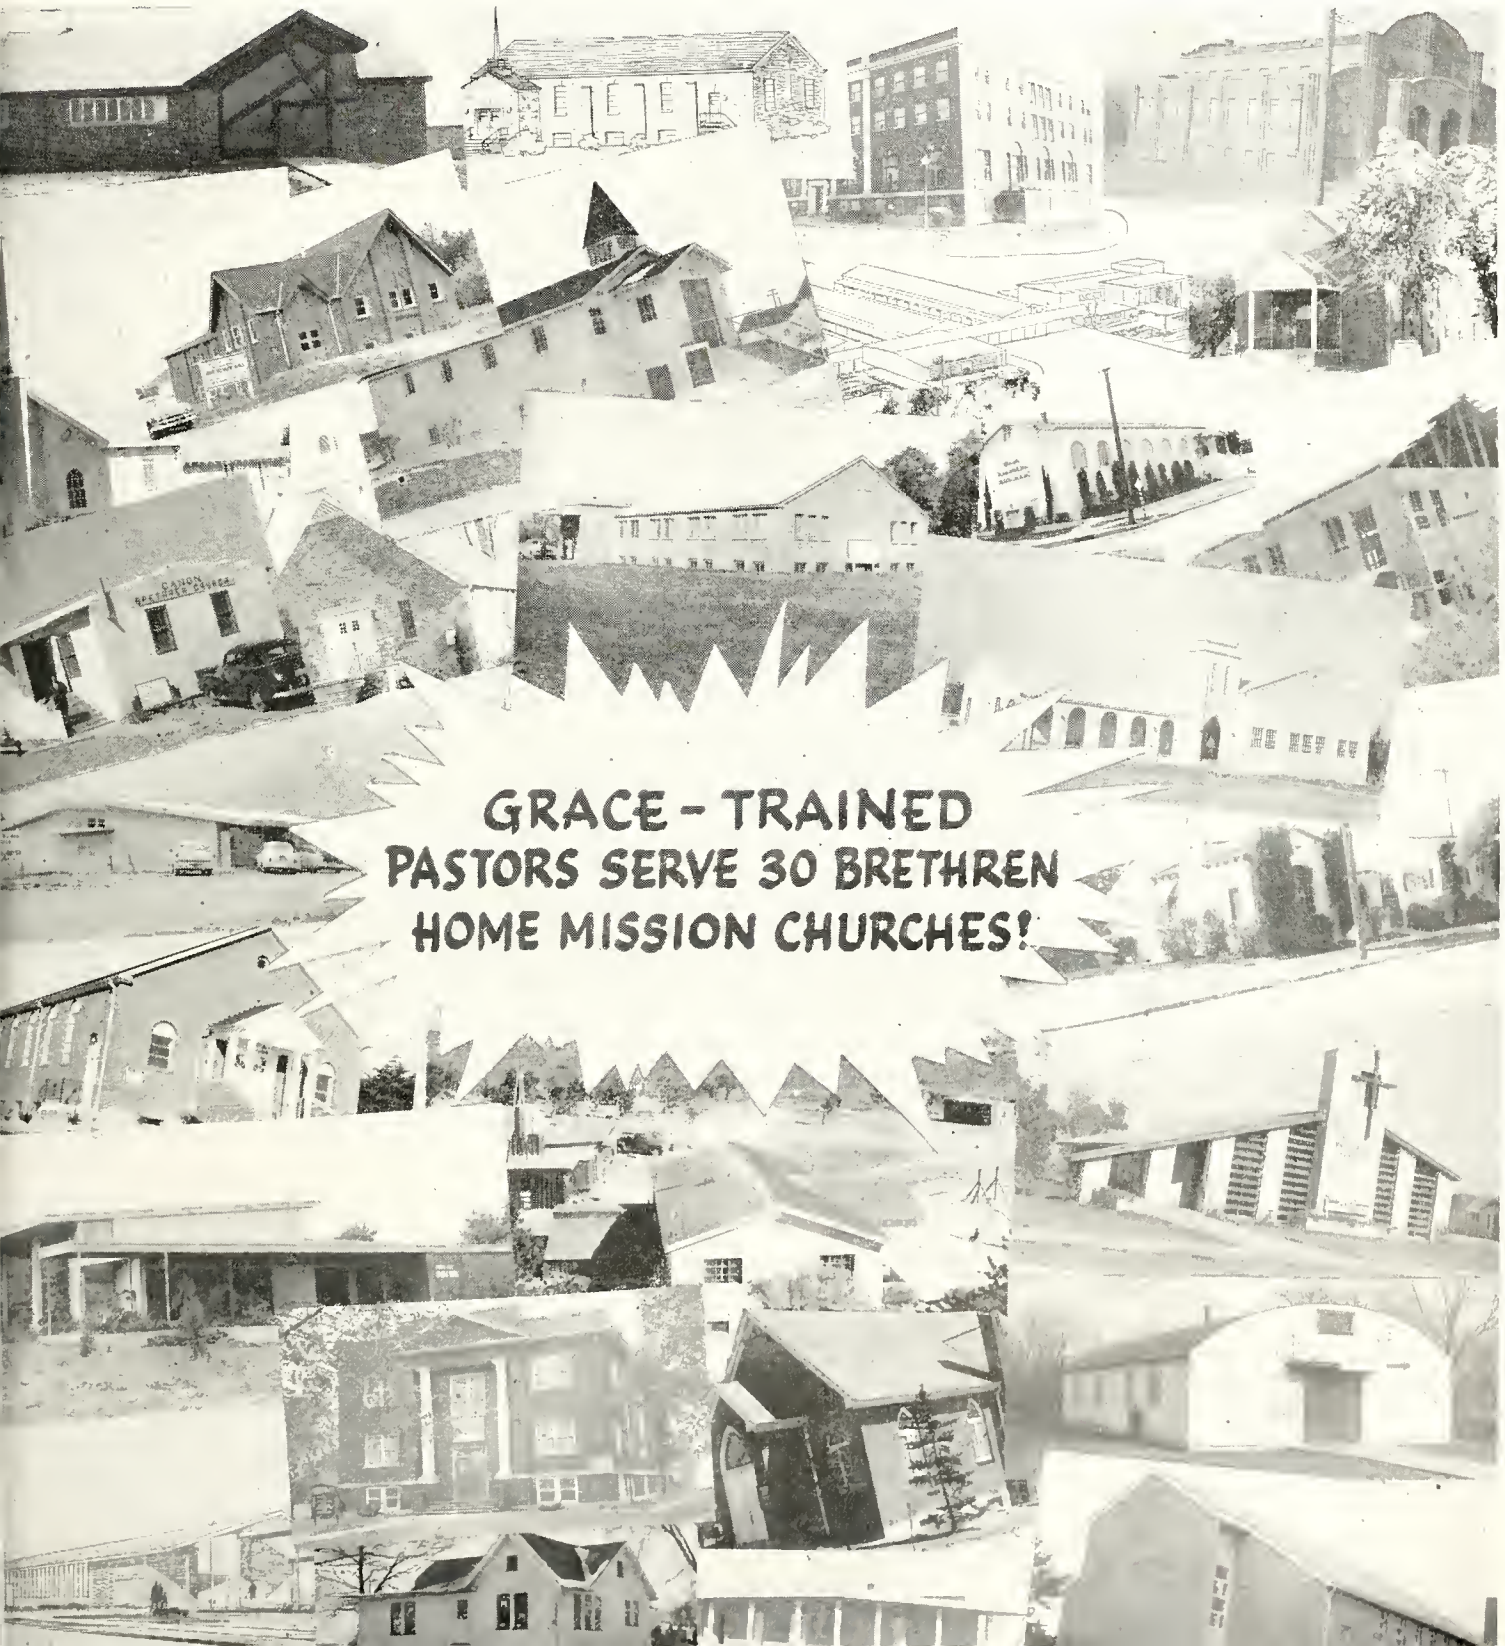
Pastor, First Brethren Church
Dallas Center, Iowa

The notion that it is time enough to get ready for eternity when one is older is a delusion of Satan. He cares not how moral a man is, nor how anxious he is about his soul, so long as he is disposed to wait for a future opportunity. He who now tempts us to delay a little longer will soon persuade us that we have delayed too long. Many a boy has been earnestly entreated to seek Christ, but he has said, "Wait until I get to be a young man." When the young man is asked to accept Christ, he says, "Wait until I come to midlife." Deal with him when he is middle-aged, he says, "Wait until I get old." When he is old, he says, "Wait until I am on my deathbed." Call on him when he is dying and he whispers in a faltering voice, "I - am - waiting - for - more - convenient - season," and is gone. There is no convenient season for him now. He who is not ready to be saved when the lifeboat is at the wreck will never have a more convenient season for his rescue.

In a pastorate of 20 years in an old established church, the minister made note concerning the 380 persons he received into his membership. He discovered that 305 came in before the age of 30; 38 between the age of 30 and 48; 22 between 40 and 50; 8 between 50 and 60; 3 between 60 and 70; 3 between 70 and 80, and 1 between 80 and 90. It is a known fact that the intensity and frequency of desire to love and serve God lessens as time passes. Delay is decision the wrong way.

Cases in court are adjourned sometimes because of the witnesses are not ready, or because the plaintiff is not ready, or because the defendant is not ready, and sometimes because the judge is not ready, until the bill of costs is ruinous. So there are men and women who have adjourned the case of the soul's salvation until death eternal will be the bill of costs to pay.

Delays increase difficulties. The heart becomes more hardened, the conscience more seared, convictions return less frequently, and sinful habits are more and more strengthened and confirmed. If you take a bit of phosphorus and put it on a slip of wood, and ignite the phosphorus, as bright as the blaze is, there drops from it a white ash that coats the wood and makes it almost incombustible. And so when the flaming conviction laid upon men's hearts, has burnt itself out, it has coated the heart, and it will be very difficult to kindle the light there again. Felix did send for Paul again, and repeated the conversation, but we do not know that he repeated the trembling.



A man always finds a convenient season for what he loves best. Whether it is working, or eating, or sleeping, or pleasure-seeking, or money-getting, if it has his heart he will find time for it. He who does not find a convenient season for accepting the offer of salvation, values something above that. He thinks more of the life that now is than of the life which is to come. He also fails to realize how much more of joy there is in the present life to one who has Jesus Christ for his Saviour than to one who is not at peace with God.

GRACE-TRAINED PASTORS SERVE 30 BRETHREN HOME MISSION CHURCHES!

EDITORIALS

By Paul R. Bauman, Vice President

Grace Seminary and Home Missions

This month, at the very height of their offering period, we call your attention once more to the work and needs of the Brethren Home Missions Council. Even though the financial needs at Grace are acute at the present time, we are praying that the Lord will provide the Home Missions Council with the greatest Thanksgiving Offering it has ever received. The future welfare and expansion of the entire Brethren denomination, in foreign lands as well as in America, depends upon the growth of these offerings. We trust every church will show a substantial increase this year.

There is another reason why Grace Seminary has occasion to thank God for the vision and ministry of the Home Missions Council. One does not need to look beyond the front cover of the magazine this week to see it. Pictured there are 28 home-mission church buildings (one is a club building, temporary quarters for our new church in Davenport, Iowa) in which alumni of Grace Theological Seminary are serving as pastors. Two others, Grandview, Wash., and Lansing, Mich., are not shown.

Thus, with 30 Grace-trained pastors now serving in Brethren home-mission churches, there is very good reason why the school should be vitally interested in the work of the Council. We praise God daily for the opportunities for service that are opened by both home and foreign missions in addition to the regular established churches in which former Grace students are serving Christ. Let us remember that our work is ONE, and we are mutually dependent upon each other. We cannot neglect one without affecting the other. Let us do our BEST for each as the needs are presented.

Revival at Winona Lake

Some had almost believed the Winona Lake Brethren Church and Grace Theological Seminary and College could not experience genuine revival such as comes to congregations existing in a more usual "church atmosphere." The recent revival under the direction of Rev. A. L. Lynn should certainly prove once for all that revival is possible, even in Winona Lake!

The presence of the Spirit of God was evident from the very first service, and by the time the week of meetings had closed, 89 people made definite public decisions. Many found the solution to long-standing problems in their lives. Four of these were for the purpose of receiving Christ as their Saviour. Several young people in the college made decisions to enter full-time service. Evangelist Lynn spoke to the combined student body of the seminary and college at the chapel service each day. At these services, as well as those conducted each night, there was much heart-searching, and there were many tears. It could hardly have been otherwise, for Pastor Koontz of the Winona Lake church reports that the attendance was unusually large (250 and 225) at the two midweek prayer services immediately preceding the Lynn meetings. Many also attended the cottage prayer meetings held in several locations one night a week in anticipation of the meetings.

Grace Seminary Joins American Schools of Oriental Research

Official notice has come from the American Schools of Oriental Research, with national headquarters in New Haven, Conn., advising us that the application of Grace Theological Seminary for Corporation Membership has been unanimously approved. In a letter from Gladys R. Walton, business manager, she says: "I am also very glad to know that Prof. John Rea is to be your representative on the Corporation. He has shown great interest in our work for a long time, and I feel that he and you will derive benefit from this closer association."

The American Schools of Oriental Research maintain also headquarters in Jerusalem, Jordan, and in Baghdad, Iraq. They have been responsible through the years for the excavation of many of the old Biblical sites. Professor Rea's name has been mentioned in their quarterlies because of his work with Dr. Joseph Free, of Wheaton College, who has spent several seasons excavating at the ancient site of Dotham. In 1953 Professor Rea served as staff engineer at the Dotham excavations.

The Church Behind the Iron Curtain

Some encouraging news is leaking through with respect to the spread of the Gospel in Russia today. At the conclusion of World War II, Russia claimed to reinstate freedom of conscience with the result that the Russia Orthodox Church is tolerated even though it has had to surrender many of its beliefs and practices. Incidental to the removal of some of the religious restrictions in Russia, there has been a new surge on the part of Russian people toward the evangelical Protestant churches. According to John Caldwell Thiessen in his "A Survey of World Missions," there has been an increase of 800 percent in the number of evangelicals, from 400,000 to 3,000,000 in the more than 30 years since the Soviets have been in power. Caldwell tells of one weekly prayer meeting in a Baptist church with an attendance of 1,800. He also states that the Baptist community in Moscow alone is said to number 6,000. The church evidently is not dead in Russia. Though no foreign missionaries are permitted behind the Iron Curtain, we can still pray for the church there.—H. A. K.

FACTS AND FIGURES ON FALL REGISTRATION AT GRACE

By Dr. Homer A. Kent, Registrar

Total registrations have reached 270 at Grace Seminary and College as the fall semester has begun. This compares with a total of 251 at the same time last year and 222 in 1953. Thus again the school has achieved a new record and manifests a healthy growth. The overall percentage of increase is 7½ percent.

A breakdown of the total enrollment reveals that for the first time there are more students in the college division than in the seminary, the count being 138 in the college and 132 in the seminary. The marked increased in the college is the result of the fact that we now have the full four-year college curriculum in operation. The recent registration shows that 107 new students have enrolled this semester, 64 in the college and 43 in the seminary. There are 163 returning students, 89 in the seminary and 74 in the college. The figures reveal a gain of about 32 percent in the college, but a slight loss in the seminary, due possibly to the charging of tuition for the first time in the seminary.

In the seminary there are 125 men and 7 women. In the college there are 87 men and 51 women.

The cosmopolitan character of the student body is reflected in the fact that the students have come from 22 states and the District of Columbia, and one each from Canada, Argentina, Alaska, and Germany. Pennsylvania leads all other states in representatives with 68. It is followed by Indiana with 54, Ohio with 50, Michigan with 16, California with 14, and Iowa with 10.

Denominationally, the student body is composed of representatives from more than 16 groups. The Brethren lead in this category by a considerable margin, due largely to an 80-percent Brethren constituency in the college. There are 147 Brethren students in the school. The Baptist groups are second with 66 students. Other prominent denominational groups are the Mennonites, Presbyterians, Methodists, Evangelical and Reformed, and quite a large group which designate themselves as independents.

Looking at the seminary students, it is discovered that they have come from 49 different colleges, Bible institutes, and seminaries exclusive of Grace College, which is fast becoming a substantial feeder for the seminary. William Jennings Bryan University has contributed the largest number, 25; Wheaton College is second with 17; and Bob Jones University third with 14.

Convocation and Faculty Reception

The Fall Convocation service was held in the chapel on the morning of Tuesday, September 13, with the combined student bodies of the seminary and college present. The speaker for this occasion was Rev. Robert Munn, a teacher in the European Bible Institute, who is now home on furlough. Mr. Munn is an alumnus of Grace Seminary and appealed to the present student body to take full advantage of their opportunities in making preparation for Christian service. The faculty appeared in their academic regalia for the occasion which in a definite way marked the beginning of the new school year.

The annual Faculty Reception was held on Friday evening, September 17, in the seminary student lounge, at which time the entire faculty with their wives greeted all the students of the seminary and college and welcomed them to the school. The evening was concluded with the serving of refreshments by the ladies of the faculty.

Thus Grace Seminary and College have embarked upon another year of activity. Great are the opportunities with their attendant responsibilities. We of the administration and faculty feel tremendously the need of the prayers of our constituency that we may faithfully discharge our trust.

We Are Concerned!

You will note from the accompanying financial statement that the receipts for the operating expense of Grace Seminary and College during the month of September were the lowest in many months—considerably lower even than in August. The figures show that $2,147.71 was received by the school for its general fund, but even these figures do not tell the whole story. Actually for the month of September the gifts from the churches amounted to only $1,600.71 inasmuch as $500 of the total amount came in as a maintenance gift from one of the organizations occupying space in the building. Pastors are urged to call this matter to the attention of their congregations. Financial secretaries, if money for the school is lying in your church treasury, please send it in. Your attention to this matter will help greatly just now.

STUDENT NEWS

ALVA STEFFLER, Editor

JUDGMENT NIGHT

It is not "all work and no play" at Grace College. Recently initiation night got off to a good start as 45 trembling freshmen sat awaiting their fate before two prejudiced judges and a jury of six from the sophomore class. One by one groups of helpless freshmen (upper left picture) stood blindfolded, awaiting their fate. Bruises were carried for several days by Paul Bauman, Jr., and George Jordan (upper center), who pushed peanuts around the auditorium floor. Others shaved balloons lathered heavily with shaving cream (upper right), and the results were more than explosive! Some of the boys went into the beauty parlor business and were called upon to set the hair of the girls (lower left). When they had finished, any set the girls' hair may have had was completely gone! Some of the freshmen girls, along with Patty Watts (lower center), were forced to walk through beds of cold slimy angleworms (in reality macaroni cooked to the right consistency). Most of these, like Patty, after the first step, were practically carried by their sophomore assistants. George Jordan proved to be a poor pilot (lower right), for he was unable to maintain either level flight or altitude even with the assistance of Dale Hostetler, Dick Harris, and Ron Henry.

At this time all bruises have healed, and only pleasant memories remain. It was a night of fun and fellowship that the freshmen shall never forget.—Adapted from a story by Hyla Palmer.

COLLEGE COED WINS SCHOLARSHIP

College sophomore Elener Norris recently won a $50 scholarship for placing first in a writing contest sponsored by the Journalism Department. Designed to interest and inspire students in the field of writing, the contest was brought to the attention of the students during a chapel period last March by Miss Ava Schnittjer, instructor in English and Journalism (see "Challenge of Christian Journalism," Herald of March 26). Taking up the challenge, several students began writing. Subjects ranged from a devotional article for the Moody Monthly to a report of National 4-H Club camp in Washington, D. C., for the Prairie Farmer. Ten of Miss Norris's were accepted for publication. One of her articles appeared in the March 26 issue of the Brethren Missionary Herald. "It's a real thrill to see your name beneath the title of a published article," she commented, "and I certainly am grateful for the award and the opportunity the contest afforded me." Congratulations, Miss Norris, on your scholastic achievement.—Crosby Englizian.

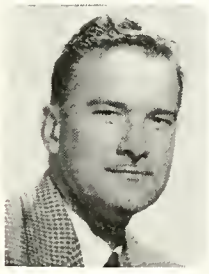
ANNUAL RETREAT—HOMEBOUND

Jim Sweeton and Ted Franchino steered the Fall Retreat this year to a day of food, fun, and fellowship right in our home town of Winona Lake. The students, wives, and faculty were divided into two teams to compete in sports events, stunts, and table decorating. The "Whites" managed to outdo the "Reds" in almost every event and clinched the score by winning the stunts at the close of the retreat. Everyone retreated from the retreat with aching muscles but with a satisfied glow from having spent a profitable day away from the books.

FALL SPORTS WELL UNDERWAY

Intermural six-man touch football is off to a good start under the capable direction of Athletic Instructor Dick Messner. "Job's Boils," "The Humble Six," and "Henry's Hornets" are among the cleverly chosen names for these gridiron specialists.

NEWS AND NOTES . . .



DEDICATION OF GOSHEN CHURCH

On Sunday afternoon, October 9, dedicatory services were conducted for the new home-mission church at Goshen, Ind. Dr. Alva J. McClain, president of Grace Seminary, was the speaker. Dr. Paul Bauman, seminary vice president, was speaker at the other Sunday services and at the Dedication Conference that continued each night through the week. The pastor of the Goshen congregation is Rev. Herman Hein ('54), under whose ministry as a student pastor the church developed and was organized. The school is grateful for such opportunities as this to assist in the work of home missions. The Goshen church should prove to be an inducement to other young men now in the course of their studies.

WEDDING IN ISRAEL

Printed both in English and modern Hebrew, a wedding announcement of unusual nature has come to us from the land of Israel. Calling for assistance from the teaching personnel of both departments, they report that the announcement reads as follows:

Alvin Showalter

"Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Cramer request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Nina Lois, to Mr. Alvin Friedly Showalter on Wednesday, the second of November, nineteen hundred and fifty-five at four o'clock sharp. American Church 86 Street of the Prophets, Jerusalem, Israel."

Miss Cramer is a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, and Brother Showalter graduated from Grace Seminary in 1954. Since that time he has been in Israel, working and witnessing for Christ, having lived part of the time in one or another of the Kibbutzim (communal camps), where he could be among the people, learn the language, and bear his testimony.

When your editor was in Israel, Alvin served as his guide and interpreter. He served in the same capacity for Dr. Hoyt on his recent trip. The fellowship on both occasions was rich and sweet indeed.

Many will join the students and alumni of the school in sending greetings to this fine couple. Continue to pray that the Lord will keep the door of opportunity open as they endeavor to work among a people who have returned to the land of their fathers, but who still do not know personally their Messiah.

NEWS FROM REV. GORDON

Those who have been praying for Rev. Arthur Gordon ('54) and his children who were stricken by polio in August (see Sept. 24 Herald), will be interested in the latest word that has come concerning their condition. A friend of the family writes:

"Saturday I received a note from Mrs. Gordon's mother, Mrs. Boggs, who is with her to help in the home and in taking care of Jimmy. She says Arthur is improving a little each day, but suffers much with his arms and legs, and is just able to move fingers on one hand a little. Part of the time he is out of the iron lung, in a rocking bed, and has the aid of a chest respirator.

"Mrs. Boggs also writes that Jack is improving each day, and that Joyce and Jimmy will have full recovery. Jack is still in the hospital and evidently Joyce is still in the convalescent hospital. Jimmy's attack was only slight, not requiring hospitalization. Marilynn and Arthur's mother takes turns being with Arthur and Jack in the hospital and are both very tired and weary.

"The continued prayers of the student body and the faculty are surely appreciated."

We are sure that many throughout our entire fellowship will continue to remember Brother Gordon and his family in prayer. Let us ask the Lord to fully restore him to health and the ministry for which he was trained at Grace College and Seminary.

GIFT FROM BERNE FURNITURE CO.

Recently a valuable gift has come to the school through the kindness of the officials at the Berne Furniture Company in Berne, Ind. The gift was in the form of two beautiful sofas and a large occasional chair. All three

THE GENESIS FLOOD

By John C. Whitcomb, Jr.
Associate Professor in Old Testament

(PART III)

No serious student of Old Testament problem passages can afford to ignore the light shed upon such passages by quotations and references in the New Testament. And the problem of the extent of the Flood in Genesis 6-9 is no exception to this rule. Yet, in spite of this, there are scholars like Dr. Bernard Ramm who seem to have given much thought to this problem and who can write as follows: "Man was destroyed within the boundaries of the flood; the record is mute about man in America or Africa or China . . . An examination of the references of the New Testament to the Flood are not conclusive, one way or the other, but permit either a local or universal flood interpretation" ("The Christian View of Science and Scripture," p. 249; italics are ours).

From this quotation one would conclude, then, that the New Testament has nothing in particular to say about the extent of the Flood! But let us take the trouble to look for ourselves at these New Testament references. In Luke 17:26-30 (ASV) we find the following statement by our Lord: "And as it came to pass in the days of Noah, even so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They ate, they drank, they married, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all. Likewise even as it came to pass in the days of Lot; they ate, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but in the day that Lot went out from Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all: after the same manner shall it be in the day that the Son of man is revealed."

Notice that the force of our Lord's argument would be greatly weakened if, for example, we knew that some, other than Lot, and his family, did escape from Sodom when the fire fell. This would allow hope for the ungodly that some might escape the wrath of God in that coming day of which Christ spoke. The very same point applies to Noah and the ark. If Christ's word "all" in this connection really means only "many," then the analogy collapses again. Here, then, is another instance where the argument from context proves that "all" must really mean "all" in this passage.

Turning now to I Peter 3:20, we find these words: ". . . the longsuffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved through water." Here again, the illustration from the Old Testament loses much of its force, especially in the light of the immediate context, if we adopt the view that only those in the Mesopotamian Valley were involved in the Flood. Now since even Dr. Ramm admits that the human race must have spread far beyond the confines of Mesopotamia by the time of Noah (p. 239), it follows logically that those Scriptures which teach the destruction of the entire race by the Flood must also teach a geographically universal Flood. We may also include II Peter 2:5 in this category.

It is our opinion, however, that the most important New Testament passage in confirmation of a universal deluge is to be found in II Peter 3:3-7: ". . . knowing this first, that in the last days mockers shall come with mockery, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for, from the day that the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation. For this they wilfully forget, that there were heavens from of old, and an earth compacted out of the water and amidst water, by the word of God [Gen. 1:6, 9]; by which means the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished: but the heavens that now are, and the earth, by the same word have been stored up for fire, being reserved against the day of judgment and destruction of ungodly men."

Let it be noted carefully that Peter speaks of that time when men will no longer think seriously of Christ's second coming as a cataclysmic, universal intervention into the course of world affairs. And the reason for this skeptical attitude is the doctrine of total uniformitarianism, by which it is maintained that natural laws and processes in the earth have never yet been interrupted so as to destroy human society and civilization by an act of God; and therefore it need not be expected that such will ever happen! But, says Peter, there are two points in past history where total uniformitarianism fails. And these two points are the very ones that such skeptics refuse to acknowledge: the CREATION and the FLOOD! And even as "the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished," so the postdiluvian world, protected as it is by God's eternal promise from another universal flood (Gen. 9:8-17), is nevertheless being reserved by the promise of this same God for destruction, not by water, but by fire (cf. 3:10; Rev. 20: 9-11).

Now if, after all, the Flood should turn out to have been merely a local affair, it would certainly have been inappropriate for Peter to refer to such an event to refute the uniformitarianism of latter-day scoffers. For if the Creation and the final destruction of the world by fire are universal (and few if any would argue that they are local), then certainly it would be out of place to cite the Flood of Genesis as a parallel instance of interventions by God which nullify the doctrine of uniformitarianism!

In concluding this discussion, we can do no better than quote from Dr. Merrill F. Unger's latest book, "Archaeology and the Old Testament," (Zondervan, 1954), p. 62: "That the antediluvian era, described by Peter as 'the world that then was,' was obviously different climatically and geologically from the 'heavens' and 'the earth . . . that now are' (II Pet. 3:7) is clearly implied in the Apostle's stern warning to naturalistic skeptics, who mock at the idea of Christ's supernatural Second Advent on the ground that 'all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation' (II Pet. 3:4). Against the false naturalistic theory of uniformity the Apostle urges the truth of supernatural catastrophism as evidenced by the Noahic Flood."

FATHER AND DAUGHTER ATTEND GRACE TOGETHER

BACK TO GRACE SEMINARY

By J. P. Kliever

May 1938—What a relief! I passed in all subjects, and one more year of seminary to go!

September 1955—I enroll for my senior year in the seminary! Yes; that's right—17 years and 4 months later. Old "Rip," of childhood story fame, beat me by only a few years; he was absent 20 years! It has been almost too long an absence to remember to respond to the class rollcall.

The question I am asked most is this: "How does it feel to be back?" There are many things that are different, and yet the essential things are the same.

First of all, the faces are different from those I saw when I was last in school. I am now going to school with the second generation! The parents of many of the students are my very good personal friends and former classmates. The professors are all new, except one.

The building is new, and in a different part of the country. Instead of Ohio, we are now in Indiana.

When the bell rang for class No. 1, it was the Theology class. Yes; the students were not my former classmates, neither was the teacher my former theology teacher, but there was the same desire to know the truth, the same dedication of purpose from the student standpoint, and it was the same theology, so warm with a fresh experience of fellowship with God. When the teaching began as to "Who is God?" and "How may we know Him?"—all of a sudden the intervening years were swallowed up. It seemed as if it was just yesterday that I had left the classroom. How I praise the Lord that the teaching has not changed, and that the students are still the same kind!

I had heard much about the change that has come into the theological thinking, of men who have studied until they have stacked degree upon degree (some are degrees warmer and some are degrees colder) and how Bible Theology is to be replaced by Rational and "Positive" Theology. How happy I am to find that the Bible is the "Master Book" and that our professors with many degrees are teaching with a warmth that comes from personal experience of Christ, the Living Word. We are learning Biblical Theology from professors who have degrees that make them bubble over with the true warmth of the Spirit of God.

Juvenile delinquency is supposed to be a problem. If you could have as fellow students these second-generation youth (one of them is my own daughter, Anne) your fears for these, at least, would vanish. You would see their joyous fellowship, see them seriously and wholeheartedly yield themselves to God for the service that He has planned for them, see them pursue their studies with real purpose (not mere grade-getters), and see the good fellowship between students. There are no cliques. There is no snobbishness, but each one seems interested in the other's welfare. They rejoice together at victories won and sympathize when there are reverses. Anyone wanting to learn to be most effective as a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ can be sure that this is the school.

Thank you, all who are supporting us here and making this school possible with your prayers and gifts. You have made a wise investment of eternal worth.

MY SECOND YEAR AT GRACE

By Anne Kliever

My early student days were spent at the school for missionaries' children at Bellevue, one of our stations in the heart of Africa. Brought up in a home where devotions were the rule, I became immune to them. When I was 11 years old, Miss Mishler was reading some of Dr. Walter Wilson's animal stories. The spiritual applications caused me to worry over my own condition, and she led me to Christ.

I was 13 when I came to America. I attended Long Beach Brethren High School in California for one semester. There my faith was more fully grounded so I could better withstand the temptations in the public schools.

When my parents returned to Africa, God chose Dr. and Mrs. Ogden to become my "second" parents. Because of their spiritual guidance, I dedicated my life to Christ at Kamp Keystone when I was 15. The Lord let me see just far enough to know that I would be in college.

Until about six weeks before graduation I did not decide on the college I would attend. I almost sent an application to another school, but the Lord led me to Grace. It was wonderful to experience His provision during my first year. Although I was unable to work outside of school, He enabled me to pay for all my tuition and other fees except $30, which others cared for. I am now in my sophomore year, which is proving to be even better than the first.

After I graduate from Grace I will attend the seminary to prepare myself for missionary service in Africa, but not because my parents are there. I feel the Lord has called me there as a teacher.

Did the Cross Stand on Mount Moriah?

By Prof. John Rea

A well-known evangelical Bible conference speaker, who has recently returned from Palestine, claims that Christ was crucified on Mount Moriah. At first glance this idea seems fanciful. If it can be demonstrated, however, the perplexing question of the exact location of Calvary may be settled. Furthermore, the unity of the Word of God may be illustrated in a striking manner.

Abraham's Sacrifice

Most of us are familiar with the account in Genesis 22 of how God ordered Abraham to take his only son, Isaac, into the land of Moriah and offer him there for a burnt-offering upon one of the mountains which God would indicate. Abraham obeyed God in this test of faith, actually taking the knife to slay his son. He believed that God was able to raise up Isaac, even from the dead (Heb. 11:19). At this point the Angel of Jehovah intervened. Abraham found the ram caught in the thicket and offered the animal in the stead of his son. "And Abraham called the name of that place Jehovah-jireh: as it is said to this day, In the mount of the Lord it shall be seen [He shall appear]" (vs. 14). Thus Mount Moriah is the place which God chose for the sacrifice which most strikingly typifies the supreme offering-up of His only begotten Son, the holy Lamb of God, in the stead of sinners.

Solomon's Temple

As we have seen, Mount Moriah was called Jehovah-jireh, the place where He shall be seen or appear. At this very spot the Angel of Jehovah again appeared—unto David. II Samuel 24:18-25 and I Chronicles 21: 18-22:1 are parallel accounts about David's purchase of the threshing-floor of Ornan or Araunah the Jebusite. Jebus was the name of the Canaanite city of Jerusalem which David's men had captured. Concerning the threshing-floor on the hill above the walled City of David, the king pronounced: "This is the house of the Lord God, and this is the altar of the burnt-offering for Israel." But how do we know that this spot was on Mount Moriah? The only other mention of the name Moriah in the Bible declares this fact: "Then Solomon began to build the house of the Lord at Jerusalem in mount Moriah, where the Lord appeared unto David his father, in the place that David had prepared in the threshing-floor of Ornan the Jebusite" (II Chron. 3:1). Here the Lord was seen by David, and here the Lord dwelt in Solomon's temple in the holy of holies, until His shekinah glory departed shortly before the destruction of the temple in 586 B. C. (Ezek. 9-11). Was it here also that God made the supreme manifestation of His love to the human race and thus fulfilled the prophetic name given to the mountain by Abraham?

The Mount of Sacrifice

God had selected this hill to be the mountain of sacrifice in the time of Abraham. On it a thousand years later the brazen altar of sacrifice of the temple was erected, directly over Ornan's rock threshing-floor. All the Levitical offerings except the sin-offering were burned on this altar. And where was the sin-offering to be burned? "And the skin of the bullock, and all his flesh, with his head . . . even the whole bullock shall he carry forth without the camp unto a clean place where the ashes are poured out, and burn him on wood with fire" (Lev. 4:11-12; Ezek. 43: 21). The ashes were taken by the priest out of the city through a northern gate of Jerusalem to a large gray mound of the accumulated dumpings of ashes and animal bones from the temple sacrifices. Before World War I this ash heap, called on old maps, "Hill of Ashes," was visible about where the Mandelbaum Gate is now. While the place of ashes is somewhat beyond the northern end of Mount Moriah, the two do lie near the same road leading northward from the Damascus Gate.

Gordon's Calvary

Dome of the Rock

In fulfilling the type of the sin-offering the main factor concerning the location of the death of Christ is that He must die outside the city. That He did, so Hebrews 13:11-12 expressly states: "For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary by the high priest for sin, are burned without the camp. Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate." The significance of Christ's substitutionary death is best expressed in the idea of the sin-offering, which the sinner presented to make atonement for his sinful nature. Thus it becomes very interesting to find out if Christ our sin-offering died on Moriah, God's appointed mount of sacrifice.

Topography of Moriah

As we study the topography of Mount Moriah we find that this hill is actually a ridge running roughly north and south. The highest point near its southern end is the massive protruding rock which was Ornan's threshing-floor and on which the brazen altar of the temple stood. The Moslem building called the Dome of the Rock, or less correctly, the Mosque of Omar, now stands over this site. The hill descends rapidly to the Pool of Siloam and the juncture of the Kidron and Hinnom Valleys. On the northern end of the ridge of Moriah is a Moslem cemetery, the very spot commonly called today "Gordon's Calvary." From that point there is a decline northward, and the ridge disappears. The fact, however, that Gordon's Calvary and the Dome of the Rock are on the same hill geologically speaking is not quite so apparent to the traveler today. The reason for this is that there has been since Solomon's time great quarrying operations in this ridge to obtain the fine grade of limestone for the temple and other buildings in Jerusalem. Thus an enormous rock-cutting 150 yards wide and orginally over 50 feet deep now separates the hill of Gordon's Calvary from the rock cliff under the present northern wall of Jerusalem.

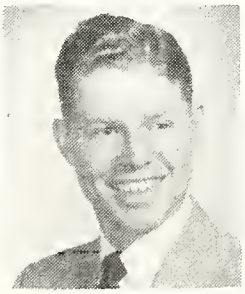
Gospel Descriptions of Calvary

The Gospels indicate that the cross was erected outside the city beyond a gate opening to a road coming from the country (Mark 15:20-21); that Golgotha was near to the city (John 19:20); that it was close to a road where people passed by (Mark 15:29); that the place was broad enough to accommodate a sizable crowd; that the events of the crucifixion could be seen from a distance (Luke 23:49); and that in the area of Calvary there was a garden with a new tomb (John 19:41).

Gordon's Calvary, north of the temple area, rather than the traditional site within the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which is west of the temple area across a valley filled in now with rubble, best seems to agree with the Scriptural teachings about the crucifixion of Christ. Gordon's Calvary is on Mount Moriah. It lies just to the east of the road leading to the country along which the priests must have carried the ashes from the temple sacrifices. It was definitely outside the city wall in Jesus' day; yet only 150 or 200 yards from the city. A road or path no doubt went between the city wall and the cliff of Gordon's Calvary, just as a street does today. The Moslem cemetery is an extensive plot of ground on the top of this hill, large enough for a big crowd. Before the erection of the present buildings north of the city wall, the hill could easily be seen from every direction. It is in the very area north of the city where there were gardens and tombs in Jewish times.



Thus it may correctly be stated that Jesus was crucified on Mount Moriah, fulfilling the prophecy in the name Jehovah-jireh, for here in truth God appeared in Christ. Here He manifested His great love toward us in that, while we were yet, sinners, Christ died for us.

FROM HOME MISSIONS TO GRACE SEMINARY

By W. Carl Miller, Seminary Junior

Editor's note—Until just a few weeks ago Carl Miller served as pastor of the thriving new Washington Heights congregation at Roanoke, Va. The new church building was erected under his direction. Carl is the fourth son of Rev. and Mrs. R. Paul Miller to attend Grace Seminary. Their daughter, Laura, is the wife of Rev. Arnold Kriegbaum, another graduate of Grace.

To leave a home-mission pastorate in order to enter Grace Seminary may appear to some individuals to be a mistake, especially in the face of the great need for more Brethren pastors. But there are some very important reasons for so doing. I should like to present the following three as a personal testimony.

W. Carl Miller

The first is the personal necessity for a deepened Christian experience which can only be known through expository Bible instruction and the various means of Christian fellowship as afforded at Grace.

Another reason, essentially an extension of the first, is that of the thorough, accurate, and systematic study of the Word of God for the purpose of being able to proclaim the Scriptures to others with greater clarity, completeness, and authority. This, I am confident, can only be realized with the aid of a working knowledge of the original languages in which the Holy Writ was first recorded. Here I shall be able to acquire such a knowledge of the Hebrew and Greek languages.

The concluding reason for coming to Grace is that of learning how to preach and teach the whole counsel of God. The effective presentation of the greatest message in the world is, beyond question, worthy of careful consideration and preparation. Again I say that I am receiving such training at this institution.

These are but three of the main reasons why I left a home-mission pastorate in order to resume my theological studies. And I believe that any one of the three could be sufficient reason in itself to temporarily leave the pastorate for such training, as the Lord leads.

I am writing these words at the end of the first four weeks of this semester, and I should like to say that I am indeed grateful for this Bible-centered, Christ-exalting institution. I also wish to thank my Lord for His leading and provision and for those who encouraged me to take this step of faith, including my faithful and sacrificing wife.

ALEXANDRIA, VA. The Commonwealth Avenue Brethren Church has granted a transfer of membership to Rev. and Mrs. Roy Glass to the Mennonite church of Keyser, W. Va.

JOHNSTOWN, PA. The cornerstone laying service at the Riverside Brethren Church was held Oct. 16. Ralph Hall is pastor.

TAOS, N. MEX. Phyllis, the eight-year-old daughter of Sam Horney, pastor of Cañon Brethren Church, was struck by a drunken auto driver after the church services Sunday evening, Sept. 25. The car ran over her feet, but no bones were broken.

MARTINSBURG, PA. Gaye Carol was a welcome addition to the home of Rev. and Mrs. Gerald Teeter, of the First Brethren Church, Oct. 2.

GRAFTON, W. VA. Rev. and Mrs. Lee Crist, of the First Brethren Church, announce a special member has arrived in their home. Sharon Ann, weighing 6 lbs., 5 oz., was born Oct. 2.

ALTOONA, PA. The Blair County Evangelical Ministerium will conduct the second annual Sunday-school convention November 4-5 at the First Baptist Church. Rev. Harold Etling, national Sunday-school director of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, will be one of the speakers. Rev. Gerald Teeter, of the First Brethren Church, Martinsburg, Pa., and Rev. J. Ward Tressler, Altoona Grace Brethren Church, are members of the committee.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. Five Pennsylvania pastors of the East Fellowship of Brethren Churches, William Schaffer, Kittanning; John Burns, Listie; Arthur Collins, Summit Mills; Clyde Caes, First Johnstown; Leslie Moore, Meyersdale; and Sunday School Supt. Richard Moore, of First Johnstown, will attend the National Sunday School Convention Oct. 26-28.

LISTIE, PA. The East Fellowship of Brethren Churches Mission Board met at the Listie Brethren Church Oct. 6. Plans were laid for an aggressive mission program. John Burns was host pastor.

MARTINSBURG, W. VA. The new parsonage of the Rosemont Brethren Church is "under roof" and if the weather permits, the bricklayers will finish in the very near future. All previous prayer-meeting records were smashed on Sept. 28 when 147 were present.

ROANOKE, VA. The new address of Rev. Vernon Harris, pastor of the Washington Heights Brethren Church is 1220 Lafayette Blvd. NW.

HARRAH, WASH. Don Farner, pastor of the Harrah Brethren Church, has started a Bible class in Toppenish, Wash., a town of more than 5,000, with the hope of beginning another Brethren church.

FREMONT, OHIO. A new all-time Sunday-school record was set on Oct. 2 at the Grace Brethren Church when 369 were present. Gordon Bracker is pastor.

SOUTH BEND, IND. The Sunnymede Brethren Church enjoyed a record high attendance of 92 for the year in their Sunday-school rally Oct. 2. An eight-week contest was launched with the theme: "Living Water—It's Free and It's Yours." There will be homecoming day on Oct. 23 with John Zielasko and family, missionaries to Brazil, as special guests.

ROANOKE, VA. The Clearbrook Brethren Church is busy with remodeling these days. The auditorium is receiving a new acoustic tile ceiling, the walls are being painted green, the center aisle is being carpeted, and the furnace is being converted from coal to oil. Bro. Bill Smith, evangelist, was so well received two years ago that the church has invited him to be their evangelist again Nov. 30-Dec. 11. Pastor William Howard was the speaker at the homecoming service at the Andrews Chapel (Methodist), Brooke, Va., on Oct. 16 and then held a week of meetings there. Brother Howard has resigned his work with a Roanoke newspaper and has taken over the work of his congregation full time.

BARBEE LAKES, IND. The average attendance for the first four months at the new Barbee Brethren Sunday school and church was 72. It was started June 5 by Foye Miller, Brethren layman of Winona Lake. The service is all illustrated. Robert Dell, senior in Grace College, is the pastor. Trustees of a closed church near North Manchester, Ind., have invited Brother Miller to start an illustrated service there.

WHEN DEATH ITSELF DIED

By LYLE MARVIN

Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
San Bernardino, Calif.

ON THE DAY that Christ died, His followers gave up in despair, but after the Father had finished portraying the true meaning of the crucifixion, through three supernatural events, these same dismayed ones realized they had witnessed not the death of Christ, but the death of death itself.

"But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel" (Luke 24:21), reveals their understanding of Christ's death. He whom they loved, in whom they hoped to see the redemption of Israel an accomplished fact, was dead. No national program spread upon the pages of history has ever had a more complete blighting end than this of the Jews and their King during these few hours.

Scarcely months ago, these men were all occupied in gainful pursuits. Then they met Him. He had said that the way to find life was to lose it. This they rather reluctantly did. But they did. They forsook mother and father, brothers and sisters—their homes, their all. They not so long ago contested one with another to see who should be greatest in His kingdom. Now their King was dead. Was this all that they had toiled for? To suffer persecution, be taunted by spiteful remarks of the Sanhedrin—ridiculed because they followed this One they termed "was born of fornication"? Were they right after all? Before, Christ had at times miraculously disappeared from the midst of a hostile crowd, but He had just been executed as a common criminal, with a murderer and a thief. No wonder their high hopes had fled, only to be replaced by despair and darkness. Christ's last words on the cross, "It is finished," had a glorious meaning to the whole human race as we look back now, but seemed as a death knell to all their hopes that day.

Three signs were manifested midst the darkness of that hour which have cheered the hearts of men ever since. Again we see in action the gracious Father as He discerns the human heart and its need. "And the earth did quake," points out the convulsion of the earth as it received the blood of God. This might well be expected. Christ was the God of creation. "By him were all things created, that are in heaven and that are in earth" (Col. 1:16). "Upholding all things by the word of his power" (Heb. 1:3). The very ground and the very cross buried in it, that bore His pain-racked body, was held together by the One dying on it. "[Christ] came unto his own [things; i. e., nature] and they received him not" (John 1:11). Yes; a horrified nature was as it were remaining quiet no longer. Those who were there at the crucifixion, wondering whether they had witnessed the execution of a common criminal, had not long to wait. This sign by the Father, in the physical realm, served notice to all that this event was NOT an ordinary death.

How readily we can pick out further upheavals touched off by this particular quake. Old Judaistic beliefs were now shattered. The Pharisees' contest with the Sadducees now could be relegated to "has-been" philosophies. Old lines of thought were severed. No longer did superstitions hold sway—a mighty change in the spiritual order of the world resulted from this earthquake.

As this sign of the earthquake was manifesting itself by the hand of God in the physical realm, God also, because of the occasion of Christ's death, was able to rend that curtain from top to bottom—the curtain in the Temple that kept back man from the presence of God. For so long the feeble yearly light of Israel's high priest had been the only light to penetrate this Holy of Holies. But now the "Light of the World," and the light of the glorious Gospel shall ever bring to an end man's contact with God through an earthly high priest. Believers are now priests in their own right, and thus welcome to present themselves before God.

The word "rent," used elsewhere to tell of a plow cutting its furrow, or of an ax cleaving its way through a block of wood, pictures somewhat the force and determination with which this strongly woven curtain was severed. Our Father has longed to gather His loved ones into His very presence, even as Christ longed to do so at Jerusalem. Now the old order of the types and the ritual of the Temple worshipers has been swept away. The middle wall of partition has been broken down—all, both Jew and gentile, are one in Christ. "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus . . . through the veil . . . let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:19).

A third sign accompanied the death of Christ. This sign had its impact in the world of the dead. "Graves were opened and many bodies of the [fallen-asleep ones] arose and came out of the graves, after his resurrection." Many problems present themselves here, because we would have this passage say more than it actually does. Our first demand is that we want a chronological order. There is the possibility of this account conflicting with I Corinthians 15, where we are explicitly told that Christ is the firstfruits of resurrection and we who are Christ's are next. So then,

We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day star arise in your hearts: knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scriptures is of any p r i v a t e interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost" (II Pet. 1:19-21).

Why do we have a more sure word of prophecy? Because so many, many things have been fulfilled since the day of their utterance. Fulfilled prophecy is evidence that the rest of prophecy will be fulfilled. The prophecies regarding the Lord Jesus Christ and the Jews have been so wonderfully and clearly fulfilled that it is evidence itself that prophecy is sure.

Verse 20 means that I dare not take a single verse of prophecy and separate it from the whole prophetic truth. Unless we take a message and keep it in its setting, we get all confused. This has been the cause of much false teaching of the Word. All prophecy must be interpreted in keeping with the whole body of prophetic truth. Compare verse 21, the words "came not at any time by the will of man," with Matthew 24:35. Nicodemus said: "Doth our law judge any man, before it hear him, and know what he doeth?" (John 7:51). If you will keep this question in mind, you will avoid a lot of difficulty in interpreting the Word of God. Those who find the most fault with the Word are the ones who know the least about it. They pass judgment before they have any ground to do so.

When I was in the Northwest, I was in a barbershop one day where I heard a man deriding the Bible and Christianity in general. He kept saying the Bible couldn't be true because there were so many errors and contradictions in it. Pulling out my Testament, I asked the man if he would point out one of these errors. The man was rather surprised and said: "I can't find any of them—don't know where they are—but I know a lot of fellows who can point out a lot of them."

This is usually the way with those who find fault. It is only fair when studying the Word of God that we do not pass judgment until we have made a real, honest investigation.

The question we are discussing is one of vital importance. Have you ever thought just how far-reaching it is? When it comes to a matter of sin and eternity, where would you find anything relative to these subjects except in the Word of God? If the Word of God is not to be believed, then we have no authority regarding these vital questions; but if we do believe it, then we have a definite ground on which to stand. If a man cannot trust his Bible, he has no ground on which to stand.

There are many colleges and seminaries today that have a big question mark on the Word of God. If many men and women who have their names on the church rolls would believe the Word of God and accept it as the truth, life for many would be different than it is. But too many of these folk put such a large interrogation point on the Bible that it doesn't mean anything in their lives. The Word of God speaks no longer with authority to many people. I would not ask anyone to accept a book unless it had certain grounds which I could believe. Therefore I am willing for the Bible to stand the same test.

Did you ever think of the great disadvantage there would be if we could persuade men that the Bible could not be trusted? But remember that there is the same disadvantage and eternal loss if I fail to heed the fact that it is the Word of God, and that it can be trusted.

We will not discuss the subject from the viewpoint of a theologian but that of any ordinary person who may really see some difficulty in the Bible and who does not want to compromise his orthodoxy.

There is a statement in John 7:17 that should help one: "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." There must first come a willingness to accept the truth—a willingness to make careful investigation of the Word. Let us allow the Holy Spirit to speak to us.

Can a man trust his Bible? Without a moment's hesitation I say yes, and I know it will never fail him. In the time of Christ there were critics just as there are today. Those Christ critics held a convention, a report of which you will find in John 7. They finally decided to send out officers to arrest Jesus Christ, but they came back empty-handed. When the leaders asked them why they did not bring Jesus back with them, they replied, "Never man spake like this man" (vs. 46). "Then answered the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived? Have any of the rulers or of the Pharisees believed on him?" Then Nicodemus stepped up and said: "Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doeth? They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look: for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet. And every man went to his own house" (vss. 51-53). These leaders decided that this was an unanswerable argument and were so tremendously pleased with the blow they had given the Lord Jesus Christ that every man went to his own house. They thought the matter all settled.

Had Nicodemus searched, however, he would have found this charge on the part of the men to be absolutely groundless. He would have found that two prophets actually came out of this very section of the country. Both Elijah and Jonah came from the territory shown on the map as being a part of Galilee. If these men would have made a little investigation, they would have found that Jesus was not born in Galilee at all. So that very argument was groundless. The Lord Jesus Christ, as all our little children in Sunday school know, was born in Bethlehem of Judea. This is just a fair representation of the critics of today.

Just keep in mind that the Christ critics did not know it all and neither do the Bible critics. Maybe you are saying that the Christ critics should not be compared with the Bible critics of today. The Bible is the written Word of God and Jesus Christ is the living Word of God. Christ himself many times gives himself and the Scriptures the same name, and so they compare themselves. (Look up the references where Christ calls himself the "I AM.") Christ challenges us to accept Him with the Word of God, or reject both. (Cf. Exod. 3:13-14; John 18:5, 8.)

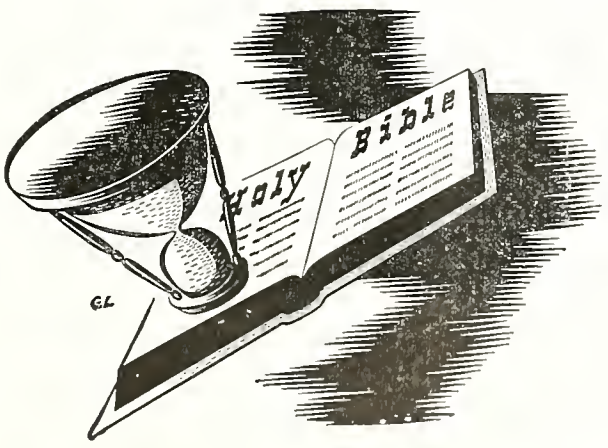
Let us think seriously for a little while on the record of Christ's work in the world. All men are willing to accept some things regarding Jesus. They will accept Him as the greatest teacher, the greatest man, and the only sinless man that ever lived. But where do they get the idea of the sinlessness of the Lord Jesus Christ? Where do we get the idea of His being a great teacher? The only record you can find is in the Word of God, and if I cannot accept the Bible as the Word of God and trust it, why should I accept the idea of Christ being a great teacher? Why should I accept that part and reject it when it teaches that He is the Saviour and the Christ who died on Calvary for the sins of the world?

The words of Jesus in the New Testament prove that He believed himself to be the Son of God. Some say that He made no claim to be more than the Son of man. Surely, such folk read their Bibles carelessly. Just keep in mind that the title the Lord Jesus Christ gives to himself is enough to prove to any open mind that He claims to be the Son of God—the title is I AM. When He speaks of himself as I AM, He is giving himself the same title used of Jehovah in the Old Testament. This is the title Jehovah gave himself when He sent Moses to Egypt to deliver the children of Israel out of bondage (read Exod. 3:13-14).

I used to wonder why the soldiers who came to arrest Jesus in the garden fell on their faces when they answered His question, "Who seek ye?" with the words, "Jesus of Nazareth," after which He replied, "I am he." How can we account for such action? These Jews knew their Scriptures and realized that they were standing in the very presence of God when He said, "I AM." There is no other way to account for their action. So we find that many times Jesus claimed to be the Son of God.



Then too fulfilled prophecy also proves Him to be such. Compare Psalms 22:1, 31; 31:5 with the happenings on the cross and during His trial and crucifixion. All was fulfilled in Scripture.

A Christian worker was once talking to a young man who had been to college and had lost his belief in the inspiration of the Word of God—he no longer believed in the work of Christ on the cross. This worker reminded the young man of the Old Testament prophecies that had been fulfilled saying that those prophecies were written 4,000 years before their fulfillment, which was to the very letter. The young man admitted this, but he replied that Christ had intentionally planned His actions in accordance with the messianic program in order to substantiate His religion, and therefore it was not so wonderful that He did fulfill these prophecies.

Is this your argument for not believing in the Word of God for your life? If Christ did so fit His life into the definite program of God, just how did He arrange to be born in the exact place and at the exact time that it was prophesied in Micah 5:2, in order that it might be fulfilled? This is the first time I have ever known of one to have anything to do with His birth. And how did it come to pass that He was born into the very family that the Scriptures forecast? No one has ever had anything to do with these things regarding their own birth.

When you face these questions you will say (at least you may with others who doubt) that since Jesus happened to be born in this manner, He was seized with the idea that He would carry out the remainder of the messianic program and so lived. Then will you tell me how Jesus was crucified without His legs being broken, in fulfillment of Psalm 34:20. Did He arrange for the purchase of the potter's field with the betrayal money (Zech. 11:13)? Did He arrange with the four soldiers to keep His garment whole, to fulfill Psalm 22:18? Then please explain why these soldiers gave Him vinegar to drink to fulfill Psalm 69:21. Did the soldiers act as His accomplices when they drove the spear into His side? I think you see that there is no ground for that position at all. The Word of God is a two-edged sword and cuts both ways. If He is divine, then the Scripture that speaks of Him must also be divine (II Pet. 1:21).

People loving the written Word have met with reproach. People sneered at the living Word just as they sneer at the written Word today. They said: "Is not this the carpenter's son?" They did not realize that He had a supernatural parentage. People today do not realize that the written Word was supernaturally written, dictated by the Holy Spirit. We must either accept or reject both. The written Word is the only sure record of the living Word.

TRUST HIS BIBLE?

STUBBORNNESS - - IS IT A SIN?

By STANLEY HAUSER
Pastor, Conemaugh Brethren Church
Conemaugh, Pa.

The word "stubbornness" is exclusively an Old Testament word. It is used in relation to man individually and collectively. It is used in relation to the nation Israel and other nations.

If we were to take the word "stubbornness" and define it, using an ordinary dictionary, it would give several definitions, such as "fixed—resolute or unyielding, difficult to handle, to manage or to treat." There are others. With the above definitions we are able to use it extensively in the Old Testament, as well as from the New Testament viewpoint.

Therefore, considering our text, we deduce that "stubbornness" is a sin! Again notice the latter portion of our text, "and stubbornness is as iniquity"; and the word "iniquity" is sin! The word means "bent, crooked, twisted, unequal, unjust, heinous sin." This is sufficient to show us the awfulness of this word. It is quite clear that "stubbornness" is a sin. Let us note from the Word of God, for the spiritual strengthening of our own lives, how to avoid this sin.

It is our purpose to make plain this sin of "stubbornness" in three different aspects, as we treat the word. First, in relation to the nation Israel; second, in relation to the unbeliever; third, in relation to the Christian. We shall not be able to treat this sin voluminously; yet, enough to give us a picture of this sin of "stubbornness."

In Relation to Israel

For about 4,000 years there existed a distinct people. They had laws, habits, and customs all their own, peculiar to them and most of them given by God. No other nation under the sun has ever manifested the visible tokens of divine presence. The Jew is called "the miracle of history." Assyria has perished, Babylon is in heaps, Rome has tottered and fallen, while Egypt has become a base kingdom; yet the Jew has outlived all his conquerors and today walks among the nations. Though dispersed nationally for centuries; yet Israel did not lose her identity or her peculiar characteristics. In the past 17 years she again regained her place in the land of her nativity (Palestine) awaiting its legal owners.

In the dawning of history in relation to the nation Israel, about 412 years after the Flood, God called Abraham, a Shemite, from Ur of the Chaldees to be the father of a new nation (Gen. 12:1-3). In the providence of God, the nation Israel became a "stranger in a land that was not theirs for 400 years." They were in bondage and God delivered them out of the hand of the Egyptians (Exod. 14:30-31). From this time on, in spite of what the Lord had done, in spite of His mercy and abundant provision, we see rebellion (stubbornness), which leads to a gradual spiritual declension. The Lord fed them, He gave them drink in the wilderness (Gen. 16-17). They were about to stone their leader Moses (Gen. 17:4).

> For rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft, and stubbornness is as iniquity and idolatry.
> —I Samuel 15:23

It was at Marah they murmured. This was rebellion against their leader Moses and Jehovah because the waters of Marah were bitter (Exod. 15:23). Then God made the waters sweet in verse 25. They went from murmuring to complaining, and finally in outright rebellion against God. Because they had done these things, God calls Israel, the nation whom He loved, "rebellious, stubborn." Our text, therefore, with many other Old Testament passages, describes these people willful and backsliding (stubborn) in their behavior (Hos. 4:16). Because of their deliberate rebellion against God they were scattered to the four corners of the earth (Isa. 18:16). "To make their land desolate" (vs. 17). "I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy . . . in the day of their calamity." But Jehovah, who loved them in spite of their willful "stubborn" way, says: "I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them . . ." (Isa. 23:3). Today, over Jerusalem, a flag waves as an ensign of Jewish faith and tradition. It gives praise and glory to a God who kept His promise to a nation in spite of their "stubbornness." May we ever pray for "the peace of Jerusalem."

In Relation to the Unbeliever

We are aware of the fact that God's Word declares: "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him . . ." (I Cor. 2:14). The "natural man" is an ordinary man of the world. He could be your neighbor, friend, companion; he could live in your home. He could even be a loved one! Permit me to give you several characters in the Bible describing this "stubborn" personality.

The first character is to be found in Genesis 4. After Adam and his wife Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden, there were two boys born into the home, Cain and Abel. Abel was obedient to the commands of God, while his brother, Cain, was disobedient. God "had respect for his [Abel's] offering" (vs. 5). These boys had been taught God's plan of approach unto Him. Cain was rebellious, "stubborn." God said unto him: "If thou doest well, shalt thou not be accepted? and if thou doest not well, sin lieth at the door" (vs. 7). God demands, in the Old Testament, a blood sacrifice. In the New Testament it is blood again, by Jesus Christ the righteous, the Lamb for sinners slain (John 10:9-11).

The second character is the king of Egypt. The kings of Egypt of that day were called Pharaoh. This is what Pharaoh said: "Who is the Lord, that I should obey his voice to let Israel go? I know not the Lord, neither will I let Israel go" (Exod. 5:2). This was bold, blatant "stubbornness" on the part of this king.

CONSTRUCTING FOR ETERNITY

BY ALBERT BALZER
MISSIONARY BUILDER
FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA

There are times when we as laymen in the church of Christ find a special blessing in Romans 12:4-8, where the Apostle Paul shows us that we are very definitely members of the body, and exhorts us to be faithful and diligent in exercising the gifts He has entrusted to us. With this in mind we rejoice that the effort and time spent here in Africa are a part of God's building for eternity.

As I hear our missionary and native pastor (who are endowed with the wonderful gift) giving forth the Bread of Life, one needs a passage like the above so as not to become discouraged by just handling stone, lumber, cement, and mud day in and day out. For seven and one-half of the last eight and one-half years we have done just that. However, we do thank the Lord for that very special day when He made it plain that it was His will for us to come to Africa.

After building several hundred homes in California—more or less over the telephone—it was a new experience to build the African way. But with the kind advice of older missionaries and a lot of experimenting, we feel that we are now better qualified to build out here in Africa. We have built 10 homes since coming to the field, plus dispensaries, garages, chapels, storehouses, chickenhouses, and etc. (a far cry from the old days). Seven of these homes we built with a solid slab of cement over the whole house area before going up with walls. In these homes we have no termites. The other three homes we put the floors in after the walls were up, and white ants are in two out of the three, and oh, what a nuisance they are!

Some of you builders and home buyers would be astonished how we cut corners here in Africa. But how else could we build a 1,200 sq. ft. home for $2,400? Our plumbing, roofing, hardware, and some of the main cost, comes from home. To the first cost we must add 65 percent for getting it here. We buy cement here for double the cost at home. Of course we don't have the very best in homes, but we as missionaries think they are quite nice, with running water (when the boy runs first) and a sink in the kitchen, and three fixtures in the bath. The walls are painted with whitewash dug out of earth, and the ceilings are either of wood or plaster.

Here in Bangui our cost of course is much bigger, as we have many requirements to meet, including all cement wall construction. Still our cost is just a little over half of what the actual prices in Bangui are.

We hear much of how fast you folks are building in the States, but you have nothing on us. In Bangui we were short on roof grass for our temporary buildings, so we figured out a way to use our aluminum roofing on these buildings without nailing it so it can be used again. In five days time we built four 20 x 40-feet hangars—one to house our trailer,

Mr. and Mrs. Balzer Standing in Front of Trailer Port another for a workshop, another to serve as a chapel, and a fourth provided six family apartments for our helpers. This apartment house would hardly be classified by us as modern, but our help think it is very modern, since it is the first house they have ever lived in which has fireproof roofing, even though the walls are only bamboo mats. These six families go with us as we move from station to station. Our foreman, George, has been with us from the first day we came to Africa, and the head carpenter started when we built the first house at Bekoro.

One item that has saved us considerable money is the sawmill. We have sawed most of the lumber with this mill. Thanks to the gifts of some generous folks at home. My special thanks as a builder goes to those who provided so many aluminum roofs for our mission houses. All but four of our stations have one or more of these glistening aluminum fireproof roofs. There is still enough roofing on hand to reroof two or three more homes as soon as time permits. We have just finished reroofing with aluminum and refinishing the inside of the home that Miss Bickel so ably built many years ago. It won't be many years now until all our homes in Africa will be fireproofed with aluminum roofing. All of which is another token of your love for the work here.

So even if one's strength and patience is sometimes taxed to the limit, it is worth it in order to relieve busy missionary pastors of building duties, thus freeing them for a more concentrated pastoral and teaching ministry. It is this that makes us feel we have a small share in construction for eternity.

STUBBORNNESS—IS IT A SIN?

An imagination of the heart is also "stubbornness" according to Deuteronomy 29:19: "I shall have peace, though I walk in the imagination of mine heart." There is the record of a man in the New Testament whose name is Simon (Acts 8:20-23). He was called a sorcerer. He practiced heathen rites and customs. This man would not yield to God or the will of the Holy Spirit in his life. Yes; he wanted power! He went through all the motions of obedience; he was even willing to pay a goodly sum for it, but, Peter said: "Thy money perish with thee . . . for thy heart is not right in the sight of God" (vss. 20-21). The only way into the presence of our wonderful Lord is by believing (John 5:24): "He that heareth and believeth"; and by confession of sin (Rom. 10:9-10): "Confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus." The Word of God teaches: "My Spirit will not always strive with man." My friend, take Him as your Saviour TODAY!

In Relation to the Christian

Yes; the Christian too can permit himself or herself to be "stubborn." Consider our text and definition of the word. There are a number of words in both the Old Testament and New Testament such as "willful," "unyielding," or "unbending." These have to do in revealing our walk. Are we in the center of His will? Herein is blessing and great assurance, for the Word teaches: "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering . . . And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts" (Gal. 6:22-24). It is the work of the Holy Spirit to convict us of sin, "to bring all things to our remembrance" (John 14:26), as well as to "teach us all things."

Christian friends, is there unconfessed sin in the life? Is there a compromise with the world? Is there an unyielding spirit? This is "stubbornness." Put on the whole armor of God! Our warfare is not against flesh and blood, but against wickedness and all the hosts of evil. Yield your all to God, submission is what He desires. God help us to be as a reed bending to the slightest breeze and zephyr, so we may be vessels filled and used for His abounding glory, that there be no "stubborn" way in us. Christian friend, confession and yieldedness walk hand in hand. "Quench not the Spirit" (I Thess. 5:19). But rather! "If we say we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (I John 1:6-7).

we want this to agree exactly or we are not satisfied.

To most, it seems that there is that agreement. "Arose" according to Liddell and Scott, can be used to connote (1) stirring (as in arousing), (2) erection of a building, (3) becoming excited, etc. In Scripture we find this same word translated also as "lift up," "take up," "stand forth." Hence, we should be careful to refrain from attaching "resurrection" only as its meaning. The use of "arose," meaning resurrection is made in Scriptures and the context requires it. But here "after his resurrection" designates the express time in which we are sure there is animation among those who were in these "opened-up" tombs. Again, we must remind ourselves that we are not to go beyond what we are actually told here. This passage makes no attempt to relate the resurrection order. For that we should turn to passages where that express information is given.

In the bondage of fear, because of this enemy death—such was man's condition before the graves were opened. But now comes death to death itself! Christ ascended and took captivity captive. Perhaps the very ones brought forth from the graves, after Jesus' resurrection (vs. 53), were among these captives. Resurrection is not only the greatest miracle in the Bible, it is also the supreme test of Christianity successfully passed. Occasionally we hear of an attack on this great truth, but resurrection is an attested fact. The enemy's shells fail to dent this fort—it is secure. Our adversary well knows, and we should also, that when "the graves were opened up and many bodies of the [asleep-saints stirred] and came out of the graves after his resurrection"—then it was that "death itself died."

Open Doors

(Rev. 3:7-13)

MODERATOR'S ADDRESS By R. PAUL MILLER

Delegates to this 66th annual Fellowship of Brethren Churches, assembled here at Portland, Oreg., it is in my heart to tell you how deeply humble I feel at having been chosen by you to act as moderator of this convention. May God grant to me the wisdom, love, and grace to serve you well, and glorify our blessed Lord.

I feel led to base this address of the moderator on Revelation 3:7-13. "I have set before thee an open door" (Rev. 3:8).

I believe that we have just read our Lord's greatest words to the faithful Christians of this present day. Note the tremendous statements He makes to those whom He feels He can trust. First, He shows himself to be holy and true—no note of judgment to this church. Second, to her He opens the door of testimony with a promise of His own power to keep it open. Third, exaltation and exoneration in the sight of those who have been traitorous to Him. Fourth, deliverance from the wrath of God during the Great Tribulation on the earth. Fifth, glorious reward, bearing His own name before all the heavens.

Four of these five things constitute statements about himself and what He will do for this faithful people. The other is regarding what He expects of that faithful church. An open door constitutes first, opportunity, and second, responsibility. This statement clearly declares that until the true church is taken from the earth, our Lord's own arm will maintain the ministry of the Gospel against all the schemes of man or Devil to stop it!

Who opens that door? It is the Son of God, the King of Glory, whose rightful place is upon the throne next to God the Father, to whom the worship of all the angels of heaven belongs, who made the worlds and still holds them in His hands. It is the Prince of Life, who would not let the sinner go, but arose from that throne of majesty, laid aside those robes of glory, gave up His crown, turned away from the praises of the heavenly hosts, leaped out through those gates of pearl, came to earth, traded His crown of majesty for a crown of thorns, yielded His throne of glory for a cross of agony by crucifixion in order to block the road to hell for every sinner. It was He who went down into the dungeon of death and slew death for our sakes. It was he who went into the prison house of sin and conquered that monster. It was He who stood before the judgment and had the Christian's judgment canceled. It is He who holds the keys of death and hell. It is He who holds the keys to everything! The Son of God with power. He it is who has opened the door for His true people, and keeps it open. Doors that are locked to others, He opens to His own.

Christ opens doors of opportunity to win lost men to himself for a very distinct purpose. It is to complete the work for which He himself came from heaven: to keep lost men out of hell! He does not open doors to His people just to be opening them; He does it because He has confidence in us that we will pass through them, and occupy beyond. That door will lead to sacrifice, to suffering, to persecution, to thankless service, to humiliation, to reverses, to poverty, to betrayal by friends and brethren, to criticism, to bitterness, to jealousies, and to death. But it also leads to final and eternal victory in glory—His glory and ours.

In this solemnly tragic hour, this pivotal hour of destiny, this hour that is shaping the swift course of men hastening on to the end of the age, the sight of a self-satisfied, self-adoring church, absorbed in the little circle of its limited religious interests, is an ache to the heart of God. At a time when this world of fear-crazed, money- and pleasure-mad men are turning wildly to every sort of refuge, a silent, passive church is a tragedy. When men, finally caught in the consequence of their unbelief and their ignoring of Jesus Christ the Son of God, are looking to the United Nations, to university professors, to atomic inventions, and social schemes for an escape, what an opportunity, what an open door for the church with the mighty, miracle-working Gospel of Christ, to shout so that the whole world may hear: "Christ, the mighty Son of God, is the only answer, and your only deliverance."

It is recorded of Nero that when Rome was ablaze, he sat on his palace roof and played on a fiddle like an idiot. Today, with the world on fire, with the face of the earth literally crawling with the spawn of Antichrist, what an open door to the church of Jesus Christ to enter in the power of the Spirit of God and, like Elijah, turn the tide for God! We have the God that answers by fire, but we must call for the fire, we must pray for God to show His hand, and then go out and stand in the crossways and risk all on God; then God will work! We dare not do less today!

God said to Ezekiel (33:7-8): "So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore, thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me. When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand."

If God has preserved the Fellowship of Brethren Churches as a people He could trust to stand up for Him in a day like this, in a crisis like this, God forbid that He should be disappointed in us. Out in Long Beach, Calif., I saw a seagull that belonged to the ocean, splashing in an inland mudpuddle! God forbid that God should find us absorbed in small and inconsequential issues when the sun of time is setting on this world of men. No matter how eloquently we stand sheltered within the four walls of our church buildings and rightly divide the Word of God, if we do not go out and challenge unsaved men where they work and live, we will make no impression on this mad age, upon the world as it goes sweeping on to judgment. We should have hundreds of evangelists, young and old, in cities all over America, calling to doomed men, lest their blood be on us because we failed God in this hour.

If we as a people fail to pass through this door that God is holding open to us today, no matter how much we do for the rest of the world, it will not absolve us from our responsibility to the men and women that are dying next door to us. Certainly no man or set of men, no group of circumstances, no matter how sinister, can close this door to us. Only our failure in His sight can close it. But once He closes it, our opportunity is gone. Tears nor time will not avail us. Esau had an open door set before him for a rich and privileged ministry, but He despised it for other things that he was more interested in. As a result it was taken from him and given to another. When he later realized his folly, the Scriptures declare, "He found no place of repentance, though he sought it carefully with tears." If we as a people have set before us an open door for testimony, and we have, because we have a little strength—and have kept His Word and have not denied His name, then we must enter and seize it, or God will raise up another people who will do His will!

Because our Lord opens a door to us does not mean that the Devil won't try to close it—or that men will not throw rocks at us, or that those who have no vision may not criticize us. But it means that any door you pass through for Him will be kept open by the power of God. He may test you and try you, but He will see you through.

Said our Lord: "Thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name." God has preserved His whole Word in our hands. That constitutes a terrifying responsibility. God has a work for us to do. His eye is on us right here in this convention. No other group of God's people has so rich a deposit of God's truth; therefore no people have so great responsibility. No other people should be bringing multitudes of lost souls to Christ as should our Brethren churches. No other people should have so great vision, so great passion for lost men, and be so abandoned to that task as we!

But right here is our failure. Our national statistician reported only 349 additions for 1953, and 624 for 1954. When 148 pastors and 148 congregations, with 21,000 member labor all year with so little result, there is basic fault in our vision and method.

Failure on our part will make the judgment seat of Christ a fearful experience for every one of us. Failure for the true Christian is inexcusable. The very thought of failure in winning souls to Christ struck terror to the heart of the Apostle Paul. Listen to his gripping words: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men . . ." The very thought of meeting the Lord after having failed Him so terrified the apostle that it drove him to "persuade men" as never before.

We must be qualified to pass through open doors for God. God had an open door for Elijah that led to the turning of a whole nation back to God. God spent years in training Elijah for one great demonstration that turned the tide. He had to sit by drying brooks, alone with ravens. He was humbled by having to be fed by a destitute widow. Then he stood and faced Israel with the reason for their pitiable state: broken altars. Then he repaired the broken altar of the Lord. Then the fire fell. Broken altars are the basic reason for broken homes, broken lives, powerless churches, and cold altars today. The dwindling prayer meetings, the shocking number of Christian homes with no family altar, the widespread unconcern for lost men, and the tremendous volume of church members who have no prayer life at all, must drive us to Carmel again, and build once more the altars that are broken down. Then we can pass through the open door God has set before us with power and victory.

I. God has set before us the open door of evangelizing lost men before our Lord returns.

We are not called to just sit behind the barricades of our theology and "defend the faith." We are told to "go," to be an army in the field, taking enemy territory. That means Africa and South America, but it also means our next-door neighbors, our loved ones and friends, and every unsaved man and woman in the next town! Every baby born here in America constitutes a new responsibility to give that little soul a chance to live forever.

It is sheer unbelief to ask, "Can we have revival now? Does the Bible teach that there will be a revival at the end of the age? Isn't the coming of the Lord too near for revival?" If there is one unquestionable teaching of Scripture, it is that this is God's revival age. From Pentecost to the Lord's return, God's plan is that His Spirit, working through His people, should bring in the harvest for heaven, to keep men out of hell, to win a bride for His Son. God will send revival to any people who want it enough to pray for it, and who will faithfully preach His Word. For those who are in God's will, there will be revival right up to the hour of our Lord's return. The great revivals of the past were not prophesied in Scripture. It wasn't needed. It was already promised. The mighty working of the Spirit of God in the Reformation, the revivals under Evan Roberts, the Wesleys, Finney, Moody, Torrey and others had no specific mention in Scripture. They were all a part of the Spirit's working throughout this entire age.

We have mentioned a denominational goal of "60,000 by 1960," but it is only a dream unless we immediately launch an evangelistic program of sufficient magnitude to make it reasonably possible. Just setting pretentious goals because they sound imposing without taking commensurate means to realize them impugns our sincerity before God. Our Board of Evangelism has gone ahead and is doing a fine work. But it has fought against great odds. It has been compelled to make bricks without straw. The Foreign Mission Board, the Home Missions Council, our publication house, and Grace Seminary are asking for more funds and more workers, and they should have them. Where are they coming from if we do not launch an evangelistic program that will bring in thousands of new believers whose gifts and prayers will make it possible? While other denominations pour millions of dollars into evangelism, and bring in hundreds of thousands, we measure our increases in dozens. This will not look too good at the judgment seat of Christ, nor will it realize our goals.

Our Foreign Missionary Society now reports almost as many members of the Brethren Church in foreign lands as we have here in America. Starting with a tremendous handicap of closed doors, fighting against the odds of unfriendly governments, of distance, of withering climates, of untranslated languages, crippling diseases, race, ignorance, and superstition, a mere handful of our missionaries, fired with the passion of true evangelism, have outstripped all the efforts of 20,000 members in America. This fact may not worry us now, but it will not look good when the eye of our Lord goes over the record!

Therefore, as moderator, I recommend that this conference, at these sessions, commit ourselves wholeheartedly to an adequate support, both in prayer and finances, to a greatly multiplied work of the Board of Evangelism that will enable it to put into operation its challenging goals of reaching men for Christ here in America under the Brethren Evangelistic Crusade. All the weight of God's Word—all the weight of consecrated wisdom and judgment demand it!

II. God has set before us the open door of home missions.

Without a strong home-mission work it will be impossible to conserve the gains of evangelism. Evangelism and home missions are "brothers in arms" for Christ. Neither can operate effectively without the other. Our home-mission goal of "200 churches by 1960" can never be realized without a tremendously stepped-up ministry of evangelism. No two arms of the church should work in closer harmony and cooperation than the Board of Evangelism and the Home Missions Council. The Apostle Paul was the greatest home-mission example in the early church. After he had entered a city and made disciples, he formed them into a group as he did at Philippi, and then later he would go back over his course and "strengthen the disciples" to "see how they do." Our present home-mission administration certainly deserves the confidence of our brotherhood.

Right here I must declare an outstanding need in our brotherhood. It has been my experience for many years to cover the churches of our National Fellowship. Certain prevailing trends and conditions stand out.

We have four vigorous main national departments. The measure of information found in our churches regarding each department depends upon the vigorous drive each makes for its own interest. But it is amazing to discover the lack of knowledge of the actual workings and aims of each one to be found among the pastors and laymen alike.

This lack of knowledge has been, and is now, the basis of much misunderstanding and criticism. We have a coordinating committee designed to prevent a distorted program. However, the work of this committee and its aims is almost totally unknown by most pastors and people.

To forestall unfounded criticism, to bring about understanding and wholehearted cooperation by all of our pastors and people to the support of our whole denominational program, is vital today.

Our major works are feeling the effects of sagging support right now. In view of the tremendous requirements now facing us for expansion of our schools, publication interests, home and foreign missions, and our national Sunday-school needs, the voice of wisdom calls for vital coordination to the fullest extent in promotion and unification.

The Scriptures are clear on this basic principle. We read in I Corinthians 12: 14-26 as follows: "For the body is not one member, but many. If the foot shall say, Because I am not the hand, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body; is it therefore not of the body? If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling? But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him. And if they were all one member, where were the body? But now are they many members, yet but one body. And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay, much more those members of the body, which seem to be more feeble, are necessary; and those members of the body, which we think to be less honourable, upon these we bestow more abundant honour; and our uncomely parts have more abundant comeliness. For our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honour to that part which lacked: that there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it."

The Spirit of God has here set forth the essential, spiritual, and actual need for complete oneness in the operation of the ministry of the Gospel without which only distortion, confusion, and failure result.

Every other denomination with which we are familiar has had to face this problem and has solved it by assigning the work of promoting and accomplishing its goals, and maintaining unity and coordination of effort in the whole, to certain ones held responsible to bring it about.

Therefore, I recommend that this assembly establish the office of General Secretary of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches at once, that this work be not delayed. This is urgent. We need this now.

Also a note on administration. These have been, and are, lush days for finances for almost every cause. We are at an all-time high in finances in Christian work. Therein lies a great danger. That danger is in the tendency to overstaff, both in the local congregation as well as in the national works. We are tended to set up two for what one used to do. The spirit of sacrifice and hard work dies in times like these. The spirit of organized labor is not confined to industry. Instead of strengthening our ministries in favorable times, we tend to feel that it will always be thus. A generation has grown up that knows nothing of hard times and stringent living, a generation that believes that legislation can maintain prosperity. There is danger of being like the dog that got into the cupboard and gobbled up all his supply of dog food in three days and had to go hungry for a month! Strict economy in times of blessing make possible days of blessing in times of stringency which are sure to follow.

III. Our Lord has set before us the open door of the Sunday school.

Joel, in exhorting Israel to prepare for the coming of judgment, wrote: "Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly: gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts . . ." (Joel 2:15-16). From this it is very plain that the children are in the mind of God, even down to the cradle roll. Certainly no program of giving out the Gospel can please God if it does not go all out for the children. The fastest-growing denominations today are those that are pouring themselves out for the Sunday school. They are putting others to shame with their magnificent achievements. What others can do, we can do, under God. If we do not, we are derelict.

While the Bible is being locked out of our public schools, and infidelity is being welcomed, the need for evangelistic Sunday schools is greater than ever. Youth delinquency has the leaders of our nation frightened, from Edgar Hoover down to the last schoolteacher. Everyone seems to be alarmed, except the churches. Already leading in crime in America, and increasing at close to 10 percent per year, the outlook for the future of our youth makes you shudder. A school superintendent in Los Angeles County told me last year that young vandals were destroying $50,000 worth of property every month in that county. The police seem helpless against mobs of youth on the loose. And no one has the answer except the true Christian church, and that answer is Jesus Christ. If you want to hurt the Devil, hit him with a cradle, not a crutch. Our present Sunday-school program is 50 years late. We must now put everything we have behind it. We must give our national Sunday-school director everything he needs. It is our opinion that the new program already launched to reach "the whole family" for the Sunday school, is the finest goal ever set before our people. The tragic loss of youth from Sunday school is because parents have not been reached.

IV. Our Lord has set before the open door of vital Christian education.

Our Lord himself conducted the greatest school for Christian workers ever known! He took 12 common and unlearned men, and in three short years so trained them and inspired them that they went out and turned the world upside down for God, and every one except John died a martyr for Christ. Our evangelistic ministry needs trained men, home missions needs trained men, and foreign missions needs trained men. We cannot expect others to train them for us. We must do it ourselves. No finer school for Brethren youth exists than Grace Seminary. We do not need so much to make Brethren out of some Baptists and Presbyterians, but we need to make real Brethren out of our Brethren! We cannot expect a godless educational system to train our youth for Christ. We must have our own "school of the prophets," and we must use it to the full. No price is too great to pay for the preservation of the intellectual devotion and power of our Brethren youth.

To enable the present church to save its own young people, as well as hundreds of other youth, from the withering blight of godless education in our public schools; to guard them in their formative years from the scars of vicious sins and habits and example of lawlessness that rules the public-school student body today, God has raised up the Christian day schools. There is no greater means of preventing our own young people from being engulfed in this present evil age. Nor is there any greater means of reaching thousands of youth with a thoroughgoing experience of intelligent salvation than by means of Christian day schools. To ignore this mighty aid in making the Gospel effective today would condemn us as derelict.

Therefore, I recommend that this conference instruct and equip a committee on education to explore and outline ways and means for extending Christian day schools to every part of our brotherhood, and report definitely to our 1956 conference, if our Lord tarry.

V. Our Lord has set before us the open door of the ministry of the Word.

Wrote Paul to Timothy: "Preach the word; be instant in season and out of season, reprove, rebuke, exhort with all longsuffering and doctrine" (II Tim. 4:2). Nothing will ever take the place of preaching the Word. The anointing of God is upon the herald, the preacher of the Word of God. Wrote Paul, "How shall they hear without a preacher?" Today Satan, the "father of lies," is covering the earth with "ministers of Satan," who appear as "ministers of righteousness." Call them modernists, liberalists, legalists, or whatever you please, but all who do not preach the Gospel of salvation by grace through Jesus Christ our Lord are preaching "another gospel," and the Word says, "Let them be anathema," cursed. All such are "stealing the livery of heaven to serve the Devil in." We have had such a tragic and terrifying demonstration of the unholy might of this false gospel in the gathering of the world body of the Council of Churches at Evanston, Ill. There Christ was betrayed to Gog and godless Soviet. With their bloodless, godless, powerless, salvationless gospel they are blindly leading their blind followers to hell. They remind me of Abraham Lincoln's story about the farmer who never did anything right, and when he built a rail fence it was always so crooked that when his pigs tried to get out, no matter which way they went, they were always on the wrong side. No matter what brand of these betrayers of Christ that you follow, their gospel will always leave its disciple a sinner, on his road to hell!

But there are many dangers in this ministry of the Word. Today we are in great danger of becoming mere disciples of other men, slavish followers of schools of thought, slipping into grooves of interpretation, rather than disciples of the Gospel as Christ gave it. We are in danger of not being led of the Spirit in rightly dividing the Word. Many fine preachers and teachers are afraid to voice the convictions of their own heart, born of prayer and the study of the Word, for fear of disagreeing with some dominant school of thought with resultant loss of ecclesiastical standing. Many so-called fundamentalists are like army worms. If you start an army worm going around a bucket, and then place others behind him, they will all keep right on following each other till they drop over dead, afraid to get out of line.

If John the Baptist and Paul the apostle had feared to step out of line with the Pharisees, the New Testament would tell a different story. If Martin Luther had feared to get out of line there would have been no Reformation. If John Wesley had feared to get out of line with the formality and coldness of organized religion of his day we would never have seen the progress of the Gospel of the last 200 years.

The present rising concern over "cold fundamentalism," with its tendency to indifference toward the "separated life" and the culture of the closer walk with God, is filled with promise of a new depth and power in sound preaching. This growing concern insists that instead of making the Gospel to appear as a mere set of tenets to accept, that the true Gospel is also a way of life and conduct —that "faith without works is dead." The Word teaches that the Christ-life is not like the joining of a political party or a club, or a union, where you pay your dues and you are "in." It is a transformed life. "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new" (II Cor. 5:17). The thing that the lost world of men and women need to see today above all other things is the transformed lives of those who call themselves Christians! The right kind of preaching will produce this sort of believers. Such believers will have pow er in prayer to move God to glorify himself in great revival. Right preaching will not only produce divine life in believers, but it will also prevent lopsided and extremist Christian experience. The Devil is like a backseat driver in a car. At first he will try to get you to stop altogether. If he can't do that, he will yell at you to "step on the gas" and go beyond God's Word, or to turn off on some side road that will make you neglect the Gospel. Bible preaching and teaching will hold everything in right balance to glorify God. No amount of visual aids, radio, or TV will ever take the place of personal preaching of the Word of God.

VI. Our Lord has set before us the open door of foreign missions.

Our Lord was a foreign missionary, and all of His true disciples will also be the same, in heart if not in fact.

Today is undoubtedly the crisis hour in foreign missions. The sun of time and opportunity is setting fast on all foreign missionary work. Northern Korea is now closed to the Gospel; 2,500 missionaries have been tortured, silenced, or driven out of China for good; Indochina is fast closing; Russia, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Hungary, and all the other Communist satellites are closed to the Gospel. Italy and Spain are practically closed. India is steadily forcing the missionaries out. The forces of communism and nationalism are sinister threats to every African field. Central and South America are seething with Romanist and Communist opposition to the Gospel, and terrible persecution is now spreading. Bright spots are few. Wise missionaries are swiftly preparing the natives to carry on by themselves. This all adds up to one thing: if Brethren churches are going to get the Gospel to the fields God has already given us before our Lord returns, we must act quickly, and multiply our giving and our going.

VII. Our Lord has left us the open door of Christian literature.

Sending forth the written message of the Gospel was begun by the apostles themselves. Paul wrote 13 books to tell the story of grace. In printing gospel literature we Brethren have just begun. The Missionary Herald has reached the highest point of effectiveness we have ever seen in a Christian denominational magazine. Its power for unifying our brotherhood for every great aim we have, is unlimited. Under the limitations of present labor in getting out our Sunday-school literature, the achievements are worthy of great praise. From here on, this work must be given room for expansion. The new publication building is not only wise, it is necessary.

VIII. Our Lord has given us the open door of the power of the Holy Spirit for the purpose of accomplishing all He has commanded us to do.

The fifth book of the New Testament is truly not the Acts of the Apostles, but the "Acts of the Holy Spirit." It is the most thrilling, panoramic record of divine miracles known to man. Because some have made a spectacle of the ministry of the Holy Spirit, others have practically abandoned teaching and practicing the work and ministry of the Holy Spirit in the hearts and lives of believers. The result has been a powerless message and a powerless people. In order to escape "wildfire," they have reverted to no fire at all! This is also quite true of the Biblical doctrine of sanctification and the return of our Lord.

The open door of evangelizing lost men cannot be entered, nor the task accomplished without complete yielding to, and dependence upon, the Spirit of God. To countless members of our Brethren churches, the Holy Spirit is but a meaningless name. He is not real to them.

Satan has succeeded in completely nullifying many great works for Christ by frightening timid yet noble saints away from the real source of the power of God. No matter what others may or may not do, or what others may think, we Brethren must give ourselves wholly to the ministry and power of the Holy Spirit, or resign ourselves to frustration, failure, and defeat until the end. We must not be afraid of the Holy Spirit, but love Him, trust Him, and yield to Him, not in word only, but in fact. I therefore recommend that the person and work of the Holy Spirit receive a major increase in teaching material for Sunday school and WMC lessons, and that the apostolic example be followed in seeking the ministry of the Holy Spirit in every work we undertake; that our preachers lead out in teaching and exalting and depending upon the place of the Holy Spirit in our work today, and in attempting nothing without Him.

IX. Finally, our Lord has set before us the open door of prayer as our only means of power to fulfill His will.

"Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. 10:19). God help us, we have stopped outside this door of prayer and power, afraid to enter! A blank check of unlimited resources from Almighty God is within that door. Enough power to shake the world that He made. We have seen God through the microscope instead of the telescope. We have made out our checks at the window of faith according to the measure of a man not God. "All power in heaven and in earth is given unto me, and I am with you alway," said the Saviour. It is a dishonor to Christ for us to hesitate and stand still. It is an act of unbelief. David said, "Lord, what wait I for? my hope is in thee." We should not, we dare not fail Jesus just before He returns. The sun of time and opportunity is setting upon us and our responsibility, and upon millions of lost men with nothing but hell ahead of them, unless we reach them.

DEVOTIONAL SESSIONS OF THE 66TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Wednesday Evening, August 10, 1955

The 66th annual conference of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches convened at Jennings Lodge, Portland, Oreg., August 10, 1955, at 7 p. m., with the moderator, Rev. R. Paul Miller, in charge. The opening musical number was an instrumental duet by Dick and Bob Messner entitled, "Hallelujah."

The song service of the first devotional session was opened with the singing of the familiar hymn, "Leaning on Jesus." Songleader Leo Polman directed, with Mrs. Paul Dick at the organ and Mrs. Leo Polman at the piano.

Conference responded wonderfully as Songleader Polman led in the singing of "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder" and other hymns.

Moderator R. Paul Miller read Esther 5:1-16, after which Rev. Harold Painter, pastor of the Sunnyside, Wash., First Brethren Church, led in prayer. Before the prayer, Rev. Painter officially welcomed the conference to the Northwest District and to Portland.

Conference Executive Secretary Richard Jackson, Jr., pastor of the New Troy (Mich.) Brethren Church, made the necessary conference announcements.

The Grace Ambassadors played the offertory, during which the offering, amounting to $131.90, was received. Men from the National Fellowship of Brethren Laymen served as ushers.

Rev. and Mrs. Leo Polman sang a beautiful duet entitled, "It Took a Miracle."

Moderator R. Paul Miller presented Vice Moderator Thomas E. Hammers, pastor of the View Ridge Brethren Church, Seattle, Wash., who presented a challenging message on the subject, "I Come Quickly." This portion of the service was closed with the singing of "Will Jesus Find Us Watching?"

Rev. Harold Etling, national Sunday-school director, had charge of the Sunday-school challenge hour. The Messner Brothers presented an instrumental duet.

Rev. Vernon Harris, host pastor of the Portland conference, led in the singing of "I've Found a Friend," and a number of Sunday-school choruses. Director Etling presented awards in the Sunday-school contest.

After the announcements by James Dixon, president of the Sunday School Board, Rev. Etling made some closing remarks and led in the closing prayer.

Thursday Morning, August 11, 1955

Conference Songleader Leo Polman led in the song service, opening with "Showers of Blessing."

Rev. Scott Weaver, pastor of the Bethel Brethren Church, Osceola, Ind., read I Thessalonians 5:1-11, after which Rev. H. Leslie Moore, pastor of the Meyersdale Brethren Church, led in prayer.

Vice Moderator Thomas E. Hammers presented Moderator R. Paul Miller, who gave a challenging message on the subject, "Behold, I Have Set Before Thee an Open Door."

Thursday Evening, August 11, 1955

The evening devotional session was opened with the singing of "Sweetest Name I Know," and "One Day." Rev. Don Ogden, music instructor at Grace Seminary, was at the organ.

Rev. Henry Dalke, pastor of the Yakima, Wash., church, read I Thessalonians 4, after which Rev. John Burns, pastor of the Listie Brethren Church, led in prayer.

The good conference singing was continued with the use of "Constantly Abiding."

The offering, amounting to $142.75, was received as Dick Messner played a trumpet solo, accompanied by Don Ogden.

Janet Hammers sang a beautiful solo entitled, "Only Believe and Live."

Dr. Charles H. Ashman gave a fine prophetic message on the subject, "The Last Great Signs of Christ's Return."

The R. Paul Miller clan sang a number to close this portion of the session.

The Board of Evangelism Challenge Hour, led by Rev. Glenn O'Neal, pastor of the Inglewood, Calif., Brethren church, presented a variety of testimonies and musical numbers. Rev. Gordon Bracker, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Fremont, Ohio, served as songleader.

Rev. Scott Weaver, newly elected chairman of the Board of Evangelism, closed the challenge hour with a stirring evangelistic message on the subject, "The Need for an Earnest Evangel.

The service was closed with the singing of "Thank You, Lord," followed by prayer by Glenn O'Neal.

Friday Morning, August 12, 1955

Two great hymns, "More Love to Thee" and "Amazing Grace," were used to open the morning session.

Rev. Clair Brickel, pastor of the Clayton, Ohio, church, used John 4:22-39 as the Scripture reading. Rev. John Mayes, pastor of the Paramount church, led in prayer. Charles Ashman, Jr., of Rittman, Ohio, sang "When Jesus Comes," accompanied by Mrs. Lorraine Yockey.

Pastor John Aeby gave a very instructive and helpful message on "Personal Soul-Winning."

Friday Evening, August 12, 1955

Another good song service, characteristic of this conference, was conducted by Leo Polman. The climactic song was "Saved, Saved."

The ladies quintet from the Sunnyside church presented a beautiful number, after which the song service was continued.

Devotions for the evening service included the Scripture reading from Luke 12:35-40 by Rev. Wayne Flory, pastor of the Stearns Street Brethren Church, Long Beach, Calif., and prayer by Rev. True Hunt, pastor of the new work at Davenport, Iowa.

Leo Polman told of the need of Beth any Camp before receiving the offerin which amounted to $191.11.

Mrs. Wanda Coleman sang a lovel number just prior to the evening mes sage, which was brought by Dr. Herma A. Hoyt, dean of Grace Theological Sem inary, on the subject, "Stewardship."

The Brethren Home Missions Cha lenge Hour was directed by Dr. L. Grubb, secretary of the Home Missior Council.

After conference sang the chorus, "Fo God So Loved the World," Rev. Lew Hohenstein, newly elected member the Home Missions Council, read th Scripture, which was taken from Ac 10. He also led in prayer.

Home Missions Pastor Wayne Flor sang "Precious Hiding Place."

Testimonies were given by variou home-mission pastors and from variou home-mission workers across the natio

Saturday Morning, August 13, 1955

The service was opened with the sing ing of "What a Friend We Have Jesus," after which Rev. Ward Tressle pastor of the Grace Brethren Church Altoona, Pa., read Ephesians 4:17-3 Evan Adams, missionary to the Navajo led in prayer. The Sunnyside Quart presented another fine vocal number.

Missionary Jake Kliever brought heartsearching message on the subje "Holiness—True and False," followi which conference sang the appropria song, "He Cleanseth Me."

Saturday Evening, August 13, 1955

"Youth Night," a service by and f youth, was one of the high points of t conference. Leo Polman led in the sin ing and in presenting special music.

During the evening Moderator Thom Hammers expressed appreciation to Je nings Lodge and presented Rev. a Mrs. Herbert Ulrich, Jennings Lodge d rectors, for greetings and a few instru tions.

The Messner Brothers and Rev. Ru sell Ward played an instrumental trio number entitled, "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross" as an offertory. The offering amounted to $120.37.

Mrs. Stewart McClelland sang a solo number entitled, "Holy, Holy Is What the Angels Sing." God's messenger for the service was Dr. L. L. Grubb, who spoke on the subject, "The Second Coming of Christ in Relation to Youth." There were several decisions for dedication of life to the Lord.

Dr. R. D. Barnard general secretary of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church, led the Foreign Missions Inspirational Hour. Rev. Keith Altig, pastor of the First Brethren Church of Glendale, Calif., was the songleader, and Dr. Charles W. Mayes, president of the society, led in prayer.

Testimonies were given by Sibley Edmiston, missionary to Mexico; Miss Ruth Kent, missionary to Africa; and Harold Dunning, missionary to Africa.

Mrs. Fred Fogle, missionary worker to France, sang a beautiful solo.

Rev. Jack Churchill, missionary to Argentina, brought a stirring message. There were two decisions for dedication of life to the service of the Lord.

Following the service a film on Brazil was shown.

Sunday Morning, August 14, 1955

The Sunday-school session was held from 9:30 to 10:30 in the tabernacle, with Rev. Harold Etling, national Sunday-school director, in charge. Statistics for the Sunday-school sessions follow:

Dept.	Teacher	Att.	Off'ng

Dr. R. D. Barnard led in the Foreign Missionary worship service. Several missionaries were presented for testimonies and a total of 23 missionaries, some of them with their families, were introduced. Fred Fogle brought a fine message resulting in one decision for dedication of life to the service of Christ. The morning offering amounted to $253.62. Songleader Leo Polman led in the group singing. Special music for the morning service was a duet by Jake Kliever and Jack Churchill.

Sunday Afternoon, August 14, 1955

This joint missionary rally featured testimonies from home and foreign missionaries. Dr. Grubb and Dr. Barnard jointly led in the service. It was a well-attended service and one that proved a great blessing to those present. Fields which were represented were: (home) Jewish work, Fremont colored people's work, Spanish-American, Kentucky, and Navajo; (foreign) Mexico, France, Argentina, Brazil, and Africa.

Sunday Evening, August 14, 1955

Dr. L. L. Grubb, secretary of the Home Missions Council, led in the home-mission service of the evening. All home-mission pastors and missionaries were on the platform, some of whom gave testimonies. The offering of the evening amounted to $122.16.

Two great messages were given by Dave Morsey and Tom Inman, two home-mission pastors. The Lord blessed in these messages.

At the close of the service there was a mighty working of the Holy Spirit. Many persons came confessing sin and asking God's blessing on their lives and service. There followed a prayer meeting which was wonderful to behold. This seemed to be the spontaneous expression of a spirit of revival which was evident in this conference from the very beginning and which carried throughout. Praise God for it.

Monday Morning, August 15, 1955

The spirit of revival was stressed in the singing of the song, "Revive Us Again." Dr. Homer A. Kent, vice moderator, read Romans 8:1-16 and led in the morning prayer.

After a beautiful vocal solo by Mrs. Neva Slange, Moderator Thomas Hammers made the statement that the leading of the Spirit was evident not only in the Portland national conference but in the working of the 1954 Executive Committee as they selected the speakers for this 1955 session. He presented Dr. Bernard N. Schneider, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Mansfield, Ohio, who brought the first of a series of messages on "The Holy Spirit," stressing the point that too many believers will not allow the Holy Spirit to do what He wants to do in their lives.

Monday Evening, August 15, 1955

Vice Moderator Homer A. Kent, Sr., presided at the evening service. The message of hope which is inherent in Christianity was well expressed in the song, "He Lives." Following the singing of this marvelous hymn, Granville Tucker read the Scripture and Bill Howard led in prayer. The three Messner Brothers presented a vocal trio which they dedicated to their mother.

The evening offering amounted to $61.27.

Special music preceding the message was presented by Rev. and Mrs. Leo Polman.

Harold Dunning, missionary to Africa, brought a great message on the subject, "The Second Coming of Christ in Relation to Sinners." Befitting the message was the closing song, "Throw Out the Lifeline."

Dr. A. J. McClain, president, directed the Grace Seminary Inspirational Hour. Don Ogden led the music, with special numbers by the Grace Ambassadors. Dr. Homer A. Kent, registrar of the school, led in prayer.

Different officers and alumni of Grace Theological Seminary were presented, telling the blessing and outreach of the school.

Motion prevailed that the printed copy of the report be adopted and that it be published in the Brethren Missionary Herald.

P. A. Yerian presented the following resolution, which was adopted as corrected:

Whereas, the 45th Annual Conference of the Brethren Churches of California, assembled in Long Beach on June 4, 1955, unanimously passed the following motion:

"Brother Moderator, I move that a committee of five be appointed to make a survey of pastors' salaries and if they see fit, shall present a resolution to the National Conference Fellowship of Brethren Churches to be held at Portland, Oreg., August 10 to 17, 1955."

Whereas, the resolution committee in its research on the subject after exploring the various related fields such as Social Security, Brethren pensions, comparable family incomes, living wage, rising cost of living index, adequate housing, sacrifices, self-denial, selflessness, etc., agreed that "we are woefully underpaying our ministers."

Whereas, it was the thinking of this committee that by the presentation of a resolution of this character, the lay members of our Brethren churches of all America would be activated to do something about equalizing the sacrifice.

Now therefore be it resolved, That we urge our Brethren people to earnestly pray that salaries in our Brethren churches be adequate, so that our young men offering themselves to God's highest calling may be able to live nobly, dress respectably, labor selflessly, and provide for their families.

Be it further resolved, That Mr. Walter Hoving and Mr. C. S. Zimmerman be commended for their fine articles which have appeared in The Readers Digest and The Brethren Missionary Herald, and that we thank The Readers Digest and The Brethren Missionary Herald for providing free of charge of the large number of reprints for the delegates of this Conference. (Reprints of both articles are attached to this resolution.)

Be it further resolved, That if your pastor's salary has not been adjusted to today's living conditions, this Conference recommend that the lay delegates to this Conference attempt to induce some action upon their return to their respective churches to correct this situation.

The Committee on Rules and Organization reported as follows, which report was adopted:

The Committee on Rules and Organization recommends that this conference adopt the following proposal:

1. No individual delegate fees shall be collected;
2. In order to seat delegates each congregation must support the conference financially to the extent of 10c per member;
3. Congregations are asked to assume a definite financial responsibility whether or not any delegates attend;

(Note: Deletion by vote of Conference in brackets.)

[4. That no offering be received for conference support;] and,

5. That the conference treasurer notify delinquent churches of this responsibility.

The Board of Evangelism reported as follows, which report was accepted:

BOARD OF EVANGELISM REPORT FOR 1954-55

There were 25 evangelistic meetings held by the two teams. Evangelist R. Paul Miller held 10 meetings with offerings totaling $3,461. There were 354 decisions in his meetings. Evangelist Archie Lynn with Rev. and Mrs. Ralph Colburn covered the Northwest churches. After the first of the year Team Two consisted of Bro. Bill Byers, songleader; Bro. Jim Martin, pianist. They held meetings in the Northwest and other parts and many decisions were made as God greatly blessed.

We are starting the fall with a new team, Evangelist Dean Fetterhoff and Songleader Truman Laddix. Also it is our great hope to enter into new fields with tracts, books, and literature on evangelism.

Scott Weaver, chairman.

August 9, 1955.

The following men were nominated to serve for the next three years as members of the Board of Evangelism: Joseph Dombek, Bryson Fetters, William Fisher, R. Paul Miller. All of these men if elected will succeed themselves.

Sincerely submitted,
O. E. Hacker, secretary.

The National Sunday School Board reported further:

The National Sunday School Board presents the following names to be placed in nomination for election to the board for a period of three years: Galen Lingenfelter, Glen Miller, Edwin Schrock, Miles Taber.

Respectfully submitted,
C. S. Zimmerman, sec.-treas.

Motion prevailed that the nominations cease and that these be elected.

The National Sunday School Board submitted the following additional report, which report was accepted:

In the providence of God we have been permitted to serve through the past year in the work of Sunday schools in the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. It would be impossible to attempt to enumerate the activities involved but a brief summary may help us to see the many ramifications of this department of Christian service.

OUR LABORS OF THE YEAR

In attempting to help in the various districts and churches through the year we have been privileged to share in the ministry in 84 churches. This included the conducting of Sunday-school rallies, conferences, teaching, and preaching. This visitation work gave privilege of speaking more than an average of once each day during the year.

We visited and participated in eight district conferences presenting Sunday-school work and the vast opportunities that present themselves to us as a denomination through the Sunday school.

We were privileged to teach the junior class in the seminary for four class periods on the subject of Sunday-school work.

Two new Christian Workers Training Courses were written and put into mimeograph books, and many copies sold to our churches. Your director had the privilege of teaching the course in three churches.

A new monthly publication was prepared and mailed from our office which has met with wide response. The Promoter is being mailed monthly now to more than 800 persons. We hope to enlarge in material and in number mailed during this next year.

The third annual Sunday-school convention was planned for Portland Oreg. and by the time this report is read will be a matter of history. It includes the largest number of workshops and inspirational messages of any of our conventions.

The first annual contest was held, with about 50 percent of our churches cooperating in the contest, but with wonderful results in most of the churches participating in the contest. The winners will be announced in the Sunday-school convention.

As your director, we are serving on the Program Committee of the National Sunday School Association with offices in Chicago. This Program Committee meets twice during the year and plans for National Family Week, National Sunday School Week, and the Convention of the National Sunday School Association.

We likewise had the privilege of assisting in two youth camps during the year, talking Sunday school with the young people, and urging preparation for teaching and leading in Sunday-school work.

OUR OFFICE (NATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD)

Much effort has been required in this first full year of activity in establishing the office, and in the acquiring of office equipment. At the present time we are at home in the Grace Seminary building, with office space being provided by the seminary to our board jointly with the office of the Youth Department.

Through the generaus gift of the National Women's Missionary Council, we have been enabled to purchase jointly with the youth board an electric mimeograph, and a paper drill. There is still a small balance in this account with which our two boards hope to purchase some small office equipment in the near future. In addition, through our regular budget, a typewriter and a used dictaphone have been purchased, and put to very regular use.

We have had the services of a part-time secretary in the person of Miss Alice Snider, of our church in Martinsburg, Pa. Miss Snider is a student in the seminary division of Grace College and Seminary and is recommended for continued service in our office in the next year.

Motion prevailed that the following items of the Sunday School Board's report be adopted:

PLANS FOR THE FUTURE

Now we face forward and trust that with the plans herewith suggested, we may be able to accomplish our goal for the year 1960—i. e., 60,000 by 1960.

1. The second annual contest be conducted with details to be given by mail to every Sunday school of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches.

2. That during this next year our emphasis be laid upon the theme of this year's Sunday School Convention; namely, "The whole family for Sunday school and the Sunday school for the whole family." We believe we ought to particularly emphasize:

a. The organization and promotion of a cradle roll in every church.

b. Special emphasis upon the youth department of our Sunday schools, since during the last 10 years we have lost 10,000 young people from our Brethren Sunday schools.

c. The organization of at least one men's Bible class in every Sunday school, believing that we will get the family when we get the men into our Sunday schools.

d. The organization of an extension department in every Sunday school. (Now called the Home Department.)

That each of these emphases be promoted in our Promoter, rallies, conventions, and local churches by our board.

3. We urge the adoption of goals by every church that will enable them to see at least a 20-percent increase in Sunday-school attendance this year.

4. The fourth annual convention to be held at Winona Lake, 1956, in connection with our annual conference, and preceding such conference on Sunday and Monday. That we again ask for a challenge hour to present our work to National Conference and that we ask for the Sunday-morning Sunday-school hour to be planned and presented by the board.

5. Through a very generous gift of a friend of this board, we are provided with a cup, to be given to the Sunday school of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches that this year provides the best all-round promotion program. We recommend that a committee be appointed to work with your director to make announcements of rules governing the contest, and to act as judges of such contest. Details to be made public through the pages of the Herald, and through the Promoter.

Respectfully submitted,
Harold H. Etling.

Motion prevailed that the following report by the Auditing Committee be adopted:

The financial records of the following unincorporated boards of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches have been audited and found correct according to bank statements:

National Fellowship of Brethren Churches Treasurer;

National Sunday School Board Treasurer.

The following three—National Brethren Youth Fellowship, National Youth Council, National Brethren Boys Club—books were not available for auditing.

Al Wedin.
Bryson C. Fetter
Glenn C. Messner

Motion prevailed that the books which were not available for audit be obtained and properly audited.

The following report by the Committee on Denominational Interests was accepted:

1. In accord with the action of the 1954 National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, the Committee on Denominational Interests has represented this conference in regard to the expected litigation in the case of the Leon Brethren Church, Leon, Iowa.

2. In the due process of law, the case was filed in the county court at Leon, Iowa, by several representatives of the local Ashland group.

3. Through the competent service of Attorney Leonard Bosgraf, the case was temporarily withdrawn by the plaintiffs.

4. Recent reports indicate the possibility the Leon case will be refiled at an early date.

5. In view of the fact the Committee on Denominational Interest recommends that the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches continue to support the Leon church in this critical period.

The Conference Membership Committee reported as follows which report was received:

The Membership Committee presents the following names of new churches who this year sent in their statistical report for the first time, or have delegates seated for the first time in the business sessions of our Conference.

It is suggested that we unite in special thanksgiving unto God for this manifestation of His blessing upon His work in the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches.

1. Englewood Grace Brethren Church, Englewood, Ohio (Southern Ohio).
2. Grace Brethren Church, Riner, Va. (Southeast).
3. Second Grace Brethren Church, Mansfield, Ohio (Northern Ohio).
4. Grace Brethren Church, Elyria, Ohio (Northern Ohio).
5. Grace Brethren Church, Goshen, Ind. (Indiana).
6. Reading Brethren Church, Stoystown, Pa. (East).
7. Stearns Street Brethren Church, Long Beach, Calif. (California).
8. West Covina Brethren Church, West Covina, Calif. (California).
9. Grandview Brethren Church, Grandview, Wash. (Northwest).
10. Grace Brethren Church, Davenport, Iowa (Iowa).

Motion prevailed that the matter of presentation of names of new churches to Conference be a part of the Statistician's report each year.

Motion prevailed that our laymen be commended for the fine ushering job done by the laymen.

Motion that we express our appreciation to the Polmans and all others having a part in the fine musical program of National Conference.

Motion that the time be extended 10 minutes.

Motion that the Committee on Committees be instructed to bring in nominations for a committee to produce solution to the Boys Club situation. Carried.

Motion prevailed to adjourned.

Sixth Business Session—

Wednesday, August 17, 1955

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The Committee on Committees reported, placing the following persons in nomination for positions on the new Committee on Boys Work: Kenneth Ashman, Ralph Colburn, Leo Polman, Harold Etling, Dick McNeely.

Motion prevailed that the nominations cease and that these be elected.

The Committee on Moderator's Address reported as follows:

We, the Committee on the Moderator's Address, wish to commend our retiring Moderator, Elder R. Paul Miller, for the timely and challenging message on the theme, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door.' Brother Miller has pointedly reminded us that while a troubled world is looking to the United Nations for deliverance, "Christ, the mighty Son of God, is the only answer, and our only deliverance." We express our deep appreciation for the Moderator's passionate plea for a greater emphasis upon soul-winning in every phase of our church works.

On the basis of the suggestions made in the Moderator's address, we make the following recommendations to Conference:

1. That Conference urge all pastors and their churches to greater zeal in evangelism both in revival effort and in personal soul-winning.

2. That this conference appoint from among experienced men a committee on education to explore and expand ways and means for extending Christian day schools. Furthermore that this committee report to the 1956 Conference.

3. We finally recommend that the address of the Moderator be published in the Brethren Missionary Herald so that it will be made available to the entire brotherhood.

Respectfully submitted,
Gordon Bracker (chairman),
Bernard Schneider,
J. Ward Tressler.

Motion prevailed to receive and adopt the report on Moderator's address.

The Resolutions Committee gave the following report:

REPORT OF THE RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE

August 17, 1955

We, members of the church of the Lord Jesus Christ and of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches in the 66th annual conference, assembled at Jennings Lodge, Portland, Oreg., do hereby set forth and adopt the following resolutions:

1. Concerning our gratitude Be it resolved, That we praise our Heavenly Father for His presence and provision during the past year, especially for this conference as a climax to the year and as an introduction to the year ahead—a conference which, in many ways, was the greatest and the most spiritual ever enjoyed by us. Be it also resolved, That we thank the executive committee for again reminding us of the imminent return of our blessed Lord Jesus Christ by using as the conference theme, "I Come Quickly"; that we thank all speakers and musicians for their clear presentations of the message of the Gospel; and that we thank the pastors and people of the Northwest District, especially Pastor Vernon Harris, for their kind invitation to and their hard work for the success of this first national conference of the Brethren denomination in the Northwest area of the nation.

2. Concerning our faith. Be it resolved, That we again affirm our doctrinal position as being "the Bible, the whole Bible, and nothing but the Bible," and that we understand the basic truths of the Word of God to be those set forth in "the Message of the Brethren Ministry."

3. Concerning our denomination. Be it resolved, That we commend each and every auxiliary of the denomination for the great work they have done and the progress they have made during the past year. That we especially commend the Brethren Missionary Herald Company and Grace Theological Seminary and College for their proposed building programs and that we urge the whole denomination to get wholeheartedly behind these two institutions at this time with prayer and sacrificial gifts.

4. Concerning our youth. (Note: Deletions by vote of conference in brackets and additions in italics.) Be it resolved, [That we cease our general criticism of young people and] that we do all within our power to bring [them] young people to the Lord Jesus Christ and to direct them into avenues of service for our Lord. To aid in this, we urge that the Brethren Youth Council secure and place on the field as soon as possible a youth director to supervise our work with youth. Also that we commend and pledge anew our most loyal support to the National Sunday School Board of the Brethren Church in its yearly work, in its attendance contests, and in its desire to reach at least 60,000 people by 1960. Further be it resolved, That we urge each congregation to study the school system in its own community and to consider carefully the work of and the advisability of having a Christian day school for its boys and girls.

5. Concerning our missions. Be it resolved, That we commend the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church for its constant progress in taking the glorious Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to people who have never before heard; that we commend the Brethren Home Missions Council for the same reason and especially this year that we commend this council for its wisdom and foresight in establishing the Brethren Investment Foundation; and that we commend the Board of Evangelism for its efforts in evangelizing our own nation with the Gospel. Be it further resolved, That we urge all Brethren people to support personally and sacrificially these agencies, and that we urge each pastor to hold before our young people, especially our young men, the challenge and unlimited opportunity in serving the Lord Jesus Christ in Christian work within the confines of the Brethren Church.

6. Concerning the world. Be it resolved, That we affirm again our position as being opposed to and as having absolutely no part in the World Council of Churches or any of its auxiliaries; that we affirm again that we hold the position that the Christian is not a part of this world-order and therefore should not and will not participate in its evils nor engage in its wars to maintain its godless system. Be it further resolved, That we commend and recognize the work being done by certain organizations and world leaders, among whom are our own President and Secretary of State, for the maintenance of a reasonable political peace and international order so that missionaries of the Gospel can move freely from place to place to present the salvation and claims of the blessed Lord Jesus Christ; but that at the same time we remind ourselves not to look to these organizations or men for the solution of man's greatest problem—the problem of sin.

7. Concerning ourselves. Be it resolved, That we urge each delegate to carry the spiritual blessings of this conference into the local congregations, both in report and in changed life; that we urge each congregation to give new emphasis to the place of Bible study and prayer for the individual, so that each member of the denomination will be revived in his own or her own soul and so that we will become indeed an evangelistic church; that we urge every member of the church to pray and to work as though the Lord Jesus Christ may come today—as indeed He may; and that we urge each believer to put into practice in the individual life the truth of the separated life.

Conard Sandy,
Henry Rempel,
Miles Taber.

Motion that these resolutions be received and adopted and they they become the resolutions of this Conference.

Motion prevailed that we amend the motion to strike out the words ". . . that we cease our general criticism of young people and . . ."

Motion prevailed that we adopt the report as amended.

Conference appointed the following persons to serve on the Day School Committee: Ward Miller, Glenn O'Neal, Dr. Charles W. Mayes.

The following report by the treasurer was adopted:

Roy H. Kinsey, treas.

Motion prevailed that the honorarium for Vernon Harris be increased to $50.

Motion prevailed that we instruct the Conference Secretary to express to Jennings Lodge our gratitude and appreciation for their part in making this 66th National Conference the success and blessing that it was.

Motion prevailed that we take a special offering for Bro. Robert McCormick to help in his time of misfortune in the illness of his wife. The offering amounted to $124.03.

Motion prevailed that the matter of conference publicity be placed in the hands of the Executive Committee.

Motion prevailed that this Conference reaffirm its historic, Biblical, Brethren position on war, as set forth and adopted in 1941, as recorded on page 13 of the Brethren Annual of November 15, 1941, which is as follows, and that a copy of this statement be sent to proper authorities in Washington, D. C.:

That we reaffirm our historic stand with relation to war; namely, that The Brethren Church from her origin has been utterly opposed to the use of violence or any physical force as a means to an end, on the part of the children of God. We regard the governments of this world system as being yet unregenerate, and their methods of violence contrary to the methods God has authorized His children in the present age to use. We reaffirm that while war, as a possible method for the attainment of justice or the securing and maintenance of human liberty, may at times be deemed necessary among the unregenerate of this world system; yet, according to the teaching of our common Lord and Master, we, as His disciples, do not belong to this world's system and its methods are not our own. We are in this world and not of it, as our Master taught (John 17:14), and must maintain our pilgrim character (Heb. 11:8-16), our citizenship already being in heaven (Phil. 3:20-21). We recognize and appreciate the protection of the United States; and to the nation God has ordained (Rom. 13:1-7) to afford us this protection, we gladly offer our service, time, money, and life itself if necessary to bind up its wounds, or to heal its sorrows, by any means or methods our Lord Jesus Christ has approved for the use of those who follow Him, and we pledge ourselves to pray for those in authority according to Romans 13:1-7.

Motion prevailed that the time be extended for 10 minutes.

Motion prevailed that the Conference Secretary notify all persons who have been placed on Conference committees.

Motion prevailed that we instruct the new Executive Committee to give consideration to the place on the Conference agenda of the Resolutions Committee.

Motion prevailed that the time of Conference be extended for five minutes.

The minutes of this final session of the 66th Annual Conference were read and approved as corrected.

After the passing of the proper motion the Moderator adjourned the Conference sine die.

Following the closing prayer, all joined in singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

NATIONAL WMC OBJECTIVES (1955-56)

1. PERSONAL SPIRITUAL FOOD—For your daily Bible reading we suggest one of the following:

First choice—The entire Bible in 1955-56 (three chapters a day; five on Sunday).

Second choice — Genesis, Deuteronomy, Ruth, Daniel, Song of Solomon, Esther, Ecclesiastes, and Revelation.

Bible-reading markers will be provided.

2. FAMILY SPIRITUAL FOOD—We recommend the establishing of daily family devotions in every home in the local church. For promotion we recommend the tract, "Thoughts on the Christian Family Circle," Good News Publishers, 411 S. Wells St., Chicago 7, Ill.

3. PRAYER WARRIORS — Each council enlisting prayer warriors from the congregation, using the five-year Prayer Covenant Cards, adding a star each year at consecration service. For guidance in prayer continue the use of the prayer booklets and prayer pointers in the Herald.

4. SOUL-WINNING—Encourage individual witnessing by visitation and tract distribution. Urge each local tract chairman to keep a record of tracts used. For instruction in soul-winning, the following booklets are suggested:

"Soul-Winning Is Easy," by C. S. Lovett, price, $1.

"Winsome Witnessing," by Mary Terry, 35c.

"To Save a Soul From Death," by R. Paul Miller, $1.50.

All of these booklets may be obtained from the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind.

5. MONTHLY MEETINGS—A minimum of 12 devotional meetings URGING the use of the Brethren WMC program packets.

6. DISTRICT PROJECTS AND RALLIES —Each council taking part in the district projects and stressing attendance at the rallies as a means of promoting individual growth and enthusiasm for WMC work. Also encouraging a banner of recognition to be given at district rallies for the largest percentage present from any one council.

7. NEWS ITEMS—Each local editor sending a post card with news items twice a year to the WMC editor.

8. MAJOR OFFERINGS—

(1) Sept., Oct., Nov.—HOME MISSIONS —$2,800; send before Dec. 10. Residence at Dryhill, Ky.

(2) Dec., Jan., Feb.—CHRISTIAN EDUCATION OFFERING—$2,800; send before March 10; two-thirds, Grace Seminary, pick-up truck and transcopy machine; one-third, Sunday School and Youth Boards, office equipment, literature and program material.

(3) March, April, May—FOREIGN MISSIONS—$2,800; send before June 10. Printing equipment and literature fund for the six fields.

(4) June, July, Aug.—GENERAL AND PUBLICATION FUND—$2,800; send before Sept. 10.

(5) THANK OFFERING for Brethren Jewish Missions, taken throughout the year and to be sent to the national financial secretary-treasurer by June 10. We urge the use of the synagogue banks for the penny-a-day-per-member offering. (Secure banks from the Home Missions Council.)

(6) BIRTHDAY OFFERING to be received during the year for the support of WMC missionaries on a foreign field. Send this offering to the national financial secretary-treasurer by July 10.

WMC (cont.)—

DISTRICT WMC OBJECTIVES (1955-56)

1. Every district represented on the National Board at National Conference by the president or alternate, suggesting that expenses, wholly or in part, be paid by the district.

2. A four-minute written report to be given at National Board meeting and again on the conference floor. The retiring president to be responsible for a written report which will be read by the present presiding officer.

3. Each district to provide interesting material representing the work done in the past year for display at National Conference. An award will be presented to the district having the most outstanding display.

4. Each district to select a prayer chairman who will encourage the prayer life of the women, the use of the five-year Prayer Covenant Cards, and stimulate Bible study.

5. Promoting the organization of a WMC in every Brethren church in the district, the responsibility of directing the organization being placed in the hands of the district president.

6. Each district to sponsor at least one project—said project TO BE CLEARED THROUGH THE NATIONAL VICE PRESIDENT TO AVOID DUPLICATION. Each district has the privilege of keeping the project within the district.

7. Each district contribute an annual freewill offering to be used toward the furnishing and repair of the Foreign Missionary Residence. This offering to be sent to the national financial secretary-treasurer by July 10, and to be used as the committee in charge sees the need.

8. Each DISTRICT PRESIDENT to receive the local annual statistical reports and to compile the district statistical report and send to the NATIONAL recording secretary by July 31.

9. Each District President to stress the importance of using the BRETHREN WMC program packets in the local councils to foster unity among them.

10. SMM to be given time on the WMC district conference program to demonstrate Sisterhood activities.

NATIONAL WMC RECOMMENDATIONS (1955-56)

1. That a membership consecration service be held annually in each local council, using the original covenant card and star system; suggesting that this service be the feature of the September meeting to which prospects for membership are invited.

2. Each local president endeavoring to attend National Fellowship, her council aiding in expenses if at all possible.

3. That Mrs. Benjamin Hamilton be our editor.

4. That Mrs. Frank Lindower be our prayer chairman and that we continue to sponsor enthusiastically the day of prayer each month.

5. That we send good usable clothing to Taos, N Mex., Rev. S. I. Horney, parcel post, or via express to Santa Fe, N. Mex.; to Indian Mission, Rev. Evan Adams, Brethren Navaho Mission (located at Counselor Post), Star Route, Cuba, N. Mex., c/o San Juan Basin Lines, Albuquerque, N. Mex., and that each council be responsible for their entire expense. That we discontinue sending clothing to Clayhole, Ky.

6. That officers in the local councils preferably be elected in June, installed in July, and take office at the August meeting, and have statistical reports compiled by the retiring president in the hands of the District President by July 15.

7. That each council promote the evangelization of children, urging the individual woman to assist in Sunday school, vacation Bible school, children's Bible classes, etc.

8. That the women in each council continue to show an increased interest in the Sisterhood in all possible ways—prayer, work projects, financial help (such as purchasing reading books and pennants), and a willingness to serve in an advisory capacity.

9. We continue to urge that all local and district councils show loyalty to their denomination by using Brethren talent and supporting Brethren works.

10. That a birthday remembrance be sent to foreign missionaries and their children.

11. That the local council purchase one or more of the suggested reading circle books. Order direct from the Brethren Missionary Herald Company, Winona Lake, Ind.

(1) Biography (of Arthur J Bowen): "Fervent in Spirit," by Ezra A. Shaub, $2.50.

(2) Missionary adventure: "Farther Into the Night," by Mrs. Gordon H. Smith, $2.50.

The National Fellowship of Brethren

Ministers (cont.)—

Ministers convened for the first regular session of 1955 in Friesen Chapel, Jennings Lodge, Portland, Oreg. Chairman Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by Jacob Kliever from Matthew 28:19-20, emphasizing the teaching ministry. This was followed by a season of prayer.

Report of the Program Committee was brought by Chairman Glenn O'Neal, and unanimously adopted by the ministerium.

The following men were introduced to the group: Edward Peters, Bob McCormick, James Marshall, David Morsey, Jerry Yerian, Don Hocking, John Teeter, Dayton Cundiff, Wayne Flory.

Memorials were presented by Dr. C. H. Ashman, Sr., with the reading of II Timothy 4:1-8. Memorials were heard for Rev. William Clough, Sylvester Lowman, A. V. Kimmell, and A. B. Cover. Those who spoke on behalf of Brother Clough: C. H. Ashman, Harold Painter, Clyde Landrum, Robert Crees, Herman Hoyt, Ord Gehman, Jack Simmons, Robert Miller. Those who spoke on behalf of Brother Lowman: William Steffler, R. D. Barnard, William Schaffer, W. A. Ogden, A. R. Kriegbaum, Caleb Zimmerman, Luther Grubb, John Aeby, Leo Polman. Those who spoke on behalf of Brother Kimmell: W. A. Ogden, Jacob Kliever, R. D. Barnard, John Aeby, John Burns, Harold Dunning, C. H. Ashman. Those who spoke on behalf of Brother Cover: Conard Sandy, W. A. Ogden.

Further introductions: Robert Kliewer, Orville Lorenz, Grant McDonald, Jack Churchill.

Various announcements were made. Chairman Miles Taber exhorted the ministers to be on time for the early prayer meeting, and to register for the conference at the lodge office. The number of ministers present was reported as 107. Previous year comparisons: 116 in 1952, 112 in 1953, 141 in 1954.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer by Gordon Bracker.

Friday, August 12, 1955

Brother Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by Bro. Glenn O'Neal, who spoke from II Timothy 4 on "How to Grow Old Gracefully." The group engaged in a season of prayer.

A paper on "Pastoral Counseling" was delivered by Lewis Hohenstein, emphasizing the urgent ministry of helping individuals in the problems of personal and social adjustments. The paper was very profitably received.

The minutes of August 11 were read and approved.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read by Jesse Hall, and adopted by the ministerium. Further nominations for ministerium officers were made from the floor, and ballots were cast.

The meeting was adjourned with prayer by Bill Howard.

Saturday, August 13, 1955

Brother Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by Dr. A. J. McLain, speaking from Exodus 15:22-25 on "Bitter Waters." A season of prayer followed.

The minutes of August 12 were read and approved.

The results of the election were reported by Jesse Hall: chairman, Mark Malles; vice chairman, Ward Miller; secretary, Richard Grant; assistant secretary, Eugene Witzky; financial secretary, John Burns; treasurer, Harold Painter.

The report of the Membership Committee was read by Gordon Bracker, and received by the group.

Brother Vernon Harris introduced the speaker, Dr. John G. Mitchell, pastor of the Central Bible Church, Portland, Oreg., who spoke on "The Preacher, in the Preparation of His Own Heart for Preaching." Appreciation was expressed to Dr. Mitchell by the group.

A motion prevailed that the ministerium appoint a committee of three men to bring back to the ministerium for action during this 1955 session a plan whereby national ministerial cards can be presented gratis to all ordained and licensed elders approved by their local congregations.

The Nominating Committee presented the names of Lyle Marvin, Gordon Bracker, and William Schaffer, who were elected to this committee. A motion prevailed to request a report from the Board on Ministerial Relief, to be presented to the ministerium during this conference.

Pertinent announcements were made.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Roy Howard.

Monday, August 15, 1955

Brother Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by James Marshall, who spoke on "Our Defense Against the Devil." A season of prayer and confession followed, praising God for the outpouring of His Spirit upon our conference, and praying for continued blessing.

The minutes of August 13 were approved.

Glenn O'Neal presented Miss Caster, Social Security representative from the Portland office, who presented to the group the plan for ministerial coverage by Social Security.

A motion prevailed to express appreciation to Miss Caster for her able presentation of the subject and answering of questions.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Arthur Carey.

Tuesday, August 16, 1955

Brother Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by Bro. Neal Beery, who spoke from Galatians 6:9 on "Preacher's Patience." Group prayer was offered, especially for former Brethren ministers who are not now in the ministry.

The minutes of August 15 were read and approved.

A report on the Brethren Investments

Foundation was given by Bro. Luther Grubb, followed by a general questioning period.

A report from the Committee on Divorce and Remarriage was read, requesting a secret ballot from the ministerium on the following question: "Do you favor the presentation to the National Fellowship of Brethren Ministers several carefully prepared papers representing the various viewpoints on the subject of divorce and remarriage in relation to the visible church, and an allotment of reasonable time for general discussion at our 1956 annual meeting? Yes or No!"

A motion prevailed to grant the request, and ballots were cast. Results of the balloting: 71 Yes; 21 No.

A motion prevailed to extend the Committee on Reading Course for one year.

The Seminary Board was granted the request of a poll of the ministerium on preferred recipients of honorary degrees.

The Foreign Mission Board reported on plans for the 1956 missionary rallies.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by Chairman Miles Taber.

Wednesday, August 17, 1955

Brother Miles Taber presided.

Devotions were led by Harold Dunning, who emphasized the work and needs of Africa. The group engaged in prayer, remembering especially the pastors in Africa, and those in physical illness.

A motion prevailed to receive an offering for Rev. and Mrs. Bob McCormick, in view of the sudden illness of Mrs. McCormick. $101.25 was received.

The minutes of August 16 were read and approved.

The report of Treasurer True Hunt was adopted, showing: receipts, $336.83; disbursements, $81.32; and a balance on hand August 15, 1955, of $255.51.

The Committee on Ministerial Cards submitted the following report, which was adopted by the ministerium:

Ministers (cont.)—

Inasmuch as the present method of collection of membership fees, and the distribution of membership cards is inefficient, we hereby recommend:

1. The the district secretaries have a district-approved list, and the Foreign Board have an approved list of licensed and ordained elders in the hands of the National Ministerium Membership Committee by August first.
2. That offerings for operational expenses for the National Ministerium be obtained at national ministerial meetings.
3. That proper forms for the listing of elders in duplicate be furnished by the Membership Committee, and mailed back to the district secretaries. The duplicate copy should be sent to the Brethren Missionary Herald Company.
4. That each district secretary be informed of this method, and that he be a member of the Membership Committee of the National Ministerium of which the national vice chairman is chairman. The Foreign Missionary Board should also be notified.
5. That membership cards be duly signed and placed in the hands of the district secretaries or representatives at the National Fellowship.

(A sample form for the report was also submitted.)

A motion prevailed to continue Mark Malles and Henry Rempel on the Committee on Divorce and Remarriage for one year.

A motion prevailed to recommend to the conference that Bernard Schneider serve as chairman of the Committee on Divorce and Remarriage, in view of the termination of office of the previous chairman.

A motion prevailed to continue the Clearing Committee, with Norman Uphouse to continue as chairman.

A motion prevailed to continue the Committee on Licensure and Ordination, to deal specifically with the matter of receiving elders from other denominations into the N. F. B. C. Bro. Luther Grubb, Lyle Marvin, and Glenn O'Neal were appointed to this committee.

A letter from Dr. Carl McIntyre, inviting the N. F. B. C. to join the ranks of the American Council of Churches, was read by Bro. Clyde Landrum. A motion prevailed to instruct the new Executive Committee to frame and send a negative reply to the invitation.

It was announced by W. A. Ogden that Bro. Charles Gwynn, licensed elder in the Johnstown, Pa., church, has died since the opening of this conference.

Time was granted the Brethren Home Missions Council for the presentation of publicity material for the 1955 home mission offering. A discussion of the materials ensued.

Various announcements were made.

The final reading of the minutes of August 17 was approved.

The meeting adjourned with prayer by host pastor to the conference, Verno Harris.

Respectfully submitted,

Russell Ogden, secretar

1. Stimulate worship of Almighty God through our Lord Jesus Christ, His only begotten Son and our Saviour, in accordance with the whole Bible;

2. Promote Christian fellowship among the laymen of the Brethren Church; and

3. Effect an organization of the Brethren laymen which may offer its assistance to local churches, through local laymen's affiliates where possible, as an aid to the ministry in the salvation of souls, through the person and work of our Lord Jesus Christ, and other proper activities in which laymen can serve.

Goals

1. Daily Bible reading.
2. A family altar in every home.
3. Laymen united for soul-winning through personal visitation, evangelistic rallies, and tract distribution.
4. Give our local support to our local pastor and his work.
5. Help build our Sunday schools through the national and local Sunday-school boards.
6. Start new local and district laymen's groups in churches and areas where they do not exist.
7. Start and sponsor local boys clubs.
8. Every layman a tither and systematic giver to the National Fellowship of Brethren Laymen.

Laymen (cont.)—

Projects

1. Board of Evangelism Crusade, $12,000.
2. Grace Theological Seminary Student Aid, $1,000.
3. Brethren Boys Clubs, $500.
4. General Expense Fund, $500.

Total of projects, $14,000.

Grace Seminary student aid is available to worthy Brethren students as follows: a student in need, or any person knowing of a student in need, should contact any member of the committee in writing. Each member of the committee will initial the request. When the request is properly initialed by every member, the chairman will present the gift to the student and send the request to replenish the cash drawer ($50 in the hands of the chairman), together with the initialed copy of the request for aid to the treasurer. Full power to accept or reject the request is the committee's prerogative.

Other than Grace Seminary student aid is handled on the district or local level.

1955 Conference Notes

Sessions 81 through 85 were held in the Lenz Building at the Jennings Lodge Conference Grounds August 10-17.

This year saw a consolidation of our gains, and much growth. Much activity was reported, especially in the West. This year's conference was more wonderful in that we had the whole conference grounds to ourselves and were not competing with another. Our attendance has showed a steady and consistent growth over the years. Last year the daily average was 60.6; this year's was 72.

We were responsible for, and conducted the challenge hour after the evening service on the last evening of conference. This drew several compliments the following day.

Ralph J. Colburn, 1118 NW. 18th Court, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Plans

Monthly packets of programs, ideas, and party helps will be sent to all pastors and youth leaders who request them. These will be supplied by writers from the BYF Board. Each BYF and CE is encouraged to set aside one offering per month to help with this and other national expenses.

Missionary projects will be promoted throughout the year. Each BYF and CE is encouraged to set aside at least one offering per month for these projects, and give it through the local church as part of that current missionary offering. Be sure to mark it "BYF Project." The home-mission project is the raising of at least $1,000 to send summer helpers to our home-mission fields in Kentucky and New Mexico. The foreign-mission project is the raising of at least $1,200 for the support of Bekoro Station in Africa.

Dr. Barnard presenting missionaries in Sunday-morning foreign-missions service.

Reflections on Portland—The National Conference at Portland is history, but its blessings linger in our hearts. The cover picture and the two pictures above tell at least a part of the story as far as foreign missions was concerned. The messages by the missionaries and the fellowship with these who labor in foreign lands proved to be blessed indeed! May the revival spirit of Portland and the zeal and enthusiasm of the missionaries work to stir our hearts as never before for foreign missions.

Home Missions and Foreign Missions—Our foreign-missions program is dependent upon the church at home for its workers and support. As more home-mission churches are built, the work of the Brethren Church at home is strengthened and at the same time the potential for foreign missions is increased. Let us all work, pray, and give during this home-missions season that more and more churches may be built.

". . . He will be our guide . . ."—There are no truer words than these, ". . . He will be our guide . . .," says the Jack Churchill family. Plans were complete for their sailing for Argentina—the necessary papers had been obtained and passage arranged. En route to New York a stop was made in Stockton, Calif., to visit relatives. The Lord changed the plans, and instead of continuing on to their port of embarkation, Mrs. Churchill went to the hospital for major surgery. However, she recovered satisfactorily so that they booked passage on the S. S. Argentina for October 26. As we go to press we have every indication that they will sail on schedule. The testimony of the Churchills still is, ". . . He will be our guide"

Trip into Mexico—Our General Secretary, Brother Barnard, and the three missionaries to Mexico, Brethren Walter Haag, Roy Howard, and Sibley Edmiston, left October 5 for a month-long investigative trip into Mexico with the view (1) to gather information that will help in better reaching the people of that land; and (2) determine the advisability and location of a Bible training school deep down in Mexico. There is information elsewhere in this issue concerning the first few days of the trip.

Plea from Hawaii, "We need more space!"—Praise the Lord for His abundant blessing upon the work in Hawaii. God has been good in literally overflowing the meeting place. The plea now is for more space! This is one problem for which we can praise the Lord! Through the month of August the average attendances were: Sunday school, 65; church (a. m.), 25; church (p. m.), 19; and prayer meeting, 12.

The situation in Argentina—Things have been happening in Argentina! Dictator Juan Peron has been thrown out of office and a new regime installed. Our missionaries tell of tense moments but testify of God's keeping power through it all. No injury to personnel or damage to property has been reported. There is no clear pattern of things to come. Promises have been made of more constitutional liberty which, we hope, is for all.

Brazilian elections—Christians may well take a second look at the results in the recent election in Brazil. Juscelino Kubitschek, follower and political heir of the late President Getulio D. Vargas, won the presidency. He had the active support of the Communists, who, although outlawed in Brazil, make up about 10 percent of the total vote. Watch this situation!

Showers of blessings in France—Bro. George Cone, Jr., on a language-study tour of duty in France, tells of great blessings in the recent meetings in the portable tabernacle. Since Brother Cone is directing the work in France during the absence of the Fogles, he planned and directed the revival-evangelistic services, the first in the portable tabernacle. The preaching was done by a national evangelist. Besides strengthening the work in Lyon, there were definite decisions for Christ, among them the salvation of the husband of one of the faithful believers of our group.

"...He Will Be Our Guide..."

By Jack B. Churchill

Going to a foreign country for the first time to bear witness to Jesus Christ and His salvation is in some ways like the experience of Abraham when "he went out, not knowing whither he went." Of course, we knew where we were going when we left New York on November 5, 1949, but in actual experience Argentina was then little more than a name on the map. Even Miriam, my wife, felt the excitement and strain of facing unknown experiences there, for the 11 years she had been away from the land of her birth had erased many childhood memories.

But there was one factor that eased the strain of going. A number of years earlier we had come across this verse in Psalm 48: "For this God is our God for ever and ever: he will be our guide even unto death." Already we had seen Him guide us through the days of training and preparation in such a way that made us marvel at His wisdom and provision. And now something new was before us—preaching and living the Gospel in Argentina. As it was His leading that was taking us there we knew we could count on Him to guide us through whatever might lie in our path.

And so it proved to be. As we took up the unexplored paths of adjustment to the language, the customs, and the conditions, we found the Lord could hear prayer and be praised in Spanish. We found that He blessed the preaching of His Word even when the evening services began at the unearthly hour of 9:30 p. m. And during those endless days of wind and dust so common in central Argentina, His all-sufficient grace was more than just a phrase we had memorized out of II Corinthians 12:9.

As the five years of our term rounded out and we began to make our preparations to come to the States, we found that it was not a simple matter of packing and boarding a plane. Some roots had been put down, almost unconsciously, into hearts and lives; into plans and projects for the spread of the Gospel; even into the Cordoba landscape with its vast rolling fields and pasturelands and its rocky hills crowned with thorny peje and golden aromito. But when the Lord led us to Argentina, He gave what was needed to leave home and loved ones. So now He enabled us to leave what we had come to love, and set before us the joy of reunion with our families and the responsibility of showing to the churches at home what their prayers, dollars, and missionaries were doing in Argentina.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack B. Churchill, Margaret, Kenneth, and Charles

The furlough year has come and gone. Psalm 48:14 still reads, ". . . He will be our guide" And His leading indicates a return to Argentina even though obstacles have thrown shadows across the path: a revolution in Argentina with subsequent unrest and uncertainty, and an emergency operation for Miriam which caused a last-minute change of schedule. But as a dear Bible teacher used to say: "God's trains run on scheduled time and never miss connections." At the moment, the door is still open, our desire is still strong, and our confidence is in His leading.

Once back in Argentina we shall continue to remember the fine fellowship we had in so many of the churches this year. We shall always be thankful for the privilege of having been at the National Conference in Portland. And we will not soon forget the interest and earnestness of many of you in the Lord's work in foreign lands. We know you will do all you can to share the Gospel with those who have not heard yet. We trust that your dedicated enthusiasm for the cause of missions will arouse others who may not yet be doing their part to see that a witness to Jesus Christ and His Gospel goes to the uttermost part of the earth.

Our return to Argentina will reunite us with our

The interesting double-citizenship story of Mrs. Jack Churchill has been tape-recorded and is ready for distribution to any church or group desiring it. There are good color slides to go with it. It is about 12-14 minutes in length and is ideal for use in the prayer meeting or first part of a Sunday-evening service. Write to the Foreign Missionary Society office at Winona Lake for a booking of this production. Also avaliable are two tapes with slides to synchronize: (1) "God's Way Is the Best Way," about 23 minutes, the story of the illness of little Anne Goodman; (2) "I Want To Go Back," about 13 minutes, an account of the desire of Miss Mary Emmert to return to Africa.

The General Secretary Reports

-- FROM SOUTH OF THE RIO GRANDE

As I am writing this we are traveling down a Mexican paved road at 60 miles per hour, with Bro. Roy Howard as the driver and Brethren Walter Haag, Sibley Edmiston, and myself as passengers in the car. That is, we were traveling that way! Since I began this report the pavement ended and now we are not traveling 60 miles per hour! We are just completing the fourth day of the 21 days we purpose to spend in Mexico. We entered Mexico at Reynosa, across from McAllen, Tex., and proceeded to Monterrey, Saltillo, and Torreon. This evening we are some 100 miles northwest of Torreon and about 500 miles south of El Paso, Tex. We plan to take a circuitous route to Mexico City, spend some time within a 100-mile radius of that city, and then return by the more direct route to Laredo, Tex. We have come this circuitous route largely because of floods and road hazards resulting from the visit of "Hurricane Janet."

Monterrey, Saltillo, and Torreon are larger cities, very prosperous and progressive. Yesterday and today we have visited other types of places, chiefly the little adobe villages where abject poverty is in evidence on every hand. While writing this report we came upon a very old village, Mapimi, which is quite different. On the plaza there is a Catholic church said to be about 300 years old. There is no evangelical testimony. During the half-hour we visited there, we gave out tracts and the brethren testified to the people who seemed very receptive, with one man even asking to buy a Bible from us. A permanent gospel testimony might easily be established there.

During the few days we have been here, we have noted that the cities indicate prosperity and wealth. There are paved streets, tiled sidewalks, well-stocked stores, and markets filled with foodstuffs, with very reasonable prices for that grown in the land. Hotel rooms have cost us from 65c to $1.25 per night per person, and meals from 25c to 75c per meal. The villages indicate a different story. The people seem to have few pesos, the villages are poorly planned, the houses poorly built of adobe, and they are poorly kept.

The people—Between 20,000,000 and 25,000,000 live in Mexico. We understand that the concentration of population is in the southern part of the country, chiefly around Mexico City. In the northern part of Mexico there are concentrations of population, usually in a few centers. Many, many miles stretch out between the cities, with not too many villages but with ranches, of course. The people seem to be most hospitable, and that hospitality seems to be increasing as we go south. They are very musical, with guitars and singing being very prominent in every village. I suppose we would need to say that the people express themselves emotionally more freely than we do in the United States. This is certainly not a bad characteristic, for, as they can be incited to hate us and the Gospel with a fanatical hatred, so when they are converted they love with such a fervor that they would gladly give their lives for the Gospel.

Temperatures—We have had one hot day, but most of the time it has been quite cool. This evening we are about 200 miles north of the torrid zone, but we are in our motel with coats on and a very chilly night ahead. Much of the time we are from 3,500 feet to a mile high.

Industry—Industry is on the increase in the larger cities. Many new factories are in evidence. We are told that Mexico is now building an automobile. In the smaller communities there is, of course, little industry other than that which has to do with small items made in the homes and offered for sale.

Yesterday we drove through the cotton country around Torreon. It is an irrigated country and very fertile cotton fields were in evidence everywhere. Today we met whole fleets of cotton trucks hauling both cotton and cotton pickers, since this is in the middle of the cotton-picking season.

Gospel testimony—There is much gospel testimony in Mexico; yet only a small fraction of the country has been evangelized. Christian leaders in cities and larger villages alike have invited us to come in and help them with the big job. They seem overjoyed that we are interested in helping in our small way in the evangelization of Mexico. Even in the better-evangelized areas I suppose not more than one out of every 100 people are evangelical believers. Most of the villages up to 5,000 in population have no gospel testimony other than those in a small radius of larger cities. Many of these small villages, however, have one or more believers who are hungry for gospel truth and fellowship. Believers in Mexico are in the minority and, hence, feel a very close kinship to each other. They magnify their agreements, minimize their differences, and worship and work together. There is a surprising amount of gospel good will, and even in the villages the people thank us for the gospel literature.

Self-supporting testimonies—Mexico seems to be quite far from full self-support in its gospel testimony. There are some such testimonies, some where congregations are even sending out workers to other areas. Day laborers with whom we have talked are receiving from around 4 to 30 pesos per day (32c to $2.40), with most in the lower bracket. You can see how difficult it would be for these people to support their own testimony, especially when they have been poorly taught in the Chris-

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 45

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. Hoyt, vice president; William Schaffer, secretary; Ord Gehman, treasurer; Bryson Fetters, member-at-large to Executive Committee; Walter Lepp, S. W. Link, Mark Malles, Robert E. A. Miller, True Hunt, Thomas Hammers; Arnold R. Kriegbaum, ex officio.

My Name Is John Mane

[Editor's Note: This article, by J. P. Kliever, is the first in a series of articles on the seven senior African elders. The next, to be written by Dr. Orville Jobson, will feature Noel Gaiwaka.]

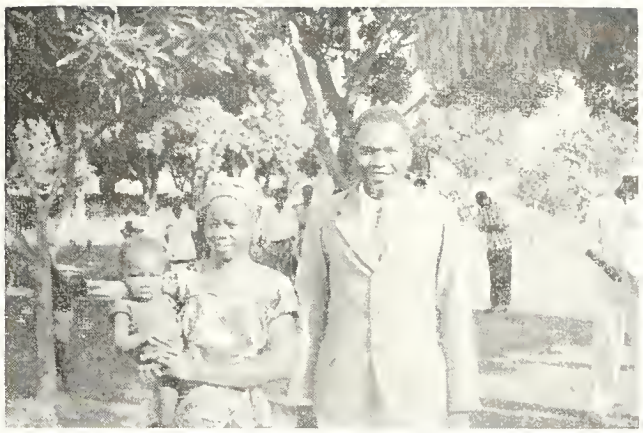
I am the youngest son of my mother. I don't know the year of my birth, but I know I was a young unmarried man when Pastor Jobson came to build some houses for a mission station. This station could be seen from our village. (Time, 1935.)

My father was the village chief and head adviser for the idol worshipers. My mother was the instructor of young women to be good caretakers of the women's responsibilities in idol worship. I was not anxious to be a chief some day, nor was I anxious to be a leader in idolatry. I had already spent a year looking for something to satisfy my inner unrest. Everything seemed so empty and hopeless.

My father had died, and my mother wanted me to make a large garden for her so she would have enough to eat, and yet I didn't want to settle into this unsatisfactory village system. Just then the missionary came, seeking someone to work for him so that a missionary might take up residence among our people. I decided I could work there and help mother, as well as be in a position to learn about something new, to see if there was something that gave me more satisfaction than I was getting in idolatry.

Each morning we heard the white man talk. He talked about God the Creator (we believe there is a Creator-God), he talked about a Great Spirit (we believe in a supreme Spirit who has control of life), and he talked of Someone he called the Lord Jesus Christ, who was God and who was also man (our chiefs are only men); what kind of a Man is this?



One day I saw my need and was sure that this One they called Jesus could satisfy it. Peace came, joy came, and I began to want to know the Book that was the container of all these wonderful truths.

The Morrills had now come to Bekoro to live and with them came several lady missionaries. Some of these came for a short time, like Miss Myers, Miss Byron, Miss Emmert, and Dr. Gribble. Then Mrs. Kennedy came to live with us, too. The workmen thought I was foolish taking my noontime and learning how to read paper as the lady missionaries took time to teach me, but three of us went each noon. How happy I was when I could read some verses all by myself.

I met a young maiden named Marie. She had that name because she too had become Christ's. We became man and wife, and then I asked to be trained so that I could go to Bible school to become a preacher.

I went for one year. In due time Pastor Kliever came to be our missionary, and has been ever since. He took me with him on preaching trips, and soon the Lord laid a group of 22 villages on my heart. He also laid a whole tribe on my heart. When I talked of going to this tribe, my friends and family thought I was foolish to be interested in another tribe. I volunteered to go to this tribe, but it worked out that I was to open a chapel in the 22-village group.

I had much joy and also many, many trials as I worked there. The name is Benamkor Chapel. They asked me to stay, and then asked that I be made their elder. This was all very serious with me and I was afraid. The Lord has promised to be with me, and I asked Him to strengthen me. I passed the examination, but I was still afraid. I know now that it was good for me to be afraid (I am still afraid), and so I trust the Lord for all things and He never leaves me in the lurch.

John Mane with his wife, Marie, and child.

I was invited to help this other tribe to hear the Gospel, and my chapel folks loaned me to them for one and two months at a time. I left my wife and children each time, but the Lord took good care of them, and this tribe soon responded to the Gospel.

Our missionary had so much to do that he asked me to help him with the examining of the converts and the baptizing, as well as the communion. After he had shown me how to do all this, he turned that part over to me. I was still more scared. Then he scared me some more when he told me to ask the Lord to show me leaders among the people there, and to show them, tell them, and teach them how to do all these things also. I still kept my chapel and at the same time I was able to help this tribe (the Laka tribe) to be evangelized. So you see I did get to work with them, and the Lord did not burden my heart for them in vain.

I have been asked several times to be chief of my home village; I have been offered many positions in the things of the world; but I know I will be happy only as I do His will for my life. It means so much to me to know that we do not do this work alone. God has made every provision for us through His Spirit who guides us and leads us in the way. I am so happy that you obeyed the Lord in sending us the missionaries. I would like you to include me on your prayer list also, that we may share together in this work.

I greet you in the Saviour's name,

I, John Mane.

Missionary's comment: John preaches to over 250 in his local church, supervises the reading classes, the prebaptismal classes, the postbaptismal classes, and the workers' classes. He counsels with his people; he is invited to preach and teach in other chapels; he does much personal work. We missionaries seek his advice contin-

Jottings From Bangui

By Dr. and Mrs. Orville D. Jobson

1. During the afternoons of last month we were able, for the first time, to visit all of the 13 different villages where believers are gathering for daily instruction and edification. Most of these groups begin before 4 o'clock and continue on until sunset. The leaders teach reading and memory verses, and close with a service of singing, exhortation, and prayer. We praise the Lord for these faithful leaders, but some of them have very little training and need more instruction themselves. To provide more teaching for them we conduct a weekly class in systematic study of the major Bible doctrines, using Dr. McClain's excellent little booklet, "Bible Truths," as a foundation. This booklet has been translated into Sango.

2. Pastor Noel Gaiwaka has now moved nearer the temporary chapel, which is two miles from our central-city location, and has resumed the daily early-morning prayer meetings which have been such a blessing throughout our Mission. The meetings are averaging an attendance of 20, and still growing. We praise the Lord for those who have a burden to pray and ask that you pray that more may have this burden.

3. Three of the young men in the church are preparing to attend the Mission's normal school at Bassai this year. These boys have completed their grammar-school work in government schools and now offer themselves as prospective teachers for regular French schools under the church and mission. Pray that they may apply themselves and be good students, and above all that they shall not lose the vision of serving the Lord in this capacity. The local church is assuming partial support of these students, which will require additional giving on the part of the members.

4. The bookroom at the central-city station proves to be a constant source of blessing to many. A tract with the message of salvation, prepared by the Intermission Language Committee and printed by the little mission press at Bozou, is given to all who make purchases. Also a personal witness is given, and those unsaved are dealt with. We make available the Scriptures in several languages and a limited number of books in French as aids to Bible study. By far the books that we sell the most are the Sango New Testament and Songbook. Since November 1, 1954, our sales have averaged $160 a month. Last month was the highest, with $240. We do not sell school supplies, cards, or stationery, and thus have no license to pay.

5. In the weekly Bible class for the women we are translating and using the lessons on the Life of Christ that are written in our Brethren quarterly. The women are very much interested in these classes and the attendance is growing. Last month the Women's Missionary Council members gave their special offerings to purchase 15 new benches for the temporary chapel.

6. The vernacular classes, consisting of two grades, are taught by two young men whose names are David and Louis. These boys are very faithful, and do this work at a real sacrifice. The small amount given by the church each month is far from sufficient for their full sustenance. An all-time high had been reached just before the vacation in August, with 125 boys and girls enrolled. We are looking forward to resuming these classes in October. Pray that David and Louis may continue humble, and that the Lord will show them just the young girls they should marry as future helpmeets.

7. The church attendance has increased to where the little temporary chapel is no longer adequate. Last Lord's Day there were approximately 1,200 in attendance. Our great need is for a church building large enough to accommodate 2,000 people. With walls and a roof, we would be very happy. An increasing number of the members are now tithing regularly. The tithe is put into the building fund. This fund now has $660 toward the building. This is commendable but far from sufficient. The building we need here will cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. We do not know just how the Lord will provide, but we ask that you remember the need in prayer.

". . . the little temporary chapel is no longer adequate."

8. During the month of August, 76 people were baptized and added to the church, bringing the membership to almost 500. At our last love feast, a few over 400 gathered at the Lord's table. It is our earnest desire that the church in Bangui be a separated and spiritual church with a real testimony. There is every inducement in this evil city for fulfilling the lusts of the flesh, but even in Corinth God had His own who were sanctified in Christ Jesus. Pray that His saints in Bangui may be overcomers.

9. May we also ask prayer for the missionaries needed in Bangui. There is so much to be done, and we are only two. The Roman Catholic Church has a great educational program which enrolls thousands of children. If we are to hold our young people, both boys and girls, we must have an energetic youth worker who can give his full time to a program for all ages. Administrative duties make it impossible for us to devote the time we should to teaching and visitation. If we are to realize the best from the opportunities before us, we must have another couple to assist in the work and take over full pastoral responsibilities. Pray with us that these needs may be met.

SUFFERED TO THE GLORY OF GOD

By Mrs. Elmer Cheney

[Editor's Note—Miss Estella Myers continues to improve from her recent illness. She is able to be out now and is beginning to do some writing. The first article in a series she is writing on the early history of our work in French Equatorial Africa will appear in our December issue. This article by her friend, Mrs. Elmer Cheney, of Des Moines, Iowa, is introductory to the series.]

Since the return of Miss Estella Myers to the homeland on furlough, it was the happy privilege of my husband and myself to have her as a dinner guest. We were thrilled as she told of her many and varied experiences as a missionary in Africa. Then our thoughts returned to incidents of pre-missionary days.

Miss Myers took nurse's training in the Methodist Hospital of Des Moines, Iowa, to prepare her for her work in Africa. She and her family were looking forward to the day she would sail, when her father became quite ill.

Immediately the majority of the members of the church to which we belonged and of which her father was pastor, said: "It seems to us Estella would be serving the Lord better if she stayed home and nursed her father through his illness instead of going to Africa." Naturally this criticism hurt the family, especially the father and Estella. The father urged her to pay no attention to what folk were saying but to continue her preparation to go to Africa. Estella replied: "God doesn't want me to go under such opposition." Therefore, both of them took it to God in prayer and left it all to Him.

Thus the spring and summer passed and autumn came with its usual work. Among the various types of work, Estella helped her sister to harvest a large crop of onions. During the process of harvesting, a slight scratch on her nose developed into septicemia (blood poisoning). How greatly Estella suffered, she alone can testify. The doctors fought a brave but losing battle to save her life and admitted defeat in these words: "We have done all we can." It was then that those of the opposition realized that unless Estella was healed in answer to prayer that God would take her to be with Him. So with one accord they began to pray for her recovery, that God might use her in Africa to His name's honor and glory. God answered these petitions and has blessed the work of His servant in Africa for 37 years, and she plans, with His blessing, to return to Africa.

"THE OPEN BIBLE"

"I am following, with great enthusiasm, all of the broadcasts that are so good and necessary for our lives," are the words from a letter from one of the listeners to our weekly broadcast. Another writes: "I am greatly blessed listening to the broadcast of the Gospel."

Such letters, together with the knowledge that thousands are listening to the Gospel for the first time, cause us to rejoice for the open door for "The Open Bible" on the local station. For a good many months we were unable to get permission to go on the air. But finally it was granted and we now have a 12-minute broadcast each Saturday at 3:45 p. m.

I can almost hear someone say: "But 12 minutes, what can be done in that time?" If well planned, much can be given. Perhaps you would like to know what we have in the program. The announcer puts us on the air by saying that it is the program of "The Open Bible" presented by the Brethren Church of Rio Cuarto. We then have a few words of the theme song that speaks of the Bible as the infallible voice of the Spirit of God. This is followed by a brief Scripture reading from "the open Bible." After one stanza of a song related to the Scripture reading, a message of six or seven minutes follows. Then an invitation song and the closing announcements of Sunday services to close the broadcast.

We hope to be writing from time to time of the blessings of the Lord in this phase of His work in the Argentine. But in the meantime we sincerely ask your cooperation—especially in prayer that God will save many souls through the radio broadcast.—Lynn D. Schrock.

tian graces, including the grace of giving. Our goal is to have a fully self-supporting Brethren Church in Mexico at the earliest possible time. Pray that this may be soon.

Some conclusions—At this juncture a few things seem to be quite clear:

1. Mexico needs the Gospel.
2. There are many born-again people in Mexico.
3. Many more Mexican Christian workers are needed.
4. All of these workers need to be trained for service.
5. In our Brethren testimony, without losing what we have gained along the border, we purpose with God's help to enter into this greater ministry in the interior of Mexico.
6. The time for this work seems to be very short. Six months ago, in a meeting in Chicago, a very influential Mexican Christian gave about two years as the limit of time during which United States citizens might enter Mexico for Christian work.
7. As Brethren we are so late getting started. Oh, that we could have been present here with the Gospel during the last 50 years! But we cannot turn back the clock of time, we cannot buy up past opportunities, and we do not criticize our own past. We only plead that, with sufficient missionaries and money, from this time on you Brethren people will enable us to enter into this great field for gospel testimony.

La Zarca, Mexico — Dr. Russell D. Barnard.

READING AFRICANS REDEEMED

By WILLIAM J. SAMARIN
Missionary on Furlough From Africa

The success of the missionary work now being done in Africa is endangered by an illiterate church. That is, although Africans are being saved by the hearing of the Gospel, an illiterate church will not be able to stand against the "false prophets" and the deceit of the Devil in all its forms. Christians must know for themselves the Word of God in order to grow and to know the difference between right and wrong. Therefore, if the African church remains illiterate, there is little hope that the wonderful work accomplished by the Lord through the testimony of Brethren missionaries will last through many years of "propaganda warfare" conducted by Satan.

That is how the first African church fell. There once was a healthy multitude of Christians in Africa, in Egypt and in various parts of north Africa, but only the leaders were trained and the rest had little opportunity to know for themselves the Word of God, so it was easy for Satan to sidetrack them. By the time Mohammed arose, the Christian church was divided and astray. So lost was the church that they apparently had little courage to persevere against the threat of "worship Allah or die." The Christian church perished, so to speak, and it arose only in the modern period, that is, slightly less than 100 years ago.

Realizing how terribly important is a literate church, in December 1954 the Brethren African Mission adopted as part of its Five-Year Plan the goal of a LITERATE INDIGENOUS CHURCH. Consequently, every pastor, every medical worker—that is, every missionary—is going to do his best in the next five years to achieve this goal.

The first year is almost up, but missionaries have not been idle. Pastors have been making surveys of the various fields to determine the rate of literacy. The Christian leaders ("catechists" they are called in Africa) are being trained to teach people to read. But most important of all, perhaps, is the basic literature necessary to conduct a literacy "campaign." First, 10,000 each of three primers, graded to gradually lead an illiterate to a knowledge of the process of reading the Bible in Sango, are being printed in the United States. (These were three years in the making. They were first duplicated, then mimeographed and used throughout the field to determine their effectiveness.) The Foreign Missionary Society, urged by the missionaries on the field who put the primers on a "must" list, has already expended over $1,000 in order to get these primers to the field as quickly as possible.

Missionaries are now working on easy reading material to help the Christians to read the New Testament.

There is every indication that the present literacy campaign will have many heartwarming results. In the first place, literate Christians will be able to read the Bible in Sango, so being more faithful in obeying the commandments of God. (Many have said: "I thought our catechist was preaching from his own heart, but here is what he said—right here in God's Word!") Moreover, literate Christians will produce more young men who can take up the ministry. One reason there is a shortage of African pastors is that there are not enough well-read young men. There are many who are willing, but apparently too few who are able.

Of course, the Africans themselves are thrilled at the recent emphasis on reading-knowledge. The African leaders are eager to cooperate in seeing that the Christians learn to read. And although many, many people have been embarrassed by the fact that they did not pass the reading examination, they have parted with their little and hard-earned money to buy the primers. Church after church has sent some delegate to the mission stations to buy the primers. Some have come from as far away as 100 miles! Missionary pastors have been flagged down on the roads by Christians who wanted to buy primers.

There is also a thrill for every missionary. As he travels in his pickup down the bumpy African roads, he sees mothers learning to read—children are seen to be teaching adults—and sometimes one even sees a husband teaching his wife.

One by one, or two by two, these African Christians are learning to read, to read God's Word—to the honor and glory of Jesus Christ.

fellow missionaries and our Argentine brethren, and we are certainly looking forward to that. We want to make every day of this new term count for the salvation of those without Christ.. And we want to give our support to the establishing and strengthening of the Argentine church.

If the Lord delays His return and we are permitted another furlough, we shall look forward to seeing you in another five years; but if not, then we shall see you in "that meeting in the air."

IN BRAZIL I'D LIKE TO SEE . . ."

By JOHN W. ZIELASKO

Missionary on Furlough From Brazil

Rev. and Mrs. John W. Zielasko, Ann, James, and Johnny.

One of the most challenging opportunities for Christian missions at the present time is the land of Brazil in South America. It is one of the few frontiers left to be conquered by man, and each year a greater interest is being taken by peoples of the world in this land of the future. For years men have talked of the wealth of the country; they have dreamed of conquering the jungles and of making Brazil a tropical paradise and a first-rate power. The land area, the climate, the natural resources, and the electric potential of the country all help to place man's dream well within the realm of possibility.

One thing is certain, and that is that the population of Brazil is increasing rapidly. Now wherever there are people there is a need for the preaching of the Gospel, and Christians ought to be anxious and ready to meet that need. The door is open; the Christian missionary is welcome. The opposition and resentment to the missionary that is so prevalent in some other Latin-American countries is not to be found in Brazil. However, the situation may not always be thus and we need to take advantage of the opportunities now.

In Brazil I'd like to see another missionary family joining the ranks of those who are already on the field. There are two areas already selected by the missionaries in the Amazon Valley as the next fertile spots to establish a mission station. These areas cannot be occupied without a missionary for each location. Two families are needed, but we would be more than thrilled to hear that one would be ready to go within the next year.

In Brazil I'd like to see the continuation and expansion of our Christian day schools. The future of our work in Brazil lies with our young people. We need to educate them now so that they will be prepared to take positions of leadership in the church and in the community. However, the key to a successful school is the teacher and, frankly, the day schools in Icoraci and Macapa face a teacher shortage. Good Christian teachers are hard to find, and unless our young girls in the churches begin now to prepare for teaching careers there is the possibility that the day-school program will fail. Your prayers are needed that more of our young people will dedicate their lives to the Lord for this work.

I'd like to see in Brazil a Christian nurse. The medical facilities available to the poor (and the majority are poor) are inadequate to say the least. At least 200 of every 1,000 babies born in the Amazon Valley will die before reaching one year of age. The missionaries in Icoraci are constantly being called upon to render assistance to sick people by transporting them to the city for better medical aid. We have seen the seriously ill remaining in their hammocks for weeks without any qualified medical attention whatsoever. A missionary nurse ministering to the physical needs of the people would have unlimited opportunities to reach souls for Christ.

I'd like to see in Brazil a greater distribution of gospel literature. Sects and cults are not lax in this matter. Their literature is widely read and they gain a following because of it. We need to take advantage of the evangelical literature that is available, but more than this we need to print some of our own that will be appropriate to the areas where we are working. A printing press will soon be on its way to Brazil. For this we praise the Lord. Pray that God will enable us to use most effectively this valuable tool in His service.

And finally, we are praying that one day we shall see in Brazil an indigenous Brethren Church. We are working toward that end, but there is a long road to travel before this ideal can be reached. Economically the situation seems hopeless; fortunately the economic is not the most important. When the believers in Brazil are ready spiritually for an indigenous church, the economic situation will take care of itself. The Apostle Paul prayed for the Ephesians thus: "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of him." This is our prayer for the Brazilian church, that they might have a perfect understanding of Jesus Christ and that He might be foremost in their lives.

MY NAME IS JOHN MANE

ually. We praise God for this man, a power, a leader, a deeply spiritual man with many gifts; yet not once has he become puffed up or unbalanced by popularity or in testings by his brethren. He has been the leader of his chapel at Benamkor since 1940, which alone speaks of faithfulness. He has a very keen insight into the mind and methods of his people and has truly earned the place that they give him in the native church.

John has six living children, and he usually has three to five orphans with him. These are a real drain on his time, income, and strength, but rather than see them go into idolatrous homes, he takes them in.

When I see how much we have in the way of means, training, and earning power, and compare that with a man like John Mane who is doing so much with so little, comparatively, I am ashamed. Pray for John and the others who have dedicated their all to our Lord.

NEWS

WARSAW, IND. Dr. Herman A. Hoyt was one of 10 guest speakers at the annual meeting of the Indiana State Conservative Baptist Association which met here Oct. 24-26 at the First Baptist Church.

ROANOKE, VA. The Roanoke Bible Institute reports a 50-percent attendance increase over last year, with 25 of the students from Brethren churches in this area. Two Brethren pastors serve on the faculty, William Howard and Robert E. A. Miller, who is also chairman of the board of trustees.

GOSHEN, IND. The Indiana District Laymen's Fellowship met at the Grace Brethren Church on Oct. 29. Dinner was served by the ladies of the Goshen church. Herman Hein was host pastor.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. The charter membership of the Grace Brethren Church, new home-mission church here, closed with 22 members. Ralph Colburn is pastor.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF. The First Brethren Church celebrated her golden jubilee on Oct. 16. The church was incorporated on Oct. 16, 1905. The featured speaker of the celebration was Rev. N. W. Jennings, who pastored the church in 1920 when the congregation was located in the Los Angeles area. The only remaining charter member is Mrs. Belle Sherer. Glenn O'Neal is pastor.

FORT WAYNE, IND. The prayer retreat for the ministers of the Indiana District was held here at the First Brethren Church Oct. 24-25. Mark Malles was host pastor.

HOBOKEN, N. J. Rev. and Mrs. Chauncey Sheldon, Miss Elizabeth Tyson, and Rev. and Mrs. Donald Hocking will sail from here Nov. 7 aboard the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam, on their way to French Equatorial Africa for their terms of service under the Foreign Missionary Society. Rev. and Mrs. Hocking will spend about a year in France in language study before going on to Africa.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Fred Fogle, missionary on furlough from France, will be doing deputation work in the churches of the Indiana District during the early part of November.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. Brethren Day School education in southern California is making tremendous progress. According to a recent report 1,121 students are enrolled in the Brethren elementary and high schools of California. The breakdown is as follows: Temple City Brethren Church, of which John Aeby is pastor, has an enrollment of 111 pupils, with grades 1 to 8, with 5 teachers, 1 office clerk, and they operate 3 busses; Community Brethren Church of Whittier, of which Ward Miller is pastor, has 191 pupils, with kindergarten through the 7th grade, with 6 teachers, 1 office clerk, and they too operate 3 busses; Grace Brethren Church of San Bernardino, of which Joe Marvin is pastor, has an enrollment of 20, with grades 1 to 4, with 2 teachers; First Brethren Church of Inglewood, of which Glenn O'Neal is pastor, has an enrollment of 86, with kindergarten through the 6th grade, with 3 teachers, and 1 bus operated; First Brethren Church of Long Beach, of which Charles W. Mayes is pastor, has an enrollment of 241 in the elementary schools and 326 in the junior high and high school, which includes grades 7 to 12, with 29 teachers, 3 office secretaries, and 7 busses operated; and the Norwalk Brethren Church, of which Henry Rempel is pastor, has an enrollment of 146, with kindergarten through the 5th grade, with 5 teachers and 1 office clerk. Anyone desiring information with regard to the operation of a Christian day school should contact any one of the aforementioned pastors.

SPECIAL. Sewell Landrum, home missionary in Kentucky, will be doing deputation work in Iowa and Indiana during November.

ROANOKE, VA. The wallet which Robert E. A. Miller, pastor of Ghent Brethren Church, lost on his return from National Fellowship at Portland, Oreg., has been returned with the $100 enclosed. Brother Miller writes: "Marvelous how God works for a poor, dumb preacher with nine kids."

GARWIN, IOWA. The Iowa District WMC met here at the Carlton Brethren Church Oct. 14. Rev. Raymond Kettell was host pastor.

BUENA VISTA, VA. Rev. Kenneth Teague was guest speaker at the First Brethren Church on Oct. 16. Edward Lewis is pastor.

JOHNSTOWN, PA. The cornerstone for the Riverside Brethren Church was laid Oct. 16. The speaker at the special services was Ralph Burns, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Altoona, Pa. Ralph Hall is pastor.

RADFORD, VA. Harold Arrington, pastor of the Vernon Brethren Church, Limestone, Tenn., will close a special campaign Oct. 6 at the Fairlawn Brethren Church. K. E. Richardson is pastor.

DAVENPORT, IOWA. Nancy Jo, weighing 6 lbs., 1½ oz., arrived in the home of Rev. and Mrs. True Hunt on Oct. 9. Nancy Jo has already indicated her willingness to attend the Sunday school of the new home-mission church here where her daddy is "the preacher."

FORT WAYNE, IND. A record Bible-school attendance was established at the First Brethren Church on Oct. 2 when 295 were present. The Fort Wayne church has voted unanimously to look with favor on starting new Brethren testimonies in this city. A prayer meeting was recently held in the home of Bert Leiter, looking forward to the start of a branch Bible school in the northeast section of the city. Mark Malles is pastor.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Sunday-school orders for the Jan.-Mar. 1956 quarter should be mailed at once to the Missionary Herald. Early orders assist the office staff in giving speedy and accurate service.

MANSFIELD, OHIO. Gene Witzky, pastor of the Second Grace Brethren Church here, was ordained to the Christian ministry on Oct. 23. Full details in later issue.

Two Olive Trees

(ZECHARIAH 4:3)

By HAROLD D. PAINTER

Pastor, First Brethren Church
Sunnyside, Wash.

ZECHARIAH'S VISION of the candlestick and the two olive trees is a prophecy to be fulfilled in the end time of this present age. We have the olive trees explained and identification established in verses 11 to 14. Here we see "two anointed ones" the same as the "two witnesses in Revelation 11:3-12. The identity of the "two witnesses" here is not the important point. Let us be concerned with the purpose of God. That which marks their ministry is power.

The prophecy of Zechariah came at a time when real purpose was lacking and energies were lagging. Because of great opposition and outstanding adverse circumstances they had practically stopped the work of rebuilding the temple.

It seems that the continuation of the work would be up to Zerubbabel, who, receiving his power from God, would lay the "headstone" which would finish the work, amid the shouts of the people. Zechariah is urging them to get busy at the work by inspiring them with hopes of a glorious future. The whole picture is indicative of the fulfillment of the ministry of the "two witnesses" of Revelation and of the coming of the real "headstone" (Christ).

In considering the two olive trees we should see the eight visions described by the prophet as coming to him in a night as one harmonious picture. This series of visions apply to God's chosen people in their connection with the world, the dangers of their errors, and God's eternal purpose concerning the world powers which was surrounding the restored remnant. As the visions are described and explanations are given, we can see the great purpose of God and the future that awaits the church.

There is a marked warning of the past and a distinct call to repentance. Day does not dawn nor night shadows fall more surely than God's favor on His people when they are in His will. God has not changed. The world is still operated under God on the same principles. Repentance is turning from sin unto God. We need this today! Repentance not only to the removal of guilt but restoration of character as well. If we would serve Him in the center of His will, it must begin with conversion. Then there must be real zeal and a renewed consecration. If Satan resists, pleading at the bar of conscience to crush and hinder, let us remember that Christ is for us. His victory is our victory. It is Christ supreme. All forces are under His control. Here is comfort for times of depression and fear. Are there personal troubles? Are you distressed because things are not going like they should? Take courage; in the darkest hour we can pray and the heavens are opened.

The Lord's message to Zerubbabel (vs. 6) would tell him that the work will be accomplished through the grace of God alone. Not by might! Not even a great army! Nor by human means however potent. The messenger does not say just what is to be done, but whatever it is, it is "by my spirit." Only by the aid of the Spirit could these things come to pass. The oil in the bowl to light the lamps comes not by human agency, but directly from the olives.

Man's idea is to fix and limit the boundaries. The visible church may be so outlined and measured, but not the invisible. Truth is not measured by what we believe nor godliness by the piety of our own little group to which we belong. Neither can we illustrate God's principles by man's example. The capacity and the means are lacking. So the work now undertaken shall be supported by God's means.

Zerubbabel must surely have been greatly discouraged when he thought of how much work there was to do, the mountainous and formidable opposition, and the feeble means at his disposal.

"Who art thou, O great mountain? . . . thou shalt become a plain."

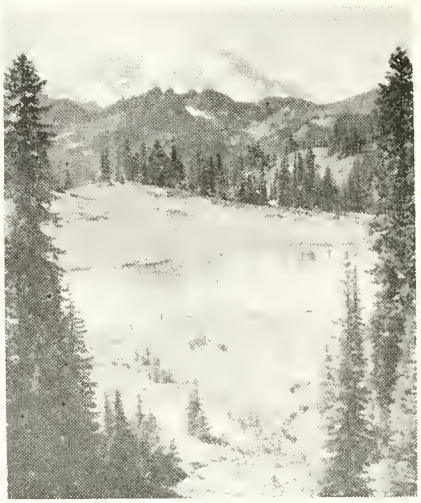
How often we see great mountains to discourage us. Is not this the work of the adversary?

"Got any rivers you think are uncrossable?
Got any mountains you can't tunnel through?
God specializes in things thought impossible,
And He can do what no other power can do."

Thank God! The prince of this world is judged (John 16:8-11).

"And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive branches? And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord. Then said he, These are the two anointed ones" (Zech. 4:12-14).

The prophet now having seen the chief point in the mystic olive trees changes the question from "trees" to "branches." "Knowest thou not?" The messenger desires to impress upon him the source of power. The oil evidently dropped of itself from the fruit-bearing branches into the tubes or sprouts and so to the central reservoir.



"Then said he, These are the two anointed ones" (vs. 14), literally, the two sons of oil. It is thought that the expression "sons of" often denotes a property or a quality, as used in "sons of Belial," and here used "sons of oil" could mean people possessed of oil, or oil bearers, channels

MUSTARD AND MOUNTAINS

"Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you" (Matt. 17:20).

This confident assertion of our Lord is a blunt denunciation of the prevailing unbelief of His day, and of ours. It is more than a promise to those who believe. It is a rebuke of any professing followers of Christ who fit the description He had just assigned to His disciples, "O faithless and perverse generation" (Matt. 17:17). Their faithlessness had just been manifested in their impotence to repel the forces of the Devil. Jesus asserts that not only shall demons flee, but the very physiognomy of the landscape shall be altered by the man who has faith in God.

The stark reality of the statement cannot be softened by any maneuvers of exegetics. Inquiry into original languages and oriental customs only reenforces the blunt meaning which appears on the very surface. We cannot minimize the promise nor spiritualize the meaning. What Jesus said to His disciples in Aramaic is quite literally what He appears to have said in our English Bibles—that the man with faith as a grain of mustard seed can command mountains to move about from one place to another, and the mountains will get up and move. In fact, Jesus pointed out a particular mountain, "this mountain," the Mount of Transfiguration from which He had just descended. We identify it today as Jebel Jermuk (I. S. B. E.), rising 4,000 feet above the sea as the highest mountain in Palestine, and the most conspicuous feature of the Galilean landscape.

The principle behind this assertion is the fact that spiritual power is greater than material hindrances. When in the providence of God it best serves His purpose to move mountains about, His believing servant may merely call upon Him to move them, and they shall be moved. Such occurrences have happened before, and are yet prophecied for the future. In the rebellion of Korah against Moses, the earth "clave asunder . . . and swallowed them up" (Num. 16:31-32). It is stated that when Messiah comes to reign, "every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low" (Isa. 40.4). If these things are true of the hills of the earth, how much more the spiritual "mountains," the obstructions to Christian life and service, shall be removed by Almighty God in response to the plea of faith!

In this age of power, which extends from our home appliances to automotives, to atomic fission, the preaching of the Gospel of Christ calls for a demonstration of the Spirit and of power. The power which belongs to God only has become available to man. The power of the material universe has been tapped for human consumption by the scientific laboratory, but the power of the spiritual realm which may only be tapped by faith, has been practically undeveloped in our present experience. Moving mountains by bulldozers and atom bombs is now a common occurrence. Moving mountains by spiritual power is virtually unknown; yet our Lord used this method exclusively, and recommended it as the most efficient of all methods.

The object of effective faith is revealed in the incident of the barren fig tree (Mark 11:12-14, 20-22). When the disciples wondered at the withering of the tree in response to Jesus' condemnation of it, He told them, "Have faith in God."

The power of effective faith is demonstrated in the stilling of the tempestuous sea (Matt. 8:23-27). The marveling disciples exclaimed: "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!" Are we to suppose that the realm of Him who is master of sea and sky ends where He sets His foot ashore? Is the power which controls mountains of water and billows of air to be baffled by like amounts of sand and stone? If Jesus meant anything by His oft-repeated admonitions to have faith, He meant that we should recognize that which He had so conclusively demonstrated, that the power of God through faith is superior to any conceivable combination of material obstacles. It remains simply for the disciple to call upon his Lord to see the obstruction miraculously removed.

1. FAITH THAT FAILS.

The disciples, on the occasion that leads to our text, had exercised at least a degree of faith. They had tried to heal the demon-possessed boy but had failed. The degree of faith which they had used is translated in our text as "unbelief." Actually, our Lord called it, "little faith," as the margin of your Bible indicates. But "little faith" practically amounts to "unbelief" when it is insufficient to cope with the obstacle at hand. Little faith is good for some things, but it is severely limited. For instance, little faith will obtain one's physical necessities: "Shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?" (Matt. 6:33). But the disciples had at least two occasions to discover that faith which suffices for ordinary needs is not always sufficient to meet the sterner tests. On the fitful sea, Jesus had attributed their fear to their "little faith" (Matt. 8:26). In their failure to heal the lunatic son, Jesus' explanation was "because of your little faith" (Matt. 17:20). Little faith may obtain the ordinary provisions of food and clothing for the body, but leaves the spirit fearful in the face of great danger, and futile in the face of great need. Little faith is the babbling of the new-born babe, but it is not the forceful speech of a full-grown man. "Little faith will take your souls to heaven, but great faith will bring heaven to your souls," says C. H. Spurgeon. It is not the little faith, but the faith as a grain of mustard for which God calls.

2. FAITH THAT SUCCEEDS.

"But," someone will ask, "is not 'faith as a grain of mustard seed' meant to be little faith?" So many have supposed, although our text would instruct us otherwise. The little faith and the mustard faith obviously cannot be the same when our Lord places them in such definite contrast. The first is His explanation for spiritual failure, the second His key to accomplishing all things. What then, we may earnestly inquire, is the meaning of "faith as a grain of mustard seed"?

Perhaps the whole point of the story has been missed by throwing the emphasis in the wrong direction. The significance of the mustard seed is not is size, but its potential. It may be small, but it is living, and placed into the earth it will draw upon the power of the soil until "it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it" (Mark 4:32). It not only has spectacular development, but usefulness and blessing to others as well. We are told that there are several such varieties of mustard in the land of Palestine which have small seeds, but which under favorable conditions will grow in a few months time into tall herbs, reaching from 10 to 12 feet in height. The rapid growth of this annual herb is always a striking fact. The birds readily alight on its branches, not to build nests, but to eat the seeds (I. S. B. E.). However, the lesson from the mustard seed is lost when it is placed in a small globule of plastic and hung as a pious fetish from a necklace or watch fob, for such a seed will no more become a source of usefulness and blessing than will a meager faith which is hoarded within one's bosom and contemplated for some value within itself. Mustard seeds are to be placed in the earth; faith is to be actively placed in the omnipotent God, who shall then be enabled to manifest His limitless power in behalf of those who trust Him.

Examples of the power of active faith may be found abundantly in the history of the church, which sprang from an insignificant beginning to gigantic proportions, and has brought blessing to all the nations of the earth. It is also illustrated in the lives of countless individuals who have turned from lives of sin to lives of faith, and have shaken continents and molded history for God. An active faith in the living God is the core of every true success and spiritual attainment.

3. THE FAITH WE NEED.

The Bible is a continuous record of spiritual triumphs through faith. The Christian church today is writing a record of practical infidelity. "God helps those who help themselves," we say, explaining our frenzied busyness and shameful prayerlessness. "After all, we must be practical," we hear, which all too often means: "I can trust God for some things, but this job is so important that I'd better take care of it myself." Planning has taken the place of prayer. Organization is killing the organism. Business machines clutter our church offices until they bear more resemblance to a brokerage firm than to a house of prayer. Instead of begetting live babes in Christ, we are producing an assembly-line herd of mechanical robot Christains that need all the ingenuity of industrial science and Hollywood combined to keep them functioning.

Sometimes one wonders how Peter and Paul ever managed without a single one of our multitudinous gadgets. Yet they conquered the world for Christ in a few brief years. If our equipment increases our efficiency in turning men to Christ, then it is justifiable. But most generally it does not. And the reason it does not is that spiritual results are not produced by machines but by God. They are not achieved through fervor but through faith. What we need is not more machines in the office but more mustard in the Christians. We need men and women with warm hearts for the Lord, whose experience with Christ is real to them, and whose faith, regardless of its apparent size, is actively placed in the omnipotent resources of the living God. When this point is reached in our private lives, in our homes, and in our churches, we will have discovered the power of the faith in God which moves mountains.

through which the oil could flow to others.

How I praise Thee, precious Saviour,
That Thy love laid hold of me;
Thou hast saved and cleansed and filled me
That I might Thy channel be.

Emptied that Thou shouldest fill me,
A clean vessel in Thy hand;
With no power but as Thou givest
Graciously with each command.

Channels only, blessed Master,
But with all Thy wondrous power
Flowing through us, Thou canst use us
Every day and every hour.

MUSEUM OR MENAGERIE?

A modernist, who believed in evolution, met an old Christian man one day, and both discussed their belief. Said the modernist: "You are not old-fashioned enough to believe the Bible surely?" "Yes, I am, thank God," replied the Christian. "Well, you ought to be in the museum," said the modernist. "And you are modern enough to believe that man evolved from a monkey?" said the Christian. "Yes," was the reply." "Well, my friend," said the Christian, "you ought to be in the menagerie." The monkey theory is not only an ignominy, but a libel on the perfect work of God.—Bible Expositor.

A LESSON IN BOOKKEEPING

By THE LATE DR. J. C. BEAL

Almost everyone is familiar enough with business principles to know that balance sheets and record of accounts have a part in bookkeeping. We are not so much concerned with balance sheets as we are with the record of accounts. There are people who today will take a friend into a business establishment and say to the proprietor: "Now give this person what he wants, and charge it to my account." It is in this sense, based on the Book of Philemon, that we desire to think of bookkeeping.

"If he hath wronged thee, oweth thee ought, put that on mine account" (Philem. 18). These are the words written by Paul under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit while a prisoner in Rome and sent to Philemon by a man called Onesimus, concerning whom the message was written. Philemon was a very influential Christian who lived at Colosse.

God not only used Paul as His instrument to reach Philemon, but He also used him as the instrument through which Onesimus, the slave, found fellowship with God the Father. The fact that Onesimus was a slave does not mean that he was a colored man, for in that day men of the finest class of people were made slaves when the country in which they lived was overrun by the enemy, and the enemy's army was strong enough to overtake them.

Apparently there had come into the household of Philemon an unprofitable slave—Onesimus. Because of something that happened, this slave ran away from his master; then found himself in Rome and in touch with the Apostle Paul—Onesimus was led into fellowship with Jesus Christ through Paul's ministry. Paul then sent him back to his master (a wonderful spirit manifested by Paul).

In order to understand the story better, we must understand some of the human history of that time. A slave of that time had no right to any hiding place, but might make an appeal to a friend of the master to plead for him. The owner was in absolute possession of the slave. However, the slave could be adopted by the owner as a son (this was sometimes done) and in this way made free.

Man originally was God's property, but he ran away from his rightful owner. We find this record in Genesis. Therefore man needs to be brought back into fellowship with his owner. Reformation or resolutions do not hide the stain of sin. Law does not bring man back to God, for law demands certain things and is rigid in its enforcement. But grace steps in and makes possible the change in man's heart which is necessary for salvation. It is only under grace that the individual has a right to appeal for help. We may appeal to Jesus whom God calls His partner (vs. 17), and through faith we are begotten as sons. We cannot understand how this is possible, but God's Word says so; therefore we can accept it as truth. In being free from sin, we have the right to expect the power to be kept from sin and to be free from the power of sin. In this new relationship we do not return to God as slaves but as believers in Christ.

Paul requests that Onesimus be received as a brother beloved (vs. 16). The reason man can be begotten of God and have this fellowship is because of Christ's own name and for Christ's sake. This can be illustrated in a story of a boy who went into World War I from a very wealthy home. The parents were grief-stricken when they were advised of the fact that their son had been killed in action. After a few years their wounds were healed somewhat, but they became rather hardened by the thought of some who were unfortunate in having to return from the battlefield with scarred and mutilated bodies. One day a poor, dirty-looking soldier appeared at the home of these parents and asked for help. The father rather carelessly refused help, feeling there were entirely too many calls for help from returned soldiers. However, the forlorn-looking soldier pulled a letter out of his pocket and handed it to the father. After opening it, this is what he read: "Dear Father, the bearer of this letter made my last moments easier and helped me to die. Receive him and help him for Charles' sake." It makes all the difference in the world when we come to God as lost sinners by believing in the only begotten Son of God, and He graciously receives us for Jesus' sake (Acts 4:12).

How are things put on the account of Jesus? Jesus answers for our sins —they are put on His account. "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh" (Rom. 8:3); "For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21). Every man and woman owes God their very life because Jesus Christ says: "Father, I have borne their sins; I have taken their place on the cross of Calvary; I have paid the price, and if that man owes You anything, put it on My account."

Not only does He answer for our sins, but He takes them away. "Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father" (Gal. 1:4). "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures" (I Cor. 15:3). In the Old Testament sacrifices two goats were used. The one they killed and used the blood in their offering for their sin, signifying the One who was to come and bear our sin and die for them; the other, the priest laid his hands on its head, pronounced the sins of the people upon it, and it was then taken into the wilderness and left there—signifying the "bearing away" of our sins as far as the east is from the west. When you are a sinner, your sins stand between you and God. When you are a born-again believer, God stands between you and your sins. What a wonderful difference!

Christ not only became our sin-bearer and carried our sins away, but He is now our Advocate interceding for us, for we do sin from day to day (I John 2:1-2).

He also takes our cares and tells us to put them on Him—our great burden-bearer (Matt. 11:28). When we are tempted to be discouraged, we should think of Paul. "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanks-

Grafton, W. Va.

We were fortunate in having Crusade Team Two here Sept. 4-18 for two weeks of evangelistic meetings. Truly we were impressed with the youthfulness of the team, comprised of Evangelist Dean Fetterhoff and Truymond Haddix, and the good influence they had upon our young people, as well as older folk. The messages given by Evangelist Fetterhoff were exceptionally good and appropriate for our day and church. Their ability to give several and varied numbers of special music was most helpful and greatly appreciated. The direct results of the meeting were these: there were six who made first-time decisions. There were 21 who stepped forward to rededicate their lives to the Lord. We believe that it has been most worthwhile to have this team with us.—Lee Crist, pastor.

Everett, Pa.

Rev. Walter A. Lepp, Rev. Charles Bergerson, and Mr. Lorenzo Durham were used of the Lord in a great evangelistic campaign in the Everett Grace Brethren Church Sept. 25-Oct. 16. The meeting was far greater than anything we have ever witnessed here in Everett. We praise the Lord for the many souls that received Christ as Saviour. There were 70 first-time confessions of Christ as personal Saviour and many other decisions made by God's people for a closer walk with Him. The men and women of the church are planning a follow-up program which we believe will be a real blessing to them and also a great spiritual help to these new babes in Christ.—Homer Lingenfelter, pastor.

Compton, Calif.

Evangelist Bill Smith conducted a series of meetings here September 25 to October 9. Prior to his arrival here the BYF group had distributed about 1,800 leaflets from door to door advertising the services. Many personal calls were made on prospects by members of our church.

The prayer meeting each evening before the service was well attended. The Lord blessed abundantly in answer to prayer. A total of 19 public decisions were made in response to the invitations given by Bro. Smith. The average attendance for the two weeks was 81. There were many visitors in our church for the first time.

Mr. George Link from Whittier was in charge of the music. He is a teacher of music in the Whittier Christian Elementary School, and is excellent in evangelistic songleading. He is also a splendid soloist and musician. There were delegations from South Gate, Whittier, Paramount, Bellflower, and Long Beach.

Bill Smith preached powerful messages from the Word of God that the Lord was pleased to use in bringing about concern and conviction in the hearts of many who attended. Some of the long-time members of the church said this was the most spiritual revival the Compton church has had for a long time. All praise goes to our wonderful Saviour who is willing to work through those whose lives are yielded to Him.—Dennis Holliday, pastor.

giving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:6-7). You ask how Paul can be so sure—read verse 5: "The Lord is at hand." Paul says by prayer ye shall overcome. Oh, if we would just learn how to ask God for the things which are ours, He would do far more than we ever dream of.

Jesus put our sin on His account by standing by us in death. "For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings" (Heb. 2: 10). Jesus met death and came away the victor.

A Scotchman lay dying, and his wife asked him if he were not afraid. He replied: No, lass; why should I be afraid? I know Jesus, and Jesus knows me." It does make a difference when we have a Captain—a perfect Captain—to lead us through the valley of the shadow of death.

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray that the reorganization of the Altoona Grace Brethren Sunday School by Rev. Etling will make it more effective in its ministry.

2. Praise the Lord that funds have been supplied and construction started on the new Seattle, Wash., church.

3. Pray for Rev. Vernon Harris as he has assumed the pastorate at Washington Heights, Roanoke, Va. Also pray that the family may become permanently situated as to living quarters.

4. Praise the Lord for the large number of young people recently baptized at Parkersburg, W. Va., and pray that the work will register greater growth since moving into the new church building nearing completion.

5. Pray for the new pastor, Wayne Flory, the Christian day school work and the plans for a new sanctuary at the Stearns Street Brethren Church, Long Beach, Calif.

6. Remember this is the last month of the home-mission offering period, and pray for an offering sufficient to meet the great need!

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Praise God for the record number of young people who have enrolled in Grace Seminary and College this fall.

2. Pray for spiritual wisdom on the part of the faculty and administration in guiding the lives of these young people committed to their care.

3. The offerings for the general fund are the lowest in many months! Pray that the Lord will lay the responsibility of the monthly offering on the hearts of an increasing number of God's people.

4. Pray that the Lord will provide the necessary funds for the new building so greatly needed on the Grace campus.

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Praise the Lord for restoring Mrs. Jack Churchill to health after her operation. Pray for the Churchills and Mrs. Sickel, who, according to their schedule, should now be en route by boat to Argentina.

2. Pray for the Marvin Goodman, Jr., family who were scheduled to leave France for their field in Africa November 1.

3. Pray for Rev. and Mrs. C. B. Sheldon and Miss Elizabeth Tyson as they sail for France on November 7 and then fly on to Africa.

4. Pray for Rev. and Mrs. Don Hocking who are now finishing their packing in anticipation of their sailing on November 7 for France where they will engage in language study for approximately one year.

5. Pray for lasting results from the investigative trip into Mexico by Dr. Barnard and Brethren Haag, Howard, and Edmiston. Pray that we may see great progress in the expansion of our Brethren gospel testimony in Mexico.

6. Pray that the results of the recent election in Brazil will cause no hindrance to our work there where we have enjoyed complete freedom to preach the Word.

7. Pray for the George Cone, Jr., family as they continue to faithfully labor in France in the absence of the Fogle family who are on furlough.

8. Pray that the way may soon be opened for Miss Cochran and Miss Emmert to go from France to their work in Africa.

9. Pray for additional space in Honolulu in which to care for those who are coming to the services.

10. Pray for continued freedom and liberty for our workers in preaching the Gospel in Argentina. Praise the Lord for keeping them safe in the recent time of poltical change.

11. Pray for our largest home-mission offering yet, that the work of the Brethren Church may be expanded at home and abroad.

MISSIONARY HERALD—

1. Pray that the new denominational office building might be under roof before the winter weather comes.

2. Pray for the building committee that wisdom might be given to them in the many decisions that must be made.

3. Pray that the offering to publications, which is coming in from the churches, will be sufficient to meet the needs of the expanding Missionary Herald program.

EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE—

1. Pray for the teams as they fill the heavy fall schedule which is listed under "Pray for These Meetings."

2. Pray for Scott Weaver, chairman of the Crusade, as he shoulders great responsibilities and decisions.

WMC—

1. Pray for an emphasis on the spiritual objectives by every lady as we participate in the WMC program in coming months.

2. Pray that the influence of WMC shall be one of blessing to each local church.

3. Pray for special guidance for the national, district, and local organizations—that all might be as unto the Lord!

SMM—

1. Pray for the local and district officers as they make plans for the winter program.

2. Pray for the new SMM groups (Clayhole, Ky., and Washington, D. C.) that have just been organized. Pray that the girls may be faithful in their daily quiet time.

3. Pray for more WMC members who will be willing to cooperate in the patroness training program.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD—

1. Pray for wisdom and strength for the director, Rev. Etling.

2. Pray for God's special blessing on all meetings held by the director.

3. Pray for funds and necessary maintenance and equipment needed to carry on this work.

"AS UNTO THE LORD" Col. 3:23

AS UNTO THE LORD IN MY PRAYER LIFE

By Mrs. Frank Lindower,
National Prayer Chairman

To my WMC sisters everywhere:—Do you find in your busy world—as I do—that too often we are in a religious hurry in our devotions? How much time do YOU spend in devotions daily? Can it not easily be reckoned in minutes? On the other hand did you ever know of any eminently holy person who did not spend much of their time in prayer? Did you ever see anyone who "exhibited" much of the spirit of prayer who did not devote much time "in the secret place"? Someone who learned of this great need from experience said: "Fall upon your knees and grow there!" It has been said that one of the elemental principles of Christianity is that no large growth in holiness was ever gained by one who did not take time to be often, and long—alone with God.

Is it not true in our own experience that many times our business for Jesus actually separates us from Jesus? I dare you to keep a diary for one week. On one side write the things you do each day for Jesus, and on the other side, write the time you spend daily in personal communion with the Lord Jesus! God bless you good if you are satisfied with the results. And God help us if the results are not pleasing to the Heavenly Father.

The psalmist wrote several thousand years ago: "Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him." This is in direct contrast to the restlessness we experience in our own lives and as seen in others. Never has there been such a noisy and restless generation as ours. The cry is: "Faster, faster—on land, on sea, over the earth, under the waters, in the air." It seems at times as if we are all trying to help one another to avoid stillness. Christians are deeply affected by the noisiness of our age. To such comes the admonition "Be still before the Lord."

We suppose that all Christians know that the "Our Father" is found in Matthew 6, but how many of these same people are aware that Jesus also said, in the same chapter, "But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly."

Our Lord (is He really our "Lord"?) tells us to seek the secret place of prayer. And He would have us remain there until we become still in heart before Him. If the bustle of the world and the restlessness of soul follow you after this, then let the Lord examine you and point out to you what is wrong in your relationship toward Him.

May our WMC ladies see that the problem which confronts us today is not so much to expand our program of Christian work, or to increase the volume of our labors, or to speed up our work; our problem is rather to develop and strengthen the inner side of our Christian lives, to pray for a less strained, a more real and substantial type of Christianity, one which will better stand the test of daily living in this feverishly restless generation.

God's kingdom will not advance by our churches getting more full of people but by our people getting more filled with God. Ladies, let us advance this year on our knees—as unto the Lord!

Oh, WMC member, you sigh and languish
And mourn your lack of power;
Heed ye this gentle whisper:
"Could ye not watch one hour?"

For fruitlessness and blessing
There is no royal road;
The power for holy service
Is intercourse with God!

Or e'er a word of action
Hath stained its snowy scroll,
Bring the new day to Jesus
And dedicate the whole.

The fear not for the record,
He surely will indite
Whatever may betide thee,
It shall be, must be, right.

Soon the last golden sunrise
Shall deck the eastern sky;
Soon the last watch be ended,
Redemption draweth nigh.

Then may this bright incentive
Within our spirits burn,
It may be that this morning
The Bridegroom shall return.

M'BAIKI WOMEN ON THE MARCH

By Mrs. Lester Kennedy, M'Baiki, Africa

Ding, ding, ding—there goes the chapel bell. It is not really a bell but an old tire rim, but it surely does chime out. Come along with me to one of our "Women of the Good News" meetings (WMC). Do not forget your songbook and Bible! We will take the short cut. You cannot see because of the tall grass? Do not worry; you will become accustomed to that in time. Be careful as you cross the bridge! It is really just a log that they have thrown in the water; however, if you do fall in, you will only go in up to your knees. This is the chapel at the top of the hill. You can see some women gathered outside, sitting on the ground reading their New Testaments, while there are others coming down the path carrying their books on their heads. It is 4 p. m. and time to start the meeting, so we all go inside.

That is Marie Yakoussi who has charge of the meetings. She is the pastor's wife. After we sing a few songs (and how they love to sing), we will have prayer and testimony time. There are three who will give testimonies today. What do they say? One says that she is happy that she is trusting the Lord, for just recently her little girl fell in the fire and was badly burned. The Lord has seen fit to heal her, and how happy she is that she knows Jesus as her Saviour. Another says a long time ago they did not have the Lord as their guide, but now they are so happy that they know the Way. Next, a song while they present their offerings. You can see each woman getting her money from a corner of her dress where she has tied it in a neat little knot. What will be done with the money? Marie explains that the women have themselves decided to pay for a sign to be placed in front of the church. The sign will be able to point out to others that this is a house of God, and when there are visitors in the village, they will know where to come to worship and hear the Word of God. All of the women are happy about this because they know that the money will be used in a good way.

Marie will bring the message today. She tells about Rachel and her stealing her father's gods and hiding them. In the application she tells us that we are not to take other "gods" and try to hide them, for the Lord knows and sees all.

After prayer our meeting is dismissed. We had a good group—55. Has the meeting been a blessing? It always is to me. It is real joy to gather with these women to hear their notes of praise and also to see them willing to take an active part in the work. Once they were in darkness, and their sin was much blacker than their skin, but now, praise the Lord, they have found the Light—even the Lord Jesus Christ!

Remember to pray for these women. How? Pray that they might be kept from the temptations that lurk on every hand. Pray that they might grow in the Lord and become real testimonies in their villages.

On August 7 we had a dedication service at which time the sign was "planted" in front of the church—"Eglise Evangelique des Freres—M'Baiki" (Evangelical Brethren Church) with blue letters on natural red wood.

WMC Missionary Miriam Churchill Undergoes Major Surgery

The return to Argentina of Mrs. Loree Sickel and the Churchill family was delayed approximately one month by the sudden illness of Mrs. Churchill. After leaving Southern California for New York it was necessary for Mrs. Churchill to consult a doctor. He recommended immediate major surgery. His recommendation was followed and the operation was performed at Stockton, Calif. The Lord wonderfully undertook for Miriam so that she was able to travel in a few weeks. As soon as she was able the party continued on to New York and sailed for Argentina on October 26. Let us remember our missionary in daily prayer that she may soon be completely restored to her former strength.

YOUR GIFT—OUR SCHOOL

By Miss Angie Garber

Somebody with a vision must have started it, that project for a school in Navajoland; and all over our country women sacrificed to see its fulfillment. Every block was purchased by those gifts of love, and every beam and nail. No wonder we, who have seen struggling WMC groups faithfully gather in monthly offerings, cannot look on those blocks and beams of our new building without thanking the Lord for His own who gave for this work. And we want to say publicly to every one of our dear sisters in the Lord, "May He reward you abundantly."

School began September 5 with a record enrollment of 38. We have had a couple of drop-outs, but each teacher has plenty of pupils to keep her busy. And we have been busy! The opening weeks were spent mostly in review, relearning last year's lessons. But very soon we were able to get into our material for this year and we find, as always, the children are eager to be in school and anxious to learn. It is satisfying to see their minds grasp the new lessons and become acquainted with unfamiliar material.

Our theme verse for the year is II Corinthians 5:15: "And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them and rose again." We emphasize daily living for the Lord. Our theme song, "I'll Live for Him," stresses the same idea. How I wish you could hear these brown-skinned children sing that song of devotion! "My life, my love, I give to Thee, Thou Lamb of God Who died for me; O, may I ever faithful be, My Savior and my God." It is thrilling to hear such a prayer on Navajo lips.

We have half an hour of chapel every morning for the schoolchildren. On Tuesdays and Thursdays Mr. Adams is in charge and all of the people on the Mission station come for a service. When we go into our classrooms our older students spend the first 15 or 20 minutes reading from the Bible. They enjoy it very much. We began at Genesis 1 the first of the year and read the easier chapters. When we finished the book we made a brief outline of the material covered. We have begun Exodus and plan to do the same with every book we read. The children are not only learning to read the Bible but are storing up in their minds the wonderful

Presenting this month—

MRS. IVA CASHMAN

President of the Iowa District

Hi! there! This is the Iowa District WMC bringing greetings to the sisters of the other Women's Missionary Councils. One group consists of six councils who are affiliated with the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, and one cooperating council from an independent Brethren church. The total membership of our district as reported last year was 175, but this included the inactive members, as well as those who are active in the work. Although we are widely separated as to distance, we still meet three times a year as a district—in a fall rally, a spring rally and at the time of district conference.

These dear women assisted substantially in getting their president to the very splendid National Conference at Portland. There we were privileged to receive firsthand knowledge of the plans and aspirations of our National Board for the coming year. The next problem for the Iowa prexy was how to transfer this knowledge and enthusiasm to the local councils.

A district officers' and local presidents' meeting was called for September 15. We met at the Marshalltown YWCA (a central location for all of us), with almost a hundred percent attendance. After a season of prayer, we spent the rest of our day talking over our problems and planning the program for our fall rally. The Lord gave us a beautiful day and a real blessing when we met at the Carlton Brethren Church, Garwin, on October 14. Our own Miss Estella Myers, of the Pleasant Grove Church at North English, much improved in health, brought us the message of the morning on "Highlights of My Thirty-seven Years in Africa." Some had never had a graphic firsthand picture of the beginning of our work in Africa; others needed to have memories refreshed. Miss Myers told us of the many steps of progress made through the years in the spiritual training of converts, the progress in the medical work, the educational work and in the building work. The message was a real challenge to those at home to increase our praying and our giving and to continue to "hold the ropes" for those who have been called to this far-off foreign field. Many expressions of appreciation of our sister's labor in Africa were heard, and we could almost visualize the many rewards that will be hers when her work here is finished.

More than 70 women were present at this rally, but the North English group carried away our beautiful new Honor Attendance Plaque with 65 percent of their membership present. This lovely plaque was provided through our project committee of which Mrs. Vernon Schrock, our vice-president, is chairman. We predict some competition for this plaque at the spring rally.

One of our projects for this year is the providing of a new range to aid Mrs. Lynn Schrock in serving the meals to the visiting delegates at conference time in Argentina.

STYLES OF THE WORLD AND YOUR CHILDREN

Do blue jeans and shorts have any place in the Christian girl's wardrobe? In answering this question one could arbitrarily say yes or no, and then open himself to challenge from those who disagree. Since the Christian's final court of appeal is God's Word, and no child of God will argue with "thus saith the Lord," it is to that Word we'll turn.

Mrs. Althea Miller

The Bible standard for the dress of Christian women and girls is modesty. It is a foregone conclusion that modesty must begin with mother if daughter is to have the right example. I Timothy 2:9-10 says: "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety, not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array. But (which becometh women professing godliness), with good works." Have you ever fully realized that modesty and good works are an adornment to the Christian woman? God is not against adornment when it is what He has commanded.

In your wildest imaginations can you say that a woman walking down the street in shorts, puffing on a cigarette (these usually go together), is modestly dressed? How can that little girl walking by her side learn the A, B, C's of modesty when Mother doesn't set the example?

Deep within the being of every thinking woman is a God-given knowledge that some things are modest, some are not. When she ignores that warning bell (many Christian women do), and casts away the priceless possession of modesty, she suffers irreparable loss, and does dishonor to the Lord and her husband.

There's nothing more important in the life of a growing girl than the example of a godly and modest mother. Your standards will be hers. If you differ now, it might be wise to take an inventory of your inconsistencies of life which nullify those standards. Set the standards when your child is young (before she's born is best), stick to them personally, and insist upon them firmly, but in love.

Using God's definition of modesty, do you honestly believe your daughter can wear shorts, no matter how hot it is, or how young she is? Our girls had some shorts given them. I foolishly allowed them to wear them around the house. One day one of the girls rode her bike down to the shopping center with a neighbor girl. That marked the end of shorts around here.

The 20th century has witnessed the ever-increasing desire of women and girls to wear men's style clothing. Why women want to ape men and look masculine is beyond my comprehension. But on the basis of modesty, there are some things to be said for the "pedal pusher" version of blue jeans. The tree climbing set; those who help hoe and weed a garden; the be, in the basement of the Mission building.

The center room of our new building is our chapel now and we have more room for it. As there are no steps, it is easier for the older people to enter. On either side is a classroom. We have plenty of space for all of our students and they especially appreciate the division into older and younger groups. The old schoolroom in the Mission building is now a lovely dining room with shining new tables which the children enjoy after eating on their desks for four years.

I told them how you women of our churches sent the funds to build them a nice school and asked them to write their appreciation. Here are some of their comments expressed in their own peculiar style.

Sue—I sure like our new school building. It is very nice to have two classrooms, so we don't have to be crowd in one room with the little children.

Jimmie—I like the new schoolhouse and dining room and new tables.

Amos—I am glad to have dining room and the other little children have their school, and I am happy we have our school too. We have 3d, 4th, 5th, and 6th.

Jack—I like my new school building. I'm happy that the people make our schoolhouse. We learn hard in our classroom this year. We learn arithmetic, spelling and language. We go to church in the new schoolhouse.

Bessie—I like my school very well and the other children like too. Our dining room are pretty too and our new church too. May God bless you.

Thus you see we are all really thankful for the building your sacrificial gifts made possible, and it stands as a monument out here in Navajoland to your love and devotion to the One true God.

CHRISTIAN HOME AND MARRIAGE FORUM

hiking or picnicing teen-age girl all seem more modestly clothed for the activity on hand when pedal pushers are the order of the day. Activity determines the use of this type attire.

Good taste and feminine nature itself would rule out the use of any type trouser for the young lady, married or unmarried, and the more mature lady and mother. One is swept with revulsion at the sight of young and old women walking the streets and shopping centers dressed in unflattering men's style clothing!

Christian girls and women must wage a constant battle against the tide of worldly fashions which engulf the modern, godless female. If "they" are wearing it or doing it, that is a pretty safe indication that we had better not. "They" are conformed to the world. We are to be conformed to the image of God's Son.

If every woman were "fully persuaded in [her] own mind" on the basis of God's revealed will through His Word, there isn't a problem which could not be resolved. Do we want God's mind on everyday affairs? Then look to The Book. It is practical, and you'll never be a happy Christian if you live contrary to His will. "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an ensample to them that believe in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity" (I Tim. 4:12 ASV).

Thank you for the letters with suggestions and questions which are coming to us.

Are your hands helping lift the load for "Miss Evelyn's" house? This is the final month of our home mission project and she is counting on every woman to help her build this home which will give her some of the everyday conveniences without which she has served in Kentucky so many years and which most of us accept as absolutely essential to our everyday life. May we once again abundantly meet our goal and provide this faithful missionary with the home she needs so badly.

Editor's Mail Box

The La Loma Grace Brethren WMC of Modesto, Calif., had a very busy year. In addition to helping a local boys' home, they sent 16 boxes of clothing to our own missions. The senior and junior Sisterhoods entertained the mothers at a breakfast. The pre-Easter meeting featured a flower-arrangement and corsage-making demonstration.

A card from the Jr. WMC at Waynesboro, Pa. reports that they have been busy in Child Evangelism, sending birthday and Christmas cards to missionaries, and sponsoring activities for their BYF. They also presented a skit in Sunday school to encourage a larger home-missions offering.

The Sr. WMC of Pike Brethren Church, Mundy's Corner, Pa. has completed a number of projects this year, including communion towels for the local church, and boxes of clothing and linens sent to Philadelphia and Navajo missions.

Rather belatedly we report a musical program using local talent, which was presented by the councils at Martinsburg, Pa. during the summer to help their building fund. Prof. Wayne Snider of Grace College brought a short message.

The Jr. WMC at the Ghent church, Roanoke, Va. has started a membership drive. Results, two new members received in the October meeting.

RUTH—AND OUR CHRISTMAS

By Mrs. Arnold R. Kriegbaum

Have you ever heard of a movie actress being named Ruth? No. Nor have I. There is record of only one Ruth in the Bible, and she was a woman who cleaved to that which was good. Let's take a look at the heart of Ruth, and we will soon discover why no movie actress wants the name, Ruth.

For aught we know, all Ruth had was what she wore; she was poor. But it is no disgrace to be honestly poor. Ruth was bereft. She was a widow with no strong arm to lean upon. But she was kind and helpful to another widow. Ruth was sad, and rightfully so. Ruth had a crowning quality, she was virtuous. She had what money cannot buy.

With a heart like this, there is little wonder at the decision Ruth made when her hour of crisis came. When her mother-in-law, Naomi, decided to return to her native land of Bethlehem, Ruth had to make a decision. Should she stay in Moab or go to Bethlehem? Before Ruth was Bethlehem, a strange land, the true God, but real friends such as she knew Naomi to be. Behind Ruth was her native land, Moab; a people who worshiped idols, a land of riches, and a land of sin. Ruth's decision was prompt, personal and firm, not an ignorant stubbornness but an intelligent firmness.

Literary critics have adjudged Ruth chapter I and verse 16 as the Gem of All Literature. Ruth gives us this gem as she makes her momentous decision. "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me" (Ruth 1:16-17). Naomi had borne a true testimony of her God. Ruth's surrender was supreme, "Thy God, my God." Ruth was saying: "Let me go with you; let me pray with you, let me give with you, let me serve with you." She had counted the cost; her mind was made up; her heart was fixed; her course was set toward righteousness, no matter how much hardship it might bring. Naomi saw that Ruth was steadfastly minded. This is a quality the Lord wants all of us to cultivate. In I Corinthians 16-13 we read: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith."

Was God faithful to Ruth? Yes; our God is faithful. After all her trials and hardships, Ruth was rewarded with a husband, a home, and happiness. Ruth's sadness was turned to exultant joy. Boaz, a mighty man of wealth and a saint of God, sought and won Ruth for his bride. Ruth's nomadic life was ended. She was to settle down in the peace of Bethlehem. Besides all this, God honored her by giving Ruth a place in the bringing of Christ into the world. Matthew 1:5 reads: "And Salmon begat Boaz of Rachab, and Boaz begat Obed of Ruth."

Ruth was a Moabitess of an accursed race, who, according to the law of Moses, was not allowed to enter the congregation of the covenant. A real problem existed for Ruth. Would the Hebrews look with disfavor upon her? No such obstacle remains when faith in God is exercised.

Ruth is a type of us, the gentile bride of Christ. Boaz is the type of Christ, the Bethlehemite, who redeemed us unto himself. (Read Ruth 4:7 ff.).

"And the women said unto Naomi, Blessed be the Lord, which hath not left thee this day without a kinsman, that his name may be famous in Israel. And he shall be unto thee a restorer of thy life, and a nourisher of thine old age: for thy daughter in law, which loveth thee, which is better to thee than seven sons hath born him" (Ruth 4 14-15). As we read in Matthew 1:5, a greater Kinsman than the neighbor women ever dreamed of came through Ruth the Moabitess.

To Ruth was granted rewards a hundredfold for her faith. In her future generation, at the birth of the Kinsman who brought us eternal redemption, the heavens opened and the angels burst forth with, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Is Ruth's Redeemer, your Redeemer?

PROGRAM GUIDE FOR DECEMBER

ON INTO THE INTERIOR

By Mrs. Rose A. Foster

Our stay at Matadi, Africa was not very long. How happy we were about that. To us, it seemed like the hottest place we had ever been. It is sea level, with high hills all about. So down in the bowl of the earth lies this one oven of a hotel town, cooking everyone who sleeps there.

Mrs. Rose A. Foster

The train running up country left Matadi twice a week, and at that time it took two days to make the trip. It was a unique train to say the least! The engine burned wood in order to get the needed steam. The cars were small and every two benches had a table attached to the wall, which when let down served many purposes. There were no timetables because no schedule could be kept.

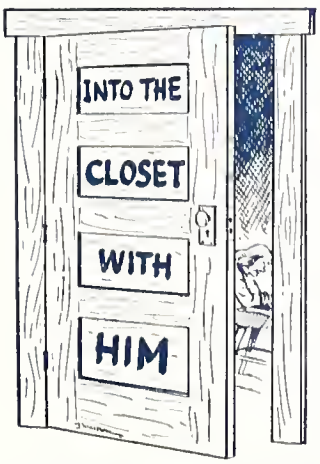
The morning of our departure arrived, and with all the other passengers we boarded the "wood burner" with such equipment as food, water, baggage and bedding. We got off with a fair start and felt that the trip might be quite enjoyable. Soon, however, one of the passengers, a native, saw his hat floating in the air toward the bush. The bell was rung, the train stopped and the native ran after his hat. The engineer waited until the hat was retrieved and the native was back on the train before we went on.

We were on fairly level ground just then, and everything seemed to be going quite well. But a very nice incline loomed ahead. We began to ascend, but the farther we went the more tired the engine became until it could mount no farther. Then it stopped going forward and began going backward. We did not know what to expect. At the foot of the hill the train gradually came to a standstill. More wood was added until they had enough steam to get over the top.

The day proved to be very interesting. At one place we passed a large native market. The train stopped so those desiring to buy food could do so. There we saw all kinds of people, dressed in all types of regalia from leaves to European outfits. Some wore helmets, some straw hats, some kerchiefs, more nothing. Some of the old women were smoking long-stemmed pipes, some shorter ones, some cigarettes. Some carried their babies on their backs and some on their hips.

This first view of all kinds of native food was a revealing geography lesson. Never had we seen such an abundance of bananas. Needless to say we bought more than we could eat, even though they were the biggest and best we ever had. We passed many villages and much bush. Darkness had already set in when we arrived at Copville and Mr. Jenkins from the Baptist Mission was at the station to meet us. Soon we were in their delightful living room and a little later in between snowy white sheets in a good, comfortable bed with cool breezes to refresh us. What a difference from Matadi where it was so hot and dirty!

But the next day brought a repetition of many of the former days' experiences, the same train, the same dirt and dust left over from the previous day, same hot sun over us, and the same starting and stopping motions. We reached Leopoldville, which was then Kinshassa, before dark, and found much confusion with trying to get accommodations for the night and customs.



The following morning found us crossing Stanley Pool to Brazzaville, where we had to make reservations for the river boat to Bangui. We had picked up outfits for different ones of the missionaries, so there was really a great deal to be cared for. The boat must have been the oldest the company owned. Every evening they stopped along the river bank to load wood so they could run the boat the following day. Natives cut the wood during the day and had it ready for the boat when it arrived in the evening.

Days were extremely hot on the water and the nights not much cooler. The whole boat was thoroughly heated by the fierce fire they had to keep the boat running, and the African sun added tremendous heat pressure.

The Congo and Oubangui Rivers are full of islands, and in dry season there are obstructive sandbars. If we happened to get on one, we had plenty of trouble getting off. The islands were so numerous that at times we could see no way out. But the native pilot knew the river like we know our streets; he had no difficulty at all. He knew the way and brought us safely to Bangui. We will reach our eternal home just as safely, if we follow the Lord Jesus, our Heavenly Pilot, because He said: "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh to the Father, but by me."

It took us two weeks to make the trip of about 1000 miles. Of course we fully expected to see Mr. Hathaway when we arrived at Bangui. But not a soul we knew was there. So we settled down to wait for one of our missionaries. Next month you will find out what happened when we were so near and yet so far from our work.

PRAYER REQUESTS

Pray that the general fund offering might cover the expenses of this year in SMM.

Pray for our national officers that they might be given wisdom and strength in their time of need.

Pray for our national project and for the mission at Taos, New Mexico, that the Word of God might reach many souls.

Pray for the district officers that they might depend upon Christ for their strength.

Pray for all the foreign and home missionaries that the Lord will bless them and give them needed strength.

Pray for the Sheldons as they leave for Africa once again.

Pray for the Hockings who are beginning their service for Christ in Africa this year.

The Hand of God in the Life of—

LENORA DEISCH WILLIAMS

By Althea S. Miller

Have you ever enjoyed the thrill of swinging on a rope during your early childhood? The Brethren Church almost didn't have a certain missionary because she swung on a rope which somehow became fastened around her neck instead of waist. In the providence of God, a mother's sharp ears kept this time of fun from becoming a tragedy.

Mrs. Robert Williams

For the past 13 years Mrs. Robert Williams, with her husband, has served the Lord in Africa. Her jobs of nurse (R.N.), teacher, and housewife kept our missionary more than busy. The Williams' have no children of ther own, but Lenora's heart goes out to the girls and women of Africa who live in heathen darkness. She is thrilled when they open their hearts to the Saviour and grow in grace and the knowledge of God. As for satisfaction in her work (and who doesn't want that?), Mrs. Williams finds it in the accomplishment of reading among the children. As she wrote her letter to us, voices of schoolchildren came through the window. They were reading from the Gospel of John, and one year ago they couldn't read a word! This triumph of God's grace makes teacher Williams rejoice.

Lenora Williams agrees quite positively with the Apostle Paul who said many times in his epistles: "I would not have you ignorant, brethren." Our missionary believes every Sisterhood girl should learn all she can about the peoples of this earth who are yet unreached with the Gospel. Then each girl choose a missionary to pray for daily. Learn to know the missionaries by meeting them when they are in your church, by reading about them, and by corresponding with them. And who knows but that God may choose you, a very ordinary girl, to do an extraordinary job for Him somewhere in His vineyard?

It isn't ncessary that a girl be reared in a preacher's home, or be the daughter of a missionary to be used of the Lord. Lenora grew up on a farm in Indiana. She was saved at the age of 15 and at the same time became a member of the Brethren Church near Peru, Ind. She has a college education, an R.N. degree, and studied Bible two years in Grace Seminary before going to the field. So she is well qualified to encourage every girl to get as much education as possible if she would serve the Lord well. She knows every Sisterhood girl will experience "His Desire, our Delight" as she says with the psalmist: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God" (Ps. 42:1).

A LETTER FROM OUR NATIONAL PATRONESS

Hello Girls:

The months have been rolling around since the beginning of our SMM year, and I trust that each one of you has been endeavoring to attain the goals set up for us at our National Conference. These goals have been prepared for one purpose and that is that you might be developed spiritually and that you might also be a "living testimony" for your Lord and Master. Every one of these goals have been bathed in prayer, and we trust that you will not think of them as boresome, but that they might be the spiritual exercise to keep your soul "in trim." Just as we need some exercise to keep physically fit, so we need to read the Word and have a time daily to commune with our Lord to be spiritually fit and serve Him in every way possible in our local church.

There is one thing that is very needful in our world today and that is a girl who will be a "living testimony" for her Master. If every SMM girl would take this seriously, the Brethren church would not be able to contain the revival that would come our way. I wonder, girls, in your school life, at your work, or at home, are you bearing a testimony that will lead other girls, and boys, men and women to your Master. Or do they say: "If she is a Christian, I don't need what she has. I am as good as she is." I trust that this will never be said of one girl who is a member of our Sisterhood family.

Yours,

Mrs. H. Leslie Moore, national patroness

1. IMPORTANT DATE—The general fund offering should be sent to the national treasurer by January 31. All entries for the writing contest must be into the national patroness on this date also.

2. ARE YOU A MEMBER OF SISTERHOOD? Then you should have a SMM pennant. Have you learned all the points of the merit system? You are not actually a member of Sisterhood until you have done this. After learning the merit system you can secure a pennant for $.65 from your district literature secretary.

3. DISTRICTS!! Don't forget to send a list of your officers to the National General Secretary. This is one of your district organization goals, so let's meet it, and be one step closer to becoming an honor district.

4. WHAT ABOUT THOSE BANDAGES? Here's just a hint which will help you in rolling your bandages efficiently. They are to be 7 yards long, 2 inches wide, ravelled and sewn at the end. Let's aim for a large number of bandages for this year, and let's make them neat and exact.

5. WHERE'S THAT NEWS? Don't forget to send at least one postcard news item to the national general secretary. She's awaiting them with great anticipation trusting that they will be very interesting and different.

Mary's Christmas Baby Was Her Saviour

By Mrs. R. Paul Miller

It was the dream of every little Jewish girl that she would become the mother of Jesus, the one who was to be the Messiah, the Saviour. Some people say that Mary was the Mother of God. The Bible teaches us that this is wrong. To say that Mary is the Mother of God is called blasphemy.

God used Mary to give Jesus a human body so He could show himself to us. But Mary needed Jesus Christ to be her Saviour just as much as you and I need Him for our Saviour. In Luke 1:46-47, Mary said: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit has rejoiced in God my Saviour." So you see Mary realized she needed to accept Jesus to be her Saviour.

Mary continues: "For he that regarded the low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things; and holy is his name." God honored Mary by writing this in the Bible for all people to read. We know she was a good, kind girl, and grew to be a woman of pure heart and mind for God calls her blessed. She believed all those things which were told her from the Lord.

We know this was all of God because everything turned out just as the angel told Mary it would. No matter how mean people talked about her, Mary trusted and believed God, and God took care of Mary.

The Bible tells us Joseph was not Jesus' father. Jesus was a unique baby. He came to earth for a different purpose than any other baby who was ever born. The angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream and told him that Mary was pure and not to be afraid to take her for his wife. The angel further told Joseph to call the baby's name JESUS; "for he shall save his people from their sins." While Joseph was a man who believed God and did all the angel told him, still he needed Christ to be his Saviour.

After the shepherds had left, and much later after the wise men had come and gone, Mary and Joseph returned to their home in Nazareth. Mary kept all these things about Jesus and pondered them in her heart. Never once did Jesus sin, so He was set apart in many ways from all people around Him. All the children of Joseph and Mary needed Jesus to be their Saviour. Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man.

Jesus is our example. Jesus is our Saviour! Jesus was born so He could give His life on the cross and shed His blood, which has power to cleanse us from all our sin. For God so loved us that He sent His Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life. This is the Christmas story. Whatever we do, let us not be guilty of giving Mary a preeminent place in our Christmas celebrations. Mary said: "My soul doth magnify the Lord," and that should be our prayer.

ATTENTION!!

Two new societies have been formed at Clayhole, Kentucky. The California District would like to report that they have nine new societies born into the family of Sisterhood.

S.M.M. ORATORICAL CONTEST

ATTENTION!! ATTENTION ALL MIDDLER AND SENIOR GIRLS!!

Here's what you been waiting for, the rules for the Oratorical Contest. They are as follows:

1. Three national judges are to be selected.
2. It shall be an original oration on II Timothy—some blessing the contestant received from her study.
3. The oration is to be from 3-5 minutes in length.
4. The entrant may not have any "outside" help with the content, but advice may be given as to the preparation or delivery.
5. Local organizations should choose the best one to represent them at the semifinals at the district youth rally in the spring.
6. One winner and one runner-up shall be selected from each district.
7. The district should make some effort to aid each winner to attend Bethany if possible.
8. The finals shall be held at Bethany Camp.
9. The winner of the National Contest will receive her choice of a Sisterhood Sweater (white or green), an SMM Key Necklace, or $7.50 worth of material from the Brethren Missionary Herald.
10. Specific details on judging will be sent out very soon.

Start working on your oration NOW!

SISTER ESTELLA MYERS IMPROVES IN HEALTH

Dear Sister Hammers:

What a pleasant surprise it was to receive a message from so many women who were attending the WMC at Portland. And God has answered prayer and I am gaining strength every day. The Lord has been good.

How happy I was to hear of the good conference at Portland and that many have a longing to be winners of souls. As we abide in Him God will answer prayer. I am expecting great things from the Lord through the Brethren Church here and in the foreign fields.

The longer we work in Africa the more we realize we do not have long to stay there. The spirit of communism is there as in other places and it is something the unconverted native will grasp. The other cults are coming in. How easily the natives listen to their teaching. How anxious they are to spread their belief.

May God continue to bless and keep all you women as you labor for Him. Sincerely yours,—Estella Myers.

A report from Seven Fountains, Va., shows us that the women there have been busy this past year for the Lord. They have a membership of 34 and acquired four new members during the year. They not only used the program packets but passed them on to the BYF, who also used them in their meetings. They gave generously to all project offerings and had a fruitful year for the Lord.

Filling the vacancy at the Missionary Herald is Leland Larmon, who joined the staff on October, 30. Brother Larmon comes to Winona Lake from Johnstown, Pa., where he is a member of the First Brethren Church, and was known throughout the East District for his work with the young people. Brother Larmon served as linotype operator on the Somerset Daily American from 1939-47, at which time he was a member of the Listie Brethren Church, Listie, Pa. During this period he served three years in the United States Army in the European and African theaters of war. Upon completion of his enlistment in the army he returned to the Somerset Daily American where he continued until 1947, at which time he became linotype operator for the Johnstown Tribune Publishing Co., publishers of the daily newspaper in Johnstown, Pa. Clarence Larmon, father of Leland, is circulation manager of the Somerset Daily American in Somerset, Pa., and is a member of the Listie Brethren Church.

Mrs. Leland Larmon was a charter member of the Jenners Brethren Church, Jenners, Pa., before moving to Johnstown. Mrs. Larmon has also been active with her husband in youth work in the East District. The coming of Brother and Sister Larmon to Winona Lake and to the Missionary Herald Staff is an answer to prayer.

TRUE THANKSGIVING

By PAUL MOHLER
Pastor, First Brethren Church
Covington, Va.

Mrs. Higgins' pastor heard that she had a particularly good crop of potatoes. Thinking he would please her, he called upon her and said, "I hear that you have a grand crop of potatoes this year, Mrs. Higgins. That must cheer your heart and make you especially thankful." "Oh, they're good enough," she replied, "but where's the bad ones to feed the pigs?"

It was not the spirit of Mrs. Higgins but the kind of spirt of gratitude in the heart and soul of Billy Bray that gave us our Thanksgiving Day.

When Billy was digging his potatoes one season, he discovered that he had raised a poor crop. Satan suggested, "That's what you get for serving the Lord." Billy said, "Get away from me, Satan! I'm glad and thankful for these few. When I served you, I had no potatoes at all."

The seeds of true thanksgiving are implanted in the human heart only by God himself through the new birth.

Modern Thanksgivings

"Thanksgiving" is the name of a national spiritual holiday. This special day in America originated long ago. When the Mayflower landed on the rocky coasts of New England, after three months on the rough Atlantic, there was great joy in the hearts of our forefathers. They had arrived where they could worship God unmolested.

Their joy was short lived. A cold winter was ahead of them. Winter came. There was not enough food. There was not enough medicine. There was sickness, disease, and starvation. Nearly half the number died.

Spring finally came. A new hope surged in the souls of those who had been spared. They had a good summer, a fruitful harvest, and a fine autumn. God had been good to them. And again their hearts were glad. Their storehouses were full. Their provisions were plentiful. And again their hearts were glad. They overflowed with praise and thanks to the Lord.

After that first harvest by the Pilgrims in 1621, Governor Bradford set a day for special thanks and prayer. Friendly Indians were present. Tables were spread with a sumptuous feast. Around the tables sat red men and white men. Thanksgiving, praise, and prayer, lasted for three days and God was pleased.

In 1623 another day of fasting and prayer was observed in the midst of drought which turned into a Thanksgiving Day when God opened heaven's windows and poured water upon earth for their crops. It became a custom. Several governors of the New England Colonies recommended an annual day for thanksgiving to Congress.

New York adopted an annual Thanksgiving Day in 1817. The custom spread. In 1864 President Lincoln appointed a day for thanksgiving and presidents since have issued Thanksgiving Proclamations designating a day for thanksgiving.

Ancient Thanksgivings

Special thanksgiving times are not a modern innovation. Thanksgiving, in the form of sacrifices and blessings to the Lord for His Goodness and mercy, was offered up frequently in the days of the patriarchs, judges and kings. There are many references to special thanksgiving from Genesis to Revelation.

After Noah was delivered from the flood he built an altar unto the Lord. He offered burnt-offerings on the altar to the Lord in thanksgiving (Gen. 8:20).

Israel observed feast days after God delivered her out of Egypt. One of these was a thanksgiving feasting time. It is called the feast of the tabernacles. It was a feast of ingathering (Lev. 23:33-39 cf Exod. 23:14-16). After the crops were harvested, in the fall of the year, the thanksgiving feast was held. It was a time for rejoicing. It was a time for special thanksgiving. God meant it to be a time of remembrance, a time to think about the goodness and grace of the Lord. The words "thanks" and "thought" have the same root. And so, thanksgiving in the past and in the present should be, and was meant to be, a time of thought-giving—a time when we give careful and prayerful thought to what God has showered upon us in blessings. Our hearts should overflow with both praise and thanks as we ponder and meditate on His faithfulness.

Gross Ingratitude

Many today, like some in Israel of old, are disgustingly unthankful. They eat God's food. They drink God's water. They breathe God's air. They receive God's rain. They accept His sunshine. They harvest His produce. They let Him fill their barns. And they delight themselves with His other blessings. But, material prosperity becomes their downfall and destruction. Their well-filled cupboards, their overstocked deep-freezes, and their jam-packed barns led many away from God and sweet faith in His Son. Bountiful harvests and plentiful provisions become their sufficiency. God's greatest and most precious blessing is ignored and refused.

There was a time in the life of Israel when the "harvest was past, summer was ended, and they were not saved" (Jer. 8:22). The same is true today in America with multiplied thousands. How it must grieve the heart of God when people receive His houses, His lands, His automobiles, His clothes, and reap His fruit, for whom harvest is past, summer ended, and they are still unsaved. What gross ingratitude to refuse God's best provision—forgiveness of sin and eternal life.

Only a child of God can offer true thanksgiving. For the child of God all crops, all health, all wealth, peace, happiness, and every liberty are blessings for which to be thankful.

WE THANK THEE FATHER . . . FOR THY HOLINESS

By CLAIR BRICKEL
Pastor, First Brethren Church
Clayton, Ohio

"Sing unto the Lord, O ye saints of his, and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."

Well might these words of the psalmist be applied to the Son of God and we should "give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness." In our manner of giving thanks we find ourselves praising God for shelter, clothes and food, but little do we express our thanks for just himself, so pure and good. We thank Him for the answers to our pleading prayers but pause little to thank Him for His lovely, matchless name. The person of Jesus Christ and all His divine attributes are taken for granted and relegated to a minor place in our volume of praise given to the Lord God during this festive and sacred occasion that we call Thanksgiving. The psalmist says: "My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever and ever" (Ps. 145:21). Holy praise is contagious, it spreads from lonely hearts to all flesh. During this season of giving thanks let us as Christians who know and love the adorable Son of God start a spreading wave of thanks to God for the person of His Son who is the very central figurehead of all of God's Holy teachings.

The Lord Jesus was sent to earth as God's holy man. The announcing angel appeared to Mary and proclaimed: "That holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God (Luke 1:35). Peter's second sermon to the Jews denounced them as denying—"the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murdered to be granted unto you" (Acts 3:14). We should thank God for the holiness of Jesus Christ because it is Absolutely Independent

Jesus Christ, although assailed by His foes as an imposter, was shrouded with holiness that was altogether His own. The holiness of man is not so. We are not holy by our will or by our own efforts. We are not holy by our own discipline as something that has been wrought out by ourselves. It is of God. But the holiness of Jesus Christ was His own. It was the outshining of the glory that He had from the beginning and shall receive again when every knee shall bow before Him and every tongue shall confess His name. The holiness He possessed was essential to His being. Isaiah beheld this when in his vision he saw the glory of God (John 12:41). Let us thank God for such a glorious Saviour.

Absolutely Perfect

We who believe in the depravity of man will still recognize the fact that there have been good men and still are good men upon the earth. But none of them is perfect. None is good from the first; none is wholly and always good. The holiness of the very best is not only derived, but imperfect. This is the confession of everyone who has stood before God and pleaded Christ as Saviour. But the holiness of Christ was perfect. Nothing could be added to it—nothing higher could be conceived. In this respect He stands alone, the first, and the last, and the only one, in human likeness, who had kept the Law perfectly, and who could say, in the face of enemies and of friends, "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" (John 8:46). Let us give thanks at the remembrance of His holiness.

Absolutely Pure

Some men on the face of the earth may seem pure—that being because they have not been tried. They had never been put to the test and been tried under fire. But our Saviour, for whom we are thanking God, was subjected to the severest trials and temptations; yet His holy soul was never stained by sin. This one was born pure; He lived a pure life in a world that was full of sin; His death manifested no sin whatsoever. John calls Him Jesus Christ the righteous. Paul longed for the day when he would receive his rewards from the righteous Judge. Such a one is our High Priest interceding for us. Have we thanked God enough for Him? Every prayer breathed by a Christian should contain this note of thanksgiving.

Absolutely Beautiful

The psalmist says that we should worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness (Ps. 29:20). The beauty of holiness is the supreme and perfect beauty in the character of Christ Jesus. This beauty we see in Him challenges our admiration, inspires our confidence and commands all the love within us. The holiness of Christ Jesus is not against us but for us. It is because of His holiness that He is fit to be our Saviour. He not only perfectly represents God to man but also man to God. Only as we stand clothed in His cloak of holiness imparted unto us are we able to see God. What a beautiful picture is given of sinful men, lost and condemned; yet robed in the holiness of Christ received at their acceptance of Him. This one is now ready to meet a thrice holy God because he is trusting the merits of a perfect Saviour who did a perfect job in canceling our sin debt on Calvary's cross. The beauty of Jesus and all His holiness should be seen in the lives of His own. It will be if you are thankful for what He did and will live for His glory.

Many who call themselves Christians hate to think of holiness; they never hear it without pain and the principle part of their studies of God's Word is to find out with how little holiness they can rationally expect to enter into the kingdom of God. None of all God's perfections carries in it more terror to the wicked, nor mere comfort to the godly, than His holiness.

Christian, thank God that Jesus Christ was the perfect one who sealed your redemption. You could not do it, but He, and He alone.

THE SACRIFICE OF THANKSGIVING

By KEITH ALTIG

Pastor, First Brethren Church
Glendale, Calif.

Outstanding among all the religious feasts and holidays of the world is the Christian observance of Thanksgiving. Our Heavenly Father has revealed that for His children to engage in a season of thanksgiving is one of the acceptable sacrifices which can be offered to Him. The great prophet Isaiah is one of a group made illustrious by the presence of Moses, David, Jeremiah, Jonah, Amos and Paul who speak of offering the "sacrifice of thanksgiving" to the Lord.

"An acknowledging and confessing with gladness, the benefits and mercies, which God bestows either upon ourselves or others," thanksgiving is the one sacrifice which is open and equal for all, rich or poor. It is without time limits and demands no special ceremonies or accoutrements. It is the completely natural and unforced expression of the love one has for his Heavenly Father.

To give thanks is a definite act of worship and adoration of God. The Psalms speak several times of the sacrifices of thanksgiving so we know it to be a definite part of Hebrew worship. It is altogether fitting that it be carried over and even enlarged upon in the New Testament worship of our Lord Jesus Christ.

GOD HAS THIS DAY

God has this day!
What'er may come of good or ill,
I need but say, "My soul, be still,
It is His perfect, holy will."
God has this day.

However difficult to trace
The moving finger of His grace
In circumstance of time or place,
God has this day.

Although this day should bring to me
The entering of eternity,
In that dim vale His form I'll see.
God has this day.

And so with courage strong I'll go
Throughout this day, and meet each foe,
Content, simpley to trust and know,
God has this day.

In American history the day was observed by the godly founders of our nation as a day of feasting and joy. This can readily be understood when we remember that the bountiful hand of God had enabled the pilgrim fathers at last to wrest a living out of the reluctant earth.

Thanksgiving should not be dependent upon having received material blessings alone. Without the spiritual blessings which our Lord is waiting to bestow, the material blessings will be brief and unsatisfying. But with the presence of the Lord, one can offer the sacrifice of thanksgiving even without the material blessings so sought after by those who know not the Lord.

It was on a thanksgiving day a few years ago that the writer made the final move into the city where our first work is located in Brazil. Separated from wife and son because of illness and with two young daughters to care for, not much preparation for thanksgiving was made. In fact, it was entirely forgotten until late in the day. By the time the work was done it was too late to plan or prepare anything. While a favored nation of Americans feasted on the good things which are so readily available, three other Americans on foreign soil sat down to a meal consisting of a few pieces of crusty French bread, dry cheese, bananas, goiabada and guarana, the latter two being a jelly-like substance made from a fruit like the quince and the national non-alcoholic drink of Brazil.

Thanksgiving should not depend on whether or not there is an ample supply of the necessities of life. Rather we find that thankfulness for what we do have insures an adequate and abundant supply. God's way of dealing with people is that as long as they love, serve and obey Him, they will receive His blessings in a material way. God's chosen people were blessed "in the land," and as long as they remained true to Him, they were blessed. His promise to them was, "Blessed shall be the fruit of thy body, and the fruit of thy ground, and the fruit of thy cattle, the increase of thy kine, and the flocks of thy sheep. Blessed shall be thy basket and thy store" (Deut. 28:4-5).

A thankful spirit will guard against moral degeneracy too. The outstanding contributing factors to the moral degradation of the heathen as recorded in Roman 1:21 were that they did not glorify God and they were not thankful. To express thanks sincerely, admits that one is under obligation to the one being thanked. When this one is none other than God, then the obligation extends into the moral realm. This keeps one from sin.

Being the Creator, and rightful owner of all things, it is certain that God is not greatly impressed with the expense or luxury of any sacrifice ever offered to Him. A turtledove or a bullock were the same in His sight. But to receive the expressions of personal love and appreciation offered to Him gladly and freely by those who delight in His presence and desire to do His will, this without doubt is one of the most acceptable sacrifices ever to be presented to Him.

The Christian and Thanksgiving

By ORD GEHMAN

Pastor, Bethel Brethren Church

Berne, Indiana

As we approach the Thanksgiving season again and become involved in its 20th Century complicities, let us ask ourselves this question: "Why should be as Christians be thankful?" With only a little thought we discover many reasons why we should be thankful for all God's providential goodnesses unto us. We may be thankful purely because of who God is and what He means to us as His children. Or, we may be thankful because of what He has done to us and for us as He seeks to carry out His "all things" in and through us. Let us consider this from the standpoint of Paul's admonition to the church at Colosse.

In the church at Colosse there was a strange admixture of Greek, Jewish and oriental religions. These seemed to have amalgamated into a sort of "higher thought" and as "another gospel" as set forth in the Colossian epistle heresy which had been presented as a part of the Gospel of Christ. Of course, the apostle sternly warns against this "watered down Gospel" and reminds the Colossians of their position in Christ. He comes to the real heart of this matter in Chapter after he has dealt with the heresy itself in chapter 2. He points out in chapter 1 "That in all things he [Christ] might have the preeminence" (1:18b).

Turning to chapter 3 the apostle deals with the believer's position in Christ as a result of His redemptive work in our behalf. Since the "old man of sin" has been put off and we are "risen with Christ," we are to put on those things which are becoming to the children of God. These he enumerates in verses 12-14. Then after we are perfect in Christ by His grace, among other admonitions, he says, "and be ye thankful" (vs. 15c). This is not presented as a matter of choice for the child of God; it is obligatory that we be thankful to God! This is not just one of the possible attributes of the believer's life; thankfulness is a "must"! The Word here says: "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly . . . and be ye thankful" (Col. 3:15). The real lasting peace of God finds no place in an unthankful heart!

Paul's epistles especially are literally filled with the admonition to the children of God to give thanks in everything. Our text here presents this as an imperative duty, not a matter of choice. Thankfulness can be cultivated as any attitude of the will. Each new day brings new blessings and added reasons for the believer. The rest and protection of the nighttime and life with all its vibrancy into the new day. Thank God that you are alive. Thank Him that this is the day He hath made, let us rejoice and be glad in it. Thankfulness in the waking hour for the Christian makes for the right attitude toward God for the day. Not only do we think of ourselves in proper relation to Christ, but when we realize daily that it is Christ's will that all men should come to know Him (II Pet. 3:9) our perspective toward others is right. Toward the unsaved, we yearn to bring them to Christ. Toward the saved, we long to see them enjoy the blessedness of their salvation to the very fullest extent. A truly thankful heart has the God-given ability to see others, regardless of their spiritual condition, in the proper light of the Word of God. Whatever comes our way this day let us thank God for making it so.

Again, thankfulness should be the permanent attitude of the believer for even the so-called commonplace things of everyday living. A person cannot go to the Lord's house on His day and sing His praises with great animation and then live all week as though the God of heaven didn't exist! Remember, He is a part of your occupation in life, regardless of how you might be engaged. If you as a believer are so engaged that you cannot seek God's blessing upon even the smallest details of your life, it is time to do some checking! Don't merely take God into your business but be willing that He should be the motivating factor in all that you do. Seek His will in every transaction and praise Him for whatever He permits. It is not just the big things that make a difference; the so-called little things alter the over-all pattern of one's life! Being grateful to God for "all things" is a definite Christian virtue.

In the third place, we ned to realize that thankfulness broadens the blessings we have received. Gratitude enlarges that blessing that is often considered insignificant. Not only does Paul suggest that we give outward expression of our thankfulness in "teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord" (16b), but he goes ahead in the very next verse and says: "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him" (vs. 17). "Whatsoever" refers to all things. A thankful heart praises God for everything, even the sorrowful heartache. "Whatsoever" covers everything that can come into the life of God's child. Job knew something of this secret when he had been informed that his material possessions had been dissipated and that tragedy had befallen his children. Yet the Word tells us that he "arose, rent his mantle, and shaved his head, and fell down on the ground, and worshipped, and said, naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord" (Job 1:20-21). So heartbreak becomes praise as it issues from the tested heart. Thankfulness becomes helpfulness in the presence of need. A grateful heart is a sympathetic heart toward those whose lives have been marked by tragedy. Even a cup of cold water offered in the name of our blessed Lord of glory will not fail to bring its reward to the giver. And so, because Christ has done so much for us, let us be grateful to Him and do all that we possibly can in His blessed name. A grateful heart tends more and more to do only those things which will merit His favor. Let us remember that it is of the Lord that we shall receive the reward for the "whatsoever ye do in word or deed" and not from men.

ON TO 60,000

I think I can hear you saying, "Oh we have heard that before." Perhaps no one realizes it more than your Sunday school editor. But I hasten to reply that without doubt, you have not only heard it before, but you will be hearing it again and again, and MORE AND MORE as the year 1960 approaches. This is the slogan of the Sunday schools of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches—60,000 by 1960.

To reach this goal is an absolute essential!

To reach this goal, every Sunday school must do its part. We are not out just to increase our numbers, because we would like to talk about a Sunday-school department of 60,000 people. Rather, increased numbers are our first objective because we want to be obedient to the command of Christ "to teach men whatsoever things" he has commanded them. Evangelism is the command of Christ! Evangelism is the life of the church! The Sunday school is the greatest evangelistic force in your church. Now, what should your Sunday school do? Set a goal for this year of 1955-1956 of at least a 20 percent increase in your average attendance over that of 1954-55. Then take every available opportunity and means to reach that 20 percent increase. Get your Sunday school ready now for the increase that must come. An increase demands more teachers! An increase demands more workers! An increase demands better records! According to the Religious News Service, Sunday schools will have to recruit 12,000 new teachers and add 400,000 classes every year just to keep pace with the population growth in the United States and Canada. It appears that our work is cut out for us for the next few years with the population increase, to say nothing about the 63 percent of children already born, 76 percent of the youth and 86 percent of the adults who have not been reached.

To reach this goal, every teacher must do his part. Teacher, let us face your own class for a moment. If you now have a class of 10, this means in this year you should have a class of 12. You are the key to this challenge. God has called you to be the teacher just as surely as God has called your pastor to be the pastor. Let us look at our goal in a very simple manner. At the present moment, we have approximately 3,000 teachers and officers in our Sunday schools. In the next five years, our goal is to increase our numbers by 30,000 people. That means every Sunday-school teacher will have to see that every pupil now in his Sunday-school class stays with the school, and every teacher and officer will have to win two every year, to approach our 60,000 goal.

Three thousand teachers and officers each reaching two new pupils each year for the next five years will mean 30,000 new pupils by 1960! Is this an impossible goal? Teacher, look at the wonderful opportunity for evangelism which will be yours. Two new pupils each year means that our teachers would have 30,000 opportunities for evangelism in the next five years. Am I wrong? Is it too much to say this would be the greatest-soul-winning campaign ever in the Brethren Church? Teacher, will you resolve with me, to win at least two per year for the next five years?

To reach this goal, every pupil must do his part. As we have been traveling across the nation recently, we have been asking Sunday-school pupils everywhere if they know anyone not in Sunday school on that Sunday. Almost without exception, we have found ready response. Think about it! Do you know anyone that was not in Sunday school last week? What are you doing about it to see that they are in Sunday school this next Sunday? Did you invite them? Did you suggest you would come and bring them with you? If not, get busy on your telephone or better yet, go over and visit them right now and suggest that you will be at their home next Sunday morning and bring them with you to Sunday school. You bring the one next to you, and I will bring the one next to me, and in no time at all, we will have our 60,000 by 1960 and be ready to go on to new heights for our Lord!

If you are tired of hearing 60,000 by 1960 come along and help me get a new idea, by getting 60,000 for Brethren Sunday schools RIGHT NOW! Let's double our number.

CONTEST GETS OFF TO A REAL START

I wish you could be with me when I open some of the letters that come to our office telling of real increases on the first Sunday of the new Brethren Sunday-school contest. It is our conviction that this year is going to be different! More Sunday schools are going to be sending in their reports, and thus be a part of the contest. New divisions have helped to put every school in a group where they will really have opportunity to make this contest one of real competition.

A recent letter asks me to tell Denver to keep the "Trophy" well polished, for the Sunday school at "Stearns Ave., Long Beach" wants to carry home the trophy in tiptop shape. But to do it, they will have to win over Fort Wayne, Ind., who have set their goals high. And by the way, there is keen competition between Fort Wayne, Winona Lake, and Osceola. Watch the reports from these three, all of whom are in the same class. Did I say Fremont, Ohio? Oh yes, they broke all records last week on Rally Day, too, when they had 69 present. Listie, in another class, is setting the pace for their Division. Challenges have come from Meyersdale, Summit Mills, Martinsburg, W. Va., and on and on. It looks like a close contest all the way, but the Sundays roll around rapidly, and the first month will soon be a matter of history. What will the answer be? Watch the Missionary Herald each month for your own standing! Get those blanks into the National Sunday-school office regularly and on time.

NEW GRACE BRETHREN CHURCH DEDICATED AT GOSHEN, INDIANA

Editorials

By L. L. Grubb

Thanks Be to God!

Beyond human expression is our praise to God for the extent of His blessing upon the Brethren home-mission work this past year.

With a record number of 714 souls born again in home-mission churches and a list of spiritual victories reported by pastors which is unparalleled in our history, we humbly thank God for His abundant grace.

The Brethren home-mission church-building program has exceeded all former ones and as God provides this will be expanded.

Members of the NFBC have made these reasons for thanks a reality by their praying and giving to Brethren home missions. So, into those words goes a wealth of meaning—"Thanks be to God!"

How Can We Give Thanks?

Gratitude is a grace. In fact, it is a Christian characteristic which many of God's children have allowed to go largely unrecognized and little used. There are definite ways in which we can show our gratitude to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

OUR COVER PAGE

There is much indication in the New Testament and even evidence earlier in Scripture under Law that God desires the love and devotion of His child first of all. Daily reading of the Word and prayer with complete dedication of the individual heart to the accomplishment of God's will is saying thanks to God.

"Ye shall be witnesses unto me" is the next step in showing thanks to God. Personal and faithful telling forth of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ is the daily, Spirit-led responsibility of each Christian.

Included in this same category and simply an extension of it is the missionary vision of each child of God. This missionary vision begins beyond the sphere of the local activity. It is the responsibility of each child of God to help send the story of redemption into places where they themselves cannot go. This is sending a substitute. As God makes it possible, the ministry in testimony of each believer is never finished until by his giving and praying he makes his influence felt for Christ all around the world.

The missionary vision of the Word of God is one! "All nations," "all men everywhere," "the whole world," are phrases used in describing the service of witnessing. We have home and foreign-mission agencies in our Fellowship for the sake of efficiency and more effective work. There can never be a continued and great expansion of Brethren Christian testimony outside the U.S.A. without a previous extension of such a testimony within the U.S.A. When we forget this fact, the whole program stagnates and remains so until the vision of God's people is the vision of the Word of God.

Increasing the scope of the local churches activity, building a new church or Sunday-school building, increasing the size of the local testimony in our community is not home missions any more than it is foreign missions. A misconception in this has been responsible for limiting the growth of all departments of our Fellowship in the past. The indication of all Scripture dealing with missionary activity points beyond the immediate scope of the local-church field.

Therefore, after a Christian has given his Heavenly Father the worship of his love and devotion, and he has been active in winning souls himself as God's Spirit leads, he can give thanks to God best by praying and giving that others beyond his sphere of personal ministry might hear of Christ and know Him as Saviour. He will never pray as earnestly nor will he give sacrificially until he has first settled his own spiritual relationship to Christ. Therefore, the whole success of the missionary program in the church depends upon the relationship of the individual believer to Christ.

This is the Biblical way to give thanks unto God!

The Mechanics of Giving Thanks

Daily prayer by God's children is an absolute essential for a growing, strong, virile missionary program, whether at home or abroad.

There has not been enough praying for Brethren home missions. Perhaps this is the reason for a decrease in the Thanksgiving offering last year. It is difficult and sometimes impossible to convince folks that home missions cannot grow and defeat the Devil any more than foreign missions can without the prayer cries of the saints. Why do not more of our churches

Another House For The Lord

By HERMAN H. HEIN, Jr., Pastor

Dedication Day is past. October 2, 1955, is now history with one more church dedicated to the service of our blessed Lord Jesus Christ. There may seem to be a sound of finality to such a statement, but in reality it is only the beginning. Now the vision is the necessity of filling the house for the Lord as He commanded in Luke 14:23: "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel [urge] them to come in, that my house may be filled." This is the aim of the Goshen church. It is the desire of every member to see the house filled as it was on Dedication Day with an attendance of approximately 215.

Dedication Day in Goshen was a great day for all of us. Much hard work had already been completed by the Brethren Construction Company with our Brother Tom Bailey as construction engineer and designer and Brother Ed Rife as foreman on the job. We missed two very good members of the Brethren Construction Company crew. Brother Vern Latham and Jim Knepper, who left early during the work to go to Parkersburg, W. Va., but they were needed there. This left us with the two already mentioned, Don Sellers, and Paul Circle. It was a joy to be around men like these and to work with them. They work with the Lord as the Chief Construction Engineer, witnessing at any given opportunity. They are on the job all the time, and many times when they are not required to be there, donating their time to the Lord. Although much of the work was done by the construction crew, a great amount of the finishing plus much help during the general construction was donated by the members of the church. In completed form we have a building well worth $50,000 with approximately $33,000 in the actual cost. Pray with us that the Lord will lay it upon the heart of some business concern, loan company, or a brother of our denomination to supply us with the amount needed for refinancing.

It was a great joy to see the people flocking in on October 2 to see our new building, and to hear a very challenging message from Dr. Alva J. McClain, president of Grace Seminary and College. There were representatives from every branch of our denomination taking part in the ceremony. Many friends came from neighboring churches. We want to take this opportunity to thank each one of you for your earnest prayers and interest in our work here.

On. Feb. 14, 1954, the Grace Brethren Church of Goshen was organized in a little country church called the Inbody Community Church, just four miles southwest of Goshen, Ind. There were about 25 persons present at that session with 19 of them signing the charter membership. The church grew in numbers with many young converts and some adults. We reached a Sunday-school attendance of 115 during the month of May, 1955. Our new church was already under construction, and the anticipation of soon entering the new building filled us with anxiety. That day came on July 31 with 77 souls present on opening day. Many of these were visitors from other towns and churches. During the national conference and absence of the pastor the attendance dropped, but we began a steady climb from then until on Oct. 23 we had 71 in Sunday school. We now have a group of people who love the Lord Jesus Christ, who work at the business of bringing people in, who attend prayer meetings and Sunday evening services, and who have a oneness in the will to work for the Lord.

We are praising God for that which has already been done, and with a very bright outlook for the future, we are praying for a rich harvest of souls in the future and during our three-week evangelistic campaign with Brother R. Paul Miller, Nov. 20 through Dec. 11. Goshen is a pleasant field in which to work with very little antagonism and much interest. Pray with us for a real blessing as we reap the harvest in Goshen, Ind., for the Lord.

The Riverside Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa., held the cornerstone laying service on Sunday, Oct. 16, 1955. The speaker for the occasion was Rev. Ralph S. Burns, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Altoona, Pa.

Those taking part in the special service included the local pastor, Ralph C. Hall, the building committee, the contractor, and the subcontractor. Dr. L. L. Grubb, field secretary, represented the Brethren Home Missions Council of Winona Lake, Ind. Rev. Arnold R. Kriegbaum, Brethren Missionary Herald editor, who was holding an evangelistic meeting in the area, was present. A number of pastors from the district also took part in the service, and a fine group of Brethren and friends of the church were on hand to witness the event.

The new church building is located on the corner of Liberty Avenue and Boone Street. It is only a short distance from their present meeting place and will mean only a short move when the new church is finished. The latest reports indicate this moving should take place sometime early in December. Pastor Hall says: "We need space right now with Sunday school averaging 119 for October."

The Riverside Brethren followed the cornerstone service with a one-week revival meeting, and the speaker, Ralph S. Burns, with Mrs. Burns made up the evangelistic team. During the afternoon, children's meetings were held. There were 16 boys and girls who made decisions to accept Christ as their Saviour. In the evening services, two first-time decisions were recorded and four rededications of life.

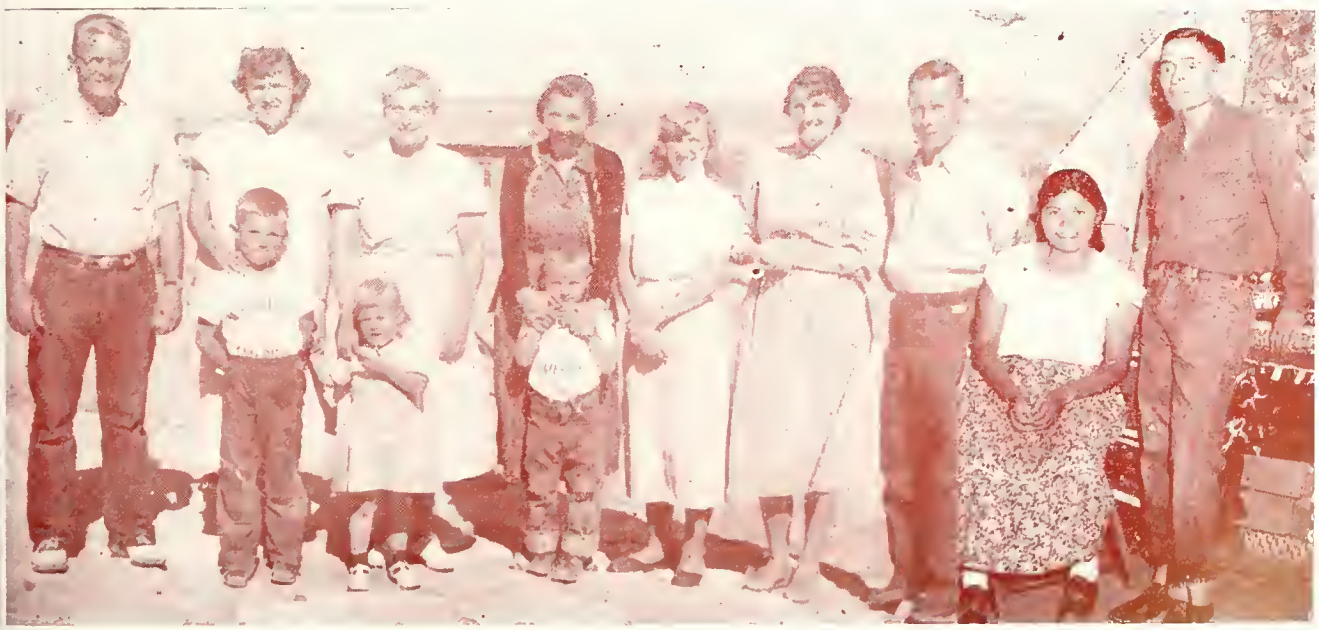
Navajo Mission Staff Increases

By Evan M. Adams

The Brethren Navajo Mission and Boarding School opened the 1955-56 school year with three additional staff members, assigned by the Brethren Home Missions Council Board of Directors. With the coming of the new workers it is now possible for more to be accomplished in the school program and also in the general mission work being done among the Navajo families of the eastern Navajo area. Parts of the program can now be handled more effectively; neglected activities can now be started.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Metzger, of Ashland, Ohio, members of the Grace Brethren Church, of Mansfield, Ohio, arrived on the mission station on August 22. Mr. Metzger resigned from his position with the Ashland, Ohio, fire department to come to the mission to assume the responsibilities of building and maintainance. His experience as a builder has already proved valuable in the completion of the building program of the mission. Mrs. Metzger (Dorothy) is now matron in charge of the schoolchildren in residence at the mission. Her experience in the care of children and in the teaching of children's Bible classes has prepared her for the big task of clothing and guiding the 37 children in the dormitories.

Miss Janice Baer, recent graduate of Bryan University, joined the mission staff in the capacity of teacher, to supplement the growth in the school work. Miss Baer, sister to Mrs. Joan Adams, has the teaching responsibility of the pre-first, first, and second grades in the boarding school. She is also a member of the Grace Brethren Church, of Mansfield, Ohio.



Another staff member, due to arrive about the middle of November, is Galen Moomaw, a young man of Wooster, Ohio, a member of the First Brethren Church, of Wooster, Ohio. He will also assist in the maintainance of the equipment and machinery and in the recreational work with the schoolboys. These additions increase the amount of time spent in the guidance of the young Navajo children in the classroom and in the out-of-class activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Evan Adams and family continue to direct the work of the mission and staff and to specialize in the training of Navajo Christians for gospel work among their people. Miss Angie Garber, now teaching in her fourth year at the mission, is principal over the school and teacher of the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades. Mrs. Mary Baer, also a member of the Grace Brethren Church of Mansfield, Ohio, continues in the preparation of the meals for the boarding school program for her fourth year.

Though each member of the staff has specific duties and responsibilities, each shares in the spiritual training of the children. Each is a missionary first, and a

In Sacrifice

By Miss Angie Garber

Thanksgiving season nears again and marks the close of our home-mission offering period. Have you been faithful with that which the Lord has entrusted to you? You may say: "It doesn't make any difference if I give more or less," but does it? If you could hear the happy voices of our little Navajo Indians here at the Brethren Navajo Mission and Boarding School and see their response to the Word of God as it is opened to them, perhaps you would understand how very much the work of the Lord depends on your reaction to the appeal of home missions.

Because many were faithful, we have been able to enlarge our school, thus making it possible for more of these children from heathen homes to hear of the true God and have a chance to accept the Gospel of Grace. We have been able to secure another teacher, Miss Janice Baer, to lighten the burden and provide more opportunities for personal contacts and individual help.

But more children means more food, more beds, more clothing and more workers. And all this means an increase in our budget and more funds from which to draw. The mission fund is not unlimited and perhaps it is best that this is so. We expect to sacrifice. That is part of missionary life. It can be a means of blessing, but we are looking for the Christians back in the churches to do likewise. Self-denial is almost an unknown characteristic these days; yet how thrilling to have the privilege of giving up something for the sake of the One who left all of heaven for us.

There are still many who are unreached in this vast stretch of sand, sage brush, mesas and mountains which is formally known as New Mexico. Many hundreds of Navajos still sit in the darkness and hopelessness which have surrounded their people throughout the centuries. Many more little children, alert and precious, are still sitting in their hogans, waiting for the time when they, too, shall be able to come to school and join these who have already learned far more of eternal truths than their parents ever dreamed of learning.

This Thanksgiving season let the Lord direct your giving that it may be a real sacrifice, willingly given unto Him. He will change those coins of earth into eternal souls which shall praise Him through the ages that we may rejoice together in His mercy and love.

set up special times to pray for home missions? How is it that so often on the 15th day of the month, which is prayer day for all Brethren, there are so few on hand to pray and even then home missions is often forgotten? It is our experience it is true that not many churches can say that their prayer program includes a vital and never-forgotten spot for Brethren home missions.

Men and money; men and money—no testimony for Christ can grow without increasing quantities of these absolute essentials.

How can they hear without a preacher? The answer is, they cannot. How can they have a preacher? Local churches and pastors must lead young people into a vision of the need and so present the Word of God that the Holy Spirit can lead our young men and women into full service. We cannot establish and build new churches without men. Our young people must be shepherded and kept for our own extension program else we will die. This task lies largely with the local church. From the local church must come the funds to help pay the salaries of these trained young people as they are sent into the field to pioneer for Christ.

The cost of buying property and building churches in this day is heartbreaking and discouraging. Nevertheless, the testimony of Christ must increase. The only source of help available is the children of God. We have an open Bible in the NFBC. We know the Gospel and have read the commission to evangelize. Should anything more be necessary?

Increase your home-mission offering this year! We need at least $200,000 to meet the challenges just ahead in establishing and building Brethren churches!

Colburn.

The ground was broken on Sunday, Oct. 23, 1955, for the new Grace Brethren Church, Fort Lauderdale, Fla. This will be the first church of our National Fellowship of Brethren Churches in the state of Florida. More than 70 people gathered on the building site located at 1800 N.W. 9th Avenue to take part in the ceremony. The group will continue to meet in the North Lauderdale Improvement Association building until the proposed new building is completed.

Rev. Larry Love, pastor of the Bethany Presbyterian Church of Fort Lauderdale, brought a splendid message with a real challenge to every one present. He stressed the theme that though we build the building, only God can build the church.

Members of the church already had some materials stockpiled, looking forward to the time of building. Some of the Brethren Construction Company members were on hand to begin immediately the construction of the church. Other members will be joining as the work is completed on the other building programs.

The charter membership closed on Oct. 2 with 22 adult members. Two more Brethren families have moved to Fort Lauderdale and many new contacts have been made. Brother Colburn says, "The future looks good."

The Lord Blesses in Clayhole, Ky. Meeting

By Sewell S. Landrum

From October 3 to 26 the people around the Clayhole Brethren Church received some wonderful spiritual blessings. Charles Kiloski, a young evangelist from South Orange, N. J., was the speaker for these meetings. The two weeks of meetings proved to be the very thing our church needed. All together there were more than 40 decisions, 16 for salvation and the remainder were rededications. On the last Saturday afternoon a large number of our church members gathered in the church for a special prayer service. We had a wonderful time of fellowship together in confession and prayer. That night we had some wonderful results as we saw quite a number confess Christ as Saviour. At the Sunday morning service more than 25 Christians came to dedicate their lives fully to the Lord. These folks continued in prayer long after the other folks had gone home. Sunday evening several others came to Christ. We decided to continue the services for three days. As a result of this, three more decisions were made. If there is anything that Satan hates, it is a Christian on his or her knees before God. During the last three days Satan worked over time, but in spite of his efforts the Lord blessed the meetings.

Sewell S. Landrum

Almost every service found the church filled to capacity. Many times it was necessary to use extra chairs to take care of the overflow crowd. The average attendance was about 165. The love offering for Brother Kiloski was the best we have ever seen in our church.

While the meetings were going on at Clayhole, the WCTU and the ministers of Jackson were busy organizing a union campaign for Breathitt county and Jackson. The meeting is to be held during the month of March, 1956. Brother Kiloski's evangelistic team will have charge of the meetings.

Brethren, pray for us.

Get Me a Soap Box!

By Lewis C. Hohenstein

Back in my schooldays when some one became agitated or worked up over a favorite subject and would vociferously sound off like a "crusader", someone would yell, "Get a soap box." When home missions and the great need in America today is being discussed, I feel like asking for the soap box. America, with all of her wealth, with all of her culture, with all of her industrial know-how, yes; America with all of her religion is in dire need. That need is for the individuals who comprise this great and blessed nation of ours to know the transforming power of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Lewis C. Hohenstein

WE MUST GET A VISION OF THE NEED:

Every newspaper that we pick up has headlines screaming at us of the awful toll of sin in America. This year the taxpayers of this country will pay approximately 16 billion dollars as the bill for crime. Seventeen thousand dollars are being spent every minute on intoxicating beverages. One million of our youth will be arrested for some crime this year. Yes; I know what you think as you hear these statistics. "It's horrifying, but what can I do?"

What can you do? You can do a lot once you get the vision that God would have you to get of the situation. Too often we think that having mentioned the home-mission work to the Lord in our devotions and having given a portion of our means at the Thanksgiving season relieves us of our responsibility. These things we ought to do, remembering that they are not the end but the means to accomplish the end. The vision that I am certain we need is one that will cause us to look out upon the multitude and have compassion upon them, seeing them as "sheep having no shepherd." Home missions will become a challenge to our soul when we see our next door neighbor as our Lord sees him, lost and undone. When we recognize that the man at the machine next to ours at the factory is headed for a Christless eternity if we fail to act, when the grocer, tailor, druggist, newspaper boy and the man we touch daily in our lives is seen to be doomed to an eternal state of damnation without Christ.

I would that it were in my power to tear away the bars and let you look into hell and see these souls, not as they are now in a state of Christ rejection, but as they will be when their state will be that of being rejected of Christ. Many of us have loved ones of our own flesh and blood, friends of whom we think dearly, living in unchurched areas of this great land of opportunity. Care we not for their souls? Dare we not pay the price?

After the vision—

WE NEED VOLITION:

I need not labor to bring you the picture of the need. Our pulpits are daily used for that purpose. The appalling thing is that knowing these things seems to be of little value. We often remain in our apathetic condition. What we need is a will to work.

We need a holy compulsion, a selfness willingness to do the job. Oh, for men and women who are willing, willing to say, "Here am I; use me"! Determine in your heart that you will surrender your will to the will of God. "That you may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" (Rom. 12.2).

God's holy will in your life will produce—

A GODLY VITALITY:

Activity without purpose is foolishness, and purpose without activity is death. God never inspires men with a will without also empowering him to act. God has raised up the Brethren Home Missions Council as an instrument through which YOU can actively serve the Lord in reaching your neighbor, your friends, your loved ones, and the unchurched multitudes in America.

The Brethren Home Missions Council was not designed to use you, but was designed as an instrument that you can use to fulfill your responsibility in reaching the lost in this country.

"Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35). As a director in the Brethren Home Missions Council I can assure you that our only desire is to let you use us for reaping precious souls for Christ.

Bulldozer at work

Thomas E. Hammers, pastor of the View Ridge Brethren Church, reports that the excavating is finished and they are getting ready for the footings and foundation. He added that the weather had been fine for six weeks, but it started raining after starting the church. Pray for good weather to get the church under roof.

INCREASED PRODUCTION

By Tom Bailey, Supt., Brethren Construction Company

Do you think it will work? How much will we save? Since these questions were first heard by this writer in spring of 1951 the Lord has revealed himself in a marvelous way. The answer to these and a multitude of other questions has been apparent. A mobile construction company does work! The savings vary, but in every case they are substantial! From the initial 17 months at Dayton, Ohio, schedules have been sped up. Two jobs (York, Pa., and Goshen, Ind.) have been completed in very close to five months each. The abundance of cooperation of volunteer labor was a real factor in reducing these construction schedules.

From the one member at Dayton the Brethren Construction Company has increased to seven men. One evidence of the Lord's leading has been the vision for the work that He has given each one of the crew. During the first year of operation, when it seemed unwise to make any committal to additional personnel, the Lord led three men to enter the work on the basis of a wage of $1.50 per hour as long as there was work. A few short weeks ago the policy of accepting single men into this ministry was adopted. This has increased the personnel to seven. Even before the personnel increased to seven it was decided to divide into two groups in order to get a second crew operating. Brother Vernon Latham, who had been carrying much of the responsibility of the actual construction, was given the job of heading up this second unit. At this writing they are completing their first project, Parkersburg, W. Va. Brother Latham had already moved to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to begin the project there. Much of the "ground work" has been laid very well by the building committee and the pastor.

The idea of a Brethren Construction Company was entertained by the home-mission board for a considerable time. Only after much prayer and waiting upon the Lord, was the decision made to actually launch a trial unit in the field. The project was chosen which was to prove to be the acid test; namely, the Patterson Park Brethren Church in Dayton, Ohio. With the Lord ever near to guide and the patience of the pastor and congregation the work of construction was successfully concluded. Along with much valuable experience there came the knowledge that talents could be acquired by His Grace in this day even as in Moses's day when God raised up men and women to build the tabernacle. Almost daily the request is voiced to God by one or more of the men to give added skill and talents for a more effective and abundant ministry to His glory. At the very outset the blessing of the Lord was evident on brick laying. The men themselves were pleasantly surprised at what He enabled them to accomplish. At present it has been necessary to revert back to subcontracting brick and block work in most cases until each crew is augmented with sufficient personnel to handle it. Yes; from an idea the Brethren Construction Company has been nurtured by the Lord into a full-fledged organization of two crews and the third crew being sought out by prayer. God has graciously shown us the field and led us through many difficult paths. The needs are greater now than at the time the first unit was sent to the field. There has been expansion into two units.

There are three manmade barriers to further expansion and exploitation of this ministry. The first is that of prayer. If everyone who knows of the needs of this work would pray faithfully and regularly, the results would be astounding. An expanded construction company, which at present is only visionary, could care for not only home-mission churches but branch out into the construction of Christian day schools, expanding established churches, parsonages and other denominational enterprises. Consider what a 10 or 15 percent saving on the total construction program in all phases of the brotherhood would amount to in even one year. Beloved all can pray! Will you? The second barrier is

DRYHILL, KY. (Miss Evelyn Fuqua, missionary)—

We are thankful for our new well at the chapel. We had to dig 100 feet to get water, but we'll have to dig deeper for dollars to get the electric pump. We are looking forward to the time when the water will be coming into a new house. (WMC project.)

We now have a Brethren Boys Club workshop 12x16, and it was built by the older boys. None of them are saved, but we are praying the workshop will be a starting place in reaching them for the Lord.

YORK, PA. (Gerald Polman, pastor)—

A new record attendance was set on Sunday, Oct. 23. It was Rally Day, and we had 113 in Sunday school and 120 for the morning worship service. On the same day we had 50 take part in our communion service during the evening. These were new records since occupying our new building and were the result of much calling and planning.

CLEVELAND, OHIO (Robert S. Cessna, pastor)—

The first baptismal service was held in our newly completed auditorium on Oct. 30, 1955. Some time ago it was a great blessing to baptize a lady 82 years old in the river not far from the church. Attendance at the services continues to show increases from week to week, and we praise Him for every blessing that has come our way.

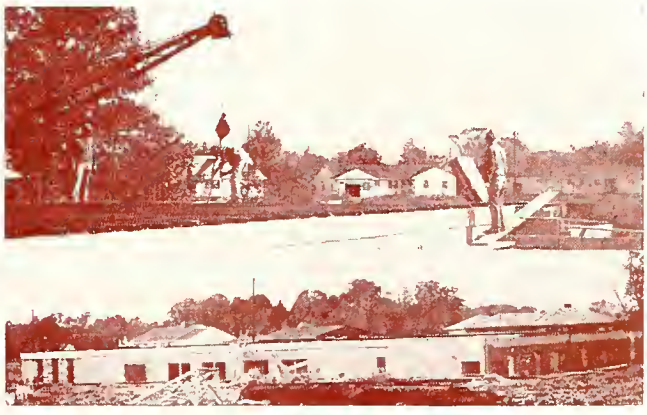
GRANDVIEW, WASH. (Robert Griffith, pastor)—

We had a good day Sunday with 70 in Sunday school. Next Sunday is Rally Day, and we are aiming for 90 plus. The work was just one year old in September, and an anniversary party was held following an evening service. The cake was provided by and baked by the pastor.

WEST COVINA, CALIF. (Dr. C. H. Ashman, Sr., pastor)—

The Lord hath done wonderous things for us during the recent months. There have been 17 new members added to the church, a Brethren Youth Fellowship and a Sisterhood of Mary and Martha have been organized and are on the job. Sunday night and midweek services have doubled in attendance. Specifications for lot improvements and plans for a first-unit building have been adopted.

BERRIEN SPRINGS, MICH. (Gilbert Hawkins, pastor)—



On Sunday, October 30, we had a baptismal service for five people who also united with the church. In recent months we have seen seven first-time decisions for Christ and five rededications of life. The Sunday-school attendance has increased 65 percent this past year, and our offering to foreign missions increased 300 percent. We are well on our way to an increased home-mission offering.

PARKERSBURG PUSHES TOWARD COMPLETION

The new Grace Brethren Church of Parkersburg, W. Va., will soon be ready for occupation. The second unit of the Brethren Construction Company under the direction of Mr. Vernon Latham is working on the "finish up" jobs, making it ready for moving-in day. When this building is finished, the next one will be built in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

ELYRIA, OHIO, MAKES PROGRESS ON THE NEW CHURCH

Work on the new Grace Brethren Church of Elyria, Ohio, is progressing rapidly, and the Brethren Construction Company is working to get it under roof before the severe winter weather settles in on this northern Ohio city. Mr. Thomas Bailey, Brethren Construction Company superintendent, is directing the work on this project as well as overseeing the work of unit number two.

THERE'S A REASON . . .

By David Morsey

Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursels as others see us!
It wads frae monie a blunder free us,
An' foolish notion . . ."

These familiar lines from Robert Burns express the age-old problem of making an accurate evaluation where there is subjective involvement. If we could only stand away from ourselves and make the kind of appraisal that others make when they meet us. Similarly, when we are an integral part of a society or an organization it is difficult for us to judge its character or effectiveness, or even its principles without prejudice. We often are enthusiastic about promoting such an organization, but have never stopped to ask ourselves just what it is that has appealed to us in that particular group. Why is it unique? What makes it more worthwhile than another.

When we come to the subject of Brethren home missions it is a fair question to ask why we should be promoting a Brethren testimony in a community where there are perhaps other denominations already at work. Many people who have had the privilege of being reared in a Brethren church do not realize that while there are thousands of churches in America; yet very fed teach and defend the infallible Word of God. Many that may be classed as orthodox in their theology still are not feeding the sheep with the Word. They are talking about the Bible; they are giving sermons on related topics, and they may even have an evangelistic appeal, but they are not teaching the Bible.

This writer was not brought up in the Brethren Church. In fact, he has only been in it a little over a year. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and had attended schools of several different denominations. At the time he was led into the Brethren Church he was an instructor at Fuller Theological Seminary. His introduction to the Brethren occurred when he was asked to serve as pulpit supply at the Mountain View Brethren Church of La Crescenta. Upon being asked to become pastor he declined on the grounds that he was not in harmony with all of their doctrinal views. Then the Lord spoke to him. He began to investigate the position of the church from the standpoint of Scripture and of history, and found that as a matter of fact their view had strong support from both sources. In a few weeks he accepted the pastorate of Mountain View Brethren Church.

The writer has never before been interested in promoting a single denomination. However, since coming into the Brethren Church he has found a reason to be enthusiastic in promoting it. Based on an objective evaluation, the Brethren Church has a unique place to fill because of its strong Bible-teaching ministry. We must expand the frontiers of the Brethren Church. It is a tragic thing to see even Christian people starving for want of the right food. They are getting plenty of candy and ice cream, but they need the milk and bread and meat of the Word of God. Will we get our people accustomed to strong meat and then send them out into communities where there is no Brethren testimony and let them starve?

teacher, mechanic, builder, nurse, or cook as an adjunct. All staff members spend time in reaching the Navajo people with the Gospel of Christ by the work in the chapel, Sunday school church services, and gospel meetings in the camps of the Navajo people. The mission being isolated and without the many aids found in the city, there are times that each member of the staff finds himself called upon to do some job either menial or mechanically difficult. A day's work may include a chapel service, an engine repair, a burial preparation, and an evening of games in the recreation room. Missionaries must be "all things to all men" if they would lead some to new life in Christ.

Preparations for Increase in Staff

The new school building, provided by the WMC of the Brethren Church, made possible 40 percent increase in enrollment in the student body. Two large classrooms called for two teachers. Miss Garber is now able to specialize with the older and advanced students. Miss Baer is bringing non-English speaking boys and girls into a new language and leading them through elementary readers.

Use of the new large chapel in the school building opened space for an additional dormitory for girls in the main mission building; more beds, more clothing, more baths, more children to watch. Now Mrs. Dorothy Metzger finds a full day's work in this realm.

The moving from the old classroom left an ideal dining hall. Now there is a well equipped dining facility capable of seating 60. Mrs. Mary Baer sees that the tables are well covered three times per day for hungry schoolchildren and staff members.

More buildings mean more water lines, gas lines, more repairs, more cleaning, more vehicles, more machines—more men needed. Mr. Metzger and Mr. Moomaw have come to fill this big need.

Your Part in the Staff Increase

Interested friends of the Brethren Navajo Mission now have eight to uphold in daily prayer for physical strength and wisdom from above. Operating costs have risen proportionally with the addition of new workers and use of additional buildings and equipment. More meals are prepared each day then ever before. More clothing is worn than before. More trips are being made into the camps of the Navajo people with the Gospel. The advances in the work among the Navajo Indians by the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches are dependent upon the support of the Brethren home-missions work by the members of the various congregations.

DAYTON, OHIO. The new address of the secretary of First Brethren Church, Mrs. Don E. Wolfe, is 1025 Shakespeare Ave., Dayton 7, telephone TAylor 7172. Please change Annual.

GRANDVIEW, WASH. A record attendance was set at the First Brethren Church on Oct. 30 when 97 were present for Sunday school. Guest speaker for the day was Rev. Leo Polman. Robert Griffith is pastor.

SPECIAL: Miss Evelyn Fuqua, missionary in Kentucky, and Miss Celina Mares, from Taos, N. Mex., will be doing deputation work in the Northern Ohio District during the latter part of November.

TOPPENISH, WASH. A Bible class, under the direction of Don Farner, pastor of the Harrah Brethren Church, Harrah, Wash., has been started here.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (EP) The "Martin Luther" film has set a record, in that the largest number of prints of a motion picture ever to be released have been produced. It is reported by the sponsors of the film that 1715 prints have been ordered, and it was expected the demand might run to 2,500 prints by Oct. 30. The normal number of prints of any film is between 300 and 500.

SPECIAL: R. I. Humberd was a recent speaker at the Washington Heights Brethren Church, Roanoke, Va.; First Brethren Church, Covington, Va., and Bryan University. On Dec. 5 he will speak at the Moody Bible Institute.

FORT WAYNE, IND. Dr. J. H. Woodward, president of the Arizona Bible Institute was guest speaker at the First Brethren Church on Oct. 30. Mark Malles is pastor.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP) William K. Harrison, commanding general of the U. S. Army's Carribbean Command and president of the Officers Christian Union, told the delegates to the Christian Businessmen's Committee International, meeting here, that they should not be deceived by "reports of increased church attendance" into thinking that a deep and genuine religious revival is under way. He observed that too many Americans are like the soldiers in the foxhole, who ordinarily profane God's name a hundred times a day, yet in time of trouble calls upon a God who really is unknown to him. He urged Americans to "repent and believe," warning that "there is no hope that, apart from God, men can solve their social and moral problems."

CHICAGO, ILL. (EP) The Wagner and Mendelssohn wedding marches will be banned from churches of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago beginning Nov. 27. Three English songs—"I Love You Truly," "Oh Promise Me," and "Because"—also are on the proscribed list. The ban covers music composed by Verdi, Mascagni, Rosewig, Kahn, Millard, Luzzi, and some by Gounod and Schubert. Samuel Cardinal Stritch, archbishop of Chicago, stated "no deviation can or will be permitted." The reason given was that certain music failed to meet the primary requisite of sanctity.

Count Your Blessings

By WM. STEFFLER

Pastor, First Brethren Church
Dayton, Ohio

"In every thing give thanks . . ." (I Thes. 5:18).

November 1864, in the midst of the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln asked the people of the United States to meet in their several places of worship to give thanks to Almighty God for blessings enjoyed. This proclamation marked the beginning of our nation's annual observance of Thanksgiving Day.

This day has become less and less a holy day and has become more and more a holiday. Instead of people gathering in the house of God for a Thanksgiving service, sporting events and celebrations foreign to the original intent of the day takes preference. As the population of America increases, the number of worshipers returning thanks to God for blessings received decreases. Why is this? Surely God, who knows and sees everything, takes note. Does ingratitude hurt His great heart? Does our selfishness give Him pain? Are we, as a nation, drifting from the moorings of the faith of our fathers?

It is well to cease thinking of things we are to get or wish we had and be in the spirit of gratitude for that which we have. The sunny side is the thankful side. Paul tells us in I Thessalonians 5:18: "In everything give thanks . . ." Do I hear someone say, "That is not possible"? But the apostle was never more serious than when the Holy Spirit inspired him to pen these words. He believed it was possible to make every day a Thanksgiving Day. Paul practiced what he preached. Read his letters. They seem to say, over and over again, "Thank you, Lord."

These words, "In every thing give thanks," are more than a bit of advice—they are a command. Any command of God is binding. To refuse to be thankful is to be disobedient.

"In every thing"—that means in sorrow as well as joy; in the things bright with morning or dark with night. Give thanks when we are successful and prosperous; be thankful when we fail or are defeated; thankful when we are well; thankful when we are ill. Be thankful when friends are kind and hand us bouquets and when they are unkind and throw mud. "In every thing" means just what it says!

To the one who says: "I will be thankful when everything is right side up for me," does such a time ever come? Your face may be dry today, but tomorrow tears may come.

It seems the most grateful people are not those who have the most in life but those who have the least.

Paul never allowed shipwreck, stones, whippings or prisons kill his gratitude. Gratitude is the child of faith. You must have a real grip on God to be able to give thanks for everything. You must believe down deep in your heart that "all things work together" for our good and God's glory (Rom. 8:28). Even though you may not understand, remember, it is not necessary to understand, it is only necessary to believe.

If a piece of uncut marble had feelings, it would never appreciate the cuts of the chisel or the blows of the mallet while the sculptor works. But, the sculptor knows what he is about—he is carving an angel or a lamb out of that marble. God is working something out of our life that is to last for all eternity. If we could see the end from the beginning we, too, would thank God for the blows and heartaches that often come our way—they are necessary if we are to be what He wants us to be.

While gratitude is a child of faith, it is a child that needs constant training. We must cultivate the grace of giving thanks. It must be tended and nurtured or it may die. Please do not think that Paul reached this height without a struggle. It will be a real struggle before this place is reached.

The best place to start is to be thankful for the things we call the "common, ordinary blessings of life." For health—our faculties. We fail so often to appreciate the value of our hands, feet, eyes, ears, etc., until we are deprived of their use. So often every function of our body is taken for granted. A night's sleep—what a miracle of mercy it is! A new day and awakening with health to enjoy it once again.

We should be so careful to thank God for our daily food. (See Acts 27:35): "He took bread and gave thanks to God in the presence of them all." For our loved ones and friends, we should daily thank our Heavenly Father. How precious these are to us!

Have we ever considered thanking God for the privilege of service? Let us never think we are doing God a favor by serving. It is a happy privilege and a great honor to be called to serve the Lord in any capacity. How thankful we should be when He lays His hand on us to perform any duty!

Constantly we should thank God for salvation and for Christ, God's "Unspeakable Gift" who made this wonderful salvation possible. All that we have in life is ours because of our blessed Saviour.

Let us thank God for answered prayer. Be more like Christ in this. In John 11:41 we read: "Jesus lifted up his eyes and said, Father I thank thee that thou has heard me." Prayer is so important. It keeps the soul warm; it keeps us near God; it keeps us at the place of blessing.

Christ healed ten lepers and only one returned to say "Thank you." Let us be sure we are in the group that lives a thankful life!

LET US BE THANKFUL

By THOMAS CRAGHEAD

Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
Riner, Virginia

The first American Thanksgiving Day was observed by Plymouth Colony Nov. 23, 1621. The observance of the day became general throughout New England. After the Revolutionary War the usage spread to the middle States and over the west, making progress more slowly southward.

In 1863, Abraham Lincoln formalized Thanksgiving as a regular holiday in the United States. The words of his proclamation are as timely today as they were then:

"The year that is drawing to its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties, which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they come, others have been added, which are of so extraordinary a nature that they can not fail to penetrate and soften the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful providence of almighty God . . . It has seemed to me fit and proper that His gracious gifts should be solemnly, reverently, and gratefully acknowledged as with one heart and one voice by the whole American people. I do, therefore, invite my fellow citizens . . . to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of thanksgiving and praise to our beneficent Father who dwelleth in the heavens. And I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to Him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also, with humble penitence for our national perverseness and disobedience, commend to His tender care all those who have become . . . sufferers in the lamentable civil strife . . . and fervently implore the interposition of the almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and restore it . . . to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility, and union."

Through the years of the history of our country, Thanksgiving Day has been observed. In the early years of struggle, our forefathers were definitely thankful for the blessings received from God. However, it now seems that Thanksgiving has lost its real meaning. Too many think of Thanksgiving as a time to attend some special football game or a day out of the schoolroom or a day of feasting. This year, let us observe Thanksgiving in the real sense.

As a nation, let us be thankful for the blessings poured out upon us by God. A year of prosperity, a year of peace has been the experience of our country. Are these blessings deserved? Day after day we read in the newspapers stories about murder, adultery and robbery. The highways of our country are littered with bottles and cans having been emptied of their alcoholic contents. How can a Holy God pour out blessings upon a country dominant with sin? David said: "The Lord is merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and plenteous in mercy. He will not always chide; neither will he keep his anger forever. He hath not dealt with us after our sins; nor rewarded us according to our iniquities" (Ps. 103:8-10). As a nation let us turn from the evil way and offer real praise unto God for His goodness.

As individuals, let us be thankful, for it is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord. The source of our daily provisions is God. The psalmist wrote: "He causeth the grass to grow for the cattle, and herb for the service of man: that he may bring forth food out of the earth, and wine that maketh glad the heart of man, and oil to make his face to shine, and bread which strengtheneth man's heart" (Ps. 104:14-15).

Then let us be thankful for the love of God. Sometime ago a young man came to me seeking advice. He was very much downhearted and made this statement: "I have no home and nobody loves or cares for me." This provided an opportunity to point out to this young man that there is some One who loves him. Turning in my Bible to John 3:16 I read these familiar words to him: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." After reading this passage of Scripture, and discussing the fall of man into sin, the young man came to realize that there is some One that loves him.

As individuals let us observe Thanksgiving this year with the feelings as expressed by the song writer:

"Love sent my Saviour to die in my stead,
Why should He love me so?
Meekly to Calvary's cross He was led,
Why should He love me so?

Nails pierced His hands and His feet for my sin,
Why should He love me so?
He suffered sore my salvation to win,
Why should He love me so?"

As a denomination let us be thankful. The blessings of the Lord have been so abundant upon the Brethren Church that one cannot begin to count them. It has been thrilling to hear the reports of victory from the various organizations of the denomination. Let us realize anew that all that has been accomplished in the Brethren Church is the result of God having looked upon us with favor. As we express our thanks unto the Lord for the victories of the year, let us be determined that we will ever seek and follow the will of God.

Let us be thankful as a nation, as an individual and as a denomination by spending much time in prayer and praise unto the Lord. These words of Calvin Coolidge should challenge each of us, "We have been a most favored people. We ought to be a most generous people. We have been a most blessed people. We ought to be a most generous and thankful people."

Two Months of Vital Importance

December and January are months that have been set aside by our churches as a period to call special attention to the ministry of Grace Theological Seminary and College, and to present its needs to the people of our congregations. The school is not the responsibility alone of a group of administrative officers and faculty. It is the responsibility of the entire Brethren Church. This is only properly so, for the entire Brethren Church benefits from the school's existence. Have you ever considered seriously what our church would be today were it not for Grace Seminary? What woud be the condition of home missions or foreign missions had it not been that young men and women were given a place of training? What would have been the state of our churches—perhaps your church—had it not been for a school devoted to the training of young men who could become Brethren pastors?

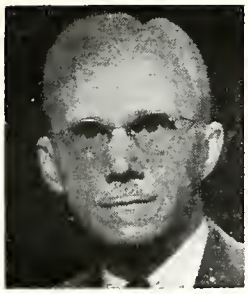
The work of a school does not have the popular appeal to the average individual that missions presents. It does appeal, however, to the thoughtful person who is wise enough to realize that the future not only of home and foreign missions but of all our churches and every other department of our denominational program depends upon the existence and maintenance of Grace Seminary and College. Pastors and laymen, will you give special emphasis to the work of the school in your various meetings during the next two months?

The Financial Need

The amount necessary to operate Grace Seminary and College, apart from other sources of income such as tuition, fees, etc., is $6,500 per month. A quick glance at the school's financial report each month (see pg 749) will show how near the need is met. The offerings for October, given to the school's General Fund, amounted to $5,442.22. While this is considerably better than August ($2,506.22) and September $(2,147.71), the October offerings were still more than $1000 short of the average amount necessary to operate the school. We do appreciate greatly the way many churches responded to the recent appeal. It is not necessary for Grace College and Seminary to be a burden to any church in our national fellowship. Means are provided which, if made available and regularly called to the attention of Brethren people, will furnish all the funds necessary to operate the school. These means are not new, but are suggested again this month as we enter the period devoted particularly to the presentation of our educational interests.

What You Can Do To Help

The financial needs of Grace Seminary and College are met to a small extent by tuitions and fees. In the seminary Brethren young people are given a scholarship and are, therefore, not required to pay tuition. Three means have been provided for God's people to participate in the school's ministry. The first, and most essential of these is prayer. Is the school on your daily prayer list? Will you see that Grace is mentioned each week in the prayer requests at your church? The second means is the little monthly envelopes. A packet of these is available to every individual who desires to participate in the Grace Seminary and College Monthly Plan. In the immediate future these envelopes will be distributed in your church. An increasing number of our churches are inserting these envelopes at their proper places into the boxes of regular church offering envelopes. Wherever this has been done the offerings for the school have greatly increased. Whatever the method, see that you have a supply of the little envelopes and determine to have a part in the big work they are doing. The third means is the Annual Offering to be received on Sunday, Jan. 29, in our churches. Set this date aside now, set a goal for your church, and pray and work toward that goal. We have faith to believe that God will supply every need through his people if this systematic program is carried out. Can we depend upon you?



Winona Lake Christian Assembly Officers

Since Winona Lake is the home of our national conference and the center of our Brethren interests, our pastors and congregations may be interested to know that two members of the Grace Seminary Administration are now members of the Board of Directors and Executive Committee of the Winona Lake Christian Assembly. For the current year ending in August of 1956 the officials are as follows: Mr. R. G. Le Tourneau, President of the Corporation and chairman of the Board of Directors; Mrs. Helen A. Sunday, vice-president of the Corporation; Dr. Paul R. Bauman, vice-chairman of the Board of Directors; Dr. Alva J. McClain, secretary of the Corporation and the Board; Mr. Elmer B. Funk, treasurer of the Corporation and the Board; Dr. J. Palmer Muntz, Bible Conference Director; Mr. Robert Hughes, executive manager.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Board of Directors are R. G. Le Tourneau, Helen A. Sunday, Paul R. Bauman, Alva J. McClain, Elmer B. Funk, J. Palmer Muntz, V. Raymond Edman, Lloyd H. Knox, Ford S. Mason, J. F. Strombeck, and P. J. Zondervan.

Dr. McClain

The Second International Congress On Prophecy

Dr. Hoyt

Two members of the faculty of Grace Theological Seminary, Dr. Alva J. McClain, president, and Dr. Herman A. Hoyt, dean, were part of a nationwide group of distinguished Christian leaders to participate in the program of the Second International Congress on Prophecy, conducted November 6-13 in New York. Each appeared twice on the program. Dr. McClain's subjects were: "Premillennialism as a Philosophy of History" and "Pretribulation Rapture and the Commentators." Dr. Hoyt spoke on "The Last Trump" and "A Chronology of Revelation."

For some time, a number of Christian leaders, whose spiritual discernment is universally respected, shared the feeling that another International Congress on Prophecy, patterned after the Congress held in 1952, should be called "to assess the prophetic significance of the present hour and to clear the theological atmosphere which of late has been showing a tendency to condense around some vital junction point of Eschatology."

The Congress was sponsored by an interdenominational committee of over 60 Christian leaders and the American Association for Jewish Evangelism. Among the participants, in addition to Drs. McClain and Hoyt, was Dr. William Kerr, pastor of the Hinson Memorial Baptist Church in Portland, Oreg., who graduated from Grace Seminary in 1942. Sessions of the Congress were held in the Calvary Baptist Church of New York.

A mainfesto was prepared by a special committee appointed for this purpose to represent the faith of the entire group assembled, especially on points of eschatology, giving particular thought to the proper placing of these points of eschatology in the entire system of Christian truth. The manifesto was then presented by a chairman of the committee to the entire group assembled on Friday night. It was adopted without a dissenting vote. The manifesto is to be placed in a book containing the messages of the conference. The messages themselves will more clearly unfold the eschatology points of the manifesto. Copies of the book will be available from the American Association for Jewish Evangelism, Winona Lake, Ind.

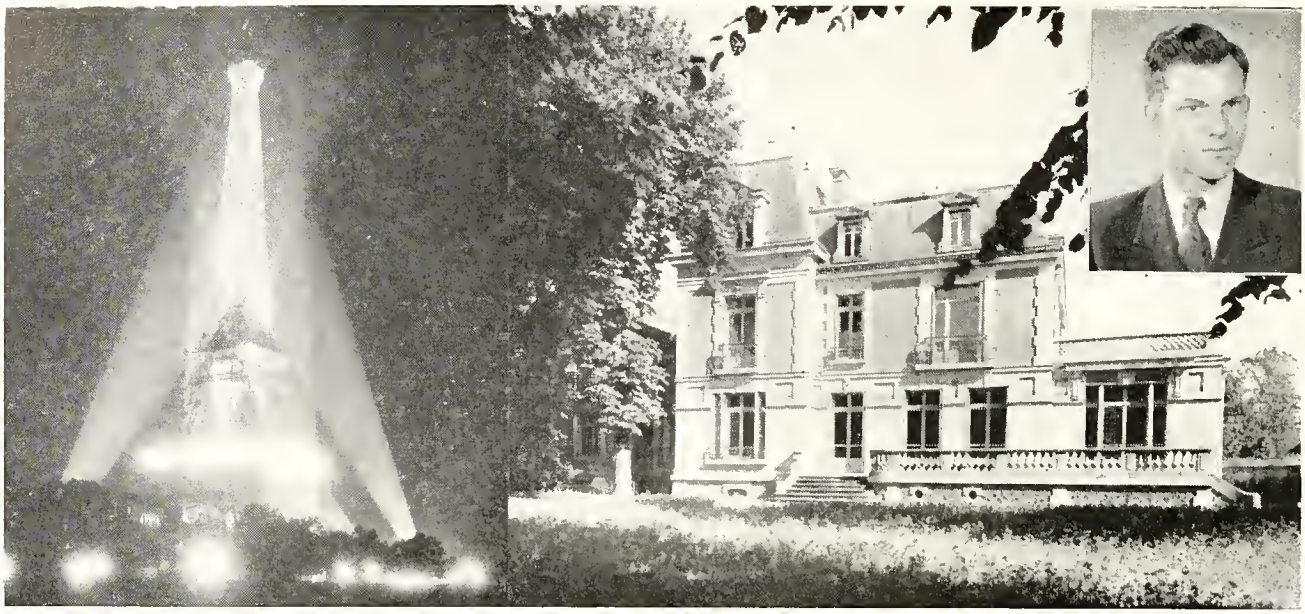
MANIFESTO–1955

The world situation has changed little since the First International Congress on Prophecy convened in this church and city in 1952. If any changes have occurred, these have found expression in the intensification of conflict among the nations and the increase of fear and perplexity in the hearts and minds of men.

The knowledge of God, and the salvation He has provided in Jesus Christ our Lord, is still, and forever will be, mankind's supreme need.

Therefore, we, representatives of the churches of God scattered abroad, assembled in the Second International Congress on Prophecy, at Calvary Baptist Church, New York City, November 6-13, 1955, hereby send greetings, and the expression of our innermost faith, to our fellow-Christians everywhere, and to all men and women who have ears to hear.

We believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments have a message which is relevant to our times, and we affirm our faith in their full verbal inspiration and their divine infallibility and authority. In these Scriptures is revealed the sovereign plan of God in relation to the gentile nations, the people of Israel, and the church of God, a plan which is being worked out in history and shall have its culmination at the second coming of Christ.



We believe that the crowning revelation of this inspired Book is the Gospel of the grace of God in His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord, who in the fullness of time became incarnate by the miracle of virgin birth, lived on earth a sinless life, suffered and died upon the cross as our divine substitute, rose again bodily from the grave, ascended into heaven to sit at the Father's own right hand until the clock of prophecy strikes the unrevealed hour of His coming for the church. All who believe this glorious Gospel have eternal life as the free gift of God, complete deliverance from the penalty of sin, and shall not come into judgment but have passed from death unto life.

We believe that Christ is the Head of the church which is His body, composed of all true believers from Pentecost to the Rapture. This divine program for the church, the calling out from Jews and gentiles a people for His name, is distinct from His prophetic program for the nation of Israel and does not fulfill Israel's millennial hope.

We believe in the personal and imminent coming of Christ for His church, when the dead in Christ will be raised and living believers will be translated to meet the Lord in the air. The church will then be judged for rewards, joined to Christ the Bridegroom in the figure of marriage, and remain forever with the Lord.

We believe that following the coming of Christ for the church, the closing events of the times of the gentiles and the 70th week of Daniel's prophecy will be fulfilled on earth. This period will be characterized by fearful divine judgments upon the wicked world. The great tribulation, the predicted time of Jacob's trouble, will be fulfilled in the second half of Daniel's 70th week

The Eiffel Tower at night (left), towering 984 feet over the city of Paris, forms a fitting symbol of the gospel light that is now shining in France, partly through the influence of Grace Theological Seminary. The European Bible Institute and Grace Theological Seminary

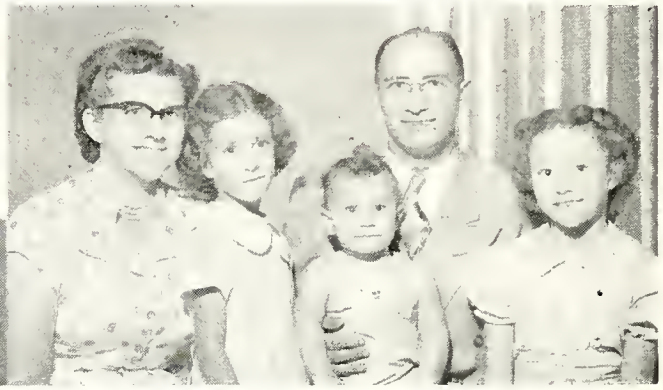
Editor's note—Few people realize that, in addition to the work of the Brethren mission in France, where Grace alumni are serving, the influence of Grace Theological Seminary is being felt at another institution in the city of Paris. There two missionary couples have been at work for Christ, and this year Grace College is privileged to have as a member of its student body one of the young men from the European Bible Institute.

By Rev. Robert Munn, '51



The European Bible Institute is located in the suburbs of Paris, France and is operated by the Greater Europe Mission. The school was founded four years ago and has for its purpose the training of European nationals to take the Gospel to their own people. It has been wonderful to see the hand of the Lord in this work as semester after semester the student body grew from nine to forty at the end of five semesters. Students from almost every Western European country, as well as the Near East, were enrolled until 16 different nationalities were represented in our student body. Twenty students have already finished the two-or three-year course and are now laboring for the Lord in England, Holland, Germany, France, Switzerland, Cyprus, Lebanon, North Africa and the Belgium Congo.

The friends of Grace Theological Seminary will be interested to know that on the faculty of EBI are three former students from Grace. It has been my privilege for four years as a Grace alumnus to teach these young people the Word of God which was so faithfully taught to me in the classrooms of the seminary. We have also the Rev. and Mrs. Florent Toirac who have been teaching in EBI for the past two years. One of our three-year graduate students, Andre Kasak, with his wife, and George Cone, of the Foreign Missionary Society of Brethren Churches, is carrying on the work in Lyon in the absence of Rev. and Mrs. Fred Fogle. Another student is now enrolled in Grace College (See next pg.).

I am sure it must be a cause of satisfaction for those who so faithfully support Grace Seminary and for the professors who faithfully labor there to know that their labor is not in vain in the Lord. Grace Seminary, indirectly, is playing an important role in the evangelization of Western Europe and the Near East through EBI students!

FROM CHINA and GERMANY To GRACE COLLEGE

By Friedrich Burklin

Since I have come to this school of Grace Theological Seminary and College I often have been asked, when people heard I was from Germany, what brought me to Grace.

In order to give a full answer I have to go back many years when I still was in China, where I was born, inasmuch as my parents have served as missionaries there for 25 years. In 1948 I accompanied my father on an evangelistic trip to our neighboring country. We walked more than 120 miles through territory where people lived who had never heard of Jesus Christ. I had many advantages over the young missionary candidates who had to learn the difficult language and had to become adjusted to an environment and mode of living so strangely different to their own.

Having spent some time in the interior of China right on the mission station, it was possible to observe the trends. I realized that in a few years the national Christians would find it necessary to take over the responsibilities of the church work themselves. It was both proper and desirable. They would furnish pastors, evangelists—yes, even missionaries of their own. The days of a pioneer missionary would have come to a close, and he would then take the position of an advisor. Yet in the field of training and preparing national Christian workers the experience and help of a missionary still would be in demand. So I decided to get a sound academic education which should enable me to enter a teaching ministry.

In 1949 I came to Germany. China had closed, but I never felt released of the call to the ministry even if it could not be in the land of my birth. After a lapse of five years in schooling I entered a German "gymnasium" in 1950 and took my baccalaureate. Then I started out in the University of Heidelberg enrolling as a student of theology. I put my trust in the Lord that He would preserve my faith throughout the years of theological training, for I knew that very few, if any, of the professors would be born-again believers. But I did not stay long. My active participation during my summer vacation in evangelistic campaigns helped me especially in my decision to quit the university. My faith might be kept, but would I come out with the spirit of a true pastor, or with that of a true Christian worker? Would I not in the four or five years of my schooling there accumulate a row of books between the people and me? Would not my heart knowledge too easily quench the fervor of a minister conscious of his responsibility?

In my opinion there are two main tasks for any minister: to get people saved, and to get them edified or rooted and grounded in the Word. Therefore I left for Paris to become a student at the European Bible Institute there. Beforehand missionaries from the States had mentioned three outstanding seminaries in America to me. They were the Fuller Seminary in Calif., the Dallas Theological Seminary in Tex., and the Grace Theological Seminary. These would be fundamental, Bible-believing schools. In Paris I came into contact then with some of the teachers who had gone through Grace. It did not take long to come to like the European Bible Institute for its sound teaching and its practical program of Christian service carried on at the same time. It was a great experience to sit in classes and learn wonderful truths of the Word and on weekends to go out and preach the truths.

Soon my old interest in a teaching ministry became revived again even in a strange way. I knew I would still have to obtain an academic training, never having lost a respect for good education and the merits of scholarship. But I wanted to get it from Christian teachers and as I could not get it in Germany, I "arose and went" and came to beautiful Winona Lake, to Grace school with its fine Christian atmosphere.

My desire now is to become a useful and yielded instrument in my Master's hand, fit for service in any place, but especially Europe.

and will be abruptly terminated by the coming back of Christ to the earth to deliver His people.

At the return of the Lord with His saints and holy angels, Satan will be bound, the millennial kingdom will be established, and Christ will reign on the throne of David for 1000 years. In His righteous government He will bring peace and justice to the earth, purge out the wicked, bless the righteous, and regather and restore His ancient people Israel.

At the end of the millennial reign, Satan will be loosed to deceive the nations. Many who bere born in the millennium will follow Satan in rebellion against the King and will be destroyed by fire from heaven. The unsaved dead will be raised, judged at the great white throne, and cast into the lake of fire. A new heaven and a new earth "wherein dwelleth righteousness" will be created as the eternal abode of the saints.

In the light of this tremendous prophetic revelation of future events, the message of God in this hour to the world is one of solemn warning of judgment to come. There is no salvation apart from Jesus Christ, and there is no hope of deliverance from divine wrath for anyone who fails to receive Him in faith as Lord and Saviour. In this hour of impending consummation of the ages, the appeal to the world to receive Christ was never more urgent.

The prophetic Scriptures likewise give an impelling call to the church of God to press on in its task of evangelization of every kindred, tongue, and nation. In a day of closing doors to gospel witness, many opportunities still exist to bring the message of salvation to millions of Jews and gentiles who have never heard. The time is short. Multitudes have not yet heard. The church should rise in this hour as never before to respond to this Macedonian call.

The miracle of the preservation and present reestablishment of the nation of Israel should be an encouragement to world Jewry to give serious consideration to receiving Jesus Christ as their Messiah and Saviour. While the sovereign divine purpose of God to regather the nation Israel and establish them in the millennial kingdom will certainly be fulfilled, the present urgency remains for individuals to receive salvation in Christ and thus escape the tragic sufferings of the prophesied "time of Jacob's trouble." Now is the accepted time to receive Jesus Christ and be saved.

DOUBLE DUTY

Across the country today college students' briefcases are doing double duty. In addition to the expected books and papers, the briefcases overflow with diapers, bottles, and miniature teddy bears.

Yes; the times have changed. Married students are on the increase and are no longer an oddity, although they are still in a definite minority on the American campus.

Grace is no different from the other schools, except we have a higher percent of married students than most schools. Forty-three percent of Grace's student body is married while Indiana University reports only 19 percent of their students are wed.

Exactly one-third of the college wears wedding rings and 56.2 percent of the seminary scholars are married. Top honors go to the seminary middlers, for 65.1 percent of their members are wed. Next come the college seniors with 59.1 percent. Even though only 25 percent of the freshmen are married, they have more married members than do the sophomores or juniors.

Are these people glad they got married before they finished school? The students listed many more advantages than disadvantages to married life on the campus when they were asked for their opinions.

"My grades have improved since I got married," said one student. "I stay home and study now."

"I just couldn't understand Hebrew before I was married," declared another student.

The married students listed as the greatest advantage the fact that "the other half" gave encouragement and purpose that they found nowhere else. Working wives and living outside the dorm were listed as financial aids.

Disadvantages included additional work and responsibilities, the loss of dorm fellowship, and an occasional clash over a balance between study time and family life.

In spite of any inconveniences, the scholar-husbands and the schoolgirl-wives are very pleased with their double duty.—Elener R. Norris.

OPERATION "SCAT!"

"Operation Scat," Oct. 9, 3:30 p. m., Peru 31 and 24. To the college seniors these words and numbers made sense. To the college juniors they only added up to "Senior Sneak, Complete Success!"

After a preliminary scare the preceding Friday resulting in missing distributor rotors, the seniors bade farewell to Ted Franchino and his associates and headed south to Brown County State Park.

Sunday evening the "Sneakers" attended services at Cadle Tabernacle in Indianapolis and then traveled the short distance to Franklin, Ind., where overnight accommodations had been arranged.

Rising early on Monday morning, the group's 19 members, including Prof. and Mrs. John Rea, drove to the park to spend the day enjoying the beauties and recreational facilities of the area. Activities ranged from football to soccer to a visit to Lake Strahl and horseback riding near the historic Abe Martin Inn.

The day ended all too soon, but the memories of the "Sneak of the Seniors" will last for a long time, not only for those who participated but also for those juniors who missed the boat.—Adapted from a story by Chuck Winters.

JUST PLAIN WHEELS

Tricycle wheels and college students sound like an odd combination, but the "third shift" of workers at Sun Metal Products, Inc., of Warsaw, has proved otherwise. The time between 11:30 p. m. and 6 a. m. at Sun Metal is known as the third shift. This shift has 20 workers, 17 of which are students of Grace Seminary and College. These workers make wheels for tricycles, bicycles, doll buggies, baby strollers and carriages, hospital carts, etc. Although at the company's last analysis, third shift was in second place in the amount of production per hour, Foreman Cecil Lewis, also a seminary student, says the students are hard workers and are striving to to regain the lead in production output that they had last spring.

Assisting an undertaker, being a tree surgeon, nursing, and working in greenhouses are some other unusual occupations that are being pursued by the 58 percent of the student body who work.

The 156 working students proved their ambition by their 4084 work hours in one week. This ambition will surely carry over into their lifetime service for the Lord.—Jeanette Turner.

AUDIENCE THRILLED BY CONNER'S AMAZING PERFORMANCE

The Concert and Artist Series got off to a thrilling start as the Marimba and Vibraphone virtuoso, Jack Conner, gave a superb performance on these unusual concert instruments. Among his outstanding numbers were Sonata No. 3 by Mozart; Partita in B Flat by J. S. Bach; Paganini's Caprice No. 13; Four Impressions by Tansman and his own arrangement of Theme Militaire. John Kessler, Conner's accompanist, also performed with unusual artistry in his two solo numbers and encore. Kessler's own Prelude in F Major and Debussy's Feux d' Artifice (Fireworks) were Kessler's solos. Nancy Weber accompanied Conner in His sacred numbers. Conner ended the concert with an inspiring testimony to the saving grace of Christ in his life.

THE GENESIS FLOOD

By John C. Whitcomb, Jr.
Associate Professor in Old Testament

(PART IV)

Who can imagine the full potentialities for destruction that lay within the gigantic masses of water that moved across our planet during the year of the Genesis Flood? Even the relatively small amounts of water involved in river floods have caused damage that staggers the imagination of modern man. Bridges, houses, immense boulders, and trees are uprooted and swept along as mere pebbles and matchsticks. Such floods seldom achieve a depth of more than a few feet or a very great velocity, and their main force is usually expended within a few hours or days. But when we begin to speak in terms of a flood that "grew mightily and mounted greatly over the earth" and "grew extremely mighty upon the earth" and "prevailed upon the earth one hundred and fifty days," and that covered "all the high mountains that are under all the heavens" (Leupold's literal translation of the Hebrew text), then we must face the fact that we are no longer dealing with phenomena that are familiar to modern science.

Basic Presuppositions

Having shown in previous articles why we believe the Old and New Testaments teach a geographically universal flood, we must now consider briefly the possibilities of such a flood for reshaping the face of the globe. To be sure, much controversy rages today in Christian circles concerning this subject, because many of the tenets and presuppositions of uniformitarian geology are at stake. But to say that some of the theories of historical geology, as taught in modern universities, are no longer subject to questioning or revaluation is to say something that is neither warranted by the facts of science nor the lessons of history. Furthermore, the Christian has a right to look with suspicion upon a "science" that largely depends upon the fantastic and unproved theory of organic evolution for its doctrine of origins and processes. That contemporary textbooks on historical geology, paleontology, and paleoanthropology are permeated with an evolutionary philosophy of nature is obvious to all who have studied such books. And it hardly needs to be stressed that such a philosophy has no room for the Biblical doctrine of fiat creationism and supernatural catastrophism (II Pet. 3:3-7).

The Effects of the Flood

Assuming as we do that the Biblical writers, under the inspiration of God, taught a geographically universal flood, we may rightfully consider what such a catastrophe might have done to the earth. Dr. Henry M. Morris, who received his Ph. D. in engineering hydraulics and hydrology from the University of Minnesota, and who is the head of the Civil Engineering Department of Southwestern Louisiana Institute, writes as follows: "The great volumes of water which were thus turned loose on the earth, both from the 'fountains of the great deep' and from 'the flood-gates of heaven' must, of absolute necessity, have accomplished a vast amount of geologic work in a relatively short period. . . . Erosion and resedimentation must have taken place on a gigantic scale. Previous isotatic adjustments, of whatever sort they were, must have been entirely unbalanced by the great complex of hydrostatic and hydrodynamic forces unleashed in the floodwaters, resulting very likely in great telluric movements. Associated with the volcanic phenomena and the great rains must also have been tremendous tidal effects, windstorms, and a great complexity of currents, cross-currents, whirlpools, and other hydraulic phenomena. After the flood-gates were restrained, and the fountains of the deep were stopped, there must still, for a long time, have been much more geologic work accomplished as the masses of water were settling into new basins and the earth was adjusting itself to new physiographic and hydrologic balances." (From a paper read to the American Scientific Affiliation in its Eighth Annual Convention, 1953.)

Along a similar vein are the conclusions of Merrill F. Unger, Th.D., Ph.D., professor of Old Testament at Dallas Theological Seminary: "The Biblical notices describing the physical causes of the Flood . . . suggest a world-engulfing cataclysm, involving not only a complete change in atmospheric and climatic conditions that produced a continuous 40-day downpour, but also including vast geologic transformations. Gigantic land upheaval and shiftings of the earth's crust evidently lowered land levels, raised ocean beds, and broke up their existing huge stores of subterranean waters, so that dry areas were violently inundated and the entire structure of the antediluvian world radically altered. Nothing less than such a cataclysmic disaster can satisfy the scope of the Genesis passage." (Archaeology and the Old Testament, 1954, p. 61.)

We conclude this discussion of the magnitude of the Flood and its probable effects by quoting from the famous 1200-page commentary, Exposition of Genesis, by Dr. H. Carl Leupold, professor of Old Testament Exegesis in the Capital University Seminary, Columbus, Ohio: "What power behind raging, surging waters! On the one hand, how God's power in keeping the ark amid such dangers stands out the more distinctly! On the other hand, what opportunity for working vast geologic changes lie dormant in these 'mighty' waters! The native force of gabhar is enhanced by one me'odh, 'exceedingly' in verse 18 and by the doubling of the same adverb—a Hebrew superlative—in verse 19. When will geologists begin to notice these basic facts?" (p. 301). "However, at this point note should be taken of the tremendous geological possibilities that lie behind the breaking open of the fountains of the great deep. The vastness of these eruptions must be in proportion to the actual depth of the Flood. . . . So then, the effects caused by the waters of the great deep (1:2), as they surged about on the earth in process of formation, together with the effects brought about by this great Flood, seem to us an entirely adequate explanation for geological formations of every kind . . ." (p. 296).

MISSIONARY WORK ON OUR KNEES

By Virgil R. Newbrander
Missionary to Japan

A hundred and sixty years ago, at the commencement of the new missionary era during a discussion on India, a servant of the Lord said: "We see that there is a gold mine in India, and it is as deep as the center of the earth, and who will there dare to explore it?" Then William Carey, who became later the great missionary, linguist, Bible-translator, and pioneer of gospel work abroad, gave that classical answer: "I will go, I will descend this mine; but you must not forget firmly to hold the ropes!"

What did William Carey mean, when he said: "You must not forget firmly to hold the ropes"? I believe he was cognizant of the spiritual dearth which prevailed in India, his own incompetence, and the warfare he was to face in India, which was "not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Therefore, he pleaded for those who were to remain home to enter this great conflict as "joint-participants" who would labor in the ministry of intercessory prayer. He felt this was an absolute necessity, if he were to be used as a sharp threshing instrument, whereby he might become "mighty through God to the pulling down of strong holds."

Our missionaries, pastors, and friends are dependent upon our ministry of intercessory prayer. I have recently read "Behind The Ranges," which is a biography of J. O. Fraser, of Lisuland, and on one occasion, he writes: "I am feeling more and more that it is, after all, just the prayers of God's people that call down blessing upon the work, whether they are directly engaged in it or not. Paul may plant and Apollos water, but it is God who gives the increase; and this increase can be brought down from heaven by believing prayer, whether offered in China or in England. We are, as it were, God's agents—used by Him to do His work, not ours. We do our part, and then can only look to Him, with others for His blessing. If this is so, then Christians at home can do as much for foreign missions as those actually on the field. I believe it will only be known on the Last Day how much has been accomplished in missionary work by the prayers of earnest believers at home. And this, surely, is the heart of the problem. Such work does not consist in curio exhibitions, lantern lectures, interesting reports and so on. Good as they may be, these are only the fringe, not the root of the matter. Solid, lasting missionary work is done on our knees!"

Are you engaged in missionary work each day? Have you prayed today, by name, for those in Brazil, Africa, Japan, and the world? In your closet you can do as much as the missionary on the field, as you engage in missionary work on your knees. E. M. Bounds has said: "What the church needs today is not more machinery or better, not new organizations or more and novel methods, but men whom the Holy Ghost can use—men [women too] of prayer . . . The Holy Ghost does not flow through methods, but through men. He does not come on machinery but on men. He does not anoint plans, but men . . ." and women who are engaged in missionary work on their knees in behalf of a world lost in sin and the throes of death, for the babe in Christ to grow in the grace and knowledge of the Lord Jesus, and for the servants of God.

Intercessory prayer is not only our privilege but responsibility. Peter succintly sets this forth: "Ye also, as living stones, are built up a spiritual house for a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God through Jesus Christ" (I Peter 2:5 ASV). So every member of the body of Christ is a holy priest, who is to offer up spiritual sacrifices—but not every one practices it. Many are still entirely ignorant of it. Yet this is our privilege. The more the Christian is truly filled with the Spirit of Christ, the more spontaneous will be his giving himself up to the life of priestly intercession. Beloved fellow-Christians, God needs, greatly needs, priests who can draw near to Him, who live in His presence, and by their intercession draw down the blessings of His grace on others. And the world needs, greatly needs, priests who will bear the burden of the perishing ones, and intercede in their behalf.

Are you willing to offer yourself for this holy work? You know the surrender it demands, death to self and putting on Christ, permitting Him to control you that the efficacy of Christ's death and resurrection may be accomplished among men. Oh, be no longer of those who are content to sit idly by and watch the millions march into eternity without Christ! Let nothing keep us back from giving ourselves to be wholly priests—priests of the most High God. May the grace of God cause us to give ourselves to the ministry of intercessory prayer and in the words of the prophet Samuel may we say: "As for me, God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you" (I Sam. 12:23).

Dad's a Freshman

Charles, Elaine, Ernest and Carolyn Bearinger

By Ernest Bearinger
Waynesboro, Pa.

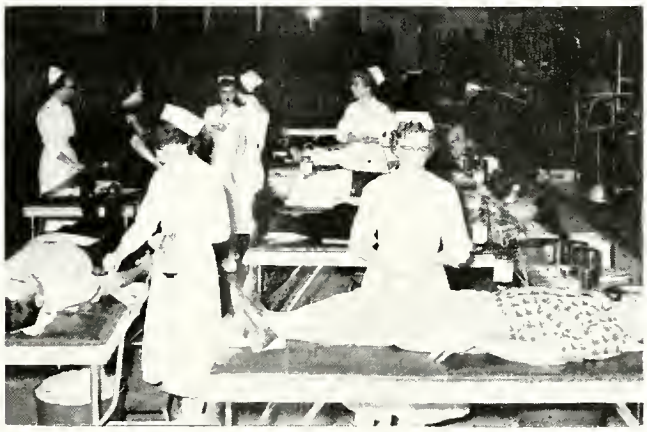
When I didn't leave with the rest of the parents, fellow students looked me over, smiled a little, and then asked, "Are you a freshman"? It was the sixth day of September, 1955, and the occasion was registration day at Grace College.

Never before have I had such a mingling of conflicting emotions. I felt conspicuous because I was old enough to be the father of some of the students who were registering, and regretfully I reflected upon my own years of spiritual barrenness. Yet the very atmosphere at Grace College gave me new challenge and hope for the future.

Three hundred young people, tremendous in their potential as Christian servants, made their selection of study courses. I silently prayed that these would be faithful to their calling and redeem the time, "for the night cometh when no man can work."

God had spoken to me in 1941 and for one year I attended Bible School in Philadelphia, Pa. Opportunity for advancement in the industrial world ended the Bible study and though I intended to be a successful Christian businessman, the effort of becoming successful crowded out the "Christian."

The drift away from spiritual things was imperceptible and effortless. But as a swimmer cannot proceed up stream without effort, so the way back to fruitfulness was not without its effort. However, the Bible says that Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday, today, and forever. His call and His will never change for a single moment; and as the word of the Lord came to Jonah the second time, so to me also. I am thankful for God's faithfulness and that after praying as did David of old: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation," the still small voice again whispered, "Preach the Word."



AS THE OFFICE SECRETARY SEES IT

None, except those who are closely associated with the work of the seminary, can possibly realize the many little; yet very necessary, details that enter into the daily life of a school. Also, few people know anything about the many services extended to our students which are not ordinarily given to students who attend schools even where they must pay tuition. One of these services is the large volume of mimeographed notes which are given to the students without charge. This service, along with a hundred other duties, serve to keep an already busy secretary even busier. It is gratifying, however, to know that the material which is being prepared for the students of Grace Seminary is furnishing them with a storehouse of information and with suggestions of procedure that will prove tremendously valuable in that day when they will be serving Christ in churches all over America and in mission fields around the world. You who have stood by the school with your gifts can have the joy also of knowing that you are participating in this ministry.—Dorothy J. Magnuson.

GRACE STUDENTS DONATE BLOOD

In the annual blood donation program for the Red Cross, many of the students and faculty participated recently. In the above picture Mrs. Paul Bauman attends Marion Thomas of Findlay, Ohio, as he gives blood. Two other nurses from the seminary faculty, Barbara Hulse of Modesto, Calif., and Lois Miller of Juniata-Altoona, Pa., assisted in the work as nurses.

A MOVING PICTURE

1. AUGUST 1. The foundation was dug, footings poured, and the forms built.

2. AUGUST 15. Pouring of the walls for the foundation for the building which is 80 by 120 feet. Considerable work is being provided for some seminary and college students.

3. SEPTEMBER 15. More footings, inside walls, underground plumbing are completed. Finger points to Jack Endicott, superintendent of construction. Note bearing wall which is 12 inches thick.

4. OCTOBER 1. The floors in the basement are all run, and lower partitions completed.

5. OCTOBER 15. Floor joist laid and as of this date, most of the concrete on the ground floor has been poured. The exterior concrete block and brick veneer walls are ready to be laid.

6.-7. OCTOBER 30. The steel truss work for the roof arrived by railroad car, and the steel was then moved to the new site.

AUGUST 26, 1956. The building will be dedicated at 4:00 p. m.

WINONA LAKE, IND. You are invited to turn back one page and see the photographic account of the progress on the new denominational office building being erected here.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. A record total attendance was set Oct. 30 at the Grace Brethren Church when there were 64 in Sunday school, 55 at the morning worship and 42 at the evening service. The church has a membership of 22, but there were 29 in attendance at the Communion service. Oct. 6 a new record was set for attendance at morning worship when 59 were present. Ralph Colburn is pastor.

DAYTON, OHIO. Robert Hoover, a member of the North Riverdale Brethren Church, has been elected president of the Western Ohio Teacher's Association.

EVERETT, PA. The ministers prayer retreat for the pastors of the East and Atlantic Districts was held at the Everett Grace Brethren Church Nov. 14-15. Homer Lingenfelter was host pastor.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. The new address of Rev. and Mrs. J. C. McKillen is 1954 Foxworthy Ave., San Jose 24, Calif. The correct address of Mark Malles is 3310 S. Webster (Page 75 of Brethren Annual). Please change Annual.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. (EP) Lillian M. Jackson, for 38 years housekeeper and cook in a home in nearby Philadelphia's Main Line, has a second position—she's "pastor" of what might be the world's only children's church (there are only two adult members), located in Howellville, Pa. The "church," valued at $35,000 half paid for and half on "trust," is a monument to the Negro woman's faith during 15 years of child evangelism. Her only remaining desire: That one of her converts will be led to take her place when she can no longer carry on.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP) Senator Estes Kefauver, back from a round-the-world trip that included an official tour of Russia, told newsmen that the Soviet government is refusing to build new churches and is deliberately postponing the repair of old ones that were damaged during the war. "They build new business buildings, modernize factories, but do not finish or repair the churches," he declared. "In all the cities, and particularly in Leningrad, we saw a number of historic churches that were under repair—and had been under repair for more than ten years." Senator Kefauver said that not a single church has been built in the new industrial city that has been erected on the site of war-devastated Stalingrad.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Rev. and Mrs. Robert McCormick, Community Brethren Church, express their appreciation for the faithfulness of the brethren in prayer for the recovery and for the gifts to Mrs. McCormick. It will be remembered that Mrs. McCormick was stricken with polio at the National Conference in Portland last August. There is no paralysis but a slight general stiffness and tiredness, for which they praise the Lord.

SPECIAL. (EP) Evangelical mission leaders are quietly investigating the availability of a new device which may utterly revolutionize the foreign mission literature advance now getting into full swing around the world. The U. S. Army has developed a small typewriter-like machine that can print more than 50 foreign languages, including exotic ones as Urdu, Kowi and Pushtu. The 40-pound machine was developed for phychological warfare units to give the Army mobile equipment for printing leaflets for foreign peoples. It is reported that the device is so simple that "nonlinguistic U. S. Army personnel will be able to prepare messages in totally unfamiliar tongues.

CUYAHOGA FALLS, OHIO. Judith Lynn, weighing 7 lbs. 9 oz., and possessing bright red hair, arrived Oct. 20 in the home of Pastor and Mrs. Richard Burch.

ROANOKE, VA. The first service of the Ghent Brethren Church was held 25 years ago on Thanksgiving morning. Robert E. A. Miller is the present pastor.

CUYAHOGA FALLS, OHIO. (EP) The Board of Education has approved the distribution of New Testaments by local Gideons and gospel tracts by other individuals "to pupils who want them." At the same meeting the board approved Bible reading, non-sectarian prayers and talks by religious leaders.

BERNE, IND. A remodeling program will begin about Dec. 15 at the Bethel Brethren Church, including a new ceiling which will be lowered from the present one. Ord Gehman is pastor.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Religious leaders of all denominations and faiths throughout the Nation are endorsing the second annual Safe Driving (S-D) Day which will be held December 1.

Purpose of S-D Day is to demonstrate that traffic accidents can be greatly reduced when motorists and pedestrians fulfill their moral and civic responsibility for safety.

To every community in the land, S-D Day offers this challenge: not a single traffic accident throughout the 24-hour period.

President Eisenhower has declared:

"All of us agree with the purpose of Safe Driving Day. It is to save lives and to prevent injuries. No endeavor could be more worthy of our universal cooperation. None is more urgent."

AN APPEAL . . .

A STATEMENT from THE BOARD ON MINISTERIAL RELIEF

Some Brethren churches and pastors have indicated their intentions of withdrawing from cooperation with our board and substituting social security, which has been made available to ministers since January of this present year. We appeal to every Brethren church and pastor to cooperate with the Board on Ministerial Relief, Inc., regardless of what they do concerning social security. We submit the following for your consideration concerning social security for ministers.

1. The church is not supposed to enter into the social security relations of ministers. The minister enters as a "self-employed" applicant. We would strongly advise all churches to refrain from getting involved in such relationships.

2. The frequent change of pastors makes it most unwise and impractical for churches to care for the cost of social security. There is no guarantee that the percentage for social security will hold to the 6 percent ceiling in the future.

3. Ministers will receive a very limited amount of benefits from social security when deductions, allowances, etc. are made in their reports. This information can be secured from any Social Security Administration office. Figure it out for yourselves, brethren.

4. When ministers are once recorded for social security purposes, there is no withdrawal. You will be compelled to pay the increasing percentage of income until your age of retirement, under the present setup.

5. The amount a minister would receive, even as a maximum, from social security is insufficient for a minimum of needs upon retirement. Also, the amount the Board of Ministerial Relief is able to give the minister is insufficient. The two combined would not more than care for the average minimum. If the minister decides to enter social security, he ought to be in cooperation with the Board on Ministerial Relief also. If he is cooperating, or has been cooperating, with the 1 percent angle of our plan, he ought not withdraw from it, in case he decides to enter social security.

Our advice and appeal is for the Brethren churches in The National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, all of them, to cooperate with our board in sending the equivalent of 3 percent, based on their pastor's salary, to our board quarterly or annually. This is the discharge of a mutual responsibility as far as our aged and infirm ministers and their wives are concerned. Our missionaries could also be included in this obligation. Regardless of what your pastor does as far as social security is concerned, we need the support of all Brethren churches and boards if we are to operate successfully as a board for relief and retirement. This is a mutual plan, not a levy of assessments which most denominations have adopted. Our congregational form of government forbids a mandatory plan, but makes it possible for us to adopt a mutual plan such as this by the cooperation of all our churches. We appeal to every Brethren church. If you are already cooperating in our 3 percent plan, continue to do so. If you are not in the 3 percent plan at present, we urge you to enter in the discharge of this mutual responsibility.

Likewise, we appeal to all Brethren ministers to cooperate in this plan with their 1 percent. This is necessary if you are to receive retirement benefits. In case you decide to enter social security, let it be supplementary, not a substitute for our Brethren plan for retirement and relief. Let's be loyal brethren.

Our booklet committee is busy ironing out the wrinkles and we plan soon to have a booklet available to Brethren churches and ministers setting forth facts and figures, methods and means, and our plans and purposes etc., of our Board on Ministerial Relief. If you desire further information, write either the president or the secretary of our board and it will be sent to you.

Dear Dr. McClain:

Just a line to tell you that I am certainly becoming enthusiastic over the use of the booklet Bible Truths. I have seen that the secret to some of the work of certain denominations is that they carefully instruct all whom they take into their group. For us in the Brethren Church, your book certainly meets the need.

There are many opportunities for talking to men from every walk or every background. Yesterday a young man informed me that he wanted to become a Catholic in order to marry a young lady from that persuasion; after talking to him for a few minutes, I found that he knew nothing of the Scriptures, even though he professed to be a Protestant. He agreed that he was totally ignorant of the Word, but he was willing to learn before he made his final decision in the matter. I am so glad that I have your work to put into his hands, and we are starting a series of instruction classes using it as our text.

Thanks again; may the Lord bless you and the seminary!

In Christ,
Burton G. Hatch

Brethren Youth Fellowship Summer Work Teams

All Brethren young people are urged to mark their home-mission offerings: "B.Y.F. Project." Present your gifts through your local church but be sure to mark them as above. Why? Because funds will be needed next summer to supply youth work teams to our various mission points and camps. This is the home-mission project of the Brethren Youth Fellowship. Last summer nine young people thus served the Lord. This coming season we hope to have many more being used. Your home-mission offering determines how many we can send. Let's lay up a large fund for this need.

Who can serve on these youth work teams? Briefly, any Brethren young person, high school graduate and above, approved by the local pastor, approved by the Brethren Youth Council, of good Christian character, with some leadership ability, and acceptable to the staff at the place of service.

What do they do? They teach, lead, counsel, visit, and assist in every way possible in such places as our Spanish American Mission, Taos, N. Mex., our Navajo mission, Cuba, N. Mex., our Kentucky missions, and in our home-mission churches where needed. In addition, we plan to make youth work teams available to other churches who may request their services.

How much are they paid? Their transportation, room, and board are cared for. In addition, at the end of the summer, they are granted honorariums as available. Therefore, the larger our gifts, the better we will be able to reimburse these young people. Remember, they could earn more in summer jobs. This is a work of sacrifice and consecration. The main purpose is to give them experience while they are at the same time fulfilling a need.

So, mark your home-mission offering "BYF Project." You'll be helping youth to help others.—K. A.

A Workable Youth Plan

By KENNETH ASHMAN

Here's a youth plan that works—

Step 1—Divide your entire group into teams, appointing a good leader to head each team. Appoint adult counselors for each team, preferably husband and wife who have been previously active in youth circles and know what's going on.

Step 2—Have the adult counselors meet at least once each three months for an appraisal and planning session. Outline the program for at least six months in advance, appointing dates when teams are to be responsible for the program or special.

Step 3—Counselors meet with team at least two weeks before each turn to conduct program, arranging service, appointing speakers, and choosing materials.

Step. 4—Counselors follow up teamwork, making sure the plans are being carried out by each member. Assist team in advertising their meeting. Competition here works wonders.

Step 5—Encourage participation in all district and national youth promotions of the Brethren Youth Fellowship, the Brethren Boys Club and the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha. Urge attendance at district rallies and camps, and national Camp Bethany.

Step 6—Conduct a regular schedule of local youth meetings, such as the Sunday devotional service and at least two special sessions each month.

Step 7—Recognize achievements of your local young people, with such services as "Senior Day," for the graduates, "Send Off Sunday," for those going to college or the armed service, and special youth nights as a part of the Sunday evening worship.

Step 8—Arrange personal conferences with each young person of the congregation, talking over problems, plans, and spiritual needs. The pastor is the best person for these conferences.

Step 9—Educate the young people to give their abilities and substances to the Lord's work. Keep them informed of the home-and-foreign-mission projects of the BYF, and the various goals of the SMM, and the BBC. Secure materials and information from the National Brethren Younth Council, Box 617, Winona Lake, Ind.

Step 10—Work this workable plan. It doesn't click automatically. It must be worked by painstaking effort on the part of pastor, parents, counselors, and the young people themselves.

Illustration—Here in Wooster we have BYF following each Sunday evening service. The meeting is 40 minutes in length and is streamlined for greater variety and attainment. One team is responsible for each service. Special speakers coming to the church are always invited to speak to the following youth session. We also have Youth Fellowship meetings each first and third Thursday of the month. These are also planned by the teams, including devotional service and Bible study, recreation, and refreshments. These meetings are in the homes. Currently, for the Bible study, the group is studying the Keith L. Brooks course: "Practical Bible Training." Competition on completion of quarterlies is keen between the fellows and the girls. We enjoy the ministry of the youth choir for each Sunday evening church service. The success of this workable plan locally is due largely to some fine counselors who willingly take the time and spare the energy to keep ahead of the young people.

Note: The above workable plan is presented as a result of a number of requests from pastors and youth leaders pertaining to our Wooster Youth Fellowship. We are not trying to care for all the young people of this area, nor are we going all out for community-wide programs. We feel it more important and rewarding to care for our own young people, including others whom the Lord constantly sends our way.

Churches IN THE News

Philadelphia, Pa.

Our people had prayed earnestly for "God's man", and, praise the Lord, He heard our prayers and sent to us a man filled with the Spirit of God. Since our Bro. Male's coming to us, our work has increased both spiritually and numerically.

William Male, our pastor, came to Philadelphia this past summer in time for our daily vacation Bible school. We had a great time in the Lord, with many precious souls won for Christ. Subsequent to this school, and in conjunction therewith, our pastor began a Friday night Bible class for children up to 15. With the help of Bro. and Sister William Kolb he has put on a great program for the children. Between 50 and 60 children having been attending this class. "Crusaders for Christ" was the name chosen, and the enthusiasm of the children is remarkable. A project of this class has been "missions," and they have given generously. Now they are helping with the purchase of a bus for our church and school. Many of the children go to other churches, some from Catholic homes, but all are vitally interested in learning the Word of God, both through the lessons given and in memorization thereof.

Many souls have accepted Christ, and many have rededicated their lives to Him. Last Sunday 10 were baptized and 11 received into our membership. We are experiencing the working of the Spirit of God in a real way.

We are endeavoring to pay off our mortgage so that we can "own our own church." We have the faith that the Lord will give us a vision of a new church, for our present building is only the Sunday-school building. He is able if we really want Him to work through us and in us!

In the morning worship service we have been studying about the great men of faith in the Bible; in the evening, the doctrines and beliefs of our church. Our pastor has pointed out new thoughts to some of us who have been Brethren all our lives, for which we thank the Lord.

Our prayer meetings have been well attended, and each week we have a great message followed by much prayer. We know this is the key to success in the Lord's work so we are endeavoring to get every member to prayer meeting each week.

We were happy to have Dr. Percy Crawford with us on Rally Day, and 29 souls accepted Christ at the close of a stirring message in our Bible school.

Our pastor has a class in the Bible school for new converts; teaching them their privileges and responsibilities as new babes in Christ. They are fully instructed as to the beliefs of our church before they receive the right hand of fellowship.

Therefore, we praise the Lord for what He is doing for us, and what He will do in the future. There is much, much more that could be said, but the foregoing will give you a small idea of the progress and real joy which we are experiencing, for which we give God all the glory. —(Mrs.) Lois E. Harkness, secretary.

Homerville, Ohio

The Emmons Evangelistic Party of Winona Lake spent October 23-30 with us in special meetings. October 28 was our homecoming with one of the best attended we have shared.

Revival came and how we praise God! God moved the hearts of many of His people. Some came in confession of sin and rededication of life; young people gave their lives for full-time Christian service; others came to receive Christ as personal Saviour. Unsaved folks of the community, whom we had prayed and worked for, came. Some had never been inside of a church before. How we praise God and we thank Him for using the Emmons' in our midst and their untiring effort to win the lost for Christ. We were privileged to be in three of the public schools of the area for chapel services with the Emmons'.

Pictured below is a representative group of men who are all members of the Pike Brethren Church, Conemaugh, Pa. These laymen, together with Clair Gartland, their pastor, have labored nearly three years in erecting their new beautiful edifice which they hope can be dedicated next summer. When this photo was taken the new furnace was being installed by the men, under the direction of Grant Davis, plumbing contractor who is a member of the church.

Davenport, Iowa

Right now, Davenport, Iowa, is undoubtedly one of the fastest growing cities in America. The farm machinery industry, the foundries and machine shops, and the huge Alcoa works are just a start. We were told that several hundred new industries are now planning to locate there because of rail and river transportation advantages. This makes the basis for a swiftly increasing population. The outlying sections are alive with building projects.

We believe that during the meetings we closed on Oct. 23 that a permanent location was definitely purchased. It is in the finest part of the growing residential district north of town. The work has been seriously handicapped because of having to meet in an uptown building away from all residences. Now we hope that they can find some building in which to meet until they are able to build, something close to their new location. Then they can work their new field and have a sizable Sunday school when they move into their new house of worship.

We did a lot of visitation during the meetings and many new families were definitely contacted and we believe will be coming into the work during the days ahead. Attendance at the meetings was very hard to maintain because of conditions under which the work has had to labor. We had to change our place of meeting one night due to previous engagement of the room we had been using.

The pastor, Rev. True Hunt, has been working determinedly on in spite of difficulties, and the Lord will surely let him see fruits of his labors before long. He had just two families of Brethren to help him through the past year. Another family has been attending during the last few months, and others will come into the group as the result of the meetings, we believe. At least, they indicated their purpose to do so.

But Davenport is no different from many of our Brethren works when they started. Some of our strongest churches today started with less than Davenport now has. The main thing is to have a real field. The rest will work out all right. Davenport will be a strong church if given what it needs during these critical days so that they may take advantage of their opportunities in their new field, before others preempt them—R. Paul Miller, evangelist.

We look unto the Lord in genuine praise for His blessing upon us here in Davenport during the days of our special gospel services with Evangelist R. Paul Miller. Meetings began on Oct. 9 and continued through Oct. 23. First of all the members of our own small group were spoken to by the Holy Spirit through the Word delivered by our special speaker. We praise the Lord for a new desire to see souls come to the Lord and a new vision of service here in this needy field. A number of new faces were seen in our services and new contacts were made in visitation. One rededication decision was made publicly and one has accepted Jesus as Saviour since the meeting closed as a direct result of the visitation during the meeting. We rejoice greatly that this young husband and father has surrendered unto the Lord. Both people and pastor were strengthened, challenged and greatly blessed as they met around the Word nightly during these meetings with Bro. Miller. Every message was timely, enlightening and true to the Word of God and most definitely helped us establish our testimony as a Christ-centered, Bible-teaching church that is being established here in the Quint-cities. We praise the Lord for this rich experience in the things of the Spirit and renewed vision of his power working in our hearts and in the hearts of others as we reach out to them for the Lord.—True L. Hunt, pastor.

News from churches will be continued next week.

FOREIGN MISSION NUMBER

DECEMBER 3, 1955

"The First Christmas Present"

GREETINGS IN THE NAME OF THE LORD JESUS FROM THE FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH

The General Secretary Reports . . .

HOME AGAIN FROM SOUTH OF THE RIO GRANDE!

Home again—after 21 most interesting days spent with Brethren Haag, Howard, and Edmiston in our trip of investigation in Mexico. When I wrote you a month ago, we were about 500 miles south of El Paso, Tex. We then traveled south through Durango, Zacatecas, Aguascalientes, to Guadalajara. We then turned east and went through Zamora, Morelia, and Toluca to Mexico City. We made a side trip out to Puebla, and then after many interviews with Christian leaders turned north and went through Victoria and Monterrey to Laredo, Tex. Any road map of Mexico might be interesting in locating these places. All that we have mentioned are large cities; in fact, most of the places indicated even by a tiny dot on a road map are cities of 25,000 or more population. For almost two weeks we traveled in territory above a mile high, parts of it up to 7,000 and 8,000 feet. It was cold at night, and not always too warm even in the daytime. In travel folders it is described as the area of perpetual springtime, and the description is quite correct, I would imagine.

Land of contrast . . .

Sweet Fellowship

Fellowship was very sweet in Mexico with the missionaries and the Mexican believers as well. People seem to love each other more when they suffer for their faith. We visited areas where we have no Brethren testimonies as yet, but we were most cordially and graciously accepted by Baptists, Presbyterians, Methodists, and those of other fellowships. Evangelical testimony in Mexico seem to be quite sound as to the fundamentals of the faith, and an encouraging number are premillennial in their prophetic outlook. We rejoice with them in these things. Christian leaders, missionary and Mexican, gave almost unlimited time to us, explaining concerning the evangelical work in Mexico. Arriving in a city, we would begin to inquire for any evangelical churches. Usually our search was futile until we would begin to ask boys. Then by asking a few boys we would find one who knew of a group of believers. So often they would not recognize the name of Evangelical or Protestant, or Baptist, Presbyterian, or Methodist. But if we would ask for the "Hallelujah's," the boy could usually locate a church for us. You will understand that all evangelical believers in Mexico are in derision referred to as "Hallelujah's."

. . . land of opportunity

Much People—Little Gospel!

The story was much the same everywhere—much people, many cathedrals and shrines, but very little Gospel of the grace of God. One needs to take a passing glance at the average people of Mexico to realize that they need far more than "religion." They are burdened with religion, cathedrals, shrines, and superstition, but spiritually they are probably as benighted as any people in any mission field I have visited. There are outstanding spiritual lights shining, and oh, how they shine because of the spiritual darkness all about them. Fanaticism reigns, especially in southern Mexico. South of Mexico City, whether to the east or to the west, there

THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD VOLUME 17, NUMBER 49

Entered as second-class matter April 16, 1943, at the post office at Winona Lake, Ind., under the act of March 3, 1879. Issued weekly by the Brethren Missionary Herald Co., Winona Lake, Ind. Subscription price, $2.00 a year; 100-percent churches, $1.50; foreign, $3.00. Board of Directors: Robert Crees, president; Herman A. are many Indian tribes almost untouched except for the Wycliffe Translators who are doing a magnificent work. Then to the north and west of Mexico City there is an area approximately 100 miles square spoken of as the "bread basket of Mexico"—a very fertile valley almost untouched with the Gospel. It is so very fanatical. More Christian leaders in Mexico referred to this area as the place of greater need in Mexico than any other. There is so great need because the people are so unreceptive and antagonistic to what they have heard of the Gospel. It is one of the most difficult areas in Mexico and should be approached cautiously and only after much prayer and preparation.

A Different Field

Churches, we are told, do not really legally exist in Mexico. Groups of believers are so small that they have very little prestige or influence. Rather than to approach the government of the country for permission to enter and do missionary work, as one would do in all our other fields, you enter Mexico on any non-religious basis you can find and then witness for the Lord as best you can, usually without fanfare or public announcement, hoping that you will not be unfavorably reported and expelled from the country. It is not illegal for a United States citizen to preach the Gospel in Mexico, but it is not according to their law for a non-Mexican to be the pastor of a church in Mexico, and so many officials cannot distinguish between the two. Mexico, one might say, is entered by the back door by those who would give gospel testimony. Many types of activity are used as an entree for the Gospel—day schools, nurseries, boarding homes for university students, agricultural pursuits, and various business activities are used. An outstanding Christian leader in Mexico told us that over 90 percent of the non-Mexicans doing Christian work in Mexico came in on the six-month tourist visa. As an official in the government he saw nothing wrong with this, but rather encouraged that we do it.

Trained Workers

Our great need is for trained Mexican workers to whom we may entrust great responsibility in Mexico. The primary purpose of our trip of investigation had to do with training schools and the training of workers. After visiting in so many areas in Mexico and traveling about 3,500 miles in Mexico, we are face to face with the fact that all of our evangelical friends have the same challenging need. Many groups of evangelical believers in Mexico have been working for 50 to 70 years and still have only very small groups in training. I may not know of all the training schools in Mexico, but we heard of less than a dozen. Many of these have from two to three to possibly 20 students in training. Especially in Latin American countries the need is for enough trained national workers to assume responsibilities. This is so critically true in Mexico since only Mexican-born workers can be pastors of churches. For

We Want You to Know - -

Africa—The annual Field Council meeting will be held at the Bible Institute at Bozoum December 6-17, 1955. All missionaries in F.E.A. and their families come together for this important meeting. Pray much for it.

Argentina—Another change in government makes it very urgent that you pray much for your missionaries serving there.

Brazil—Political changes are also taking place in Brazil. Pray that the Gospel be not hindered in these changing situations.

France—Good reports are being given. The Fogles plan to return to France in January or early February.

Honolulu—A recent report mentions 90 in Sunday school attendance. Additional space is badly needed.

Mexico—Nuevo Laredo reports four decisions for Christ last Sunday, three young ladies and a young man.

Missionary travels—The Goodmans, Miss Emmert, and Miss Cochran have arrived in Africa. At this writing the Sheldons, the Hockings, and Miss Tyson are probably in France. The Sheldons and Miss Tyson will proceed to Africa immediately. A letter from the Churchills and Mrs. Sickel, mailed from Rio de Janeiro, told of good progress in their trip to Argentina. They will probably have arrived in Argentina before you read this.

"A New Day for France"—A new tape recording, with 35mm color-slide illustrations, has been prepared by the Fogles and is ready for your use. Contact our office concerning this.

Grace Theological Seminary—During December and January special emphasis is given to the excellent work being done by Grace Theological Seminary and Grace College. We urgently recommend that every member of the Foreign Missionary Society shall be an enthusiastic supporter of these worthy institutions.

Church officers please note—Being on a calendar basis, our annual Society membership for 1956 is determined by your gifts received in our office by Dec. 31, 1955. In a number of cases we have received the offerings from congregations but no lists of donors and the amounts given. We do not publish these lists, but as a corporation we need this information to determine our Society membership and in sending out the annual election ballots. Interesting comparative congregational reports will be given as early as possible in the new year, and it is to the advantage of your congregation to have the report complete.

If there is a reduction of income tax in 1956, as many people anticipate, it would be to your advantage to make any large deductible gifts yet during 1955. The government permits deductions for gifts for church activities in amounts up to 30 percent of your income.

Returning to Brazil—We are happy to announce that Rev and Mrs. J. Keith Altig and their son, Steven, have been approved for return to our mission field in Brazil. It will be remembered that the Altigs pioneered in that field and were greatly used of the Lord during the years spent there. They found it necessary to stay longer than the regular furlough year in the States. During a part of that extended time Brother Altig has served as the pastor of the First Brethren Church of Glendale, Calif., where he will probably continue to serve until their return to the field in July of 1956. Brother Altig has also served most commendably as the Western representative of our Society.—R. D. Barnard.

TRAINING SECOND-GENERATION MISSIONARIES

By RUTH KENT

Missionary on furlough from Africa

Greetings from your Christian day school in Africa. This is furlough year, but the mothers are having school for their own children. The supplies were given to each before I left, and when there were not the needed books, we ordered before leaving the field. In fact, furlough year is planned for years ahead. To date no word has been received as to how the schools are going—only some words of fear before they began.

Go back with me to Africa just now and let your imagination run free. When the regular school is in session, the mothers prepare the children for school by making ready their clothing for the next four months, which is quite a task, especially when there are two or more to send. It consists of fixing worn clothing which still fits and making new things from material which has been kept in the barrel. The biggest problem seems to be the shoes. There is often a change in size during the four-month period.

The clothing not only needs to be gathered but each piece must be labeled with colored thread or the name in ink. They must not forget the toys and games. After things are packed the trip to school is still to be made. That means a day or two of travel with an overnight stop at some other station where more children are to be taken. The pickup which arrives at the school station is always full, and one begins to wonder where they are all packed in. Of course, most of the trucks have second-class passenger seats under the tarp. These seats are sometimes even fitted with an old leather seat, but sometimes the boxes and trunks serve very well. Just a hint—if you are troubled with backache you may not want to ride in the back of a truck for a hundred miles. It is one sight never to be seen in America. They are either covered with dust, or sometimes wet if it happens to be in the rainy season. Usually the children arrive a day or two before school begins.

It is the morning to begin school, so we must get up in time to get to the schoolhouse at 7:15. This does not seem so early to most of us because everything else on the station has already begun. Classes and prayer meeting in the church are over, and the workmen are supposed to be busy. Remember, we are training those whom the Lord may call for missionary service. We are praying that they will be willing to do anything He wants them to do.

The bell rings and we see the children coming from the houses, with most of them coming from the boarding-house which is home for them eight months of the year. Often the clocks are checked before the day begins so each house will know when to have dinner. If the radio happened to be on the night before we usually know the time of the rest of the world.

We want the Lord to have first place, so we begin the school day with a Bible lesson, memory work, and prayer. If there is a guest on the station, we have a change from the regular program.

Let us now get busy with the work. Ten children must be guided in their work, each doing their own grade and level in that grade. Since coming home, I find we are doing the modern way in some ways at least. When I see the supplies and the modern buildings in America, I sometimes wonder.

We usually have the reading period first, followed by a rest period, arithmetic, rest period, and then the other subjects which are varied from day to day. You can imagine we all are hungry by noon. After dinner they have their rest period in bed followed by music lessons, schoolwork, and play. There is no work done in the schoolhouse in the afternoons.

The teacher is in another house doing other work which comes to a missionary. This last term my extra time was spent on the field treasurer's books. For those of you who read this, and are answering the missionary call, I advise you to get all the training you can in as many different phases as possible. I believe most every one does work sometimes which they never thought of doing, especially on the mission field.

The schoolhouse for the last three years has been a mud block building with cement foundation and floor, grass roof, three windows on two sides, two windows and a door in front. A second room is used for storage in the back. The desks are of as many different kinds as the number of pupils. Each parent has been responsible for desk and chairs for their children. A few folding chairs have been used. How would you make a child's desk? You may have a few tools to begin with; nails can be bought in Bangui, which may be 200 miles away. Some stations have trees near enough for lumber, but you need to get it from another place. Packing boxes can be used if they have not already been broken apart.

We have two bookcases where supplies and books are kept. The teacher's desk is a table with one drawer. At the windows are hung curtains of crepe paper cut in strips so as not to keep out the light. The grass roof comes down to keep out the glare.

Because the field is the best place to have the children receive training, they are usually kept on the field until they reach high-school age. A few have been kept longer, but the training in their social life is limited. Often there is no other person their age on the field with whom to fellowship. The high schools of other missions in Africa are inconvenient because of distance.

Preparations are already being made for the school for 1956-1960. Pray for the school. There is need of one place being planned for the school so there will be a boardinghouse and school used year after year. This calls for house parents, whom we know the Lord will call.

They Built a Church

By James B. Marshall

Missionary to Argentina

The church and a group of believers at Corral de Bustos, Argentina

The new evangelical pastor had been in town about a week when tongues began to wag. In just a few days almost everyone knew that there was such a thing as another religion. At least the citizens of Corral de Bustos, Argentina, put it that way. They had been taught from youth that the Roman Catholic Church is the only Christian church and that all others are false. So when they mentioned the pastor's name, it was with suspicion and doubt. When he introduced himself to them as he went from door to door with the gospel literature, it usually brought the response, "Oh, you're of the other religion!"

Well, Corral de Bustos knew a lot about religion, but they didn't know much about Christ who is the living Saviour, so the pastor set his heart and his hands to teach them. His goal was to establish a church in Corral de Bustos, not just a building of brick and concrete but one of living stones in which flowed the life of Christ, the Head of the church. The local priest predicted that in three months every trace of this heretic would be gone.

How wrong he was!

Today in Corral de Bustos there are not only a number of living stones, but God has made it possible for these living stones to have a real church building in which to worship. This is significant, for to the Argentine mind the erection of a church building symbolizes the establishment of the church in his community.

Brother Hill Maconaghy labored for over four years in Corral de Bustos after beginning the work. During that time several families came to the knowledge of Christ as their Saviour. These living stones began to grow in the new life they had begun, and before long they realized that church building was necessary.

Meetings were being held regularly in the pastor's home which was adequate for small groups. But as the work progressed and the attendance increased, it became apparent that something larger was needed. Then, of course, the natural reticence of many people to enter a private home for worship was a hindrance. The Argentine can scarcely conceive of a church without a building. Therefore, early in the history of the church in Corral de Bustos plans were made to erect a building.

The people had a vision and in spite of adverse circumstances they never lost it. From the beginning of the time when the plans were first formulated, the erection of a building seemed impossible; yet the people had hope. It was a case of "hope against hope." They realized their own inability, but they recognized and confessed that God is able to do abundantly more than they could ask or think.

The first step was the purchase of a lot. In this matter God's guidance was evident. A large lot ideally located directly behind the pastoral house and on pavement was secured for a nominal price. The money was borrowed from the Foreign Missionary Society. Within five years the loan was repaid, improvements had been made on the lot, and a concrete sidewalk was constructed.

During the closing months of my ministry the Foreign Missionary Society graciously returned the money that had been repaid on the loan. This was to be an incentive to the people to begin to erect a building. The plan was considered and the congregation decided to meet the challenge. At first they thought that just a shell could be erected and then, as the work progressed, the inside could be finished. However, when the shell was completed, a new spirit took hold of the people, and with one accord they said, "Let's finish it!"

Today the congregation of Corral de Bustos has a small church building. There is room for expansion, and they hope that someday the building will need to be enlarged. There is no debt. They built what they needed, but did not surpass the funds on hand. There was no qualified workman or contractor in the congregation so that outside labor was employed, but each member did what he could. This is the important thing. To some it seemed that their small offerings were as nothing; yet God multiplied their gifts in a marvelous way. One woman sacrificed tremendously. She needed a winter coat; yet one day she gave a special gift for the church that would have been almost enough to buy the coat. Yes; there were some who gave begrudgingly; there were some who didn't give anything, just as there are in our North American congregations. But for those who gave willingly and sacrificially God had a special blessing—and, I believe, had a greater reward reserved for them in heaven.

The church is there for all. Its doors are open to the rich and the poor, the generous and the stingy, the national and the foreigner. It is a constant testimony of what God has done and is doing in one town in Argentina.

The Birth of the Brethren Mission in Africa

By Miss Estella Myers

Missionary on furlough from Africa

(Editor's note: This is the first in a series of articles by Miss Myers on the early history of our work in French Equatorial Africa.)

"Ethopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God" (Ps. 68:31).

In 1913 when Brother Gribble and his wife wrote from British East Africa that they were coming home to interest the Brethren Church in evangelizing French Equatorial Africa, I volunteered to go back to Africa with them.

At that time the Sudan was the largest unevangelized area on the face of the earth. On the portion of land between the banks of the Niger to that of the Nile, and from the sands of the Sahara to the forest of the Congo basin, lived countless tribes of pagan Africans whose hands were stretched out to an unknown God. Christianity, alone possessing the true God, was not known to them. Unless messengers of the cross speedily went to the people with the Gospel of Jesus Christ, they would be largely lost to Mohammedanism. This false religion was rapidly sweeping through Africa. To the heathen who had accepted this religion the statement, "the last state of man is worse than the first" would be true, for it is easier to convert pagans than Mohammedans. Then was the time to act.

We knew that the French colony was closed to the Gospel; yet we knew God commanded His disciples to take the Gospel to "the uttermost part of the earth." We believed God would break down the barriers for His own people who dared to trust Him and go in person to knock at the door. To some this seemed presumptuous, but we still trusted God for His leadings. We wished to find members in the Brethren Church whose hearts were burdened for the people of this unreached land. Some volunteered, but only Miss Mae Snyder from Dayton, Ohio, was ready to go with us.

After three years of laying the need of the field upon the hearts of God's people, we were able to report the waiting days were over in America. The Brethren Church had accepted us, our outfits were ready, our passports had been received, and passage on the City of Cairo sailing for South Africa was obtained.

The day for me to leave my home in Iowa was Christmas Day in 1917. There was joy that the waiting days were over; yet my heart was bleeding because I was leaving my sick father who had been growing weaker with cancer. He did not want his long sickness to frustrate the first party going forth in Jesus' precious name to knock at the closed door in French Equatorial Africa. He thanked the Lord that He counted him worthy to give a daughter for this cause. His last words to me were, "God will open the door for you people." He died six months later praying for this unreached field. God gave grace to all of us as we said good-bye.

Our party met at New Orleans and found Mr. Haas and his companion, Mr. Bragg, of the Baptist Mission also going to French Equatorial Africa for the same purpose. We had sweet fellowship together in prayer for God to work in the hearts of the French officials and open the door to evangelization in their territory.

Since we were leaving during the war days, everything had to be kept quiet. We were to take our baggage to the boat, keeping only the small hand luggage so we could come to the boat at a moment's notice. A week later a boy came out on a bicycle with a note saying, "Come to the boat at once!" We took a street car to the wharf and found the passengers opening their baggage for inspection. Our 76 pieces were there to be inspected. After this ordeal was over, we all embarked on the boat which left shore the next day. At the boat's office there was a telegram for me that read, "Congratulations. Heavenly blessings on the journey to you.—Sisterhood."

We had 39 missionaries and 20 children on board. Every morning we had prayer and Bible class taught by Mr. Haas. He also taught French and Sango to those going to French territory. Our time was filled with good things and we were happy, for we believed we were in the will of the Lord.

Our first stop was at the island St. Lucia, where we took on coal. About 200 native men and women carried the coal in baskets on their heads to the boat, forming a line, and oh, the confusion among themselves! It was my first sight of the tropics and natives wearing rags. But their need was more than clothes for their bodies. Yes; they needed a chance to clothe themselves in the righteousness of faith in believing on the Son of God. And God was sending us to tell the way of salvation to such people who were without hope and without God in the world.

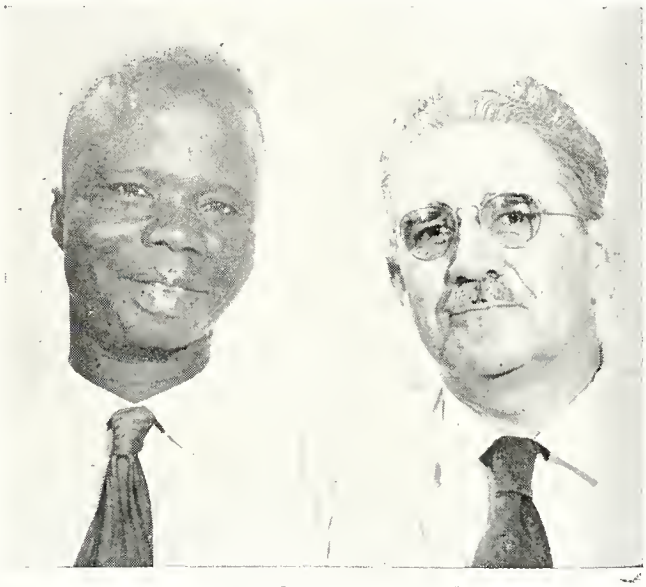
the present, each of our missionary men is determined to seek out a few young men, and by daily teaching and practical work train them for greater service in the Lord's work. One thing seems very evident—very few trained Mexican workers will be ready for church leadership in the next generation. Pray for more who will enter training.

"By the Will of God"

By Orville D. Jobson

Several of the Apostle Paul's letters begin with this phrase as a part of his apostolic salutation to the churches. No other statement could so completely explain the marvelous gift of God's grace to His servant, nor reveal the secret of the apostle's wonderful life and fruitful ministry—"By the will of God."



The African translation of this phrase reads, "Because God wants it like this." What a wonderful title for the life of a chosen servant of the Lord! It is this phrase which more than any other distinguishes the consecrated life of God's servant who is the subject of this article.

Noel Gaiwaka was born in the secluded village of Baloa in the Karre mountains, 15 miles north of Bozoum in western Oubangui-Chari. We do not know the exact date, for his people were heathen and illiterate and they left no records. From observations we have been able to make, it was probably in the year 1910. His father was Karre and his mother Gbaya. Mixed marriages were unusual at that time, as were monogamous marriages. Gaiwaka had three brothers, and one sister; these all died, except one brother, before he reached the age of 20. This one brother is a nominal Christian and lives in the home village. His father was a leper and died when Gaiwaka was a young boy. His mother died a few years after his father. As an orphan boy he remembers many sorrows and heartaches. He grew up in his mountain home during the transitional period after the Germans had withdrawn from Bozoum and before the French had fully taken over again. He remembers when the soldiers came and made the home village move from the mountain hideout to its present site at the foot of the hill.

Gaiwaka often visited his mother's village near Bozoum, and there learned to speak Gbaya. Later he learned Sango, the trade language of Oubangui-Chari, and still later in school learned French. He was initiated into "nganza," the secret society for circumcision, and learned the society's dance. However, unlike most of the young boys in the tribe, he never joined "Soumaili," the worship of a foreign divinity known as "Varakanda." God shielded His servant from the degrading and diabolic influences of this heathen religion. Like all Karre he worshiped his ancestors and attended the yearly ceremonies in their honor.

Our Karre lad was a boy of 11 when pioneer Gribble made his first exploration trip to Karreland. That was March 1921. At that time Mr. Gribble chose a young Karre man to teach the language to the missionaries. Gaiwaka remembers this visit of Mr. Gribble on his bicycle, and the choice of one of his first cousins as a teacher of the missionaries. At the close of the same year the first missionary station was located as Bassai, just five miles from Gaiwaka's boyhood home. Later he came to the station to live with his cousin "teacher," and there he heard the Gospel for the first time. His orphaned heart was tender, and he yielded to the invitation to receive Jesus as his Saviour, "because God wanted it like this." A year later, after he had attended the pre-baptismal class for Christian instruction, he was baptized in the little stream that flows through the valley at the foot of the Bassai hill. With him there was another young lad, Ngarasso Moise, who also has remained faithful to the Lord through these 32 years.

The first regular day school of the Mission at Bassai was opened in May 1927, and Noel entered with the first class. He was small for his age and slender, but school came too late to Karreland for Noel to have the advantage of attending in his younger and formative years. However, he applied himself to his study and became a good student; he was very conscientious and before long was the recognized spiritual leader of the school. At this time several commercial concerns began to locate small stores at the large centers and needed literate men to operate these stores and tailor clothes. Some of the young men in Noel's class sought this new and fascinating work. Two are still clerks today. Noel also was tempted with this wave of commercialism. His village chief purchased a sewing machine and made glowing promises to him if he would learn the tailor's trade. However, the practical work he was doing in the nearby villages interested him greatly, and furthermore he had not forgotten his promises to the Lord to serve Him when his schooling was completed. So he came to the place where a choice had to be made. He could not serve the Lord and mammon. After definite prayer, he made the right choice. The sewing machine was returned to the chief, and he rededicated his life to serve the Lord, "because God wanted it like this." He still looks back on that experience as being one of the great decisions of his life. He relives that dedication every time he calls for the congregation to sing "I Surrender All."

Noel Gaiwaka and Dr. Jobson

The daily Bible classes which were taught in connection with the regular school gave these young men a good foundational knowledge of the Word of God, and during vacation periods from school they assisted at the different chapels established in the surrounding

"...As Others Which Have No Hope"

By Mrs. Carson Rottler

Missionary to Argentina

The shiny, black, horse-drawn funeral coach; the black dress, stockings, handkerchief, and armband; the cold, gray-stone spires of the cemetery, which from a distance give the appearance of veritable city of the dead—yes; these are but a few of the expressions of utter hopelessness felt by almost an entire nation. I say "almost," because here and there in the dark over-all picture one can see a light, sometimes flickering, at other times strong and bright. This is a family of evangelical Christians who sorrow at the homegoing of a loved one, yes; but there is a different quality in their sorrow—that of hope.

Had you lived in Huinca Renanco, you would have at least known about the elderly curandera (witch doctor) who lived near the mission. We had given her tracts and stopped to chat in the street a number of times. One day, much to our surprise, she invited us in.

An Argentine cemetery—". . . city of the dead"

We tried to explain clearly the way of salvation, and as usual she agreed with everything that we said. As we were leaving, she told us with tears in her eyes how she had kept candles burning beside the bed ever since her husband's death 23 years before. A very short time after this conversation her funeral procession passed by the mission on the way to the cemetery. Twenty-three years of lighting candles and paying to have the church bell rung in memory of her husband, and still without hope for him or for herself!

The sting of death was brought home to us again recently when a 16-year-old girl lost her life in a train-car collision. Mutilated in body and in an unconscious state she was taken from the scene of the accident to her home, and it is difficult for us to believe that she ever regained consciousness, although the priest declares that she was conscious just long enough to make the last confession. One suddenly realizes that these people cling to the "last confession" as a shipwrecked sailor clings to the bow of his fast sinking ship.

Yes; there is great concern for the soul of a loved one in this land at the moment of death, and even after death, but until that moment there is a blatant lack of concern. How true the words of I Corinthians 15:55-56, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin" Pray with us that we might see more victories over the "sting of death" in this religious yet sin-darkened land.

"BY THE WILL OF GOD"

villages. In 1929 Noel spent three months at Bozoum. In 1930 he spent some time at Baloa, his home village. Then after his formal schooling was over he came to Bassai as regular teacher and preacher for two years. Here, on March 18, 1934, he was married to Doyai Esther, a young woman from his own tribe. It was during his ministry at Bassai that we began to study together the principles and policies of a fully indigenous church and to inaugurate the changes necessary.

In 1936 Noel was appointed by the Bassai conference to take over the work at Bozoum and organize the church. At Bozoum he developed into a strong Christian leader and built the church up to hundreds of members with zeal for a spiritual church. While at Bozoum he attended the four semesters of the Mission's first Central Bible School which was opened there in 1938. In 1940 the Bozoum church loaned its pastor to the struggling group of believers at Baibokoum, where he spent six months teaching the Word of God daily and then baptizing the believers and organizing the church. Upon his return from this missionary journey the Bozoum congregation asked for his ordination to the eldership. He was examined and ordained by Brethren F. Taber, Kliever, and Jobson at Bozoum on the 28th of October, 1940, when Noel was 30 years of age. "God wanted it like this."

Pastor Noel's ministry at Bozoum was wide and varied. Besides the special work at Baibokoum, he had the responsibility of the chapels of the district, and went as far away as Bocaranga and Kounang on periodic visits until our Mission opened a station at Nzoro in 1948. Chapels were opened in all the larger Ghaya villages surrounding Bozoum, and he was responsible for the groups and their leaders. He taught elementary and Central Bible School courses. He held Sunday afternoon meetings in the prison, where many were saved and later two became workers in their own villages. He was hospitable as a true elder, and his home was always open to the constant flow of Christian workers and students passing through Bozoum. All of his children, except the oldest, were born there.

As full as were his fruitful years at Bozoum, God had still another service for His servant. In 1954 our Mission opened a station in Bangui to build a Christian center for the hundreds of our scattered members in the capital city. Pastor Noel was asked to consider this new opportunity. He prayed about the matter for six months before giving his reply. Then he came forth from the closet, where he had obtained the Lord's will,

BOSSANGOA BELLOWS . . .

By the William Samarins

Missionaries to Africa

The Samarins (Ruth and Bill plus Manya and Ramona) substituted for the Sheldons in the Bossangoa field during the year 1954-55. We almost did not get there, humanly speaking, for there was a time in January, 1954, when we thought that Bill might have to return to the States for medical care, but the Lord took care of that so that we were able to arrive in the field where the Field Council (that is, the mission field's conference) decided to send us.

Starting any kind of new work has its trying moments, and this one of having to supervise a vast field —about 200 miles long, filled with about 80,000 people —was no exception. There was the time, for example, when Bill ran out of gas way out in the elephant country. (A detour necessitated by a truck broken down in the middle of a narrow road had used up what reserve gasoline he had.) Fortunately, there just "happened" to be a white man going his direction. So Bill was able to get out of a place where villagers assured him there would be elephants during the night.

But after one gets warmed up to one's job; then things go well. Here in Africa there is always the preaching, the teaching (e.g., at Bible schools for the Christian workers), the handling of church problems, the sale of literature and church-school supplies, and so forth.

Yet a change in program helps. So we enjoyed stressing the need for having a literate church. We took every opportunity to stress the importance of knowing how to read God's Word. Just to preach about it, however, is not enough, so we had to stimulate some interest. (There are always, naturally, people who say they are too old or too dumb or too tired or too sick or too something else to learn to read.) Consequently, we gave reading examinations to many church members. Their degree of literacy was marked on their church cards. You should have seen how they bought up the primers after they had "does not read" (in their language, of course) written on their cards!

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Samarin, Ramona and Manya

But we sold many other things beside primers. Scripture portions, Bible lessons, songbooks, and so forth, in Gbeya, Sango, or French were sold to the value of over $833 this year. What is going to happen in the future when more people become literate! (Only about 15 percent are right now.)

These examinations were given at the Bible conferences. The six of them held this year were attended by a total of over 5000 people (men, women, and children). Those were good times! For four days the Christians gathered to hear God's Word preached by the missionaries or African leaders and be strengthened by it.

The Word of God, which is used by the Holy Spirit, is the only means by which people know of the Gospel and grow in it. We thank God that we have a small part to play in God's great program: THE EVANGELIZATION OF THE WORLD.

Now, as we are spending a year in the States, we pray that we may be invigorated for another term which we shall have the privilege to serve toward the realization of God's desire.

BY THE WILL OF GOD

ready to accept this new challenge, "because God wanted it like this."

It is now a year since he came to Bangui. The change was difficult, and the work very much different. But from the organization of the work last December, when he was taken into the eldership of the church by a unanimous vote of the congregation, God's hand on the work has been very evident. The membership now numbers 500, there are a dozen daily meeting places in the native quarters, and the Sunday attendance has exceeded 1,000 on several Sundays. But best of all, God is using His servant to mold this cosmopolitan group into a spiritual family in the Lord which is learning to give and to serve for the glory of Christ.

Pastor Noel is now a man of 45. He is mature in faith, rich in experience, and sound in doctrine. He loves his Lord and knows the secret of power in prayer. He is quiet and humble, gentle to all, and respectful to his elders. He sees clearly his responsibilities as an elder in the church of God, but recognizes his limitations and walks humbly with the Lord.

His greatest concern is his own home. While his children are obedient and respectful, his "helpmeet" does not always "help." She is fluent in reading and prays very earnestly, but she lacks victory over the little things in her prosaic life as an African wife and mother. This trial strengthens Pastor Noel's patience, and makes him sympathetic with others. God comforts his servant that he may in turn comfort others. His exhortations as a father in the faith, and a brother in the Lord, have saved many homes from shipwreck, and brought rebellious brethren back to the fold.

On his own testimony, his definite growth in Christ began with his practice of keeping the early "morning watch" and consistently reading the Word of God. This spiritual exercise was begun at Bassai, in the tower room of the church, which was set aside for his exclusive use as pastor of the church in 1933. This habit has continued throughout the years of his ministry, and he has led many others into this spiritual secret.

The rest of the story, and a true evaluation of his service will be told when we all appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ.

NEWS

WOOSTER, OHIO. Homecoming with special services was observed at the First Brethren Church Nov. 27. Joe Dombek, Christian artist, of Winona Lake, Ind., was the special guest. A basket dinner was held at noon at the church. Kenneth Ashman is pastor.

DAYTON, OHIO. Randall Maycumber, student at Grace Seminary, has accepted the call to become pastor of Bethany Brethren Church. Please change Annual.

MEYERSDALE, PA. The telephone number of Rev. Arthur F. Collins has been changed to 430-J. Please change Annual.

BANGUI, FRENCH EQUATORIAL AFRICA. Miss Mary Emmert and Miss Rosella Cochrane arrived Nov. 9 from France and are now on their field of service.

OMAHA, NEB. (EP) Mrs. Chloe Lewis, a grandmotherly woman of 66 years, drove from her home in Council Bluffs, Iowa, and marched primly up the stairs to the office of the Traffic Bureau here. The patrolman in charge, Harold Hug, asked for the woman's ticket. Her reply left him speechless: "Oh, I don't have one," she said. "No one saw me break the law." She then explained she had driven through a red light in downtown Omaha a week ago. "I'm a good Christian," she went on, "and my conscience has been dealing me fits. So do your duty." The startled officer picked up a ticket book while the woman laid five $1 bills on the counter. "Hurry up," she said, "I'm parked in a 10-minute zone."

CLAYHOLE, KY. Paul Landrum, secretary of the Clayhole Brethren Church, brother of Brethren Sewell and Clyde Landrum, underwent serious surgery Nov. 14, at the Veteran's Hospital in Louisville, Ky. Brethren Herman Koontz and Clyde Landrum, of Winona Lake, held an anointing service for him Nov. 9. Last reports were that he was making favorable progress. Bro. Landrum greatly appreciates the prayers offered in his behalf.

CUBA, N. MEX. Rev. and Mrs. Evan Adams have sent us the following announcement: "We're simply bursting to describe the newest member of our tribe. It's a boy, Mark Joel, Nov. 15, at Bataan Memorial Hospital, Albuquerue, N. Mex., and he weighed 8 lbs. 1 oz., and was 21 inches long.

LEON, IOWA. Ronald Robinson, pastor of the Leon Brethren Church, reports the Lord's blessing with 115 in the Bible school Nov. 13, 95 in the morning service with offerings of $107.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Homecoming Day at the Community Brethren Church was a Christmas party in honor of their missionaries to Brazil, Bill and Imogene Burk. A tape recording was made of the entire service which will be sent to them in time for Christmas. A hundred and twenty were present for the occasion. Robert McCormick is pastor.

PARAMOUNT, CALIF. Ann Marie Mayes joined her brother and two sisters at the Paramount Brethren Church parsonage Nov. 2. She weighed 6 lbs. 7½ oz., on arrival. Her parents are Rev. and Mrs. John Mayes and her paternal grandparents are Rev. and Mrs. Charles Mayes of First Brethren Church, Long Beach.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. At its annual meeting in Chicago, Oct. 25, 26, the Accrediting Association of Bible Institutes and Bible Colleges elected Dr. Wm. A. Mierop, president of the Philadelphia Bible Institute, as president to succeed Dr. Wm. Culbertson of Moody Bible Institute. His term is two years.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Eighteen members of the Winona Lake Brethren Church made a house-to-house visitation in the North Manchester, Ind. area Nov. 20 to invite folk to attend the new Sunday school to be opened in the Pleasant Grove Brethren Church, Dec. 4. This project is under the extension committee and the illustrated plan will be followed. Herman Koontz is pastor.

ABILENE, KANS. (EP) David J. Eisenhower, father of President Eisenhower, now has an official birthdate. The only known formal record of his birth is now on display in the museum here. It is contained in a family Bible which also records six generations of the President's family. The Bible, printed from German language type in Switzerland almost 200 years ago, was presented to the Eisenhower Foundation by Mrs. L. Anna Eichelberger of Glenwood, Iowa, a cousin of the president.

EVERETT, PA. The East District Ministerium conducted a two-day prayer retreat, Nov. 14 and 15 at the Grace Brethren Church. The president, Rev. Ralph C. Hall, led the sessions, and speakers were Rev. Wm. Schaffer, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Kittanning, Pa. and Rev. H. T. (Hank) Beukema, director of High School Evangelism Fellowship in Johnstown, Pa. Rev. Homer Lingenfelter was host pastor.

The retreat proved to be a spiritual blessing to those who attended. This was the third such annual retreat conducted by the East District. The preceding two had been in cooperation with the Atlantic district.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (EP) Population Reference Bureau, Inc., has released a new estimate of world population that should both frighten and challenge evangelicals. There are now according to the private research group 2,500,000 persons in the world. Next year there will be another 35,000,000 mouths to feed. There is a net gain of 100,000 births over deaths every 24 hours. In the past 10 years—since the founding of the United Nations—world population has grown by 300,000,000 souls.

CHICAGO, ILL. (EP) Eugenia Price, has resigned as producer-director of the radio program "Unshackled" and will produce a new series next fall, designed to assist local churches in their radio ministry.

THE PROVIDENCE OF GOD

Providence is the name given to God's active relation to history. The word "Providence" is used only once in the Scriptures (Acts 24:2) and here it refers not to God but to the forethought and work of man. However, everywhere in the Bible we find the doctrine of the Providence of God. The laws of nature, the course of history, the varying experiences of individuals are attributed to God's providential control. All things both in heaven and in earth from the seraphim down to the tiny atom are ordered by His never failing providence.

Something of the magnitude of this doctrine is found in a statement made by a great theologian of the past: "Providence is the most comprehensive term in the language of theology. It connects the unseen God with the visible creation and the visible creation with the work of redemption, and redemption with personal salvation, and personal salvation with the end of all things and includes between these the whole infinite variety of the dealings of God with man."

James reminds us of God's providence by cautioning against planning our lives independently of the Lord's will for us (Jas. 4:15). And we need but look at the history of the nation of Israel to see the folly of endeavoring to order our own steps. For some Christians this poses a problem. It has also been a fertile area for criticism of the Christian faith by unbelievers. If God foreknows everything, the argument runs, then man is only a puppet in the hands of the sovereign One. Man is not free. The answer to the dilemma is that God in His sovereign power has chosen to use man's freedom to accomplish His desired ends. We must remember that freedom and prediction are not incompatible. We can generally predict how a child will act with a candy bar or how a girl with a new dress will act before a mirror. But this does not mean that the acts were not freely done. Therefore, the believer should endeavor to know and follow God's plan for his life for truly, "His way is best, nothing this truth can dim, and He gives the very best to those who leave the choice with Him."

For Joseph this great truth gave meaning to life. The ill treatment at the hands of his brothers, his experiences with the baker and Potiphar's wife, the long years of separation from his father, were all accounted for in his own words: "God did send me before you to preserve life" (Gen. 45:5). Like Joseph, many of God's children have found that the tears and disappointment of life were permitted in order to prepare them to minister to others who were passing through like experiences (II Cor. 1:4). However, not all of life's experiences can be understood so easily. For some believers the words of the old song will be a reality: "Not now but in the coming years, it may be in the better land, we'll read the meaning of our tears, and there, sometime we'll understand." But although we may have to wait for the answer to the trials of life, still the doctrine of His providence reveals that nothing happens by chance to His own and that "all things work together for good to them that love God, to them that are the called according to His purpose" (Rom. 8:28).

From David's pen comes a thought about God's providence most needed for this hour. The sphepherd boy who became the king of Israel had learned that his times were in God's hands. Therefore, he could say: "I will fear no evil: for thou are with me" (Ps. 23:4). It mattered not whether he faced a lion or a bear, a mad king or a Philistine giant, David knew no harm could come to him except it be permitted by his God. The blessings of God's providence have not changed, and today as His people face the dangers of the great totalitarian systems of this world, they too can have assurance in the good providence of their God and say with David: "I will fear no evil: for thou are with me."

My life is but a weaving between my Lord and me,
I cannot choose the colors, He worketh steadily.
Ofttimes He chooses sorrow, and I in foolish pride,
Forget He sees the upper and I the under side.
Not till the loom is silent and the shuttles cease to fly,
Will God unroll the canvas and explain the reason why,
The dark threads are as needful in the weaver's skillful hand
As the threads of gold and silver in the pattern He has planned.

A definition of terms is necessary. The word, "millennium," means 1000 years. It is not found in the Scriptures. The word translated "thousand" in Revelation 20:1-6 is the Greek word, chilioi. The word "millennium" is a Latin word formed from "mille," a thousand, and "annus," a year.

The word "premilliennialism" defines the doctrine that the second coming of Christ precedes, comes before, the thousand years of His governmental reign on the earth. The word "post-millennialism" designates the doctrine that Christ's second coming will be after the thousand years reign. The word "A-millennialism" describes that view of the Scriptures which rejects the belief of any period of a thousand years reign, either before or after the second coming of Christ. The "A-millennial" interpretation of the Bible, in relation to prophecy, although existing prior to our generation, was weak and unpopular until recent years. Even now there is a limited literature concerning it. What are it's errors?

Errors of A-Millennialism

A-millennialism is not just an error but a denial of the Bible. The Scriptures do teach a definite, clear doctrine of the millennium. Webster defines the term "millennium" as "the thousand years when Christ will reign on earth (Rev. 20:1-6); hence, a period of great joy, prosperity, and righteousness." Now the Bible does emphatically teach this personal reign of Christ, declaring the time-period, and including Christ's saints in this reign. Although there is but this one Scripture (Rev. 20:1-6) which includes the time element, the entire Bible, in practically every book, does declare the fact of the personal reign of our Lord upon this earth.

God doesn't need to declare a fact many times to make it true. One declaration in the Scriptures is sufficient to give authenticity and trustworthiness to any fact. A-millennialism denies this clear and concise teaching of the Bible. It is not just a matter of interpretation but of emphatic denial of the revelation of the Scriptures. But there are certain outstanding errors involved.

Error of Allegorizing

This simply means the denial of the literal meaning of the Bible. I have followed a rule of interpretation as follows: "When the plain sense of Scripture makes common sense, seek no other sense; therefore take every word at its primary, ordinary, usual, literal meaning, unless the facts of the context indicate clearly otherwise." This rule of interpretation demands belief in the Millennium. If, unless clearly indicated in the context, one allegorizes the Scriptures, the same liberty is "private interpretation." All false teachings are based on this method. If the Bible does not mean what it says, why didn't it say what it meant?

Supposing we allegorize the prophecies concerning the first coming of Christ? In over 60 instances in the Book of Matthew there is record of the literal fulfillment of Old Testament prophecies relating to Christ's first coming. This literal fulfillment inspires confidence in a literal fulfillment of Revelation 20: 1-6 when Christ rules upon this earth a thousand years. It is significant that the entire early church, with but few exceptions, believed in the premillennial coming of Christ to rule and reign 1000 years. It was not until the union of church and state, three centuries after the church's origin, that the allegorizing method of denial became prominent. Today it is most prominent among those who have become wedded to the world and its social-service, world-betterment programs. Beware of that system of denial which robs one of the personal, literal, visible presence of the Christ as King of Kings, reigning on this earth during the Millennium.

Denial of the Rapture

A-millennialism is a denial of the Rapture, as taught especially in I Thessalonians 4:13-18 and I Corinthians 15:51-52. Involved in this denial is the denial of the Tribulation and the Revelation also. They who deny the thousand years reign of Christ on the earth, reject the teachings of the Bible differentiating between the coming of the Lord for His own and the coming back of the Lord with His own. The Rapture is a mystery. It was not revealed to the Old Testament prophets. It is a mystery as to time and visibility by the world. But the Revelation of Christ is no mystery, it has been revealed in both the Old Testament and New Testament Scriptures. It will be visible, seen by all, when the Lord comes in glory and great power with the saints and the angels. A-millennialism denies both the Rapture and the Revelation, and the Tribulation that separates them.

Revelation 20

What are the plain, literal teachings of the twentieth chapter of Revelation? First, Christ will reign upon this earth 1000 years. (See also Rev. 5:10; Rev. 11:15, and others might be cited.) Second, the resurrected and translated saints will reign with Christ during the thousand years. How glorious to be reigning with Christ, not just reigning but under and with the Lord!

A-Millennialists Beware!

Beware of the last warning of the Bible, Revelation 22:19: "If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book."

Christ's Great Words to the Church

"The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few" (Luke 10:1-3).

"I have ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit" (John 15:16).

"Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35-39).

By R. PAUL MILLER

Crusade Evangelist

Winona Lake, Ind.

This entire age from Pentecost to our Lord's return is the age of revival. That is what the Holy Spirit is here for. That is what the church is here for. That is what the Scriptures are here for. REVIVAL—saving lost men—keeping men out of hell. The fields were white when Jesus spoke these words to His disciples. They are still white. If there is no revival, it is the fault of the church. It is because the ministry has lost its conception of what it is here for. It is because believers are cold, prayerless, and unconcerned. It is because there is no burden because of sin in believers' hearts. It is because there is no fear of failing God, and meeting Him at the Judgement Seat of Christ.

The harvest of souls is one harvest that is always ready for reaping. The Devil sees to that! He is always on the job. You can't accuse him of being lazy, or of taking a vacation. Souls are always dying and going out of reach of the Gospel. The idea that you have to wait till a certain time to have a revival is a mistake. It is always time. To assume that we should permit folks to go in sin till a certain time when God will work to save them, is tragic. There are more broken homes, cold churches, delinquent children, worldly church members, prayerless Christians, and lifeless preachers today than ever before. This is the vision that drives torment into the soul of the evangelist; that sends faithful pastors to their studies to weep alone before God, and true soul-winners to shed floods of intercessory tears.

The preacher who doesn't believe in revivals ought to get out of the ministry. He is the sort who would let the world go to hell and do nothing about it. The Devil doesn't believe in revivals either! Neither do the modernists, nor the infidels, nor the booze sellers, nor the gamblers.

But God believes in revivals! He sent Jonah to hold the greatest revival campaign in all history, in which half a million repented of their sins. He sent Elijah to Mount Carmel in the most wicked days of old King Ahab, and turned a whole nation back to God in a day. He sent John the Baptist throughout Judea turning the whole land upside down, and opening the way for the coming of our Lord. I believe He is sending out His evangelists over land, sea, and air today to prepare the way for our Lord's second coming! Yes, indeed! God is for revivals! Anyone who is not for revivals is out of tune with God and God's program for this entire age. God placed the office of the evangelist first among the great ministries of the church for today (Eph. 4:11).

Some are saying that we just can't have revival today. That the days are so evil, and the end of the age is at hand. Such folks just don't really know God, that is all. Dark days are the very times when God does His mightiest works. The men who will stand up for God in dark and godless days are the ones whom God will greatly honor.

A great revival is the only answer to the sad state of human affairs today. It is the only answer to the tragedy of youth delinquency that is now making our national leaders to tremble. With mobs of vandals running unchecked, doing untold millions of dollars of damage, with countless other youths on a rampage of cold-blooded murder merely for the thrill of it, while the national total shows a 10 percent increase of crime committed by youths each year, America is surely facing the era of violence that Jesus said would close this age. What is the answer? Christ alone! A short time ago a group of ministers were meeting with the city police endeavoring to decide on a course to check the wave of youth delinquency sweeping the town. You would have thought that those preachers had never heard of the Gospel. They turned to the social workers, the police, to a program of "controlled dances," "controlled petting parties," "controlled movies." And when they launched the idea there weren't a dozen kids in the town that would look at it! The answer is not to change the methods, but to change the kids! Bring them to Jesus Christ. He can change them, and they will love Him for it. Young people will accept the challenge of the cross quicker than aduits. They glory in having something to stand for, something to live for, something to die for!

The greatest need is for workers! The laborers are few. When we behold the size of the task and the few who are concerned to stem the tide, it sort of makes one sick. The first need is for preachers on fire for souls! Unquestionably, before we can have revival among the people we must have revival among the preachers. If the preachers of America were on fire for God, we could sweep the world for God, and communism, crime and war would be stopped dead in their tracks. Charles G. Finney, who lit the greatest revival fires this country has ever known said: "The fact is, Brethren, a revival must take place among the ministers. If there could be a protracted meeting for ministers; if some hundreds of ministers would assemble, and preach, and pray, and labor for each other's spiritual welfare until there was deep and thorough revival among them; if they would deal so faithfully with each other, and so affectionately as to get their hearts together, and together get into deep sympathy with Christ, they would return from such a meeting to their churches and the result would be a general revival in their churches. When we ourselves are in a true revival spirit, our call to the churches to engage in revival will find immediate response. Let us confess and forsake our own sins and cry aloud to the church, sparing not. Let us lift up our voices and rally the hosts of God's elect. Until we are anointed to the work, let us not tempt the Lord nor abuse the church by looking away from ourselves for the cause of the decline in revivals.

Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio

We at the Grace Brethren Church of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, wish to publicly express praise and thanksgiving unto God for His blessing upon our recent "Crusade for Christ" revival-evangelistic campaign, with Rev. William A. Steffler, of Dayton, Ohio.

The services began on a Monday night—Sept. 26. The attendance at first was rather poor, with no public decisions. Each succeeding evening, however, brought an increase in attendance, interest, and response—until at our closing service on Sunday, Oct. 24, there were 71 present and six decisions for Christ.

The average attendance for the week was 60, which is very good for our little church. There were eleven reaffirmations and rededications, and one first-time decision. As a result of the meetings we have at least four candidates for baptism and church membership. But, above all else, pastor and congregation have been brought closer to the Lord.

We are indeed grateful for Brother Steffler's spirit-filled, heart-searching messages. We were especially impressed and challenged with his willingness to go anywhere, anytime to speak for Christ or to deal with souls. My own heart was blessed as we labored together in visitation and personal work. The fellowship we enjoyed was most precious. We truly praise God for sending Brother Steffler—and revival—into our midst!—Richard L. Burch, pastor.

I would like to report a blessed time of revival at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, Sept. 26 to Oct. 2. Just one week of special meetings but God opened the windows of heaven and poured out His blessing.

Richard Burch, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, is an excellent worker for the Lord, deeply interested in lost souls. People met for prayer and God honored His Word.

These people are worshiping in a new, incomplete building in a very fine part of town. Prospects look bright for a good future, if the Lord tarries. The Cuyahoga Falls church should grow into a strong Brethren testimony. The people have a mind and will to work, and led by their pastor should make their presence felt for Christ and His church.

Pray for these Brethren that their building may soon be completed.—Wm. Steffler, evangelist.

Ramona, Calif.

Several years ago, after Rev. Grant McDonald had suffered a nervous breakdown during his pastorate at Glendale, Calif., he moved to Ramona, Calif., for his health. He could hardly have gone to a finer place for health. I believe it is the healthiest spot I have ever been in. Improvement began almost immediately and he began, like all true Brethren preachers do, to look around for some place to preach the Gospel. A group of people who were unhappy in a church that was fast drifting toward liberalism in theology, as well as life, asked him to pastor them for a while. He has been pastoring them ever since. While it is still called an independent church, yet all who have been saved there have been baptized by triune immersion.

It was Brother McDonald's efforts that led to my being asked to speak at the Passion week services last April. At that time the local preachers decided that they would like to have me lead them in a united evangelistic effort. Plans were laid, and on Sept. 4, the meeting started.

This was the first meeting of this nature that the town had experienced in 17 years, so we were told. The churches of the community had been badly divided. They had been drawing together through the efforts of the present pastors, and this campaign was the tangible evidence of the fine spirit of brotherly fellowship that has been growing.

Opposition, unbelief, criticism, cold and un-cooperative church members were overcome by the Spirit of the Lord; souls were saved, and church memberships transformed.

We are quite sure that it will not be hard to promote the next united revival in Ramona, as it was this time. Our Christ made great inroads against Satan's strongholds in that town. It was a great joy to see the last night's audience register a unanimous call for a return meeting as soon as possible. We believe that whoever holds the next campaign, there will be a great harvest. God hasten the saving of men while there is yet time.—R. Paul Miller, evangelist.

Camden, Ohio

The Lord was pleased to send Stanley F. Hauser, pastor of the Conemaugh Brethren Church (Pa.) to us as our evangelist for our recent revival Sept. 5-18.

The spirit was good, as well as the attendance, throughout the entire meeting, average was 85. Brother Hauser brought splendid gospel messages. The spirit of conviction was manifest as sinners consistently refused to yield to Christ as Saviour; some found new peace and new joy in claiming Christ as their Saviour and Lord. Of the eight first-time public confessions of faith in Christ as Saviour, five have already been received into the fellowship. Eight candidates were baptized following the close of the meetings.

Delegations from several of the nearby Brethren churches were present at several of the services during the campaign. Please pray for the work here in Camden, Ohio. —R. L. Rossman, pastor.

We believe that there are great possibilities in Camden, Ohio. The Lord gave us a wonderful meeting. On the opening night, Monday, Sept. 5, the Lord stirred the hearts of our Camden folk to a hearty response to the appeal of the evangelist in working and winning souls in the campaign. Twenty-three members of the church came forward in rededication of life for service. Brother Rossman, the pastor was thrilled to see such hearty response among his people. May God bless our Camden people with their pastor.—Stanley F. Hauser, evangelist.

Winona Lake, Ind.

In the revival meeting with Evangelist Archie Lynn, of Roanoke, Va., Sept. 18-25, there were 89 decisions, four of these for the purpose of confessing Christ as Saviour. The average attendance was 259. The spiritual results cannot be estimated, for they will show in the lives of those blessed until the Lord comes.—Herman Koontz, pastor.

Mansfield, Ohio

Rev. Gene E. Witzky, who has been serving as pastor of the Second Brethren Church, was ordained into the ministry at the Grace Brethren Church, Oct. 23.

Those participating in the ordination service were pastors of the Northern Ohio District of Brethren Churches. Dr. Bernard N. Schneider, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, delivered the ordination message while Kenneth Ashman, pastor of the First Brethren Church at Wooster, read the authorization for the ordination. Wesley Haller, Middlebranch, James Cook, associate pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Miles Taber, Ashland, and Neal Beery, Ankenytown participated in the service.

Bro. Witzky was graduated from Bryan University, Dayton, Tenn., with a BA degree and from Grace Theological Seminary, Winona Lake, Ind., with a bachelor of divinity degree. He has been serving as pastor of the church since its inception two years ago.

Meyersdale, Pa.

The Lord permitted us at Summit Mills Brethren Church to conclude our week of the "CHRIST in the Life" campaign with one decision for salvation and five decisions for rededication, for which we surely praise Him. Our verse for the campaign was Philippians 1:21 "For me to live is CHRIST . . ." and our theme chorus was "CHRIST for Me." One of the features of the meeting was the memorizing of the books of the Bible, a few each night, so that on the last night of Nov. 13 about eight persons had completely memorized all the books and recited them without assistance. The average attendance for all the services was 64. All of the messages began with "CHRIST, the Head of. . . ." We praise the Lord for what He has done, especially in the new interest being shown in all of our services, for Nov. 13 saw us reach a new high (101) in the morning worship service, and a new high (24) for the two new BYF groups in the evening.

Inglewood, Calif.

The First Brethren Church of Los Angeles had its birth in a room in the Nadeau Hotel on Oct. 16, 1905. It was here that Elder M. M. Eshelman met with Brethren Jonathan Meyers, Dan Lichty and Dan W. Graybill to lay plans which were to materialize in the formation of a church organization. The First Brethren Church of Los Angeles was incorporated under the laws of the State of California on Oct. 16, 1905. The place of meeting was at 322 East 41st St., the home of Brother Dan S. Lichty. The church elected a board of five trustees, the members of which were: Dan W. Graybill, N. C. Nielsen, D. S. Lichty, Mrs. L. A. Eshelman and Clara Belle Sherer.

The charter members at this time were: Mr and Mrs. M. M. Eshelman, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Dan S. Lichty, Mr. and Mrs. Elias Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Thumb, Mr. and Mrs. Metzger, Jonathan Myers, Lydia Myers, Mrs. Clara Bell Sherer, Mrs. Nofzieger and Daniel W. Graybill.

The first church building was erected in 1906 and was located at 142 E. Miles Street. There were 18 charter members. Some time later, during the pastorate of Brother A. V. Kimmell, the church was moved to the corner of 42nd and San Pedro Sts.

In 1920 during the ministry of Brother N. W. Jennings, the first building was replaced by a new edifice that was not only beautiful but well adapted to meet the needs of a growing congregation and Bible school. This building adequately served the church until March 15, 1942. On this date possession of the building was yielded to the Second African Methodist Episcopal Church which purchased the property. On that same day, ground was broken at 2400 W. 85th St., Inglewood, and the erection of this new building was begun. It was dedicated on Oct. 25, 1942.

The church began an elementary school, starting with kindergarten through the sixth grade in 1950, with Rev. Howard Vulgamore as principal.

The 50th anniversary was observed Oct. 16, and the following poem was written by Helen Frazee Bower, a member of this church.—Glenn O'Neal, pastor.

LINES FOR OUR GOLDEN JUBILEE

Let me tell you a tale of a little church
God built in the long ago,
And of how it came, through the passing years,
To be the church we know.

What priceless things went into it,
Way back in 1905
That has withstood the test of time,
And kept this church alive?

It wasn't the house—for the house has changed—
It wasn't the people even;
For some are here, who were not then born,
And some have gone to heaven.

Yet, though there's scarcely anything
Today that is the same,
This church is still that little church
In something more than name.

The pastors came, the pastors went,
So it couldn't have been these men
Alone who kept it as it is—
What is the secret, then?

You know—I know—not minds of men,
Nor willing hearts and hands,
Have made this church—but something more—
The truth on which it stands.

For, looking backward through the years,
One constant thought assures:
This church was built on the Word of God—
And that, alone, endures.

Fifty years on the Word of God—
How swiftly they have flown!
What countless blessings have been wrought,
And how the church has grown!

The grateful heart, in retrospect,
Would like to pause and linger;
But time is standing at the door
To point a warning finger.

For fifty years on the Word of God
Is only just a beginning,
While there are battles to be fought,
And souls await the winning.

With gratitude for years long past,
And courage to explore
The years ahead, let's face our task
And make it fifty more!

Prayer Pointers

By Mrs. Frank Lindower
Uniontown, Ohio

FOREIGN MISSIONS—

1. Praise the Lord for the successful and safe trip into Mexico by Dr. Barnard and the three Mexico missionaries, Brethren Haag, Howard, and Edmiston. Praise the Lord also for recent decisions for salvation in the Nuevo Laredo work.

2. Praise the Lord for the safe arrival of our missionaries in Africa. Pray for the blessing of the Lord as they settle down to work on the various stations.

3. Pray for the important Field Council meeting to be held December 6-17 at the Bible Institute at Bozoum in Africa.

4. Pray for our growing work in France, and for the Fogles as they prepare to return to their field of service there. Also pray for the George Cones as they make plans to go on to Africa.

5. Pray for the safety of our mission workers and property in Argentina in another time of political change. Pray for the Paul Dowdys, that they may be able to obtain necessary papers for their return to the States in the month of December, and pray for a safe journey for them.

6. Continue to pray for the safety of our workers in Brazil as that country too is experiencing political unrest. Pray that the Gospel may continue to go forth unhindered as in the past.

7. Pray for much-needed space for the work in Hawaii as the attendance continues to increase.

HOME MISSIONS—

1. Pray for the sale of present church location in Cheyenne, Wyo. and for a parcel of the new location being considered by a major oil company. The sale of these two properties should make possible the building of a new self-supporting church in Cheyenne, where Russell Williams is pastor.

2. Pray for the Spanish-American people at this season—when many will be receiving gifts from Brethren people, that the missionaries will be able to point out the most important Gift for them and that is Christ, who alone can save them from their sins.

3. Praise the Lord for financing on the new Grace Brethren Church, Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and pray for an early completion of the building, remembering the Brethren Construction Co. crew members working there.

4. Praise the Lord for providing a location at Fremont, Ohio for the colored church's temporary building, and pray that a place of worship in their own building will soon be provided for these people. (At present they are meeting in a house).

5. Praise the Lord for Alexandria, Va.; Temple City, Calif.; Martinsburg, W. Va., and Jenners, Pa., going self-supporting during 1955. Pray that more churches this next year will join these self-supporting churches.

6. Pray for the First Brethren Church, San Diego, Calif., in their relocation since selling their present property.

GRACE SEMINARY—

1. Pray for faculty and student ministries during the Christmas holidays.

2. Praise God for answered prayer and pray especially for the financial appeal that will be made during December and January.

3. Pray for Dr. Bauman and Dr. Hoyt as they visit the churches of the west and midwest immediately after Christmas in the interests of the seminary and college.

4. Pray for the student enrollment in the seminary and college at the beginning of the second semester (Jan. 23), that those of God's own choosing will be directed to the school.

WMC—

1. Pray that all members will accept the challenge to read their Bibles daily and pray daily!

2. Pray that the born-again men in our churches will assume their headship in the home by establishing family altars.

3. Pray that the WMC Christian education offering of $2800 will be reached this quarter.

SMM—

1. Pray for the national project offering of $1700, that it will be reached through the prayers and gifts of all the girls.

2. Pray for the new SMM in Denver, Colo.

3. Pray for the SMM girls (and all girls) in Grace College, that they may hear and heed God's voice above all else in their preparation for life.

BYF—

1. Thank the Lord for the successful camps and conferences, and pray that the godly influences felt there may linger long in the lives of the campers.

2. Ask the Lord to raise up a suitable couple to be national youth directors!

3. Seek the Lord's guidance as the curriculum class of Grace College prepares lesson materials for the Brethren Youth Fellowship.

4. Pray that the Lord will cause youth leaders in the churches to be willing to put forth necessary effort for successful leadership.

5. Ask the Lord to continue to supply the need for Brethren youth through the youth partner plan.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD—

1. Pray for blessings on the "Area Conventions".

2. Pray for faithful effort of pastors, superintendents and people to win 60,000 by 1960.

"AS UNTO THE LORD" Col. 3:23

BEING A PASTOR'S WIFE 'AS UNTO THE LORD'

By Mrs. Ord Gehman

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth" are words that are familiar to everyone who has even a very casual knowledge of the Word of God. God created everything beautiful, originally, beyond words to describe. After He had formed the earth with all its beauties and established order with night and day, He saw that all He had done was good. Man was formed out of the dust of the earth and God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life. Thus man, under God, became a living soul. But God saw that man had a desperate need! There was no one with whom Adam could enjoy the sweetness of fellowship and human relationships. Adam must have felt this great need also. So God beheld Adam's state and came to a definite conclusion. Adam needed someone like him to be with him—one who could enjoy his companionship and share his joys and sorrows. Accordingly, God said: "It is not good that man should be alone; I will make an help meet for him" (Gen. 2:18). God did not form woman of the dust of the earth as He had formed the man, but He took a part of Adam's flesh and bone and formed the woman. Not from the head to have dominion, not from the feet to be subservient, but from over the heart to share in his aspirations, joys, sorrows, and accomplishments. Yes; God made woman "out of man" to be an help meet unto him.

When God said: "It is not good that the man should be alone," He made a general statement. But this statement has particular significance when it is applied to the relationship of the pastor's wife to the pastor, God's undershepherd. For it is around him that Satan's nets are particularly spread because of his peculiar position in relation to the Lord and His work. Since this family relationship is basic and the position of the pastor's wife is a peculiar one, we shall consider it as "unto the Lord."

Paul, writing by the Holy Spirit, stated in the epistle to the Colossians: "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him" (vs. 17). And again in verses 23-24 we read: "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ." It is true that the principle set forth in this passage of Scripture should apply to every child of God; but I would like to apply it specifically to the position of the pastor's wife. We shall consider three aspects of our position in the order of their importance.

In the first place it is the writer's conviction that her greatest and first responsibility in relationship to the Lord's work is in her home. This home is expected to be a model of orderliness and godliness. It is her desire that everyone shall feel welcome in this home at anytime. She wants her home to be neat, attractive and inviting. But please remember, the parsonage is not a business office. It is the home of your pastor's family. They live there! It is the only home they have, humanly speaking. They want it to manifest the love of Christ at all times toward all who enter therein. It is their desire that you discuss the things of the Lord with them.

My husband has been called by God to the highest and noblest of all human responsibilities, I am your pastor's wife, his helpmeet. His problems and burdens are tremendous at times, so help us keep our home a place of spiritual refuge and godly dignity lest we become weary over material things and fail in our high purpose before God. My husband, your pastor, has been called by your church to be your spiritual overseer and advisor. I want to make our home such that his every energy and ability can be expended for that purpose. Therefore, I consider my home, our home, my first God-given responsibility.

Very closely akin to this is my responsibility to my family. God has given us a family of six wonderful children. We praise God for each one of them. They are all normal, vigorous individuals. They all have the same dislikes and desires of any person their same ages. I love my family and my home. Their joys I share; their heartaches I bear with them. Many times daily I breathe their names before our Father's throne in prayer. They are no longer babies tugging at my apron strings, but I bear them on my heart constantly. Therefore, please be considerate of them at all times. Are they to be more severely censured for childish thoughtlessness than others? I am no superwoman, neither are they superchildren. But my husband and I commit them daily to our Father's care—at work or play; at home or far away—and we know that He watches over them constantly. And we believe that the Lord

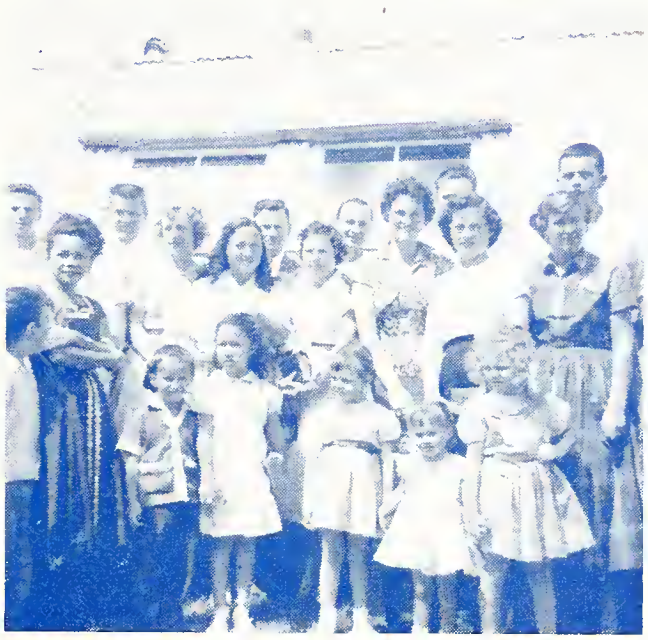
Work Among the Women in Hawaii

By Mrs. Marguerite Tresise

It gives us joy to write concerning our work in Hawaii. God has given us a group of believers which are mostly made up of women and children. We do praise the Lord for them and their faithfulness. There are the different nationalities represented such as "haole" or Caucasin, Japanese, German, Hawaiian, Chinese and mixtures of these different races.

For the past several weeks some of the ladies have been doing visitation work in the Red Hill community, and they tell of the blessings received as they visit in the homes. These same ladies are faithful to all the services of the chapel.



One of the ladies had a children's Bible class for the first time in her home last Friday; there were 23 boys and girls present, and one mother came to observe what was being taught. Many of the boys and girls made decisions for the Lord and the mother was so thrilled with the lesson from God's Word as it was presented that she asked the teacher to come to her church the following Sunday morning and present the same lesson to their Sunday school. The teacher said she would like to but didn't want to miss Sunday school at Grace Chapel. The mother promised to pick her up in the car at 8:30 a. m. and have her back at 9:30 in time for our own services. She returned with a testimony on her lips of the blessing she received from giving out the Word of God in that church.

Mrs. L, a real Christian, is the mother of two dear little girls who love the Lord. The one little girl, who is a faithful member of the primary class, has been inviting her playmates to come with her to Sunday school. On the way there she teaches them the Scripture verse she has learned during the week.

Mrs. K, who was a Roman Catholic, accepted the Lord about nine months ago, and is a real witness for Christ in her home, as well as to her friends and neighbors in the community. A few weeks ago her children received a Bible storybook for one year's perfect attendance in Sunday school. She reads the stories to her children every evening before they go to bed and also invites the neighbor children in to hear them. When she calls in the home of her sister, who is Roman Catholic, she reads from the sister's Bible and underlines the verses on salvation, such as Acts 4:12; John 3:16; 5:24 and many others.

Her husband, being unsaved, does not want her to attend the services at the church and tries to hinder her spiritual growth every way possible. When she is reading the Word of God in tht home, he will turn out the light and close the Bible. He also objects to her reading the Bible stories to the children. When she talks to her children, and others, about the Lord, he tells them not to listen to that but rather to a fairy tale. In spite of all the persecution, she remains faithful to her Lord and to all the services at the chapel.

Many of the women in the community come to her and ask her questions about the Word of God. After hearing that one of the Japanese ladies of the community desired a Bible, she gave her an extra Bible she had in her home, and she also gave her an adult Brethren Quarterly in order that she might be able to study the Sunday-school lessons. As we called in this Japanese home later, this lady told us how happy she was to receive the Bible and quarterly, and what a blessing the quarterly was to her as she could study it during the week and then better understand the lesson as it was taught on Sunday.

A group at morning worship service at Grace Chapel

We are praising the Lord that this same Japanese lady accepted the Lord as her Saviour a few weeks ago in her home as the plan of salvation was presented to her. A few days ago we gave her some Japanese tracts. She was so happy for them and said she would read them and pass them on to her Japanese friends in Red Hill.

There are several Japanese ladies in the community who have become interested in the services and have been attending quite regularly. Some of them have been here only a short time from Japan and do not understand English, or speak it, too well.

Many of the Orientals are rather difficult to reach with the Gospel because of this language and cultural background, while others are brought up in Buddhist homes and are warned against the "evils" of Christianity. Some are suffering persecution but remaining true to the Lord in bringing up their children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." Others have no desire for spiritual things, and tend to discourage their children who love to hear about the Lord Jesus.

We do pray, and request prayer of our WMC ladies in the mainland, that the Lord may continue to speak through His Word to the hearts of the ladies here in this needy field and lead them on in the service of the Lord. Especially would we request prayer that God might keep them from falling back into sin, and for the salvation of their husbands. Our hearts are challenged. Is God not able also to save the husbands? His Word states: "He is able . . ." and "his arm is not shortened, that he cannot save," and we believe God. Help us claim God's promises in behalf of these ladies, and for the salvation of their husbands.

WMC Missionary Returns to Africa

One of the three missionaries being supported by the birthday offerings of the National WMC is Miss Mary Emmert. Mary is one of the pioneer missionaries of our work in French Equatorial Africa. She spent many years out there as a teacher. When she came home on furlough 10 years ago, she found her aged father alone and needing her care. She responded to that need as a dutiful daughter and spent nine years caring for him. Some months ago the Lord took her father to himself. Mary immediately turned her eyes again toward Africa and in a very few months was packed and ready to go. She has just arrived back on the field and has written a letter to the foreign mission office which Dr. Barnard has graciously shared with us. Let us remember that Mary is OUR missionary and not only support her with our birthday offerings but also hold her before the Lord daily in prayer.

Miss Emmert

Dear Brother Barnard: Nov. 10, 1955

Rosella Cochran and I arrived here in Bangui yesterday, Nov. 9, happy and praising the Lord. We had a lovely trip out and got to see a bit of the desolate Lake Tchad region in the morning.

The only casualty, so far as I can determine, is that my typewriter refuses to work. So I am trying to write this letter on Brother Jobson's and it has a French keyboard. The "q" is where the "a" ought to be, and a few other complications cramp my style.

The Lord wonderfully undertook also in regard to the permission for teaching. Brother Jobson had it all arranged. So all we did was to go in to meet the man in the department. They said it was already granted and that I could start in teaching at once. Isn't that wonderful? When I think how long I had to wait for that first permission, I can only bow in gratitude to the Lord.

We want to do some Bangui shopping and get off for Yaloke right after lunch. I am going to say goodbye for this time. Rosella is writing home to her folk, so if she doesn't get to say hello this time, she will be writing soon. She seems to be thoroughly enjoying every minute of the time. I firmly believe that she will make a wonderful missionary, and I feel that I know her pretty well by this time. Gail and Grace are here to take us home. Everyone is well as far as they know.

Best wishes to all. In the Lord's service,

Mary Emmert

AS UNTO THE LORD

will guide each one of them as it pleaseth Him, for they were committed to Him before they ever saw the light of day. So, next to my greatest concern of the pastor's home, the pastor's family ranks in my responsibility.

In the third place, I am concerned about my conduct in the church. Many of you may not agree with me, but I feel very definitely that as the pastor's wife my place in the church is one of spiritual example and not social leadership. You ladies of the church have a desire for responsibilities; fulfill that desire by managing well the WMC, the Sisterhood work, etc. I will stand by faithfully with prayerful support and faithful attendance, always adorning "the doctrine of God, our Saviour in all things" (Titus 2:10b). You are not as apt to criticise one another for an error in judgment or leadership as you are me, so for the benefit of the local church, which is a part of the body of Christ, and the testimony of our work, permit me to be spiritually helpful in our church and her efforts for Christ.

As your pastor's wife, please remember that we are not from a race of superwomen! Our powers are limited; our resources are many times scant. Our first and greatest responsibility is "unto the Lord." It is the hope and aspiration of our heart to be predominately and always in the center of His blessed will. Do not be too hasty to judge us when you feel we have failed. We may not measure up to every standard you have erected for us; but it shall always be our profound purpose to move in our homes, with our families, and in the church with grace and dignity at all times "as unto the Lord."

LET YOUR LIFE SHINE

Christian Home and Marriage Forum

By Althea S. Miller

OBEY MY HUSBAND?

A young friend of mine who is a very dear daughter in the Lord wrote the following question after she'd been married something over a year. "Why do I have to obey my husband? I am confused. I don't believe he uses the best judgment sometimes and he will not listen to any other reasoning. Don't worry, I still love him with all my heart, but I never knew before we were married all the involvements or issues which would rear their heads and assume such large proportions." (Does anyone?)

Mrs. Althea Miller

We must obey our husbands because the Bible says so. You can argue with me all you wish to the contrary, and I'd listen; likely even agree. But every woman comes back ultimately to the Word with which we dare not argue.

There are any number of passages to which we can turn for evidence. For instance: "Wives, submit yourselves unto our own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord" (Col. 3:18). I'm glad it specifies "your own husband." Ephesians 5:22 says virtually the same thing, but is preceded by a "submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God."

We seem to be terribly afraid of the word obey. My own dear husband points out we have the idea that obedience is to do something whether we want to or not. But where love is as it should be, self goes out and there is more of a "want to" in this matter of obedience or "submission" as it is used in these passages. The matter of submission involves headship. Since every phase of life and living demands headship, it should not be difficult for us to see that need for our homes. God chose the man for that place of headship because in the transgression back in the Garden of Eden, Adam was not deceived, but Eve was. (I Tim. 2:14). If we would be honest, we must confess that women are more often ruled by the emotions and personalities than by principles. I hasten to add that we do need the heart in all our ruling and living and testimony. God pity the home or church which lacks heart and warmth; but God pity also the home or church which bows to certain personalities because of a sense of obligation to the exclusion or hurt of others in the "family." We need both in home and church; there is a sad imbalance where one or the other dominates.

Granting, therefore, the headship of the home and the woman to the man, who is it that has to make the adjustments and make the concessions in order that God's plan for the home and church be carried out? The woman, of course. I believe with all my heart that no woman should ever marry if she is not willing for God's order to be carried out in the home which she is party to establishing. If she cannot honestly say she will "obey in the Lord," she and all concerned will be better off unmarried. If we didn't realize the extent to which this would take us when we married, and perhaps the situation is not always to our liking, we must in prayer submit to the known will of God for us. His molding process is not always pleasant, but if it be for our good and His glory, dare we refuse to yield?

Don't let the misunderstandings throw you off course and build up resentments to God's ordered way of running your home. If you honestly believe your husband is wrong in certain moves (and this is altogether within the realm of possibility), don't you step over your bounds.

Have a wonderful Christmas as you remember how Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners and to give woman a place of honor second to none.

Next month: What is the husband's part in relation to the wife's submission?

THE PRESIDENT'S CORNER

Presenting—

MRS. JEAN JACKSON

President of Michigan District

Greetings from the Michigan District WMC.

The women in this district have been truly busy and enthused and worked hard this past year. They helped send their president to National Conference and met all of their goals. We are a small district and widely scattered, so we feel that we have accomplished much and the Lord has blessed abundantly.

We met with the district officers and local presidents upon our return from national conference while things were fresh in our minds and we were able to put some of the enthusiasm over to our ladies. From the reports of the councils when we met at our district rally in Berrien Springs, we found the women much enthused and things looking up for our coming year. Each council had their consecration and installation service and reported much blessing from them.

We had our district rally on Oct. 13 with about 50 women in attendance. This included six ladies from the Ozark Church across the Straits some 30 miles away. Since we couldn't obtain a missionary for our speaker, each council put on a skit. One depicted the need of bandages, another the Navajo work and the home-mission work. The Ozark Council ended with the devotions. It was one of the nicest rallies we have had.

We have decided to use the banner for attendance at district rallies, hoping this will encourage more of our ladies to come out. We more than met our goal for the fall rally, which was the purchasing of a sink for the parsonage at Ozark, and we had enough to help with the lumber for the cupboards. We plan to help our district camp in buying music for the chorale and any place else we can help in the district work. This is our project for our spring rally. This sounds small after reading about the other district work, but as the Lord blesses us and we increase, you will be able to see big things in us too. Trust the Lord will bless us all as we serve him this year.

The month of December brings us once again to the beginning another National Offering Project. During the past three months we have been helping Miss Evelyn Fuqua get the funds necessary for her little house at Dryhill, Ky. Now it is time to turn our prayers and gifts toward the second project which is for the Christian Education Offering. This offering is to be used for three projects—the new pickup truck for Grace Seminary and College, a transcopy machine for the central-school office, and additional equipment for the Sunday school and youth office. The need for a light pick-up was so great that the school has already bought the car from general funds and are looking forward to the time when the WMC offering will come in to reimburse the general fund which is in real need at the present time. Let each one of us get behind this offering and really put it over the top this year. Remember—it was the only goal we didn't make last year. Let us see that we do not fall down this year. They are counting on us.

SUGGESTIONS TO LOCAL PRAYER CHAIRMEN

The East District Prayer Chairman, Mrs. R. F. Myers, writes: "Our missionaries tell us that prayer is the mightiest weapon God ever placed at the disposal of his people!"

Are you, as local prayer chairman, encouraging your members to use this weapon? Have you seen to it that each lady has a prayer booklet of all our missionaries? Have you been making it a habit to pray for particular missionaries each day? Why not place a mark of some kind at the edge of each missionary's picture each time you pray for them, thus calling your attention to your own faithfulness, or unfaithfulness, to our own sisters and brothers who have literally obeyed the Great Commission?

OUR COVER PICTURE

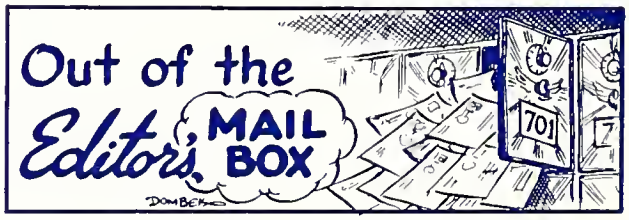
The cover this month, supplied by Grace Seminary, shows the completion of our project of last year for the school. Most of you know that the main part of the chapel was furnished some years ago by WMC, but the classroom to the rear, which was to be used as part of the chapel only on rare occasions when we had an overflow crowd, was equipped with chairs. However, our school has grown so rapidly that we must use that back room regularly as a part of the chapel. Consequently, the women took as their project of the past year the furnishing of pews for the rear of the chapel. They have now been installed and have much improved the appearance of the chapel, as the cover picture well shows. These differ from the pews in the chapel proper in that they have folding tables on the back that can be used for writing when classes are held in that room.

"HIS DESIRE, OUR DELIGHT"

The National Sisterhood of Mary and Martha would like to express their deepest appreciation and thanks for the space provided for them in the WMC Herald, during the year 1954-55.

Many young girls were reached through the messages and devotional challenges which were presented in this portion of the Herald. They too, would say thank you for the provision of the SMM space.

We trust the gifts which we have offered to the WMC might express our thankfulness, but even more our expression of words. Psalm 37:4.



In Christian service,
Sandra Charleen Talbot,
Nat'l. General Secretary

HOMEMADE SOAP

In a stone, granite, or glass container (anything but metal) dissolve 1 can of lye in a quart of cold water. Let stand until lukewarm. The lye makes the water hot. Handle lye very carefully because it is caustic. Using a wooden spoon to stir, slowly pour into the lye solution 2 quarts of lukewarm grease strained through a fine strainer or cheesecloth. Any kind of grease may be used (we even used peanut oil in Africa. Ed). Stir thoroughly. Next stir in 2 tablespoons powdered borax and 1 cup of ammonia. A few tablespoons of any dry cleaner such as Perfex may also be added, if desired. Stir occasionally after that until it thickens like honey, then pour into a pan lined with heavy paper or waxed paper. You may even use a heavy carton lined with several layers of paper, about 10 inches by 15 inches in size.

When it hardens somewhat cut into bars. Remove from pan the next day. Soap is better if it cures for a few weeks. Even if grease is old and dark the soap will be white—gets whiter in a few days as it dries out. This soap is gentle on the hands—good for dishes, as well as laundry. For convenience it may be grated or cut into small pieces, soaked in water in a covered jar, then easily rubbed through a course strainer right into the washing machine as needed.

Happy soapmaking to you all.—Temple City, Calif. WMC.

The Senior and Junior councils of Winchester, Va. held a joint consecration service in September. The fall rally of the Atlantic district was held at Seven Fountains, Va. with Winchester Sr. council winning the attendance banner.

The Southeast District WMC rally was held at Buena Vista, Va. with 76 ladies present. Mrs. Althea Miller was the speaker and left each lady with the personal challenge, "Have I done everything as unto Him? Have I? Washington Heights Sr. council won the attendance banner.

REMEMBER MIRIAM

By Mrs. Arnold Kriegbaum
(Exod. 2; 15:20-21; Num. 20)

In Micah 6:4, God says, "And I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam." Jochebed, the mother of Moses, had a daughter, Miriam, and another son, Aaron. Socially they were slaves but spiritually they were God's free men; yea the Spirit is not confined by walls or class distinction. The height of the spiritual development of these children resulted in their becoming God's choice servants. "It is not given to many families for all their children to be prophets."

Can you give the definition of a prophet? A prophet is one who is intimate with God, knowing His mind and speaking God's words to the people. In I Corinthians 14:3 we read: "He that prophesieth speaketh unto men to edification, and exhortation, and comfort." Take a few minutes, girls, to discuss edification, exhortation and comfort, for we need these three things from the cradle to the grave. Recall to mind some godly women you know who have heartened you, comforted you, and built you up in the faith in Christ Jesus. God has his prophetesses in our church, and you can develop this sacred ministry and be one, too.

The training of Miriam, the prophetess, began very early in her life. What do you remember first about Miriam? Yes; she was "baby-tender" for her younger brothers. She proved her worthiness and faithfulness in small tasks and the Lord entrusted her with greater ones. Caring for the younger members of your family is an important task, and only life will show how very important such service is. The godly concern that many of you have for the children in the Sunday-school classes you teach is a delight to observe. Today, the mothers of some children care only if they are well-fed and well-clothed and sent to school. Yours is the high privilege to teach them how to live forever and be a living pleasure for their Creator!

When the emergency arrived, Miriam was faithfully serving at her post. Not with fussy importance but with tact and self-control; Miriam had the "just right" suggestion and made it at the right time. At early morning watch, had Miriam prayed that morning for wisdom from God? Do you pray for children in your care? In this new year, thank God for every privilege to be used of Him in helping another to eternal safety in God's kingdom. Your life will be rich and full of joys and interest as you watch God's hand in the lives of others, as well as in your own life.

Miriam's brother, Moses, was transferred to a palace and then to the desert; but one day he returned to find that Miriam and Aaron shared his fears and prayers and hopes. After being away from family, and understanding care, how precious was the encouragement his loved ones gave to him.

You recall the fearful suspense of waiting the Israelites had, waiting for the word from the king "to let God's people go." Then came the dark night of sorrow when God smote all the first-born of the land of Egypt. But God's people kept their first passover with the first-born safe under the sprinkled blood of the Lamb. Just so, the blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanseth us from all sin; and we are free from the wages of sin, death!

After the mighty waters had rolled back and the Israelites had marched through on dry ground, Miriam led in a glorious song. And Miriam answered them, "Sing ye to the Lord, for he hath triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea" (Exod. 15:21). They had something to sing about, and so do we.

Miriam was much loved, and many came to her for comfort and strength and encouragement in the Lord. The Scriptures do not tell us she was married. Tradition has it that she was the wife of Hur (who helped to hold up Moses' hands during the battle with Amalek), and the grandmother of Bezaleel, who was the supervisor and designer of all the tabernacle and its furnishings.

Then one day something happened inside Miriam. It was after Moses' wife Zipporah, and their sons came to live with them in the camp. Miriam could only refer to her as "that Cushite woman"—"And Miriam and Aaron spake against Moses because of the Ethopian [or Cushite] woman whom he had married" (Num. 12:1). Miriam became jealous, and jealousy is cruel. Miriam spoke against Moses. "And the anger of the Lord was kindled against them; and he departed. And the cloud departed from off the tabernacle; and, behold, Miriam became leperous" (Num. 12:9-10). Aaron was guilty, too. He stood aghast at the awful sight of his sister—a leper! He confessed his sin to Moses, who beseeched the Lord to heal her. Miriam was shut out from the camp seven days; and the people journeyed not till Miriam was brought in again. Sin affects not only the one who does it but many more. The whole camp was delayed. The tongue of one person, or one unclean life can delay and hinder and hamper many other lives and aggressive service in the church. God did not drop Miriam out in the wilderness—oh what grace! But never again do we read that Miriam was used to bless other lives.

Jude the 21st verse says: "Keep yourselves in the love of God," or keep yourselves where God can bless you. Keep out the jealousy and the biting words and stings that blight your lives. "Character like embroidery is made stitch by stitch." Each moment you must be on guard. Only in the Lord can you be strong. When you feel jealousy, hatred, or cruel words coming into your mind and heart, remember Miriam!

ABIGAIL,

a Wise Wife with a Foolish Husband

By Mrs. R. Paul Miller

(I Sam. 25:18-22, 32-33, 36-40)

Abigail was the charming, sensible, beautiful and generous wife of the stingy, cross, rich Nabal who owned a large farm in Carmel, Palestine. Nabal hired many men to shear and feed his sheep, and was careful to see that his shepherds tended his sheep very well.

David, the psalmist, had to pass by this farm; and he was having a hard time to feed the 600 men under his care. David heard Nabal had lots of food, so he sent 10 of his men to ask for food, but Nabal refused to give them any food.

In those days, it was very rude not to be hospitable, even to strangers; but, Nabal said, I shall do no such thing as to give bread or meat or drink. Who does David think he is? The 10 men reported this to David who became angry when he realized he had saved many of Nabal's flocks and servants. One of Nabal's servants overheard David and ran to Abigail to tell her how David and his men had even protected Nabal's servants from thieves and wild beasts.

Abigail was wise in her decision and action. She quickly took 200 loaves of bread, a big sheep skin full of wine, 5 cooked sheep, 5 measures (a measure is 1½ pecks) of parched wheat (something like popcorn), 100 clusters of raisins and 20 cakes of figs. She had this loaded on donkeys' backs, and had her servants take it to David. She rode along but did not tell her husband because he was drunk at the feast he had made at his house that night.

Abigail apologized to David for her husband's actions. David received her gifts thankfully and said: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, which sent three this day to meet me."

The next morning when Nabal was sober, Abigail told him how David had spared his life. When Nabal realized how close he had come to death, he was frightened so much he almost had a heart attack. Within 10 days, however, a sickness did cause Nabal to die.

Girls, we dare not be selfish or stingy when we can share with others. God punished Nabal and will punish us also if we do not share with others when we know they have need.

Abigail delighted herself in doing the right things, and the Lord rewarded her. David heard Nabal had died, so he sent his messengers to ask Abigail to become his wife. He had been so pleased with the way Abigail had treated him, he wanted her to be his wife. Abigail accepted because David had shown her how a true Christian should act.

Unless Jesus Christ is the Lord and Saviour of our whole being, we can never please God. "Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart."

A NOTE FROM YOUR NATIONAL TREASURER, MARY HOOKS

The general fund offering is to be postmarked not later than January 31, 1956. Mary has requested that you specifically state (1) From whom the offering is, this includes your name, address and either junior, middler, senior, or combined. Also include the church name. (2) For what offering it is to be applied—general, birthda or project; and (3) Have it in check form, made out to Mary Hooks.

Your cooperation in this matter will be very much appreciated by Mary.

PRAYER REQUESTS

Remember the Cone Jr. family in France as they keep the work going while the Fogles are on furlough.

Remember the Churchill's and Mrs. Siekel as they have just returned to Argentina. Praise the Lord for Mrs. Churchill's recovery from her operation.

Remember our national officers that the Lord will give them strength and wisdom in their time of need.

Remember the writer's of next year's articles, that the Lord will give them the word to say that will not only challenge us but move us also.

Remember our general fund offering, that each one will cooperate and give as the Lord directs.

NEARING OUR DESTINATION

By Mrs. Rose A. Foster

We were almost to Bangui. What joy and anticipation was ours! Mr. Hathaway was to be there to meet us and introduce us to our new tasks. But no friendly face was on the shore to greet us. We went ashore, bag and baggage, still hoping to see someone we knew. But no one appeared whom we knew; so Mr. Jobson went scouting. He met a merchant friend who had a vacancy and from him rented two rooms for us.

Mrs. Rose A. Foster

Two old, single beds made of iron was the only furniture in our room. There was no running water; there was no heat other than the sun to overcome the dampness, and no bathroom facilities. Yet we were thankful for this bare room as living quarters were difficult to obtain.

After two weeks of waiting for word from Mr. Hathaway, it came, along with one hundred porters. The news was not good. Flooded rivers prevented his crossing, but still Mr. Hathaway advised our renting a truck to take us to the first river from Bangui. Hurriedly, we made up the loads for the porters, and it took every one of them to carry the tremendous amount of freight we had taken with us and had gathered up at different ports along the way.

By October 21, 1926 all was in readiness. We hired a government truck and were on our way to the first river, 25 kilometers away. We had our duffle bags (bedding) and food with us. A bicycle, motorbike, pousse-pousse and tepoi were being brought by porters to the first river.

Thirty minutes out of Bangui, the rain began to pour, and I mean pour! We had an umbrella, but the water came right through it; and in less time than it takes to tell, we were soaked to the skin.

Finally, we arrived at the river. Immediately, the chauffeur disappeared. Where to? We knew not. There we stood. What should we do? The truck was wet all over. High water was before us. A few native huts were behind us.

Mr. Jobson decided to visit the huts and inquire if sleeping space could be had for the four of us. One of Jobson's native boys was also with us. One family kindly consented to move out and thus permit us to move in. Because of the rain-proof covering our two cots and bedding were kept dry.

We entered the hut with thankful hearts, praising our Heavenly Father that He had gone before and prepared hearts to welcome us, even though we were strangers to them.

The hut was dry but full of smoke. In one corner there was a hen setting on eggs to hatch. She did not like the intrusion and told us so by her saucy clucking. On the other side, beyond a slat partition, there were some goats. The only thing about them that annoyed us was the odor. It was a proper initiation because we smelled goat all of our 25 years in Africa!

At last the boy had set up our beds and made them. We were so glad to get into dry clothes and a dry bed. Surely, not many of you ever had the experience of two sleeping in one army cot. To say the least, it was not pleasant; especially with the smoke, plus the clucking of the ill-tempered hen, and the goat odor. Mrs. Jobson and I thought morning would never come. But, would you believe it, our husbands seemed to enjoy it!

About midnight we heard great commotion outside. What could it be? People were talking excitedly. "My heart was in my throat." Had we not passed a place as we came up the river where a Catholic priest had been killed by the natives? Had they gathered to execute us in like manner? Now even the thought of sleep had flown through the roof. With wide-open eyes we watched for the first man to enter. My faith was small. It grows with testings!

Most things come to an end, so did the night. What a delightful sound was the crowing of the first rooster. When daylight came, we arose. Mrs. Jobson and I told our husbands of the crowd who had gathered to slay us. This aroused their curiosity. When they went outside, they found one hundred, great big Kabba men whom the government had gathered to send to Brazzaville to work on the new railroad. How we longed to preach the Gospel to them. But not knowing their language was a great barrier between us.

Long since then a mission station has been opened in that tribe, and many have come to know Christ as their Saviour.

IMPORTANT NOTE! ! ! !

Orders for sweaters (SMM) have been extended to February 5. There are three specific measurements needed when an order is made (1) The bust measurement—this includes the whole distance around the bodice; (2) The arm measurement, which extends from the socket of the arm and shoulder to the first joint of the index finger; (3) The height of the person in feet and inches.

The color (white or green) which you would like, should be stated. The orders are to be sent to, Sandra Talbot, 1337 Lee Ave., Long Beach 4, Calif. It is very important that these measurements are accurately stated in your order. Each sweater costs $7.50; money orders or checks may be made out to Sandra Talbot.

PROGRAM GUIDE FOR JANUARY

THEME VERSE—Repeat the theme verse, Psalm 37:4; and open with a word of prayer.

SING TIME—Sing some favorite choruses or hymns.

DEVOTIONAL STUDY—Seniors and middlers study "Remember Miriam," by Mrs. Arnold Kreigbaum; Juniors meditate upon "Abigail, a Wise Wife with a Foolish Husband."

SPECIAL NUMER—Have a vocal duet or an instrumental.

PRAYER CIRCLE—Let's bring our missionaries before the throne of grace. Remember the requests in the Prayer Corner.

MISSIONARY BIOGRAPHY—The seniors and middlers will be challenged by the life of "Mrs. Charles (Pauline) Sumey." The juniors have another interesting story entitled, "Nearing our Destination" by Mrs. Foster.

BUSINESS MEETING.

SMM BENEDICTION.

The Hand of God on the Life of

PAULINE W. SUMEY

By Althea S. Miller

Besides being scared to death of dogs, and running away several times, Pauline Sumey insists she had a very uneventful and ordinary childhood. But when she tries to tell about her courtship, ah! words fail our lady. She says every day of her courtship was so interesting it would require a book to get it all down, and we have no space here for a book on a romance. (I wish we did, don't you girls?) I wish we could reproduce here the cute little smiling face Mrs. Sumey sketched next to her comments on her courtship. By the way, Charles Sumey was in on those famous days, also. We must not forget to give credit to the wonderful man involved.

Mrs. Sumey

Mrs. Sumey was born in Altoona, Pa. (she didn't say when), and born again in Uniontown, Pa. at the age of 22. Pauline has never been able to get away from the influence of her dear mother's life and testimony —both before and after her salvation. Radio messages played a large part in leading her to acknowledge Christ as her Saviour. And the teaching she absorbed, after her salvation, in the Brethren Church was instrumental in great spiritual growth.

Pauline met Charles Sumey when they were both making decisions regarding where God would have them serve Him. When God laid Africa on her heart, she did not rebel or argue with His leading. She tells us the need is so great and she saw so few going that she simply had to say yes to her Lord in this respect.

Teaching women on the field is her major occupation. She is especially thankful for her training at Philadelphia School of the Bible (now Philadelphia Bible Institute), and for the classes she audited at Grace Seminary. She enjoys teaching the native preachers' wives, and rejoices as they grow up in the Lord as they are fed on the Word.

The Sumeys are now in their second term in French Equatorial Africa. Our missionary urges every Sisterhood girl to be faithful to the Lord in Sisterhood. Don't miss meetings, and don't take just a casual interest. As you go through high school, do your very best in order that you'll be prepared to go on for further training if He should call you to serve Him on some foreign-mission field. Be prayer warriors, and learn to give generously even out of a small allowance, to missionary work through Sisterhood. You'll never be sorry you learned to give liberally to the Lord's work.

No one has the right to hear the Gospel twice until every soul has heard it once. No Sisterhood girl has any right to decide what "she" wants to do with her life. The saved girl belongs to Christ first and foremost. So look to the harvest. "The fields are white, but the laborers few." Will you join the ranks of those few? Pray for Mrs. Sumey as she labors in Africa. And heed the admonition of I Corinthians 15:34: "Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to your shame [to move you to shame]."

CALLING ALL LOCAL SISTERHOODS!

Has your Sisterhood done something outstanding in the past few months—something that the other Sisterhoods might like to hear about and use for a meeting? If so, write to the general secretary telling her about it, making it interesting to put in the Herald. Only two newsletters have been sent in this year. Let's get busy and have some for next month's issue of the SMM pages. Perhaps in the past your group sent a newsletter and it never got put in the Herald. We only have a limited space for these and only those of importance are printed. Make them interesting, with new ideas for other groups which you have had in your own group and send them to the national general secretary.

WINNERS OF 1954-55 WRITING CONTEST

Announcing the winners of the writing contest of 1954-55: Short Story—Jean Pittman, Wapato, Wash., Sr. SMM—first place, Marjorie Gonzales, Taos, N. Mex. Sr. SMM—second place; Poem—Karen Showerman, Whittier, Calif. (First Church), first place, Dianne Lyles, Roanoke, Va. (Wash. Hgts. Church), second place.

Congratulations to all of you! Let this be a reminder to you other girls—begin now to work on an entry for this year's contest. Let's make it hard for the judges to choose a winner!

1. SENIORS ONLY: How many of you have ever read through the entire Bible? Let's not let the younger girls put us to shame! Again we are awarding a beautiful "S" letter for those who read the Bible through this year. You may have your choice of a green or white letter. Even greater than the award is the blessing for all of those who complete this project.

2. WRITING CONTEST: All entries must be into the national patroness by January 31, 1956. Hurry, hurry! You still have a little time left.

3. GENERAL FUND OFFERING: One of the requirements to be an honor SMM is to send in your offering to the national treasurer by January 31, 1956. All of the Sisterhood supplies, Herald programs, and many other things that you enjoy come from this offering.

4. "WHAT 'CHA BEEN DOIN?" We'd like to hear about something different and unusual in your activities. Send this news item to the national general secretary.

WINONA LAKE, IND. John Hood has resigned as a missionary for the Rural Bible Crusade (Indiana) and is waiting the Lord's leading as to his future ministry. His address is Box 403.

WINONA LAKE, IND. The Brethren Missionary Herald is urging all "ham" radio operators to register with the Missionary Herald. If you are a licensed operator, and desire to do a real missionary service for the Lord by making your radio ability work for the Lord, send your name, address, and information as to the type of equipment you have at your disposal, to the Missionary Herald at once. Correspondence will follow. If there is such an operator in your church, please bring this announcement to his attention.

SPECIAL. (EP) John H. Noble, 31-year-old American, a recently-released prisoner of the Soviet Union, told reporters that his religious faith saved him from cracking under Communist "brainwashing" attempts. He was arrested in the Soviet Zone of Germany in 1945 and arrived in the States during Nov., 1955. While he was a prisoner he saw many men subjected to interrogation by the Reds, but "those who weakened first were strangers to the Bible." A Communist magazine, China Youth, published in Peiping, conceded that it is hard to "brainwash" religious believers. The editor complained: "People break any idol but (we) can't wash the divinity off the brain of religious followers—this must be done through persuasion and education." (Editor: The Reds fail to realize that the conviction of a Christian is more than a mental attitude.)

DENVER, COLO. Lester Pifer concludes an evangelistic campaign at the Grace Brethren Church Dec. 11. Thomas Inman is pastor.

A Christian's Christmas

By GLENN O'NEAL
Pastor First Brethren Church
Inglewood, Calif.

Each year it seems that the observance of Christmas departs more completely from its intended purpose—the remembrance of the entrance of Christ into the world. In fact, the three major Christian holidays are no longer celebrated in a manner which would emphasize Christ. Easter has become the time for the Easter bunny, Easter eggs and the Easter parade, instead of a day of rejoicing in the resurrection of Christ. The turkey is to most people, much more important than giving thanks to God on Thanksgiving Day. Christmas has become a time for Santa Claus and his reindeer and, again, Christ is left out.

Christians are in danger of being swept along by a pagan world so that the preeminence of Christ in the observance is forgotten. It is well to be reminded of that which will characterize a Christian Christmas:

1. A Christian Christmas will stress the story of the birth of Christ. It would be profitable to review the story of His birth in the gospels such as that found in Matthew 1:21-23:

> "And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins.
> Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet saying,
> Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us."

It should be emphasized that this is no ordinary birth but that when he came, GOD was with us. Only as this truth grips the Christian can he rightfully observe Christmas.

The purpose of His coming also should be reviewed. He came to reveal the invisible God:

> "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth" (John 1:14).

He also became man so that He might as the God-man take the penalty for sins which God had decreed and man deserved:

> "But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man" (Heb. 2:9).

To celebrate the coming of Christ without recognizing the purpose for which He came is sheer folly. If His death means nothing, His birth means nothing. There are many who will celebrate Christmas who will not realize that they are celebrating the birthday of the One who has sealed their doom. Jesus became man in order to die for their sins, but they have rejected Him. Thus they will be celebrating the birthday of their Judge instead of their Saviour. Surely the Christian should emphasize the importance and purpose of the birth of Christ.

II. The Christian will also stress the present reality of Christ.

It is not the usual procedure when a birthday is celebrated today, to spend much time admiring the baby picture. It is the living person we honor. Christ, I am sure, is much more interested in the fact that men recognize and appreciate Him as a living reality than that they emphasize Him as the Babe of Bethlehem.

> "Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God . . . Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4:14, 16).

Yet if Christ visited the average Christian home at Christmas season what would He be likely to find? The children would be talking of what Santa Claus might bring for Christmas. He would look under the tree and see gifts designated for one another but see no indication that it was His birthday that was being celebrated. He might even hear the suggestion that giving to the Lord's work would have to be curtailed considerably if there was to be enough Christmas money for everyone.

As plans are made for Christmas, think first of what would please Christ. He is living today and yearns for our love and fellowship more than is realized. Determine that honoring Him will be first in your observance of Christmas.

III. The Christian Christmas should be a time when we recognize our responsibility to serve Christ.

> "To wit, that God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation" (II Cor. 5:19).

If ever there was a time that people need to be told that God in Christ reconciled man with God, it is at this season. Christmas affords many excellent opportunities to give forth this message. Tracts can be included in Christmas cards, and letters written to those who do not know Christ. Many who are impressed with the commercialism of Christmas and the superficiality of its observance, are anxious to hear

APPARITION (?) COMFORTS POPE

As of November 27, 1955, the Vatican confirmed reports that Pope Pius XII revealed to intimates that in an apparition a year ago Jesus Christ appeared "to comfort him." The Vatican Press office which "authorized" the confirmation stated that "Christ appeared at the Pope's bedside on the night of Dec. 2, 1954, at the point of the Pontiff's illness, and while he was reciting the prayer "Anima Christi."

The Roman Catholic Church has not shifted her "propaganda gears" for centuries, because Catholics and gullible uninformed Protestants travel at such a spiritual crawl that they never stop to question the honesty, authenticity, nor the logic of dozens of claims of Romanism. In fact, Pope Pius XII is an expert at the wheel of the propaganda machine. He has literally "out-Poped the Popes" in his skill along this line.

The "religious smog" has not yet lifted as a result of the "profound" announcement of the theory that the Virgin Mary was taken bodily up into heaven and never experienced physical death. According to this dogma Mary stands co-equal with Jesus at the right hand of God.

All this papism is nothing new. Pope Pius XII is simply following the practice of his predecessors in declaring personal dogmas based entirely on man's (Pope) word and tradition and lacks any authority from God's precious Word. Dozens and dozens of the commonly accepted doctrines and practices of the Roman Catholic Church were unknown to the early church, and certainly foreign to anything the apostles taught or believed. Dr. Alan A. Hughes, a converted Roman Catholic priest, made an extensive study some years ago, listed all the unscriptural dogmas of the Catholic church with the dates when each was declared:

1. Praying for the dead commended about 310 A.D.
2. Worship of dead saints and angels about 375 A.D.
3. Mass as a daily celebration (not yet an article of faith) 394 A.D.
4. Mary worship started developing about 430 A.D.
5. Priestly dress distinct from the laity about . 500 A.D.
6. Doctrine of Purgatory first taught (not Article of faith) about .. 593 A.D.
7. Worship in Latin instituted by Gregory I 600 A.D.
8. Title of Pope first applied by Emperor Phocas to the Bishop of Rome 510 A.D.
9. Feasts were first held about 650 A.D.
10. Kissing the Pope's feet began in 709 A.D.
11. Veneration of images and relics was authorized 788 A.D.
12. Holy Water invented, consisting of water mixed with a small amount of salt, and blessed (by a priest) 850 A.D.
13. Worship of Saint Joseph 890 A.D.
14. Baptism of bells, instituted by Pope John XIV 965 A.D.
15. Canonization of saints first by Pope John XV 995 A.D.
16. Lent and Friday fasts first imposed 998 A.D.
17. Infallibility of the Catholic Church declared 1076 A.D.
18. Canon law of Celibacy imposed 1079 A.D.
19. The Rosary (prayer beads) introduced by Peter the Hermit .1090 A.D.
20. Doctrine of seven sacraments first taught 1140 A.D.
21. Inquisition instituted by the Council of Verona 1184 A.D.
22. Sale of indulgences began 1190 A.D.
23. Transubtantiation of bread and wine into the real flesh and blood of Christ was declared 1215 A.D.
24. Confession to a priest and priestly absolution instituted during the reign of Pope Innocent III 1215 A.D.
25. Cardinals ordered to wear red hats 1245 A.D.
26. Scapular invented by Simon Stock (English Carmelite Monk) 1278 A.D.
27. Communion in one kind (the cup was taken from the laity) 1414 A.D.
28. Doctrine of Purgatory was defined as an Article of Faith 1439 A.D.
29. Doctrine of Seven Sacraments confirmed 1439 A.D.
30. The Inquisition introduced into Spain 1478 A.D.
31. The last portion of the Ave Maria (Hail Mary) added to the Angelic Salutation, "Holy Mary, Mother of God, pray for us sinners now and at the hour of our death. Amen. 1508 A.D.
32. Tradition placed on the same level as the Holy Bible for the doctrines of Catholicism 1546 A.D.
33. Books of the Apocrypha added to the Bible (these books were not canonical in the Jewish scriptures, and not in the New Testament until this time) 1546 A.D.
34. Immaculate conception of the Virgin Mary by Pope Pius IX 1845 A.D.
35. Decree of Papal Infallibility declared by the Vatican Council and decreed by Pope Pius IX 1870 A.D. (Rejected by 88 bishops, some returned to Rome later).
36. Encyclical by Pope Pius XI condemning public schools. 1930 A.D.

To these we can now add:

37. Mary was taken bodily into heaven and never experienced physical death as declared by Pope Pius XII 1954 A.D.
38. Jesus Christ appeared in person to Pope Pius XII on Dec. 2,

Salvation

--Not Of Works

Matthew 19:21

By H. Leslie Moore

Pastor, Meyersdale Brethren Church
Meyersdale, Pa.

In the husbandry of the farm, the drill, and not the plow, gives the crop. If the land were left as the plow leaves it, there would be no crop but of thistles and weeds. The plow uproots every living thing, tearing all up, root and branch, and burying all under the ground; while the drill plants the seed, and, under the blessing of God, insures a golden harvest and a full garner. The farmer might plow his ground 10 times or a hundred times over, and yet never have a harvest if that were all he should do. Nevertheless, there is no antagonism between the drill and the plow. It takes both to make the land yield to the diligent hand its reward. In the plan of the husbandry of God the law is the plow, and the Gospel is the drill; and the deeper the plow is put in, the better the crop, provided only that the drill follows in due time, casting seed in abundance.

The above illustration makes clear a very precious truth which our Lord taught the rich young ruler in answering his query, "what shall I DO, that I may have eternal life?" In reading the context of the passage before us (Matt. 19:21), I am sure you will not have any difficulty in understanding why the Lord answered the rich young ruler in this manner. For his question reveals the fact that he was seeking salvation by "doing." The Lord's answer was to bring conviction to his heart, and reveal his inability and his unwillingness to be saved on the ground of works, which he himself suggested. The young man's answer to Jesus' question reveals that he did not understand the law nor his own heart, but his conversation shows that he was conscious of the fact that there was something wanting in his life.

This particular portion of God's Word presents for us some wonderful and remarkable points. May God bless them to our hearts, for countless thousands have fallen into this same line of reasoning today, thinking that if they do some good work or deed, God is obliged to save their soul from eternal condemnation. This young man was of irreproachable moral character having gained for himself the approval and plaudits of his fellow man. He was a young man, rich with this world's goods, occupying a place of great importance in the life of his community. Yet he was greatly disturbed about the cravings of his heart for eternal life. So much so that he was undeterred by the opposition that was bound to come his way from the class to which he belonged as a "ruler" and by the shame he might expect from the crowd who would hear him propose his question to Jesus. Beloved, these same things are keeping multitudes from coming to Jesus today. Therefore, as Christians, we should make the best of the example set before us in the person of the rich young ruler.

If thou will be perfect, which means, complete in all its parts, finished, having no part wanting, prefer the heavenly treasures before all the riches and wealth in this world. To prove our preference and our love to God we must be willing to give up our wealth, property, our all for the honor of God, and the relief of the poor. Oh beloved, God has greatly blessed those who have been willing to set loose to the things of this world. He has given them abundantly above their needs, for He knows they will not make their earthly treasures their god. A wonderful illustration of this is found in the call of Abraham. He left all, he had complete trust in God and it was counted to him for righteousness. Great was his reward for complete obedience.

Secondly, we must devote ourselves entirely to the conduct and government of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ; "Come, and follow me." To follow the Lord means we must be willing to obey His commands, imitate His example and live like He lives. Many have said this was a large order for Christ to give. Without a doubt the rich young ruler felt the same way because the Scriptures reveal that "he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." Many people today do the same thing. They think the cost is too great. However this reveals to me the fact that they have never really seen the tremendous cost of Calvary; if they had, they would know that by no works of righteousness which we have done could we ever be saved.

ENGLEWOOD, OHIO

The Englewood Grace Brethren Church, the baby church of the Southern Ohio District, closed her first revival effort.

We thank God for the ministry of Evangelist R. Paul Miller. Surely God spoke to us through the man He sent to us. The attendance was good, in fact, our seating capacity was taxed several times. On Nov. 13 we had 201 in Sunday school.

There were some 50 decisions with 12 of them first-time decisions. Most of these were saved young couples and others starting family altars. Others are coming into our fellowship from other churches. Surely God has visited His people. It was a blessed privilege to work with Bro. Miller and we found him to be a pastor's friend.—Lon Karns, pastor.

It was a real pleasure to work with the Englewood congregation and their pastor in winning souls. This group is but two years old, and they have a fine new building, after the design of the Cedar Rapids church. They have been in their new building just one year to date. They now have about 100 members and a Sunday school about twice that number. In fact, they reached their highest Sunday-school attendance during the meeting, when 201 were in attendance. For a two-year-old church, that is just about a record!

Rev. Lon Karns is pastor of this swiftly growing church and, under God, the growth of the work is largely due to his spirited leadership.

The work is located in one of the fastest growing sections of suburban Dayton. One eighty-acre development is now starting across the road from the church. This building is already taxed to capacity, and they need a new Sunday school addition right now. Their church attendance just about fills the auditorium, and during the meetings we had chairs in the aisles and around the platform. God is simply blessing them faster than they are able to keep up with Him! The entire work has been cared for by the local people without help from any source. This Englewood group should provide real inspiration and encouragement to many other new congregations.

One outstanding characteristic of these people is the way they all feel responsible for the success of the work, and work and pray and give accordingly. It was a real joy to work with them.

The pastors from nearby Brethren Churches were fine in bringing delegations and special musical numbers to help out.—R. Paul Miller, Evangelist.

MISSIONARY HERALD

WHITTIER, CALIF.

We would like to give praise to God for the blessings we have seen in the four California campaigns this fall. From Sept 11-25 we saw God work at the First Brethren Church, Whittier. Rev. and Mrs. Leo Polman were directors of music—their first meeting in seven years, what a joy to have them with us during this time. There were three first-time decisions and seven rededications. Lewis Hohenstein is pastor.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

COMPTON, CALIF.

September 25-October 9, the Lord blessed the Word at Compton. Rev. Dennis Holliday, the pastor, rejoiced with us as 19 public decisions were forthcoming—two of these were for salvation. Mr. George Link, of the Old Fashioned Revival Hour choir, was the song leader.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

FILLMORE, CALIF.

The Lord blessed us again at Fillmore with Pastor Maxwell Brenneman. During the two weeks October 11-23, we saw three souls come to Jesus Christ and a spirit of revival prevail in the church. Also, there were more than a thousand chapters read from the Bible by the members.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

SOUTH PASADENA, CALIF.

Revival came to South Pasadena October 25-November 6, as we saw 13 public decisions made—one for salvation. This church is without a pastor but it was a joy to work with these blessed saints.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

1954, to comfort him in his hour of suffering—and no doubt before this declaration has fallen from the ear of the world, some new dogma will be declared and this "miraculous revelation" will give "foundation" for it. The "gears" are smoothly oiled, and the propaganda machine rolls on.

God did not permit these dogma's to be declared without raising up His men to cry out against such deception. Church history is emblazoned with such names as Peter de Bruys, Henry of Lausanne, Peter Waldo, John Wyclif, John Huss and a score of others, who bravely declared themselves against the Babylonish system of Rome and her Popes.

The strongest voice against the corruption and dogmatism of Rome was Martin Luther. Luther not only spoke, he acted, and on Dec. 10, 1520, a notice was posted in Wittenberg by Phillip Melanchton inviting the students of Wittenburg to attend a burning of "the impious books of the papal decrees and scholastic theologians." On the announced day, Luther threw on the fire the books, and the last of all "the Pope's bull." A poor monk, with only a living faith in the living God, took his stand against the demagoguery of the Roman Catholic Church and God honored him for his testimony.

Be no deceived by unscriptural doctrines, for the inspired Word of God is the only authority the child of God has in this day of grace.—A. R. K.

of the reality of the Christ of Christmas.

It is the responsibility of the Christian to dedicate himself to tell the wonderful story of the Christ who came to die for our sins; that each who places his faith in Him might have eternal life.

At this Christmas season, let us dedicate ourselves to the observance of a Christian Christmas in each of our homes. The heart of the Saviour who became man at Bethlehem, who died for us at calvary, who intercedes for us in heaven, would be made to rejoice!

Christmas and the Gift

"I'm getting so excited about Christmas," Sharon bubbled. But what I want more than anything else in all this world I guess I can't have."

"What do you want, Honey?" (As if Mother didn't know! No genius mind was required to know her little "missionary" girl's dream).

A little cloud darkened a usually bright face as she replied: "I want a bicycle. But I know they're 'spensive, and with all us kids you just can't spend too much on one child, can you?"

"Darling, Mother knows you have been praying for a bike these several years. You are old enough now to handle one carefully. You are sweet to understand it is out of the question. Store men are not interested in our dreams or desires unless accompanied by cash. Since we have many to spread our cash among, we'll thank our dear Father for all His goodnesses to us, won't we?"

Snuggled up to Mother's side with precious little girl arms around her, Sharon murmured, "Sure, Mama, we understand. Anyway, there are 'lots' of us and we have fun together."

Back to her job at the sink the little Miss peeled an apple and then sat in pensive mood. Slowly working at another one for the salad Sharon informed Mother: "Daddy told us children to look through that catalog and pick out any gift up to five dollars. That'll be fun. I didn't do it yet."

"Yes, Daddy told me his plan. I know you will show him you appreciate his kindness."

"I already told him. That will cost a lot of money. How much would that be for all?"

"You tell me, Sweetie. Think of your 9 times table. Nine fives are—"

"Forty-five! Whee. Where will he get all that money?"

"Little Mark and Ardyth will not have that much spent on them. But Big Brother must have a winter suit now that he's away at school."

"I'll be so glad to see Bob. We miss him around here. Althea picked out her gift. She wants what they call a Hutch cabinet. But it is $5.95." Isn't that the same as six dollars?"

"Within five cents of six dollars and will have to be ruled out. Daddy will be sacrificing to make you children glad. But he is happy to do things for his children. He loves you all very much."

"Don't you love us? I'm just kiddin', Mama. I know you love us. Why don't we make more of a fuss over Christmas than we do? Kay's mama has had all her shopping done for weeks. She said she's dead tired having to buy so many presents."

"It is that very spirit of weariness, of doing something distasteful, which has robbed people of the real meaning and joy of Christmas. What does Christmas mean to you, Sharon?"

"We have Christmas because Jesus was born in a manger in Bethlehem."

"That's correct. Christmas is the anniversary of His birth. His coming to earth changed the entire course of man's history. But with selfishness of heart man has long since forgotten the real purpose of Christmas. He knocks himself out to give someone a gift because he expects to get one which he doesn't want. This sort of giving is of necessity and soon becomes a burden. I want to give and receive because of love's compulsion; nothing more, nothing less."

"Do all Christians feel about Christmas like you do?"

"I can't speak for other believers, Dear. I only know that too many of God's children have been drawn into the vortex of a commercialized Christmas. I'm fighting for dear life to stay out of it."

"Why do you and Daddy give us children at least one nice gift if you don't like the way the world celebrates Christmas?"

"We remember you from hearts which love you dearly. Christmas should be a time of giving. That's what the Lord Jesus did when He came as a baby; He gave himself. We give to you on that same basis. Daddy and I just love receiving the little gifts you children make or buy for us. But we appreciate them the more when through the days of the year you give yourselves to us in obedience and teachableness."

"Sometimes its hard to be good. But I try. Can I help trim the tree this year?"

"May I, Sharon."

"May I?"

"We'll see. In the meantime we have a salad to finish for supper. That is more important than Christmas plans."

"Since Christmas is Jesus' birthday, could we give Him a gift?"

"We certainly could and should. What would you like to give Him?"

"I don't know. Would telling Kay or some friend about Jesus and the true meaning of Christmas be a gift to Him?"

"I believe it would. It would be a gift of testimony. How about a gift of money?"

"What would He do with money? He doesn't need any. The Bible says 'the cattle on a thousand hills are His.' "

"Money given in Jesus' name to proclaim the Gospel both at home and abroad is missionary money and is a gift well pleasing to the Lord. What do you think is the most important gift any of us can give to Him?"

"With a little hesitancy the 10-year-old replied, "Ourselves. And I want Jesus to have me, Mama. Do you want me to belong to Jesus and serve Him?"

"Yes, little Missionary, we surely do. Daddy and I pray daily that each of you children, all nine of you will serve the Lord in some definite way all of your lives. We don't want you to wait until you are adults to start. Is the salad finished now?"

"Yes, M'am. Shall I call the kids?"

"Go ahead. When we're together at the table shall we ask the others what they'd like to give the Lord Jesus Christ for Christmas?"

"O yes, that'll be fun. C'mon kids. Supper's ready."

Season's Greetings from BRETHREN HOME MISSIONS

EDITORIALS

BY LESTER E. PIFER

The Thanksgiving Offering

America is a land of beauty, marvelously endowed with the handiwork of God. America basks in the bountiful blessings of God in the material realm. America is a nation of progress, a nation of great potential in whatever realm we may speak.

America is far from God, a nation which should be standing in Thanksgiving to God for the gift of His Son stands instead embellished in sin. What a challenge to our home-mission effort! We are rapidly coming to the end of this year's emphasis upon the need of America for the Gospel. May we be able to say along with the Apostle Paul: "I am ready to preach the gosepl to you that are at . . ." Columbus, Ohio; Winona, Minn.; Davenport, Iowa; Buffalo, N. Y.; etc. . . . To meet the proposed program of this year's expansion we must have a minimum of $200,000 in the annual Thanksgiving Offering. Have you sent in your gifts to share in this goal in order that we may expand the gospel testimony across the United States of America?

The Christmas Season

All over this United States of America the Christmas season is evident. Business reports indicate that this year's Christmas will be the greatest in our history. It seems strange that the tender story and purpose of the coming of our Saviour into this world has been lost in the commercialized celebration of Christmas. Satan has so blinded the eyes of the people of this nation that the world and its material things have had such priority that the average person sees little need of spiritual help in this hour. Materialism and prosperity are powerful tools of Satan in diverting the sinners attention away from his need.

It is piercing to the Christian heart to hear the words of the Gospel of Luke, ". . . there was no room for them in the inn" (Luke 2:7). There was no room in the inn for the birth of the Christ child. Mary and Joseph were forced to retire to a feeding place for the flock by the side of the road. Oh, the pathos of it! Today there is no room for the Christ child. How strange and yet true. Men's hearts have not changed. Sinful man with his rebellious nature stubbornly refuses to allow the Saviour room, whether we speak of the inn or the home or the heart.

Christ was God's gift for sinners. He was born to die for others. "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly" (John 10:10b). It is strange that the life which man needs most is that which is the most neglected part of his experience. America should be the greatest for evangelism at home and abroad. It is sad, indeed, that only a minority of the people of this land possess and hear the truth from God's Word concerning the plan and purpose of God in Christ's birth. Let us pray that God's remnant which stands for and loves the truth may be faithful in fulfilling God's desire as stated in Matthew 28:19. May we see in this season a harvest of souls turning to God for salvation through Jesus Christ.

The Need for Pastors

There is always a need for strong pastors with a burning heart and an effective knowledge of the Word. Preachers are not made in a day. When a man steps into the pastorate of a home-mission church, he enters such a work after a long period of preparation. Those who enter the pulpits of home-mission churches tomorrow will be the result of our Lord's work over many years. So those who shall enter into such service in the next generation must even now be brought into preparation.

We hope this article will be read by many young married couples who now have children in the home. We hope you will dedicate those children to the Lord and train them as best you know how to become preachers of the Gospel or even preachers' wives. The time to begin preparation for God's work is not later than the cradle. The leaders of God's work today are what the last generation made them, so the leaders of tomorrow will be what this generation is making them.

The more important a life work is, the longer it may take to prepare for it. It takes years to grow an oak tree, but only a few months to grow a pumpkin. The preacher, as well as the leader among the laymen, must be a man "like a tree planted."

When we pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth reapers into His harvest, let our people in Brethren homes pray not alone for those thousands of miles away but for the little ones growing up under the same roof. (This is a guest editorial from Dr. Charles W. Mayes.)

Seminary Offering Period

The Brethren Home Missions Council cannot express enough gratitude to Grace Seminary and College for the fine training that they are giving to our students. The need for more men and women in Christian service is evident each year. May God help to meet this need now through our school.

Grace Seminary and College deserves our wholehearted prayer and financial support. It costs tremendously to train men and provide the needed facilities for such training. Every dollar spent in this way is an investment in the Lord's work of winning souls at home and abroad. Give liberally in this season to Grace and its needs.

A Christmas Gift for Tomorrow

Why not open a Christmas Savings Account for a member of your family or a friend? This may be the answer to your need for a different Christmas Gift, or a means of saving toward your home-mission offering. Denver, Colorado, Dedicated New Church November 27, 1955

By THOMAS INMAN, Jr.

Dedication day, Nov. 27. dawned cloudy and cold over the completed structure of the Denver Grace Brethren Church. Flurries of snow soon turned the ground to a brilliant white and the hearts of the people sagged a little, for this was a far cry from the day of which they had dreamed and for which they prayed for so long. But with Romans 8:28 burned into their hearts by past experiences, they rejoiced to see it in God's providence to melt the clouds away and allow the sun to shine through in very much the same way He has done over and over in the past for this people—sunshine after the shadows.

The formal dedication of the building to the Lord and to His work took place at two in the afternoon with the sanctuary well filled with members and friends for this memorable occasion. A delegation was on hand from the Beaver City, Nebr. church located some 300 miles away. Delegations from most of the other conference churches in the district had been present in the days before but had been forced by circumstances to return to their homes for Sunday.

Dr. Paul Bauman, president of the Brethren Home Missions Council, Inc. brought the dedicatory message reminding those present that the church which occupied this structure should be a Bible-preaching and-teaching church, one that lived by the Word of God and one with a missionary zeal. Others assisting in this service were: Bro. Paul Eiselstein (an American Sunday-school missionary and an ordained elder of the Denver Grace Brethren Church), Pastor Dayton Cundiff of Beaver City, Nebr., the trustees of the Denver Grace Brethren Church: Russell West, Maurice Davis and Jesse Shuler; Mrs. Mary Davis, church historian; Mrs. Joan Hamm, organist; Lowell Groves, pianist; the youth choir and Pastor Tom Inman.

A number of other services were used to dedicate the building to the various endeavors of the church. Wednesday evening, Nov. 23, was dedicated to prayer with a regular prayer meeting being held but with special emphasis being placed upon prayer for the dedication and the various services involved. Thanksgiving Day morning was, of course, chosen as the proper time to publicly thank the Lord for all of His bountiful blessings to the Denver church both as a unit and then the people individually. Speaker for this service was Pastor Russell Williams of the First Brethren Church, Cheyenne, Wyo. A turkey dinner with all the trimmings was served by the ladies of the church to more than 85 members and guests.

Thursday evening was dedicated to missions and, since no representative of the Foreign Missionary Society of the Brethren Church was able to be present, the entire service was given over to Missionary Sam Horney and his delegation from the Spanish-American work of the Brethren Home Missions Council, Inc. at Taos, N. Mex. and to a showing of the new film, "Navajo Dawn."

Friday evening was dedicated to youth with the earlier portion of the evening occupied by a three-act play woven about the Scriptural account of the betrayer of our Lord Jesus Christ, Judas Iscariot. For this splendid piece of writing, the church is indebted to two of the cast members, Lorinda Stone and Bill Martin, who incidentally also directed the play. Following the play Pastor and Mrs. Dayton Cundiff led the group in a singspiration.

A lovely candlelight communion service was experienced on Saturday evening and proved to be a spiritual highlight for many of those present.

On Sunday the Sunday-school hour was dedicated to the children of the Sunday school and church who have proved to be a real blessing in all of our services.

The morning worship service was quite naturally dedicated to worship. Both the youth choir and the junior choir, with Mrs. Nancy Shurley as director, presented musical specials. Dr. Paul Bauman was the speaker of the morning and also was in charge of the ordination of Pastor Inman and led in the questioning. The prayer and charge was given by Bro. Paul Eiselstein. Mrs. Inman knelt with her husband for the prayer of dedication and Dr. Bauman prayed for the Lord's blessing in her duties in their ministry.

Sunday evening was dedicated to music with the entire evening, except for the brief children's hour presented by Mrs. Lola Childs, filled with congregational singing, the anthems of the Messengers of Peace Male Chorus, specials by nine-year-old marimba soloist Marie Zehm, solos by Loren Hamm, duets by Mrs. Barbara Holmes and Mrs. Betty Stark, and piano and organ solos by Mrs. Joan Hamm and Lowell Groves respectively.

With the dedication an event of the past, the church views it not as an end in itself, but only as another milestone in the church's forward progress. Less time will now be required on the building and more time will be available for use in reaching this community for Christ. The Lord has truly blessed the Denver Grace Brethren Church "real good."

DENVER PASTOR ORDAINED ON DEDICATION DAY

Grace Brethren Church; Paul Eiselstein, missionary with the American Sunday School Union and an ordained elder of the Denver Grace Brethren Church; Dr. Paul Bauman; Pastor Tom Inman, Mrs. Inman, Mrs. Bessie Shuler and Mrs. Mary Davis, deaconnesses; Maurice Davis and Russell West, deacons. Bottom: Standing, left to right, Pastor Dayton Cundiff, Brother Paul Eiselstein and Dr. Paul Bauman. Kneeling: Pastor and Mrs. Tom Inman.

Denver Grace Brethren Church History

By Mrs. M. J. Davis

The Denver Grace Brethren Church was born in the hearts of a few men and women many years ago. Its first visible aspects took the form of a prayer meeting and Bible study group led by Rev. Sam Horney, pastor of the First Brethren Church, Cheyenne, Wyo. The first meeting was in the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Davis, 4032 S. Pearl, Englewood, Colo., Aug. 9, 1949. Rev. Horney faithfully drove the 100 miles to Denver every week until October when he moved to Taos, N. Mex. Rev. Wayne Croker, then called to Cheyenne, took over the task of coming to Denver every week. The group met for the most part in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. West, 2550 S. Filmore and then in the West's new home at 3004 S. Colorado Blvd. This first beginning involved only two Brethren families, those named above.

The little group continued in this manner for a period of two years, meeting faithfully each week for prayer and Bible study.

Rev. Lowell Hoyt was called as the first pastor, arriving on the field, Oct. 8, 1951. The same fall lots were purchased at the corner of Exposition and Federal for the proposed church building. The Lord's hand was clearly seen in the choosing of this location. The obstacles, which were many, vanished before our very eyes.

The organization of the church took place at 640 S. Boyant, Jan. 6, 1952. Rev. Paul Eiselstein was the speaker for the occasion. The charter membership was signed by 25 people. The same Sunday the group started holding regular church services in the Odd Fellows Hall, 3425 S. Broadway, Englewood. We continued in this location until Oct. 1952, when permission was received to hold services in the Valverde School, corner of Alameda and Tejon. Services were held here for seven months.

On Oct. 5, 1952, ground-breaking services were held

ROANOKE, VA. (Washington Heights), Vernon Harris, pastor—

The work is coming along fine here at the church. We had some fine services last Sunday with one rededication in the evening. Ten members have been added so far. We are getting the study fixed up here at our house. The church is getting a desk, chair, and typewriter for it. Continue to pray that the Lord will use us to reach many souls here.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. (Ralph J. Colburn, pastor)—

Well, the construction has actually begun. No; we're not very far along yet, but tomorrow the foundation will be poured, and slowly but surely the building will take shape. The Lord is blessing and we are growing. We have broken some records each Sunday for the past three weeks. New folks are coming, and the spirit is wonderful.

DAVENPORT, IOWA (True Hunt, pastor)—

We praise the Lord for the first-time decision of a man who attended our meetings with Brother R. Paul Miller. He promised to come the Sunday night following the meeting to make his public decision, and he kept his word. He has a family of three children, and they have been coming to our Sunday school every Sunday since making the decision.

A contract is now being formulated and again we praise the Lord for directing us to a location for our future church home.

TAOS, N. Mex. (Sam I. Horney, missionary)—

The Spanish people have been faithfully praying for the salvation of the Anglo people of the Taos Valley (population 90 percent Spanish, 5 percent Indian, and 5 percent Anglo). The Lord has honored their prayers, and we now have some 25 white people worshiping with us in our services. Five have accepted Christ, have been baptized, and are now members of our Taos church. Several others are under deep conviction and are on the verge of decisions. In order to reach these people we now have the morning service in English and the evening service in Spanish.

CORDILLERA PASTOR MARRIES MISS EFREN HERRERA

In an impressive ceremony at the Canon Brethren Church Miss Efren Herrera, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernabe Herrera, of Talpa, was married to Rev. Tony Luna, pastor of the Cordillera Brethren Church, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony P. Luna, Taos, N. Mex. Attended by 200 guests, the ceremony was performed by Rev. Sam Horney at high noon on Sunday, Oct. 23, 1955.

Mrs. Sam Horney played the traditional wedding marches and Miss Cora Luna, sister of the bridegroom, sang in Spanish, "O Promise Me" and "Always."

Other members of the wedding party included Miss Eloisa Medina, flower girl, Andy Valerio, ring bearer, Miss Cora Luna and Miss Marjorie Olonia, bridesmaids, Elizardo Valerio, bestman, and David Tollardo and Florimel Maestas as ushers.

DENVER, COLORADO DEDICATES

at 3:00 p. m. Rev. Thomas Murray, pastor of the First Avenue Presbyterian Church, was the speaker. He was also the contractor for the building. There were 39 present at this service. Seven months later on May 3, 1953, the first services were held in the basement of the new church.

Rev. Tom Inman, along with Mrs. Inman and Patty Jo arrived in Denver as our new pastor July 3, 1953. With the new building and the coming of a new pastor we began to see growth. The attendance increased from 25 in Sunday school on the first Sunday to 57 three months later, 74 six months later, and 102 nine months later. By this constant increase we were able to win the first National Sunday School Contest, receiving the gold cup awarded in Portland, Oreg., at national conference in August, 1955.

We praise God for a goodly number of decisions for Christ, for whole families who have come into the church, and for spiritual growth of our young people, as well as adults. The Lord has truly blessed in a wonderful way from a small beginning, through trials many and varied, to this memorable day when we dedicate our building to His service.

Much credit goes to the faithful men and women of the church who worked week after week to complete the sanctuary. We gratefully acknowledge the financial help of the Brethren Home Mission Council. The gifts of God's people across the nation have made possible this thriving witness and testimony to the grace of God in the Rocky Mountain Empire, the first church of this conference in the State of Colorado.

The material house is completed, now continues the spiritual building. We build "upon the foundation of . . . Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."

Washington Heights Brethren Church Continues to Grow

Rev. Lester E. Pifer, assistant field secretary for Brethren Home Missions, visited the Washington Heights Brethren Church, Roanoke, Va., in October and took the above pictures of the Sunday school. You will remember that the new church was dedicated just one year ago in October, and the 169 present on the Sunday the pictures were taken gives you an idea of the growth. Rev. Vernon Harris, the present pastor, just arrived on the field in September. The former pastor, Rev. Wm. Carl Miller, is enrolled in Grace Seminary where he is completing his seminary training.

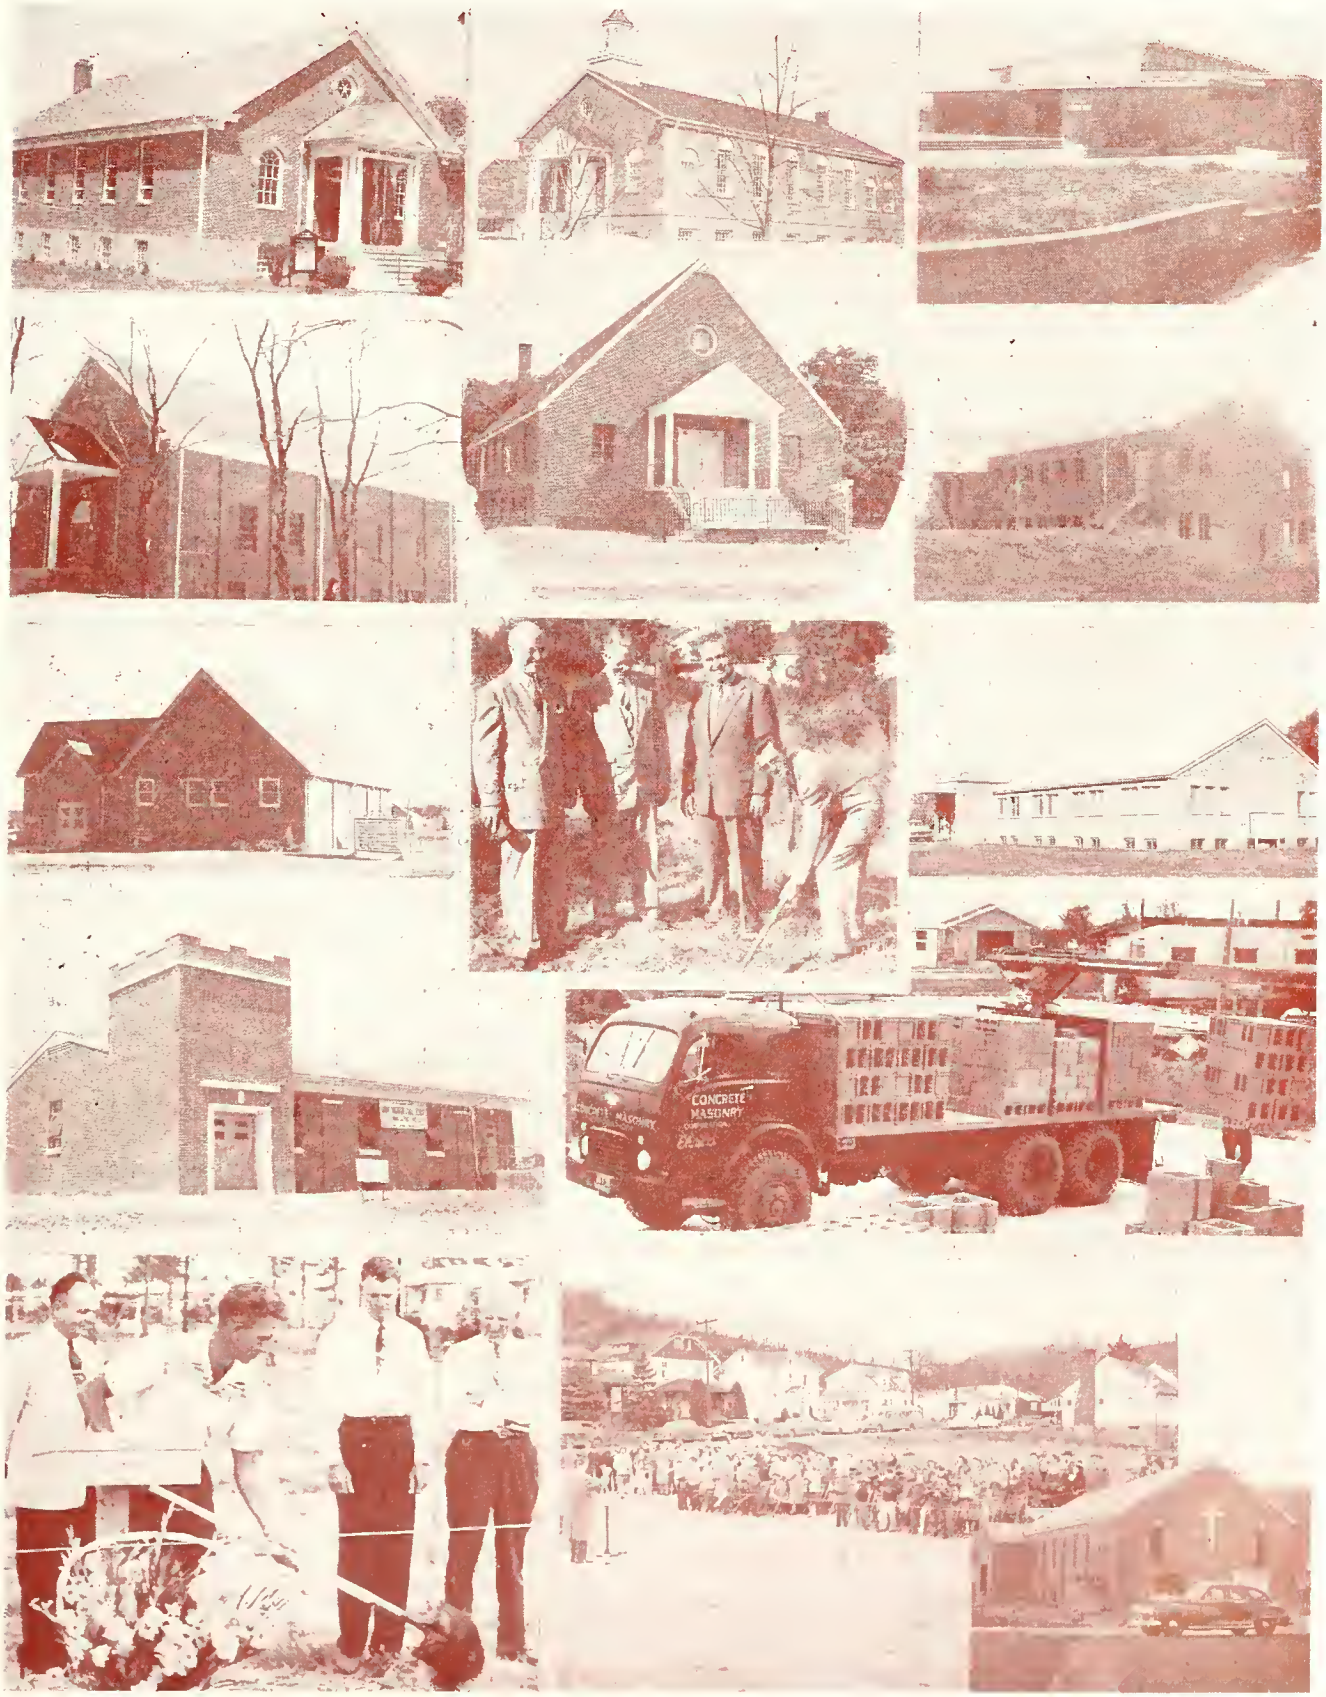
has been dealt with. Only a sufficient sacrifice will settle the problem."



I was also able to touch on her personal sin during this conversation, as well as explain once again the difference between Jew, gentile, and Christian. Points concerning Messianic prophecy were also discussed. And then after three hours of witnessing, we came back to the mission with the prayer that God's Word would not return to Him void.

The sad fact about Jewish people is this: They are blind; they are deaf; they have hard hearts. They give evidence of this in their attitude toward truth. To them, spiritual truth is only truth when it agrees with their preconceived ideas. In other words, they do not want truth for truth's sake; they do not want to be proved wrong! They want their own will to be done. They want their own way.

It is easy to arrive at such a philosophy. I almost did in the matter of reading that book. How happy I am that I did not fail to read that chapter at that time, even though I did it in a begrudging way. It resulted in a wonderful opportunity for witnessing. And it has taken me one step nearer to a greater realization of the words, "Not as I will, but as thou wilt" (Matt. 26:39).

How I pray that F - - - a and all the rest of our Jewish friends will soon arrive at the same realization in connection with their salvation in Messiah Jesus. I know you are praying to this end also.

ISRAEL CALLS!

BOOKS AND TV TUBES

By BRUCE L. BUTTON

It all started because of a book that had to be returned to the library and two tubes that had to be replaced in a television set. And the lesseon I learned from the incident was that supposed imposition is many times the Lord's method of giving an opportunity for real testimony.

My son Richard was scheduled to leave for the east that evening. He had been away for four months, and he did not expect to get home again for another six months. I had set aside the day of his departure as a time for fellowship with him. We had spent the morning together and had just had lunch when the telephone rang. Mrs. Button answered the phone. "Hello." . . . "Oh, F - - - a, it's good to hear your voice. How are you?" . . . "Dick is leaving today for the East, and" . . . "We both would appreciate reading the article, and we will come over sometime tomorrow." . . . "The book has to be returned today?" . . . "Yes; we'll read that chapter and send it right back." . . . "Yes; I'll tell Bruce about the television tubes. He'll take care of them tomorrow." The conversation ended just as the doorbell rang. It was F - - - a's daughter with the book. She gave it to Mrs. Button and returned home.

That which had happened so many times before had happened again. The desires of someone else had taken precedence over my own desires. Nothing would do but that I sit down and read the designated chapter of this book written by George Jessel. It seems that all popular Jewish people who feel inclined to write a book must include in that book a chapter dealing with their concept of basic Christian "facts." And Mr. Jessel proved to be no exception. He also had a chapter dealing with Christianity versus Judiasm. It said the same things and contained the same errors and misrepresentations as so many other writings. The only difference was in the way of presentation. Here it was presented in a more biased and less subtle way. I spent over an hour reading and re-reading the chapter. Then I passed the book to Mrs. Button who read the chapter, and the book was returned to F - - - a. By this time the afternoon was far spent and it was time for dinner. Dinner over; the airport; the roar of motors; and Richard was on his way to the East. My reaction? I felt that the book reading could have waited, but perhaps the Lord had a purpose behind.

The following afternoon Mrs. Button and I visited F - - - a. The television set was tested. Two tubes were removed from the tuning head and taken to the electronics shop. A new tube was purchased and both tubes replaced in the set. The result: Perfect picture and audio reception on the part of the TV set and a great deal of flattery and thanks on the part of F - - - a. And then supposed imposition became opportunity for witnessing for the Lord.

"Didn't you think George Jessel presented his material in a wonderful way?" asked F - - - a. "He set forth everything so clearly, and his facts were well founded and supported just as I have said all along."

I paused a minute before answering her and breathed a silent prayer for guidance, then said: "Mr. Jessel's material was presented in an unusual way, but as to his supposed 'facts,' that is another matter. I don't know where he got them, but this I do know: they are not facts. They are error." She started to interrupt me, but I said: "Now just let me cite two incidents: Mr. Jessel says Paul came from Tarsus, a city of Greece, when any Sunday-school child could tell him Tarsus was a city of Asia Minor and located about as far away from Greece as it was possible to get and still be in Asia Minor. In the matter of Paul's conversion on the Damascus road, Jessel is willing to take the 'theory' of a man of our day, who is an unbeliever, in the place of facts, recorded facts, set down by Jewish men of the day of Christ. He states that Jesus did not die on the cross but was taken down while still alive and was nursed to health, and that it was the live Jesus that Paul met on the Damascus road. This is 'theory.' Jessel admits it. It is not fact. The only factual Book of Jewish history during the time of Christ is the New Testament. It was written by Jewish men who were eye witnesses to these facts. They recorded what they heard and saw. And these facts state otherwise. The New Testament states that Jesus died for the sins of men, Mr. Jessel's included, that He was buried, and that He arose again from the dead on the third day and ascended into heaven some six weeks thereafter. He claimed to be the perfect sacrifice for sin, both Jewish and gentile sin. The first believers (and they were all Jewish people) all maintained He was God's perfect sacrifice for sin. Countless people, both gentile and Jewish, have from that time to the present day maintained He is the perfect offering for sin. They know this is truth because of the peace they have in their hearts and, more important, because of the written record of reliable Jewish prophets in both the Old and New Testaments, who did not take another man's 'theory' as truth, but rather listened to the voice of God and fellowshiped with him as He walked the roads of the Holy Land."

Here I was stopped. Could such a great man as Jessel be wrong. He had read many books. He had studied long hours. He had traveled. He knew so many great people. . . . And at this point I interrupted.

"How can you expect a man who is blind and deaf and has a hard heart to be able to understand the things of God?" I asked. "Listen to Isaiah, the prophet, describe him." (And I read Isa. 6:9-10). "This," I continued, "is God's Word concerning the spiritual ability of Isaiah's people. If you want to know why the heart was hard, eyes blind and ears deaf, read Isaiah 1, 3, and 5. It was because of what infects us all: SIN! Another Jew who lived centuries later said the same thing only in another way. Listen to what He said (and I read I Cor. 2:11-14). A natural man is a man burdened with sin, and He can never understand God's Word until the sin problem

Promotion Pointers on the Home Mission Offering

BY LESTER E. PIFER

During these three months of home-mission itineration, it has been interesting to see the various methods and ideas used to reach goals for the annual home-mission offering. The home-mission letters, bulletins, placemats, maps, banks and dime cards have been used effectively by most churches. The secret of the success of any of these means which our board provides is with the pastor. He is the key man in the promotion of missions in the local church.

Some of the ideas which pastors have used effectively are as follows:

CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA: When I entered this new auditorium, my eyes fell immediately on the nicely displayed home-mission map to the right of the pulpit on the wall. It was partially illuminated but had bulbs for each of the 50 mission points. Upon inquiring if a circuit was out when not all the lights were lit, I was informed that a goal had been set. Each light represented a mission point. As 25 dollars would come in, the light could be lit in another mission point. One month had passed of the home-mission season and half of the lights were already shining. I am sure that this effort has paid off and their increased goal over last year has been successfully reached.

WATERLOO, IOWA: With the opening of the home-mission season in this church there appeared the home-mission map on the wall with a full set of white lights. Each white light represented one of the 50 mission points; that is, our home-mission program across the U. S. Again a goal had been set by faith and as each amount set for each mission point came in, the white bulb was replaced by a colored bulb, indicating progress in the home-mission giving.

INGLEWOOD, CALIF.: In our Inglewood church the home-mission map was neatly displayed in the vestibule where it could easily be seen by all. At each mission point I saw many little colored flags with various names of the Sunday-school groups on them. I was informed that each division in the Sunday school had the color of a flag. As they reached their goal for each mission point, they were permitted to place their flag at that specific point. In the classroom each mission point at hand had been discussed and prayed for. Thus each scholar became better acquainted with the various missionaries and their respective fields. Many churches across the brotherhood expressed their appreciation for the map and indicated that such interest was manifested about it that it was to become a permanent fixture in the church during the entire year. Some indicated that they wanted to build a similar permanent map in the main auditorium. It is our plan to print the names of the new mission points on pieces of cardboard so that the present map can be used again next year effectively.

JENNERS, PA.: Our pastor at Jenners has started an interesting program of missionary emphasis in his evening service. Each Sunday a layman is chosen to lead in the missionary prayer. Each week a different mission point, or two, is considered along with the respective missionaries. Any news about the point is given, the names mentioned, and the entire congregation is asked to stand at the missionary prayer time. All are encouraged to pray for our missionaries as this brother leads in prayer. Wouldn't it be a strategic move if a colored slide of the field and its missionary could be thrown on the screen at that precise moment to more thoroughly introduce that field of endeavor? I am sure that your missionary boards would cooperate with you in providing such material if you desire it.

GLENDALE, CALIF.: This church pastored by a missionary is planning for a home-mission victory banquet. A goal was set by faith and every effort was being put forth through prayer and other means to reach that amount. At the end of the period a banquet was to be held to celebrate this home-mission offering effort and to praise the Lord for His provision.

All across the nation new efforts are being put forth for missionary interest. God is blessing and we pray that our people shall receive the greatest blessing ever as we fulfill our responsibility to reach America with the Gospel.

A CHILD SHOWS THE TRUE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

The above picture was taken following Christmas, 1954, at Taos, N. Mex. Each of the girls shown received a doll, but listen to the story behind their gifts! A little girl in Cheyenne, Wyo., sent two of her dolls for the Taos children and with this note: "I didn't think it was right to get a new doll for Christmas since I already had two; so, I made new clothes for my old dolls and am sending them on to you." Rev. Sam Horney added: "Believe me, these were two happy girls."

Each year a number of our Brethren people make it possible for the children of our missions to have a happy Christmas, and we want you to know that the recipient, the missionaries and the Brethren Home Missions Council says a big "Thank you." We believe it shows a real Christmas spirit.

Churches IN THE News

RAMONA, CALIF.

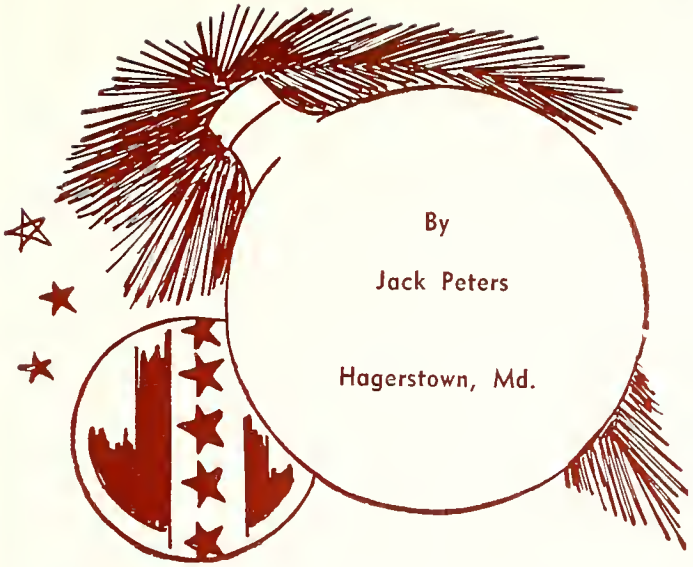
This may not be fresh news but nevertheless it is news. The Ministerial Association of Ramona felt the time was ripe for a Union Evangelistic Campaign. This was the first such venture ever tried here, and it was not known just what to expect.

Brother Miller arrived on the field Aug. 31 and began the preliminaries to the setting up of the tent.

The tent was nearly full for the first service. It never dropped below 125 any one night for the entire meeting with a high of 350.—Grant McDonald.

ALTOONA, PA.

Rev. Ralph S. Burns, pastor of the First Brethren Church, conducted his own meetings from Oct. 31 to Nov. 13.



The Lord truly blessed His Word and there were nine first-time confessions of Christ as personal Saviour, and six rededications. Bro. Burns was helped in his services by Rev. and Mrs. "Woody" Newman pastor of the West End Chapel in Plainfield, N. J. and members of the First Brethren Church. The Lord has blessed Bro. Newman with a wonderful solo voice which he used many times throughout the meetings. He was also used to direct the congregational singing. Mrs. Newman has been given a unique way of presenting God's message to children and was used in this way each night.—Ralph S. Burns, pastor.

CHEYENNE, WYO.

It was my privilege to spend from November 6 to the 20th in a special evangelistic effort with Pastor Russell Williams and his fine group.

In spite of the extreme weather, winds up to 94 m.p.h., snow, 10 inches at one time and three inches added two other times, and cold to 12 degrees below zero, we had good attendance nearly every night. Pastor Williams and I were able to make several calls into homes which were very profitable for the Lord's work in Cheyenne.

The Lord blessed with several fine decisions for Christ and for the church.—Harold D. Painter, evangelist.

The True Meaning of CHRISTMAS

By

Jack Peters

Hagerstown, Md.

Before one comes to Jesus Christ and experiences salvation that only He can give, one cannot know the true meaning of Christmas. To the "natural man" Christmas might mean several things. To the "natural man" who is engaged in business, Christmas means the time of big business: "This is the time to get the business out of the red." In the case of this man, the dollar sign has eclipsed the star of Bethlehem.

To the unsaved housewife, Christmas means only a time when she must work hard in order to get the house in order for those who will come to visit, and, of course, the ornaments, etc., must be taken out of storage, cleaned, and made ready for the tree. Hard work will conceal much of the true meaning of Christmas for the housewife.

To the unsaved boys and girls and possibly some of the saved ones, the true meaning of Christmas is thought to be seen primarily in Santa Claus. Many times throughout the year these little ones have been warned if they are not good, Santa Claus will be sure to miss coming to their house. Simple Santa Claus has usurped the place of the Christ Child in the hearts of many youngsters.

The true attitude at Christmastime can be experienced only by the child of God. This attitude is seen in the Bible, as manifested in the lives of men. We would do well to pattern our attitudes at this Christmastime along these lines:

1. Isaiah, the man called to preach repentance to Jerusalem and to prophesy to her of the coming Messiah, said this: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this" (Isa. 9:6-7). This, of course, was a prophecy, but within this account we can see the true attitude of God's man, Isaiah, toward the Christ of Christmas.

At this time of the year, we who live on this side of Calvary should profit from these words. Our Lord Jesus Christ to us is "Wonderful." He was wonderful in His preexistent life when He, the mighty God, was with the Father. We see Him as the Wonderful One when He was willing to leave heaven and home to tabernacle with us on earth.

Certainly unto us a child was given, even the Son of God. He was wonderful in His birth, His crucifixion, His resurrection, and He shall be wonderful in His soon coming again for us. He will be wonderful in His judgments upon the wicked—wonderful when He comes back to reign. All will then understand that He is the true Prince of Peace. As we look back to the time when He saved us from our sins and filled our hearts with peace, we think of Him as the Wonderful One. He is wonderful when daily we understand the fuller meaning of "Counsellor" as we go to Him in prayer and take our burdens to Him.

2. A true attitude toward the Christ of Christmas is seen in the words of Simeon as he held our Lord in his arms. Luke 2:29-32, 34: "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people; a light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel. . . . And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel; and for a sign which shall be spoken against."

Simeon could see foremost in the birth of our Lord that He was God's salvation. Salvation in that day had many meanings even as it does in our present day. In Simeon's day salvation to one Jew might mean salvation from Caesar, or to another, salvation from his own evil heart. Simeon, however, understood by the Holy Spirit that salvation meant more than this.

I believe that Simeon could see in the Lord Jesus the One who would fulfill all the prophecies of old which had to do with God's Messiah. He could see in this Babe the One who would someday "bruise" Satan's head and in so doing would suffer and redeem those of Adam's race who had sinned and gone astray by His paying the penalty for man's sins with His own blood.

At this time of the year may we have foremost in our minds and hearts this attitude of Simeon of old. As we think of the Babe of Bethlehem, may our hearts be turned to the Christ of Calvary, even the Salvation of God, who suffered in our place and stead to give us life everlasting.

". . . because there was no room for them in the inn" (Luke 2:7).

This Christmas season brings again to our minds the familiar story of two weary travelers who trudged their way to Bethlehem only to hear the words of the innkeeper, "There is no room in the inn." That night so long ago, as they lodged in the stable, Mary brought forth her firstborn Son, wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger.

THE GLORY OF IT

The fullness of time had come as we read in Galatians 4:4-5: "But when the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law . . . that we might receive the adoption of sons." Yes; Jesus became a son of man that man might be a son of God by choice. What splendor, what mystery! "Great is the mystery of godliness: God was manifest in the flesh (I Tim. 3:16). He who was before all things came to the manger. He who has always been Wonderful, Counsellor, who inhabits eternity, whom the heaven of heavens cannot contain; He who was cradled by the universes, and robed with the stars, came down to lie in a manger and be wrapped in man's clothing, swaddling clothes.

Oh, wonder of wonders, how glorious! Could an inn contain Him—could Bethlehem contain Him—could a world contain Him? Only as so great a God had willed it so. For Jesus "thought it not robbery to be equal with God . . . but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likness of men" (Phil. 2:6-7). Why? Because with God the way up is the way down. "And being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross" (Phil. 2:8).

A closed inn, a Christ-rejecting crazed mob and a cruel cross were forged in one and the same shop, but God who makes the wrath of man to praise Him, turned this all to His own glory. One has never come into the world with richer, more royal blood, but with a more humble and lowly beginning as did the Lord Jesus. Thus, "as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12). Never was one born as this one was born. The glory of it—He was born to seek and save that which was lost. He was born to die that lost men might live. He was shut out of the inn, shunned by Israel, and slain on a cross, that He might come into the human heart and lodge there as the only satisfaction that man can know.

THE SHAME OF IT.

The shame of it lies in the fact that so many hearts are closed to the Lord Jesus, just as the inn was closed so long ago. Think of it! He made every atom that composed the bricks of the inn, and He made every atom that composes the body of man; yet hearts are closed to Him. It was not such a great crime for the innkeeper to say no to Mary and Joseph—he did not know. It was a ghastly crime on the part of Israel to close its national gates to Jesus and hang Him on a cross, but a million times greater is the crime and shame for men in an enlightened day of God's grace to close their hearts to the Saviour. This sin can never be forgiven, for "neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12).

A knock will come to the door of your heart at this Christmas season, and a still small voice will ask: "Is there any room in your heart for Jesus?" Will your answer be that of the innkeeper on that historic night many years ago: "There is no room in the inn, but you may bed down in the stable, if you like."

Sad must be the Spirit of God as He moves among the masses of people seeking to gain entrance to their hearts and lives at this season. The shining tinsel, the bright lights, the mistletoe, and the sweets for the stomach are indications that the gods of materialism and worldly entertainment had no trouble getting in, but sad words greet the Spirit's ears year after year from some people—no room for Jesus, who came unto His own and His own received Him not.

True! many hearts stone-cold the year round become warm and softened at Christmastime. Could this be caused by an overflow of warmth from the Holy Spirit as He knocks and pleads with greater fervor than ever to gain entrance to hearts that He might impart eternal life in the person of Jesus Christ, who is God's unspeakable gift to men?

Is there room for Jesus?

Christmas from Chaldea

By RUSSELL WARD

Pastor, North Riverdale Brethren Church

Dayton, Ohio

A policeman had decorated his home for the holiday season with strings of colored lights. The next morning they were missing—taken by a light-fingered thief who perhaps needed them to decorate his own home. The policeman spent 40 dollars replacing the stolen lights, then settled himself behind his shrubbery armed with a shotgun. He remarked bitterly: "I'm gonna have me a merry Christmas if I have to shoot somebody!" We smile, albeit soberly, knowing there is very little more to the Christmas spirit of the 20th century. Commercially it is perhaps the most prosperous season of the year and many a merchant ends the year with black ink only because of the heavy Christmas buying. We are caught in a mad whirl of shopping, buying gifts for those to whom we really wish to give, and for others merely because we don't wish not to! Where are the gifts to the Son of God whose birthday it really is? This is Christmas?

It may be a new thought to some of us that Chaldea had anything to do with the Christmas story, but from where else did the Magi come in Matthew chapter 2? "The east" is mentioned in verses 1, 2, and 9, and implied in verse 12. "East" could only be east of Palestine and any good map of the area will reveal the general geographical location to be Chaldea, the birthplace of Abraham, the probable birthplace of the race.

The wise men tell us much. We read of them in the Book of Daniel several times and learn to our astonishment that in Babylon Daniel was considered one of them. In fact, after the wise men were consulted about Nebuchadnezzar's dream in chapter 2, he was so furious with their failure and duplicity that he ordered them exterminated. Note in 2:13 the expression "Daniel and his fellows." However, we need be little concerned over Daniel's inclusion in the group, for it is evident he did not use their methods of gaining knowledge. When it became necessary to obtain information regarding the dream, he and his companions joined in prayer that God would reveal the secret, "that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon." The outcome of this we know very well.

When there arose another crisis, Daniel again went directly to the Lord for (revealed) knowledge (9:1-2) and as a result God gave him what is perhaps the greatest time-period prophecy in the Bible —that of the "seventy weeks" or 490 prophetic years; 483 of which ended at Messiah's death. Others have well written on this prophecy. We need only to remember that it was this, and this alone, which gave Simeon his assurance that he was living in days close to Messiah's appearance (Luke 2:25-32; see also Anna, Luke 2:36-38).

Need we think it strange therefore, that wise men came from the east to locate the Messiah? Indeed it would have been disappointing had they not! Were they not acquainted with Daniel's book? Here is one of the most powerful evidences that it pays to be faithful to the Lord at all costs and maintain a holy witness. After half a millennium Daniel's memory and his book live on in Chaldea! God got the attention of these eastern men with a star and they set out at once for the land of Israel's new King.

We have assumed the star led them. The text of Matthew does not say so, nor do the men themselves! They saw the star "in the east," and went where a king would normally be born—to the capital! It took hurried consultation with the Jewish scholars to determine that the Messiah would be born in Bethlehem (Micah chapter 5). After the Scripture was consulted (they apparently did not have the Book of Micah in Babylon) the star appeared once more. This was to reassure them they were on the right track and it brought great joy to their hearts. They soon located Jesus and Mary and laid their gifts at His feet. Christmas had come from Chaldea!

Consider briefly the significance of these gifts. Gold was a symbol of royalty, kingship, as, e.g. Psalm 72:15, speaking of the King "greater than Solomon." Frankincense was a Israel was warned that this incense used in Israel's tabernacle worship. Look in Exodus 30:34-38 where Israel was warned that this insense was restricted in its use: "it shall be unto thee holy for Jehovah" (ARV). Myrrh was used in burial preparation, as when Nicodemus brought a hundred-pound mixture of myrrh and aloes (John 19:39). These gifts were not arbitrary nor accidental, but Spirit-led! These men had far more spiritual insight than we have ever credited them! They recognized not only Israel's future King, but that He was Jehovah (frankincense). Then they saw the mystery, however dimly, of His sufferings (myrrh). Perhaps they even understood faintly that suffering and death would not be the end, but that King-Jehovah (Messiah) would live forever.

At any rate, Daniel's faith, courage, faithfulness, the power of his holy life, and the witness of his prophecy have not been in vain, for even Chaldea itself joins in a paean of praise to the Child of Bethlehem!

"Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift" (II Cor. 9:15).

The history of the kings of Israel record some good, some fair, some wicked. The people that God had chosen to accomplish a purpose for His glory, needed a divinely appointed ruler. The religious life of Israel had fallen from the true temple worship under the Mosaic law to a mere ritualistic formalism. About 700 B. C. Isaiah proclaimed that the only hope for the future of Israel was a divine child that would some day come and rule over them as a perfect counselor, bringing them peace and redeeming them out of their dispersed condition into national unity.

In Isaiah 9:6 we read: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." God never fails to fulfill a promise and this promise to Israel spoke of an earthly kingdom, also revealing what He would be to them when He came. According to this and other Scriptures He is the divinely appointed one to rule over Israel. His coming was to be of the line and lineage of David, for "there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse and a Branch shall grow out of his roots (Isa. 11:1). It was certain that God was directing that the one that was to come, would come, at the appointed time. Israel, helpless and hopeless, was at a low ebb in their national history and it seemed that now was the time for the child to be born and the Son given.

How wonderful it would have been to be on those Judean hills with the shepherds on that night almost 2000 years ago. As the Angel of God came into their midst the glory of the Lord shown round about them, they were sore afraid (Luke 2:9). God used the angels and the lowly shepherds to bring this important message from heaven to mankind. Truly these shepherds must have trusted in the great God of Israel. At first, they were frightened at the presence of the angel in clear definite words: "Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour which is Christ the Lord" (Luke 2:10-11). After this the shepherds were able to talk with each other and felt as if heaven had just come to earth and so it had, for "suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly hosts praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will toward men (Luke 2:13-14).

As we pass from the scene of the shepherds we go to King Herod's court where the Wise Men of the east are talking with him, and we hear them say: "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him" (Matt. 2:2). What a shocking statement for Herod to hear that one is to be born to rule in his place in Jerusalem. This King of the Jews was God's only Son Jesus who came from heaven and took upon himself a robe of flesh, made in the likeness of sinful man.

The Jews did not receive Him then as their Messiah and King, neither is the world in general receiving Him now as their Redeemer. We as Christians need to ask ourselves again at this Christmas season if Jesus The Christ is king of our lives? After living for 33 years among men, they still would not receive Jesus' own testimony concerning His kingship, for in answer to Pilate's question at the time of the trial recorded in John 18:37 we read: "Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause I came into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." When Jesus was crucified, "Pilate wrote a title and put it on the cross and the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS. This title then read many of the Jews: for the place where Jesus was crucified was nigh to the city: and it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin. Then said the chief priests of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The King of the Jews: but that he said, I am King of the Jews. Pilate answered, What I have written I have written (John 19:19-22). Beloved, God supervised the writing of that title and no one on earth could have changed it without God's permission. We would do well at this season to remember Pilate's statement, "What I have written I have written" and know that someday, perhaps soon, we will meet the King of Kings, either as Lord of our lives or as the judge of our souls.

The Birthday of a King

A Jasper

"A Christmas message from the Book of the Revelation? Sounds rather far-fetched!"

But, then . . . why should it be? Christmas commemorates Christ's coming into the world. And the entire Bible—from Genesis through Revelation—testifies to the purpose of His coming.

To some it may see improbable—or even inconceivable—that such a message could be found in this portion of Scripture. But let us set aside all predetermined ideas and permit the Holy Spirit to guide us into the precious truths which lie hidden in the passage before us.

Who is on the Throne?

A throne is seen in heaven, the one seated thereon having the appearance of a jasper and a sardine stone. Who could this be? His identity is clearly revealed in verses 8 through 11 of this same chapter as none other than God himself. But why is He so described?

Christ's features are delineated in complete detail in chapter 1, verses 13 through 16, but not so with the appearance of God. The reason is given in I Timothy 6:16, where God is presented as the One "dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see."

Such passages as John 1:18 and 14:9 clearly indicate that to see God the Father we must look at His Son the Lord Jesus Christ. This is because Jesus is the "image"—or visible, outward manifestation—of the invisible God (II Cor. 4:4; Col. 1:15; Heb. 1:3). The supreme revelation of what God is really like is seen in the person and work of Jesus Christ, the Babe of Bethlehem.

Let us, therefore, prayerfully consider this wonderful Person and His work, as revealed in the present passage.

Why Did Jesus Come?

The sardine and jasper are the first and last stones, respectively, in the high priest's breastplate, described in Exodus 28:15-21. This immediately reminds us that Christ came into the world to be our High Priest (Heb. 3:1), the one mediator between God and man (I Tim. 2:5).

A further investigation of these two precious stones will reveal to us how Christ became our High Priest and how He exercised the office.

A Sardine Stone

The sardine stone represented the tribe of Reuben—whose name, in the Hebrew, means literally "behold the son."

The sardine stone points to Bethlehem, the fulfillment of these promises, and says: "Behold the son!"

It is also significant that the sardine (or sardius) stone is blood red in color, speaking to us of sacrifice and redemption. For Jesus Christ left heaven's glory, descended to Bethlehem's manger, and proceeded to Calvary's cross, specifically to die as the supreme sacrifice for the sins of mankind (Matt. 20:28; Phil. 2:5-8; Heb. 2:9). He was indeed "born crucified." Bethlehem and Calvary are inseparably united in the plan and purpose of God. "What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder" (Matt. 19:6).

Jesus is, then, both the Priest and the Lamb (John 1:29; Rev. 5:6; 13:8)—both the Offerer of the sacrifice and the Sacrifice thus offered. For He offered himself on the sacrificial altar of Calvary (Heb. 7:26-27; John 10:17-18).

What Then?

The high priestly work of Christ did not end at the cross, however. That was only the beginning of a ministry which He performs in heaven today (Heb. 4:14), where He continues to intercede in behalf of others (Rom. 8:34; Heb. 7:25).

The jasper is a stone most pure and precious, speaking of holiness and victory. In the breastplate of Exodus 28 it represented the tribe of Benjamin, whose name means "son of my right hand" or "son of my power."

Because of His conquest over the grave—and over Satan—He is now seated with the Father in His throne (Rev. 3:21). He is truly the "Son of God's right hand" (Heb. 1:3, 13; 8:1; 10:12; 12:2)!

While the sardine stone points back to His first coming, the jasper looks ahead to His second coming—as the "Son of God's power."

An Emerald Rainbow

Revelation 4:2-3

By RICHARD BURCH
Pastor, Grace Brethren Church
Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio

God hath highly exalted Him, and before Him every knee shall bow (Phil. 2:9-11). The sacrificial Lamb is also the sovereign Lion (Rev. 5:5-6). The child born at Bethlehem—the Son given at Calvary—possesses a kingdom which shall have no end (Isa. 9:6-7; Luke 1:31-22)!

Why Did All This Happen?

The rainbow surrounding God's throne calls to mind His covenant with Noah to never again destroy the earth with a flood (Gen. 9:8-17). It is an ever-present token, therefore, that God has never made a promise which He will not keep.

The bow is emerald green in color, reminding us of living things—of life itself. It is in the form of a circle, with neither beginning nor end, speaking to us of eterinity and, therefore, symbolizing eternal life.

The emerald was also the stone representing the tribe of Judah, for it was through Judah (Gen. 49:10; Rev. 5:5) that He came in whom are fulfilled all the promises of God, the greatest of which is that "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16)!

Because of Christ's entrance into the world and death on Calvary, and by receiving Him as Saviour, we can have immediate and permanent possession of life eternal. Because of His subsequent resurrection and exaltation, we have assurance that we shall reign with Him forever and ever (Rev. 5:10; 20:4; 22:5)! This is the true meaning and message of Christmas.

Let us, therefore, present ourselves unto the Christ of Christmas—"For thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood . . . and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth" (Rev. 5:9-10).

First Christmas Service

THE PLACE

"Shepherds abiding in the field" (Luke 2:8). This was an outdoor meeting under the starry heavens, the Father's handiwork, a pasture field where the flocks ate and rested. It pleases God, many times, to meet with a band of faithful few, in some insignificant place, rather than with the multitudes in some magnificent edifice where the people worship the created works of man's hand instead of the Creator.

THE TIME

"Keeping watch over their flock by night." There was darkness of night about the shepherds, and yet it was not dark. "The glory of the Lord shown round about them," the brightness of the Lord known to the Jews as the Shekinah, the visible token of the presence of the Eternal One. How their hearts must have thrilled to see this light of the the glory of God! This light which had been removed from them, lo these many years. Earth's darkness, with its sin and corruption, is all about us now, but soon the glory of the Lord will break through again in the presence of the return of our blessed Lord and Saviour. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

THE CONGREGATION

"Shepherds" (a very small gathering). Why did God choose these humble men rather than someone of learning, culture and with much prestige? It has always been God's plan to choose the humble rather than the high minded as instruments of service. "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called (I Cor. 1:26). This group of shepherds was small, but everyone was in his place. God grant divine favor to those who are serving Him in the place they should be. We are not to be hurried and restless, running ahead of the Lord, but instead, caring for the things He has already given us to do.

THE PREACHER

"The angel of the Lord" a ready messenger came with a direct announcement from God concerning the birth of His Son, and revealing to them His divine glory. This message from the angel to these lowly shepherds left an impression which has not been dimmed up to this present hour. Perhaps if the message had been given by a man there would be doubts, but coming from the portals of heaven, there were no doubts. These hungry hearts were waiting for the message of the coming of their long awaited Messiah. The city of Bethlehem was overflowing with sleepy travelers. This good news could not wait, the heavenly host could not be silent. The sermon is not lengthy; in fact, it was the briefest ever given whereby the whole human race could be redeemed. This willing preacher was ready to go even to such a small audience. His eagerness would shame the majority of preachers today, whose motto seems to be "only to the crowds," forgetting that our Lord commanded us to go to the out-of-the-way places where some heart is yearning to listen. If they could, the angelic host would count it a great privilege to preach to the world, whether they be large or small groups, that in turn those who hear would become preachers, missionaries and teachers.

THE CHOIR AND THE ANTHEM

"A multitude of the heavenly host," and the anthem, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Just as singing and preaching go together in our worship services, so the angel had a special number to fit in with his message. No other than this particular congregation had ever heard such melodious music. We need to praise God in joyful song. As we feast on the Word, in return, we express our thoughts by singing out in songs of praise. Surely no anthem ever held such promise —"on earth peace." What a world He came in to! Christ's work was to bring peace between God and man—a peace which had been severed back in the garden. Though the world is constantly at war in thought and action, the promise still abides—"on earth peace."

THE MESSAGE

"Unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord!" These were tidings of great joy to these shepherds; the birth of a Saviour would mean deliverance from the degradation into which Israel had shrunk. It meant deliverance from bondage and the penalty of sin. This is the significance of the Word for us too, One who would save our souls from sin. It was also an answer to a long cherished hope that the promise would be fulfilled, and the hopes of the centuries brought to pass in the Saviour, in the Deliverer from all sin, evil and sorrow—Christ, the fulfiller of prophecy, the anointed One as prophet, priest and king. To name Him Lord was to acknowledge His authority, and make Him Lord of our lives.

THE RESULTS OF THE MESSAGE

"They came with haste" in obedience to the Word of God—in haste with no delay, for the King's business had to be attended to—first things had to be first. Paul reacted in somewhat the same manner. "To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood" (Gal. 1.16). Having found the Saviour, "they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning the child." The shepherds having heard the message were the first witnesses of the newborn King. One who heard and profited by the testimony was Mary, who "pondered all these things in her heart." It is difficult to imagine the tragic results if they had not believed the angelic preacher. Daily humanity hears the voice of the Holy Spirit wooing them, but they will not heed. The Christmas season means little more to most folks than a time of reveling.

God give us strength to proclaim the message of the first Christmas service, our Saviour and coming King.

"Biggest Christmas Shopping Binge in History"

Such is the somewhat inelegant expression used by a well-known news magazine to describe America's 1955 Christmas buying spree as it draws toward its conclusion. Is such a characterization, however, unfair? Let us consider a few facts. It is now estimated that the December retail business will exceed $16,000,000,000 (16 billion dollars. Such is the nation's holiday mood, and it comes as a climax to the wealthiest year in history.

It is said that the Boston Common has its bare trees festooned with thousands of electric bulbs that have transformed the small park, at night, into a great blaze of color. There also the city has raised a 50-foot Christmas tree. One million shoppers jammed the Loop in Chicago in a single record-breaking day. In New York the store owners have been desperate to find 12,000 to 16,000 extra workers needed for the Christmas rush. Stores have been filled to overflowing. It is said that any policeman in Wichita has been able to make an extra $50 a week by untangling traffic around suburban shopping centers.

In Dallas, Tex., and some other cities, merchants have been running a special busline for their customers. A Washington, D. C. department store official summed up the whole national holiday shopping situation when he said: "Business is absolutely sensational, far beyond anybody's expectations."

How often do we hear it said: "We just can't get an offering of any size for Grace Seminary and College during the Christmas season. Everybody is busy buying gifts for their families and friends." Such a statement is undoubtedly true to a large extent, for our churches certainly do not give heavily to our national programs at this time. As we look at America today, we are forced to draw the conclusion that, so far as any real recognition of His birthday is concerned, the Lord Jesus Christ is largely forgotten at Christmas.

But do we Christians really have even a good excuse for our failure to give to the Lord's work during the Christmas season? Consider this: the citizens of Detroit who went shopping in such numbers that the police department found it necessary to cancel the leaves of 125 men and put them on traffic duty, also gave nearly $16 million to the United Foundation. Never in the city's history has so much money been given to charity in a single drive. Surely, if the citizens of an earthly city can feel a responsibility to others at this season of the year, we who claim to know and love the Lord should be able to do as well as the world in proportion to our numbers. Is our responsibility less than theirs?

Grace Seminary and College Annual Offering January 29

The date set for the annual offering for Grace Seminary and College is January 29. The budget need of the school calls for a gift income from our churches of $80,000, or approximately $6,500 per month. During the past two years the offerings have not been sufficient to meet this need. There is, therefore, at the present time in the school's general fund, a deficit of $13,000. Will you join us in praying that our annual offering this year will not only completely wipe out this deficit, but that it will help materially to assure the school's closing the next fiscal year with all financial obligations met in full? Advertise this date in your church, and prepare for this offering.

Annual Offering Goal—$40,000

The school has set a goal of $40,000 for the annual offering to be received during December and January, the two months of special appeal for Grace Seminary and College. This amount represents half the goal (or budget need) for the entire year. The raising of $40,000 should not call for a heavy burden to be laid upon any church. It can be raised if pastors and people alike will join in setting a goal for the local church, and if they will make that goal a matter of definite prayer. How much should your church give by January 29?

Are You a Member of the Grace Seminary Corporation?

Do you know that Grace Seminary and College operates under the direction and control of a Board of Trustees which is in turn responsible to the members of the Grace Seminary Corporation? Do you know how to become a member of this corporation? If you belong to a Brethren Church, an annual gift of $5.00 makes you a member of the corporation for one year; a gift of $1,000 will make you a life member of the corporation. Have you prayerfully considered the value of a substantial investment in the lives of young men and women who are preparing to go to the fields of the world? Eternity alone will reveal the tremendous dividends from such an investment.

The 1956 Monthly Plan Envelopes

We are encouraged by the number of churches that are now using the little monthly envelopes, but we are particularly encouraged by the number of these that are inserting the monthly envelopes into their proper places in the packages of regular offering envelopes which are distributed among the membership of the church. Without exception where this has been tried, so far as we know, the offerings for the ministry of Grace Seminary and College have increased. Testimonies have come to us from pastors concerning the blessing this method has brought to their congregations. Whatever the method, be sure to secure a packet of the little envelopes. They may be small, but they are having a mighty ministry, the effects of which are being felt around the world where men and women, trained at Grace, have gone with the "good tidings of great joy" (Luke 2:10).

The Predicted Messiah and Some Descriptive Titles

By Professor S. HERBERT BESS

The prediction of the Messiah's birth found in Isaiah 9:6 is all the more striking when one realizes that it arose out of a contest over how the ancient people of Israel were to receive divine truth. In Isaiah 8:19ff., we discover that there was an element in Judah who encouraged the people to seek for religious knowledge and experience in the realm of spiritism, calling upon the familiar spirits and the wizards. This was a feature of Canaanite religion, and was definitely forbidden to Israel by Moses in Deuteronomy 18:9-12. Isaiah upheld the Word of God, i.e. "the law and the testimony" as the proper source of true instruction, and the means of rightly understanding the present and the future (8:20). If the people will not hear the Word of God, they shall have no light, and a period of unrelieved darkness awaits them.

The last two verses of Isaiah 8 predict a period of anguish and darkness for the nation of Israel for having rejected the Word of God; but chapter 9 opens by declaring that the darkness shall be dispelled for that remnant of the nation which God shall save. Verses two to five contain these noteworthy predictions: (1) A great light shall appear in the darkened land; (2) the population shall be multiplied and its joy increased; (3) the oppression of foreign powers shall be ended; and (4) all evidences of war and bloodshed shall disappear.

All of the above blessings are contingent upon the presence and ministry of the person whose birthday is prophesied in verse 6: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Rejection of God's Word and the following after false religious voices would bring the nation into ruin; whereas the coming of the Messiah would terminate this period of judgment and carry God's revelation of himself to a point never otherwise realized. We may note the following features of Messiah's ministry contained in this prophecy:

I. He shall assume the government. Ahaz, the king of Judah when this prophecy was uttered, was a weakling, and yet Isaiah had prophesied that even more incapable and irresponsible rulers were to follow him (1:23; 3:4). In cheering contrast is the word that Messiah shall have the government upon His shoulder. How tragic that when He did appear and proffered himself, the people cried out: "We will not have this man to reign over us" (Luke 19:14). Nonetheless, over the restored nation of Israel He shall reign, and bestow upon it an era of surpassing splendor and glory.

II. His person and work shall provoke the following appellatives:

a. Wonderful Counsellor. There is some disagreement among commentators as to whether the words "wonderful" and "counsellor" form one descriptive title or two. Grammatical arguments seeking to establish one viewpoint at the expense of the other have not been convincing. It must be admitted that Hebrew grammar allows for either viewpoint.

If the word "wonderful" is understood to be a separate and distinct name in this place, we know that the word is elsewhere applied to our Lord. When the second Person of the Trinity (designated as the Angel of Jehovah) appeared to Manoah as recorded in Judges 13:18, He gave His name as Wonderful (translated "secret" in the King James Version).

If the two works are taken as a compound expression, "wonderful counsellor," the prophet Isaiah has already shown how He will be worthy of this title. Isaiah 11:2-4 depicts the reigning Messiah as one whose wisdom and counsel enables Him to mete out justice unerringly in behalf of His subjects.

b. The Mighty God. This astounding expression equates the coming deliverer with God himself. Of this there can be no doubt, for the same term, "the mighty God," is employed in 10:21, and identified with Jehovah in the preceding verse. What a truly amazing thing to find the word "child" (unto us a child is born) identified with the word "God" in this remarkable

Greetings from Faculty Families

On the covers of the magazine this week appear for the first time, so far as we know, the pictures of all faculty members and their families. All join in sending greetings to our many brothers and sisters in Christ who have made our ministry possible. May yours be a Christmas filled with the joy of the Lord at whose coming it was announced by a special messenger from heaven: "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy" (Luke 2:10). May yours be a New Year filled throughout with confidence in Him who said: "Lo, I am with you always" (Matt. 28:20).

The school "family" has grown considerably since the day when its full-time faculty consisted of Dr. McClain and Prof. Hoyt. It is still growing, as you can see from the pictures—particularly the one shown within the wreath on the back cover. The following information will help you to identify the members of each family.

FRONT COVER

First row—Ava Schnittjer, dean of women; President and Mrs. Alva J. McClain.

Second row—The Hoyt family: Max, Herman, Harriet, and Joe; Edisene and John Whitcomb (See also center of back page); the Kent, Jr., family: Beverly, Rebecca, and Homer, Jr.

Third row—The Ogden family: Kathleen, Diane, Wanita, Don and Ronald; the Rea family: Linda, Elaine, Ruth Elaine, John, and Beth; Dr. and Mrs. Homer A. Kent, Sr.

Fourth row—The Uphouse family: Hannah, Miriam holding Abigail, Norman, Deborah; Wayne Snider, dean of men; the Bess family: Paul, Ruth, Charlene, Herbert.

BACK COVER

Top—The Gilbert family: Barrie, Ralph, Nan holding Bonnie, Beverly.

First row—The Meyer family: Joan, Nathan, Mary, Paul; the Bauman family: Paul, Jr., Mary, Carolyn, Aldine, Paul; Dick and Yvonne Messner.

In wreath—Arriving just in time to join the faculty families: David Whitcomb, a nine-pound Christmas present, pictured with mother (Edisene).

Right of wreath—Ruth and Alva Steffler.

Lower row—The Boyer family: Donnie, Janet, Velma, James, Leo; John and Kenny Stuber; Ben and Mabel Hamilton.

A DECEMBER GIFT

Arriving just in time to join the faculty families in sending you Christmas greetings (see back cover picture), David Clement Whitcomb made his advent into the home of Prof. and Mrs. John C. Whitcomb on the morning of Dec. 7 at 9:06 o'clock. He tipped the scales at 9 lbs. 1 oz. at the McDonald Hospital, where he was born, and then, like his father, immediately began to lead a pressingly-busy life. By the time he was seven hours old he had made a formal announcement of his arrival, taken a nap, had a meal, posed for pictures, and had even made a tape recording of his voice for posterity (whatever that is)!

Pictured above looking into the nursery door are the proud father and the even prouder grandmother (if that were possible), Mrs. A. F. Hanson, of Long Beach, Calif. Mrs. Hanson is a member of the North Long Beach Brethren Church. Holding the baby is Mrs. George Johnson (formerly Evelyn Vnasdale), who attended Grace College in 1951-'52. Evelyn's husband is a middler at Grace Seminary.—P.R.B.

The Most Unforgettable Character I've Met

By SHIRLEY SMITH

New Troy, Mich.

(Editor's note: One of the opportunities provided for our young people at Grace College is that of learning the art of Christian writing. The intensely interesting article by Shirley Smith, a freshman in the college, is just one of the excellent and interesting true stories written for a class in composition, taught by Miss Ava Schnittjer. Your investment in developing such talent as this in a deeply spiritual atmosphere will pay tremendous dividends.)

My earliest childhood memories of Clair Witten are of a wrinkled, toothless, and stooped old man. He was one of those people who never seem to change in appearance year after year. As I grew into my early teens, he still looked the same as when I had first seen him.

He was a brother of one of the wealthiest men in our community, but despite this fact he was always dirty, ragged, and unshaven. This always puzzled me a great deal. What was the reason for this vast difference? Later I was to learn of the circumstances which led to this condition.

Clair went around town doing various odd jobs: such as sweeping the floor of the local garage, burning trash, and many other tasks which the townspeople reserved for him. The money he made doing these various jobs was spent almost entirely on liquor at the local tavern. He often slept among the sacks of grain at the feed mill or in the warehouse of the local factory, for he did not have a home or even a room to call his own.

His face was deeply lined with the marks of sin, and he was indeed the local bum. I had heard that he did have a wife and two daughters but that they had left him when he started downward on the path of sin and degradation.

As he often staggered by on his drunken way past our home, I could not help but loathe and pity him at the same time. I often wondered at the circumstances which led him to this low state, and if his relatives had tried to help him or merely turned their backs on him.

The attitude of the community and even of our church people puzzled me. Everyone reserved small jobs for him to do and even gave him meals, but as far as I could see no one tried to help him out of this state of sin. I had always been a little afraid of him, but whenever I happened to meet him, I always spoke to him. Sometimes he was so drunk that he didn't recognize me, but occasionally he would smile and mumble something in reply.

When I was about 13, our church called a new pastor. He was a fine man and greatly stressed to our lethargic congregation the need of going out and reaching the lost instead of sitting and waiting for them to come to us. One of his first projects was Clair Witten, and he spent much time trying to win his friendship and trust.

One Sunday morning Clair came to church. People were aghast! True, it was the first time that I had seen him in our church and, according to the old-timers, the only time they had seen him in any church. Many heads wagged that morning and voices whispered that old Clair must have been too drunk to know where he was. Clair was far from drunk, however, and from that time on he attended Sunday morning services regularly.

In October our church held two weeks of evangelistic services, and the very first night Clair walked down the aisle and accepted Christ as his Saviour. Again there were those who said that he was drunk and didn't know what he was doing. However, before that week was past, the tremendous change in his life removed all doubt from their narrow minds.

One of the first things he did was to get a job at the local Industrial Rubber Plant as a sweeper. Also, he rented an old house which was located by the township cemetery which was about three miles from our church. With the Lord's help, he overcame the power of liquor in his life, and his wrinkled old face took on a new radiance which people could not help noticing. Clair talked earnestly to his old pals and cronies about the salvation of their souls, and they thought that indeed old Clair had lost his mind.

Clair loved, and had an intense interest in young people. He loved to be around them and talk with them. There were some in our group, however, who constantly teased and made fun of him. He never seemed to mind and took their teasing good-naturedly.

Clair also loved to come to church, and whenever there was a meeting, he was always to be found there. He walked the three miles from his home to church, and even to work, through rain or snow. Often he would arrive at church soaking wet or his eyebrows would be caked with ice from walking in a snowstorm. No one seemed to care enough to go and bring him to church. Clair didn't seem to mind but continued to trudge cheerfully back and forth to work and church.

Whereas he had never been known to talk very much, he now seemed to be bubbling over with words. Whenever we had testimony time in our services, Clair was the first to his feet to tell what the Lord meant to him. His favorite phrase was: "I praise God for picking my feet up and putting them on the road to heaven."

In early December Clair had a severe case of flu and was confined to his home. He was very much disturbed at not being able to attend church, so five of us young people went to his home and read Scripture with him and sang a few songs. His face lighted up, and he was so thrilled to think that someone had come to visit him. He recovered very slowly, so we made

From Missionary Service in Brazil to Grace Seminary

By ROBERT F. TILLOTSON, JR.

(Editor's Note: One of the missionary families now in Winona Lake is that of Rev. and Mrs. Robert Tillotson, who recently returned from Brazil on furlough. They are members of the Calvary Baptist Church in Buffalo, N. Y., of which Dr. J. Palmer Muntz is pastor. Dr. Muntz is also director of the Winona Lake Bible Conference and has been a real friend to Grace Theological Seminary. We rejoice in the way the influence of our school will be felt on a field so near to where the Millers ('49), the Zielaskos ('50), and the Burks ('54) have been working.)

The teacher must first master that which he would teach. This is the prime law of teaching. When the Bible Institute at our mission field in Brazil began demanding more and more of its few teachers, we felt our need for really knowing what we were to teach. So it was that each teacher is furthering his particular studies each furlough year in the States.

In preparation for furlough year, we prayed as to seminaries that might offer the necessary studies. Our pastor, Dr. J. Palmer Muntz, recommended Grace Seminary highly; our Conservative Baptist staff was quite satisfied that Grace Seminary could do the job, and confirmed our conviction of His leading.

Not least of the things for which I thank the Lord here is the wonderful family atmosphere prevailing in Winona Lake. Our children, brought up on foreign soil, found a good normal group of children among whom they've become adjusted remarkably well. The large Christian population has proved a blessing in their separated lives. Our kiddies feel the pull of the neon world and two-toned living here though the mission field's separation has always been an established thing.

Years among a Romanist people is a journey through a Biblical desert. How our hearts have rejoiced in the privilege of bathing our hearts and minds in spiritual washing by the Word, and of being again among those who love us and live above the world. The Spirit of God teaches us many things as we take time to listen, and furlough is supposed to provide such in abundant manner. Then, wide study in the Word, to me, is the solid basis for even this experience, so we expect a greater deeper blessing this furlough for having taken time to study His Word in a way that is seldom possible on the mission field.

So our study must serve two purposes at Grace: It is to prepare for further Bible-school teaching in Brazil, and to fill and bless again our own souls as we feast upon God's Word.

several visits to him, and we had an opportunity to really get to know him. He was always telling us to be sure and not waste our lives but to give our very best to the Lord while we were still young.

At Christmastime, Clair came to the church laden with a big box. He then presented gifts to us young people who had visited him during his illness. To the girls he gave rose-scented stationery and the boys he gave pen and pencil sets. This act deeply touched my heart. Inside the box was a tiny card on which was scribbled simply, "from old Clair."

Clair wanted very much to be a member of our church, and in March he went forward and expressed this desire. About two weeks later, he was baptized, and the right hand of fellowship was extended to him which made him beam with happiness. About a month after he became a member of our church, we had our spring communion service, and Clair was overjoyed. He rejoiced all through this service, and all those present shared with him the many blessings of fellowship in Christ. Clair had said several months previously that his greatest desire was to be able to partake in the communion service before he died. When he made this statement, he must have known that his time was short, for two weeks after he attended this service, he passed on to be with the Lord.

As I attended his funeral my heart could not be sad, for I could almost see Clair's wrinkled face wreathed in smiles as he sat at the feet of the Saviour, rejoicing and happy in His presence. I think that I shall never forget his radiant testimony, for it certainly had a profound influence on my life!

THE PREDICTED MESSIAH

verse of prophecy. This is especially true when one realizes that Isaiah was strongly conscious of the antithesis between God and man. See 2:22, and especially 31:3: "Now the Egyptians are men, and not God; and their horses flesh, and not spirit." Yet the prophet brings the human and divine terms together in 9:6, and thus anticipates the incarnation.

c. The Everlasting Father. The Messiah is here shown to be the possessor of eternity. As it was mysterious to bring together the word "child" and the word "God," so is it mysterious to bring together the word "born" and the word "everlasting;" for "born" predicates a beginning, whereas "everlasting" predicates no beginning.

d. The Prince of Peace. This name extends to a harassed people and a weary world a hope that cannot be found elsewhere. Isaiah had already shown the Messiah in this role in 2:4, where under His rulership the nations do not learn war anymore. Sadly enough, the nations have dreamed and yearned for a warless world, while at the same time rejecting the One who shall some day institute it.

A word remains to be said about the first three words of this great text: "for unto us." Surely the words in their first application refer to Israel, for the Messiah is their promised deliverer. But these words belong to us too, because the benefits of His coming abound to the blessing of the entire world.

Many people do not realize it, but one of the purposes of the local church, from its very beginning was that of fellowship. We are told that "they continued stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship" (Acts 2:42). Grace recognizes this need and provides opportunity for wholesome activity and fellowship in its genuinely Christian athletic program.—P.R.B.

CONCERT ANNOUNCED

Colin Bray, baritone soloist, and David Halvorsen presented the second of Grace's Artist Series programs just before Christmas vacation on Tuesday night, Dec. 20. The concert was held in the Rainbow Room of the Westminster Hotel.

Mr. Bray, formerly with the Rodeheaver Company in Winona Lake, is now the minister of music at Ninth and O Baptist Church in Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Halvorsen, accompanist of the Grace Trumpeters before his graduation last spring, will present several numbers in addition to accompanying Mr. Bray. He is now doing deputation work before leaving for missionary service in Europe.

NEW LIBRARY GIFT:

Holsinger's Copy of Holsinger's Brethren History

(Editor's note: It seems almost more than a coincidence that at the very time Brother Hamilton was preparing the material for this article, your editor was examining for the first time two old picture albums which he had found among the personal effects of his father, Dr. Louis S. Bauman. Among the valuable pictures contained therein were those of Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Holsinger, shown with Brother Hamilton's article. They were given to my father, many years ago. So far as I know Mrs. Holsinger's picture is here shown for the first time in the Brethren Missionary Herald.—Paul R. Bauman.)

By BENJAMIN HAMILTON

On Oct. 15, 1955, Rev. H. W. Nowag, Johnstown, Pa., presented Grace Theological Seminary with a copy of H. R. Holsinger's "History of the Tunkers and the Brethren Church." This volume is the copy prepared by the Pacific Press Publishing Company of Oakland, Calif. (publishers of Holsinger's history) and personally presented by that firm to Rev. H. R. Holsinger. His name is stamped in gold, in Old English type, on the special binding of the book.

Significance of the Gift

Rev. H. W. Nowag, donor, is the grandson of Rev. H. R. Holsinger. The book is the most comprehensive history of the Brethren Church and its antecedents published in 1901. Out of print, but still available in certain places, Holsinger's "History of the Tunkers and the Brethren Church" is still a classic source book. It contains much research material that is especially rich from a biographical standpoint, giving useful data about many prominent 19th century church leaders, as well as informative facts regarding the church founders. The book is also important due to the distinctive position of the author.

The Position of the Author

As leader of the group that separated from the German Baptist church in 1882 and which formed the Brethren Church, Henry Holsinger presents authentic accounts of the formation of our church.

Born in Morrison's Cove, Pa., May 26, 1833, Holsinger's grandmother, on his father's side, was Elizabeth Mack (granddaughter of Alexander Mack, Jr.). Thus Bro. Holsinger was a liaison between the founder, Alexander Mack, and the German Baptist Church of the 19th century. Bro. Holsinger was "baptized into the Tunker Church early in the spring of 1855, at Clover Creek, Pa., "was elected to the ministry Oct. 28, 1866" and "ordained to the eldership Oct. 21, 1880."

In 1882 Bro. Holsinger met with certain other church officials and members at Arnold's Grove schoolhouse number 7 near Milford, Ind. The name Progressive Brethren was adopted for the group which met there. As an outcome of this meeting the Progressive Brethren held their first general convention at Ashland College, Ashland, Ohio, June 29 and 30, 1882. At that time the Progressive Brethren declaration of principles was read and adopted. This declaration is set forth on pages 530-539 of Holsinger's history and it is a document that every Brethren should read.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Holsinger

Following the formation of the Brethren Church (progressive) the German Baptist Church eventually became the Church of the Brethren denomination. Bro. Holsinger held various pastorates after 1882 and was held in esteem by the progressive Brethren. "In 1897 he went to Calif., where he with the help of J. W. Beer, his old-time friend, wrote his 'History of the Tunkers and the Brethren Church,' a well-illustrated book of 826 pages."

One of Bro. Holsinger's former associates has written: "On Sunday, March 12, 1905, at Johnstown, Pa., he laid aside his earthly mantle, not quite 72 years old, and now over his grave there stands a suitable memorial block, and by his side rest the remains of Susanna."

Of Bro. Holsinger, Howard Miller, editor of the Brethren Evangelist, wrote on March 29, 1905: "It would be hard to find another person, or to name one, who has so marked the Brethren Church at large."

Reprinting of Holsinger's Brethren history is a more convenient and abridged edition would be a project which would be worthy of the efforts of the Brethren Church. Too many Brethren people, especially the young people, are ignorant of our church heritage!

PERSISTENCE BRINGS VICTORIOUS RESULTS IN SOUL-WINNING

Every Sunday afternoon one can see cars leave the school and zoom down Route 30 to Plymouth, Ind. These cars are carrying the faithful workers who penetrate into the jails and nursing homes proclaiming God's Word. These workers rejoice after two years of continuous labor among the depressed and the wicked. The leaders of these institutions allowed the gospel team to enter, thinking they would become discouraged as did many other teams. But the practical works department entered with an undefeatable attitude and can rejoice that 20 souls have been led to the Lord.

The experience of these workers proves the importance of being persistent in proclaiming God's Word. It is equally important to support the gospel team in prayer as they now visit two jails and four nursing homes.—Willa Leidy, Martinsburg, Pa.

THE GENESIS FLOOD

By John C. Whitcomb, Jr.
Associate Professor in Old Testament

(PART V)

The Biblical doctrine of a geographically universal flood has not met with much favor in recent decades. And the reason for this is not hard to discover; for it is exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to hold to such a doctrine and at the same time accept the theory of total uniformitarianism which is recognized to be the basis for modern efforts to reconstruct the history of this planet and its living inhabitants.

The theory of uniformitarianism, as its name implies, teaches that changes have occurred on the earth at a very gradual and uniform rate, over immense spans of time, and under the very same laws by which changes occur today. Whether it be the rise and fall of continents and mountain ranges (diastrophism) or the producing of new kinds of animals and plants (organic evolution), uniformitarianism demands gradual processes, immense ages, and the operation of scientifically discernable laws to explain all the mysteries of the past.

The Biblical Approach

In strong contrast to these principles, the Bible teaches a limited uniformitarianism, a supernatural catastrophism, and a fiat creationism. By "limited uniformitarianism," we mean that the natural and uniform processes of rainfall, erosion, temperature changes, and seasons, have continued uninterrupted only since the Flood (Gen. 8:21-22) and will continue only until the end of this present world (Rev. 21). Secondly, we mean by "supernatural catastrophism," a violent and cataclysmic intervention of God in judgment, with permanent global effects. We are told in II Peter 3:10 that history will end in a world-consuming cataclysm of fire; but we are also taught in Scripture that such an event has already occurred once in the past, when God interrupted the uniform processes of nature for over a year to wipe out "the world that then was," and all of its inhabitants (except those in the ark), by means of a universal deluge of water. Such a flood would have produced vast natural effects upon the earth's surface, but it could not have have been produced apart from supernatural intervention by God. In the third place, we believe that the Bible teaches a fiat creationism, by which both inorganic matter and organic forms were brought into existence apart from natural processes through the simple fiat ("let it be done") of God. All three of these ideas are woven inextricably into the fabric of Holy Scripture, and may be seen together in II Peter 3:3-7.

The Reign of Tooth and Claw

A mere sample of the conflict that rages between these two philosophies of nature is the question of "the reign of tooth and claw" in the animal kingdom. Total uniformitarianism demands that such a condition has existed from the very beginning of life on the earth, even long ages before man's appearance and is part and parcel of all animal existence. In accord with this view, Dr. Ramm writes: "Outside of the Garden of Eden were death, disease, weeds, thistles, thorns, carnivores, deadly serpents, and intemperate weather. . . . Part of the blessedness of man was that he was spared all of these things in his Paradise, and part of the judgment of man was that he had to forsake such a Paradise and enter the world as it was outside of the Garden, where thistles grew and weeds were abundant and where wild animals roamed and where life was only possible by the sweat of man's brow" (p. 335).

While it is true that such an interpretation harmonizes with the total uniformitarianism of modern science, it is not true that it harmonizes with a careful exegesis of Scripture. For example, a comparison of Genesis 1:28-30 with 9:2-5 reveals that before the Fall both man and beast were vegetarian, but after the Fall they were not. Genesis 9:5 shows us that beasts could attack and kill men when the fear and dread of men was upon them (9:2); but such could not have been the case before the Fall, when man had dominion over the animal kingdom (1:28; 2:19). A comparison of Psalm 8:6-8 with Hebrews 2:8b gives support to this point.

But if it be claimed that Genesis 1:30 is an argument from silence, because it does not specifically state than animals did not eat each other as well as plants, let us then turn to Isaiah 11:6-8. Here we are told in the age to come "the wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox."

So powerful is this passage, and the one that parallels it (Isa. 65:25) as a support for the idea that "the region of tooth and claw" is neither normal nor ideal for animals that even orthodox commentators who deny a literal future millennium (such as Calvin, Kuyper, Vos, Hepp, Berkhof, Allis, and Berkouwer) admit that these verses must point back to a situation that existed on this planet before the fall of Adam. If the Bible is to be believed when it teaches us that Adam's fall into sin brought about the cursing of the ground (Gen. 3:17), the multiplying of pain in childbirth (3:16), and the subjection of the whole creation "to vanity, not of its own will, but by reason of him who subjected it, in hope that the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the liberty of the glory of the children of God" (Rom. 8:20-21), then we must part company with any philosophy of nature and earth-history that reduces the effects of the Fall to the realm of mere psychology.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

FROM THE ENTIRE

Missionary Herald Staff

ROANOKE, VA. Jack Klyne Peters, pastor of the Calvary Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Md., was ordained to the Christian ministry on Dec. 13, at the Ghent Brethren Church, Roanoke. Brother Peters is a graduate of Grace Seminary, and held membership in the Ghent church. Robert E. A. Miller, pastor, delivered the sermon.

WINONA LAKE, IND. Inasmuch as there are 53 Saturdays in 1955, there will be no issue of the Missionary Herald next week. If you desire to have your 1955 Heralds bound, they should be delivered to the Herald office by January 15.

ROANOKE, VA. The permanent phone number of Rev. Vernon Harris is 3-7354. Please change Annual.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. Mr. R. H. Aeby (father of John Aeby, pastor of the Temple City Brethren Church, Temple City, Calif.,) is making a splendid recovery from the heart attack of Nov. 3.

SPECIAL. The new address of the the WMC literature secretary, Mrs. Olive Deloe, is 203 West Woodland Ave., Fort Wayne, Ind. Please change Annual.

WEST COVINA, CALIF. There were 76 present for Sunday school in the "one room Boy Scout hall" on Nov. 13. Specifications for the improvement of the new church lots have been approved by the city. Building plans are in the preliminary stage. Dr. C. H. Ashman is pastor.

FORT WAYNE, IND. The new branch Sunday school of the First Brethren Church was started on Dec. 11 in the northeast section of the city. Mark Malles is pastor.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. The new address of Earle Peer, pastor of the Rosemont Brethren Church, is 204 Delaware Ave., Martinsburg, W. Va. Please change Annual.

WINONA LAKE, IND. David Clement arrived at the John Whitcomb home on Nov. 7 weighing 9 lbs. His father, a professor at Grace College, says "he is a future prospect for Grace College and Seminary."

WINCHESTER, VA. The annual Christmas dinner of the First Brethren Church was held on Dec. 15. The speaker was Russell Weber, pastor of the Grace Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Md. Paul Dick is pastor.

FILLMORE, CALIF. A remodeling program in the basement of the First Brethren Church will soon be under way. Max Brenneman is pastor.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. Mr. and Mrs. Homer Askins celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary on Nov. 17, and Mr. and Mrs. George Connell reached this same anniversary on Nov. 30. All are members of the First Brethren Church.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Major Donald Carter, Brethren chaplain stationed at Fort Meade, brought the evening message at the First Brethren Church on Dec. 11. James Dixon is pastor.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Mark (Alice) Davis went to be with the Lord on Nov. 27, following a stroke. She was born July 15, 1889 in Virgie Pike County, Ky. Mrs. Davis was a member of the Grace Brethren Church, Portland, Oreg.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. Rev. and Mrs. Paul Dowdy arrived at Miami, Fla., Friday, Dec. 9 to begin their furlough from missionary work in Argentina. They will spend short periods at their homes in Hollins, Va., and Rittman, Ohio, arriving in Winona Lake about Jan. 1.

DAYTON, OHIO. The Ministers of the Southern Ohio District Conference of Brethren Churches recently (Dec. 5, 1955) voted the following resolution:

"We, the ministers of the Southern Ohio District Conference of Brethren Churches, desire to go on record as being opposed to the secularizing of the Lord's Day.

"An increasing number of church people are losing sight of the significance of the Lord's Day for their lives—either through ignorance or negligence. There is a growing tendency in some quarters for church people to incorporate into their lives activities which tend to undermine the meaning of the Lord's Day for them. More and more people are engaging in gainful employment, regular week-day business affairs, and other activities which obscure the meaning and place of the Lord's Day as a day of worship, rest, and renewal.

"We believe it is part of our task to reeducate and reconvince the child of God in regard to the place and purpose of this day in his life; to awaken the church to action against the trends endangering its observance.

"We believe this will result in the members of our churches being more conscientious in their own observance of the Lord's Day, and pledge ourselves to avoid unnecessary purchases and the desecrating in any other manner that day which has been set aside unto the Lord."

A HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR

Was Jesus Born in December?

By PROF. HOMER KENT, JR.

Grace Seminary

THE PROBLEM

Many Christians have wondered about the validity of celebrating December 25 as the birthday of Christ. Numerous reasons have been suggested to show how other dates are more probable. To the person interested in historical matters, the confusion of arguments demands an investigation.

The problem of dating the birth of Christ is caused by a great dearth of pertinent information. Even the year of Christ's birth is not known for certain, much less the month and day. The celebration of December 25 as a Christian feast has been traced to Julius, Bishop of Rome (A.D. 337-352). Others trace the observance to Hippolytus, a third century bishop. The grounds upon which this date was ascertained have not been explained by any writers of that era.

Samuel J. Andrews, in his memorable book, The Life of Our Lord Upon the Earth, has given a helpful discussion of this problem, and presents the most reasonable and convincing evidence for the month of the nativity. (This scholarly book of 651 pages, a classic in its field, has been recently reprinted.) The following material is taken from Andrews' book.

THE EVIDENCE

Laying aside all inference, tradition, and speculation, there seems to be only one objective Scriptural fact by which we can determine the month of Christ's birth. That fact is the statement in Luke 1:5, where Zacharias is said to be a priest "of the course of Abia."

The priesthood was divided into 24 classes, each class serving in the temple for one week twice a year. After the Babylonian Captivity, only four of these classes returned to Jerusalem. These four were redivided under Ezra, and the original 24 names were used. The class of Abia (Abijah) was the eighth class (see I Chron. 24:1-19). From Talmudical records it is possible to ascertain the dates when these classes served. Since John the Baptist was born approximately nine months after Zacharias' priestly service, and Jesus was born six months later (Luke 1:36), by adding 15 months to the date of Zacharias' temple ministry, we can know when Jesus was born.

If we assume that Jesus was born in the year of Rome 749 (equivalent to our reckoning B.C. 5), then the appearance of the angel to Zacharias occurred in 748 (B.C. 6). The date B.C. 5, while open to debate, seems to be the most satisfactory year for Christ's birth, when all factors are considered. During the year 748 the course of Abia officiated at Jerusalem during April 17-23 and October 3-9. Fifteen months after these dates brings us to June and December, 749. Thus we conclude that Jesus was born either in June or December.

Is there any preference indicated for one of these dates. Since either is possible as the result of computing from the course of Abia, we must look elsewhere. December is a winter month, and occurs in the rainy season in Palestine; June occurs in the dry season. Since Scripture tells us that the shepherds had their flocks in the open field at night, some have inferred that it could not have been winter. A statement in the Talmud indicates that the flocks were taken to the fields in March and brought home in November. However, this refers to those pastures in the wilderness regions, far away from cities and villages, to which the shepherds resorted in the dry seasons. The shepherds of Luke 2 were not out in the wilderness, but were close to Bethlehem ("same country," Luke 2:8), thus indicating that it must have been after November, and making December as the birth date of Jesus more probable.

Was December in Judea too cold or too wet for shepherds to be in the fields at night? The temperature of Palestine is very temperate, and averages 50 degrees to 53 degrees during the winter. February is the coldest month of the year, but December is delightful. December in Palestine has been described as seeing its earth clothed with rich verdure. Sugar cane, cauliflower, cabbage, radishes, and lettuce are marketed. Even plowing is carried on. During a 20-year period, the lowest December temperature (in Jerusalem, five miles from Bethlehem) was 36 degrees and the highest was 73 degrees. In Jerusalem frost generally occurs only five or six nights in the course of the entire winter. During this same 20-year period rain fell in December on an average of 9.04 days. The winter rains are interspersed with several weeks of dry weather between the middle of December and the middle of February (distinguishing the former from the latter rains). Consequently, in a climate not unlike southern California, there is nothing improbable in supposing shepherds to have their flocks outside on a given night in December.

THE CONCLUSION

If Christ was born in B.C. 5, then the data supplied by "the course of Abia" fix the month as June or December. Of the two months, December is the more probable. Since the shepherds were close to Bethlehem, it must have been after November because that was when the flocks were brought home from the remote pastures. Furthermore, in December there would have been good pasture at Bethlehem, but in June the fields would be very dry for lack of rain, and the shepherds would have moved northward. December has been the traditional month of Christ's birth, and it is very likely that this tradition is correct.

JESUS IS MY EVERYTHING

By CHARLOTTE STECKMAN

He's my Saviour, He's my Friend,
He will keep me to the end;
He's my Pilot, He's my Guide,
He is always by my side.
He will guide and direct, And me
He always will protect;
He's my Leader, He's my King,
Jesus is my Everything.

He will hear me when I pray,
"Dear Lord, wash my sins away";
He will keep me from disgust,
When in Him I put my trust.
He will keep me all the day.
He will lead me in His way;
He's my Leader, He's my King,
Jesus is my Everything.

He will lead me day by day,
Jesus is the only Way;
I'll trust in Him more and more,
Until I reach yon Heaven's shore.
He's my water in a barren land,
He's the Rock on which I stand;
He's my Leader, He's my King,
Jesus is my Everything.

He will take me by the hand,
And lead me on to the Promised Land;
He will help me my whole life through,
If I do what He wants me to.
Only in Him can I always confide,
And nothing from Him will I ever hide;
He's my Leader, He's my King,
Jesus is my Everything.

(EDITOR: Charlotte Steckman, 13 years old, accepted the Lord on April 4, 1954 and gave her life to the Lord for missionary service. On Oct. 18, 1955 the Lord called her home to be with Him. She was a member of the Reading Brethren Church, Stoystown, Pa., John Burns, pastor.)

FLORA, IND.

We thank the Lord for the results and the blessings which came during the revival at Flora, Ind. Nov. 13-27. There were six first-time decisions for Christ and 12 rededications. It was a pleasure to work with Charles Turner, the pastor.—Bill Smith, evangelist.

KITTANNING, PA.

Ground was broken recenty for the new Sunday school unit of the First Brethren Church. Photo shows the crowd assembled for the groundbreaking. Wm. Schaffer, pastor, shown reading the Scripture.
